In a short time, the boys all saw how it was with him. He studied hard, played with all his might in playtime; but, according to his account, he lost more credits than any of the rest. After some weeks, the boys answered "nine," "eight," oftener than they used to. Yet the school-room seemed to have grown quieter. Sometimes when Willie Grant's mark was even lower than usual, the teacher would smile peculiarly, but said no more of disgrace. Willie never preached to them or told tales; but somehow it made the boys ashamed of themselves just the seeing that this sturdy, blue-eyed boy must tell the truth. It was putting the clean cloth by the half soiled one, you see, and they felt like cheats and story-tellers. They talked him all over, and loved him, if they did nick-name him "Scotch Granite," he was so firm about a promise.

Well, at the close of the term, Willie's name was very low down on the credit list. When it was read he had hard work not to cry; for he was very sensitive, and he had tried hard to be perfect. But the very last thing that day was a speech by the teacher, who told of once seeing a man muffled up in a cloak. He was passing him without a look, when he was told the man was General ——, the great hero.

"The signs of his rank were hidden, but the hero was there just the same," said the teacher. "And now, boys, you will see what I mean when I give the medal to the most faithful boy—the one really the most conscientiously perfect in his deportment among you. Who shall have it?"

"Little Granite!" shouted the forty boys at once; for the child whose name was so "low" on the credit list had made truth noble in their eyes. —The British Evangelist.

One earnest gaze upon Christ is worth a thousand scrutinies of self. The man who beholds the cross, and beholding it weeps, cannot be really blind nor perilously self-ignorant.—Dean Vaughan.

TEMPERANCE.

NEW ENGLAND TESTIMONIES.

A correspondent in the Transcript who signs himself "Layman," complains bitterly that so large a portion of the ministers, in the Methodist church especially, are identified with the Prohibitionists, and not only lecture, but advance third party views from the pulpit; and states that it is becoming a barrier to their usefulness in their legitimate work. It seemed to me that this charge was the most honoring to the New England ministry that could be made, and it gives me fresh encouragement to believe that the day will soon come when they will take an equally firm stand against the lodge. A Gospel that has no reform in it is a poor article to convert men. He who preaches Christ so that tried and tempted souls know where to go for help, is the successful preacher. I was much impressed at our New Hampshire Convention by the testimony of a brother who for fifty years had used tobacco, and yet been cured of the habit completely by the power of Christ. A similar testimony is given in the Notes and Queries column of the Transcript, in reply to an inquiry for something which would take away an appetite for the weed. The writer, who was so addicted to it as to smoke twelve strong cigars in one day, tried to leave it off several times, but ineffectually. He says, however, that one evening about seventeen years ago he was in Dr. Gordon's vestry at a prayer meeting, and a reformed man in a seat near him rose to tell his experience. During his remarks he said, "Jim asked me if I thought a man could smoke or chew tobacco and be a Christian, and I told him I did not know, but I could not believe that Jesus Christ would have any filthy Christians near him." "From that moment," he adds, "all desire for smoking left me and has never returned." Christ, and he alone, is strong enough to deliver men from the grasp of rum, tobacco and the lodge. Hallelujah to his name forever! E. E. FLAGG.

LIQUOR DRINKING.

Hon. Chauncey M. Depew will scarcely be accused of fanaticism on the question of liquor drinking. Here is his experience as stated in a speech of his before a company of railroad men:

"Twenty-five years ago I knew every man, woman, and child in Peekskill. And it has been a study to me to mark boys who started in every grade of life with myself, to see what has become of them. I was up last fall, and began to count them over, and it was an instructive exhibit. Some of them became clerks, merchants, manufacturers, lawyers and doctors. It is remarkable that everyone of those that drank are dead; not one living of my age. Barring a few who were taken off by sickness; every one who proved a wreck and wrecked his family, did it from rum and no other cause. Of those who were Christians, who were steady, industrious, hard-working men, who were frugal and thrifty, every single one of them, without an exception, owns the house in which he lives, and has something laid by, the interest on which, with his house, would carry him through many a rainy day. When a man becomes debased with gambling, rum, or drink, he doesn't care; all his finer feelings are crowded out. The poor women at home are the ones who suffer—suffer in their tenderest emotions; suffer in their affections for those whom they love better than life."—Educator.

MURDERED BY HER BROTHER.

MITCHELL, Ind., Nov. 11.—Miss Mary Eubanks, daughter of M. Eubanks, a tailor, died this morning from the effect of blows on the head inflicted by her brother, Bee Eubanks. On Sunday evening the woman was sent out by her father and brother from lack of money to trade a bottle for whisky. Being unable to do so she remarked that she was afraid to go home lest she should be killed. She did go home, and soon after the sound of blows was heard and she was heard to cry out, "You're killing me! You're killing me!" Yesterday morning when one of her brothers called a physician, saying that his sister had taken an overdose of morphine and whisky, the physician found her lying on the floor in convulsions. She never regained consciousness, but lingered until this morning, when she died. An examination showed a fracture of the skull and several contusions of the brain, with bruises over the body. The inquest developed the fact that Bee Eubanks had beaten his sister to death with a whisky jug. Bee Eubanks has been sent to Bedford jail, but the father has not yet been arrested.

THANKSGIVING PIES.

"They all put brandy into them," said one.

"They all don't. My mother has never put a drop of brandy into her mince-pies since the day Bob said he could taste the brandy and it tasted good. Mother said then it was wrong, and she never would be guilty of it again. And if mother says a thing is wrong, you may be sure it is wrong; for what mother knows, she knows."

"How about mince-pies? Are you sure she knows how to make pies good?" and a laugh went up from a group of girls gathering around a register of the recitation-room, eating their lunch.

But some of them winced a little, when back were tossed these words: "If she doesn't, she knows how to make a boy good; and isn't a boy worth more than a mince-pie?"

SURROUNDED BY SALOONS.

Governor Taylor has received from the people of Cumberland Gap, Tenn., a map showing the location of sixteen saloons within about one mile of that town, two of them being in Kentucky and fourteen in Virginia; also locating the spots adjacent thereto where fifteen men have been shot within the last few months. None of the saloons are on this side of the line, but five of the murders have occurred in Tennessee. The people of that section have decided to present the facts to the governors of Kentucky, Tennessee and Virginia and ask their help in suppressing the lawlessness there.

The African Lakes Company absolutely refuses to have anything to do with the sale of intoxicants to the natives. The British South African Company is co-operating with the Lakes Company in this, and the English seeing the injurious effects of the rum trade are restricting it in their colonies.

The Pope has been ordered to drink beer instead of wine, and a quantity of bottles have been ordered from Vienna. It seems that the Pope's beer is to be prepared differently from the ordinary German beer. The Austrians are reported to be in high glee at the honor of thus providing for the Pope's table.

Mme. Blavatsky, the high priestess of theosophy, consumes sixty cigarettes every day. In her smoking tray she has a jar of gum arabic, with which she pastes the regular sheets of rice paper together, thus making the theosophical cigarette twice as long as the ordinary article. She uses the choicest brands of Turkish tobacco, and rolls them all herself.

It is said there has never been a fight or a quarrel, and that there are no punishments in the Soldiers' Home at Chelsea, Mass. The reason given for this is that no liquors are allowed on the premises, and if a man gets drunk when off on leave for a day he does not easily get permission to go again. If he gets drunk for a third time he is discharged from the Home.

COMMENTS BY E. E. FLAGG.

1. The visit to the sepulchre.—vs. 1–3. The Jewish Sabbath was past, and past in another and deeper sense than could have occurred to the minds of these women when they came with their burden of sweet spices, so lovingly prepared, to the sepulchre, and said among themselves, "Who shall roll us away the stone?" Well might they have asked, Who shall roll away from the minds of the people the burden of Pharisaical tradition, now that He, the Truth and the Light, lies cold in death? Many a devout soul bound by the fetters of Romish superstition, has brought a life full of the myrrh and sweet spices of the rarest self-devotion to the sepulchre of a dead Christ. They need to have the stone rolled away, and in these latter days the many agencies for disseminating Christian intelligence must be the angels to do it. There is also a hint at another truth: that the spirit of loving service is not daunted by difficulties. It always finds the stone rolled away. These women had done what they could. When we reach the limits of human possibility, then we touch on God's opportunity. They were too full of thoughts of their mission to let this obstacle deter them, or even to think of it till it confronted them. There may be difficulties in our way that seem insuperable, but if it is the way of duty we have only to press on; and could our eyes be opened we should see angelic aids all about waiting to supplement our feeble efforts with divine help.

2. The angel's message.—vs. 4–8. The faintest intimation that Christ could rise from the dead seems not to have dawned on their minds. Even the women, the faithful, true-hearted women had failed to understand or remember his words. How often when we come to some unexpected trial or sorrow or disappointment, we are perplexed "as though some strange thing had happened unto us." When we query why this or that thing should be allowed to happen, we have forgotten or failed to understand what Christ so distinctly foretold that "in the world ye shall have tribulation." Sometimes as we grow in Christian knowledge we are perplexed to find old truths assuming new forms; dying, as it were, to rise again in a more glorious resurrection. It is a sign that we are not making much progress if the heaven of religious truth always looks the same to us. The great mistake of Romanism, and of the spirit of ecclesiasticism generally, is that it keeps men groping among the tombs for truth that is not there; that has stripped off its grave-clothes and risen, a living truth to meet the demands of a living age. All the evangelists agree that these women made their visit to the tomb very early in the morning, "while it was yet dark." There is no time in the day so favorable for devotion as the early morning hours. This has always been the testimony of the most devoted Christian believers in every land and age. There is also another suggestion. When we are passing through heavy trials and "it is yet dark," we can see God's providences better for that very darkness, as the halo of celestial glory which surrounded the angels must have made more impression, outlined against the general obscurity, than if it had been broad noonday. When the sun of worldly prosperity is shining full upon us, God's angels often come and go unrecognized.

3. The incredulity of the disciples.—vs. 9–12. The supernatural in the Bible is always handled naturally; and this makes one of the chief points of distinction between the stories of the Apocrypha and legends of the saints, and Scripture. The most ordinary event that ever happened could not be told more simply than is the whole story of Christ's resurrection. It was natural that in their joy the women should "run to bring his disciples word;" and supremely natural also that men so often reproached by him for their slowness of spiritual comprehension, should count it all "an idle tale." The strongest possible internal evidence that the story is true, lies in these touches of naturalness; and in the fact that it is given without note or comment, as if the writers were too fully convinced themselves to take in the idea that any one could be found to doubt it. Two important lessons may be learned from these closing verses. First: that our religious experience has been out of the common line, and so wonderful that many professed Christians will refuse to believe it, is no reason that we should keep it to ourselves. If we have been "made to sit in heavenly places with Christ Jesus," let us hasten to make all his disciples sharers in the things we have seen, and the truths we have learned. Secondly: let us not be incredulous of another's experience, because we never had one like it, but, like Peter, prove its truth for ourselves.

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

—Mr. Moody, who recently conducted evangelistic services with great success in Buffalo, N. Y., went to Troy, N. Y., for similar work on the 9th of this month.

—The McCormick Presbyterian Theological Seminary, at Chicago, Ill., will send seven of its thirty-nine graduates this year at once to the foreign missionary field—a proportion of contribution probably not exceeded by any other seminary in the United States.

—The Canadian Methodist General Conference gives unequivocal indorsement to the policy of national prohibition, and has appointed a committee to wait upon the government and demand immediate attention toward the national prohibition of the liquor traffic. This conference further recommends that no one shall have a place in the Sunday-schools, in the educational institutions of the church, or in the ministry, who is not a total abstainer from the use of tobacco.

—Bishop Warren says that the members of the M. E. church in Germany contribute $4.40 per member annually, while the largest income of any of them is $1.25 a day.

—Mr. G. Sing Quah, a converted Chinaman, has entered Fort Worth University at Fort Worth, Texas, for the purpose of returning to China as a missionary.

—Rev. John Newton, Presbyterian, is the oldest of nine hundred missionaries in India. He landed at Calcutta in 1835, and continues a happy and contented toiler in that land still, at the ripe age of seventy-eight.

—At a meeting of the Connecticut Christian Endeavor societies in Willimantic the reports showed that there are now 376 societies and 23 unions in the State, with an aggregate membership of 23,000, and 4,000 members outside of the unions, making a total membership of 27,000.

—Major Whittle, the evangelist, has been holding meetings in Xenia, Ohio, and the churches manifest great interest. Bible readings are held every afternoon and evangelistic meetings in the evening. All the churches united in the services.

—A profound religious impression has lately been created in the othewise careless industrial population of the city of Paterson, N. J. The improvement came of nineteen days of evangelical work done by the Rev. C. H. Yatman. Four churches, Market Street Methodist and Embury Methodist, together with the Second and Third Presbyterian churches, united to maintain these meetings. Immense crowds attended the services. It is estimated that from 700 to 800 people professed faith in Christ and an entrance upon a new life. The churches are gathering up the results.

—The centennial anniversary of New England Methodism was observed in Boston lately with ceremonies which lasted for two days. Addresses were made by many eminent Methodists from New England, Canada, and other parts of the country. Bishop Foster, among other things, said that Methodism existed in the United States about thirty years before it attempted to enter New England. There are now, in this centennial year of New England Methodism, 150,000 communicants in New England, $10,000,000 worth of church property, and $4,000,000 of educational property. There are ten Methodists in New England to every one liberal Christian in the United States.

—In London there are thirty-two places where open-air services are regularly conducted by Presbyterians.

—One thousand four hundred and seventy dissenting Scotch clergymen have signed an address to Mr. Gladstone, declaring that they look to him to overthrow the State church. They say: "The time has come to sever the relations between the church and the state. Dissenting Christians have refrained too long from making this contest, and we now insist that the coming Parliament terminate the unjust and injurious connection."

—Twenty-four ecclesiastical bodies of this State, representing nine Protestant denominations, have appointed between ninety and one hundred delegates to attend a conference upon the subject of "Moral Instruction in Public Schools" this month. It will be held November 17 and 18, in the council room of the University of New York.

—The Methodists of England are preparing to commemorate, in March, the centenary of the death of Wesley and to build a tomb over his grave. It is proposed to substitute seven handsome marble pillars for the present wooden pillars under the gallery, each to cost $500. The Methodists of Canada have been invited to contribute funds for one of these, and the two Methodist Episcopal churches of the United States, one each.

—The city of Gloucester, Mass., has a scattered population of nearly twenty-five thousand persons living in contiguous villages under one municipal government. Recently a series of union evangelical meetings have been held under the leadership of Dr. L. W. Munhall, with Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Lowe as Gospel singers. The preaching and Bible readings have been clear, positive, earnest, and very effective. About five hundred persons have publicly confessed their faith in Christ, and have given their names to the different pastors in the city.

—It is said in regard to the persecution of Lutherans in the Baltic provinces of Russia, that three pastors have been banished and sixty-six are on trial, mostly on trivial charges. The Russian government is doing all it can to stamp out the Lutheran religion, as the members of that church are suspected of leaning toward Germany.

EDUCATIONAL NOTES.

—The President of the United States, four members of the Cabinet, all the members of the Supreme Court, 44 of 80 Senators, 164 of 329 Representatives, are college graduates.

—The first theological school of the country, Bangor Theological Seminary, was chartered in 1814 and opened in 1816; the last is the Gammon School of Theology, located at Atlanta, Ga., and was chartered in 1888.

—Miss Elizabeth Peabody, who first introduced into this country from Germany the kindergarten method of teaching the children, is still living in Boston at the age of eighty-seven years, and retains much interest in educational matters.

—There has been so much trouble in Cherokee county, Iowa, caused by the resignation of teachers for matrimonial purposes the past year, that the school board now requires every teacher to sign a contract not to get married during the school year.

—Of the graduates of Vassar College three hundred and five are now engaged in teaching, and many of them have attained high rank in this profession. Thirty-nine of the Alumnæ are classed as literary workers, of whom Mrs. Lizzie Williams Champney is probably best known. Twenty-two physicians come next in order, of whom eleven have married since receiving their degrees.

—A dispatch from Annapolis, Md., says there will be no cadet hops at the United States Naval Academy this winter. The discontinuance came about by Commander Glass insisting on the appointment of a dance committee according to their military standard. The cadets objected to this, claiming that those who stood highest in their respective classes did not take as much interest in social affairs, as they spend most of their time in study. This is a notable confession from students themselves that the dancing, carousing, lodge-patronizing student is not worth much for any institution.

—On the first Friday of the term, the Y. M. C. A. Association of the University of Wooster, Wooster, O., held its customary reception for new students, of whom there are present this year over 130. This reception has grown to be very popular. On the day before the opening, cards of invitation were distributed on the trains to any one having the appearance of a student. The members were at every train to escort the new studets to a reception room near the depot. Here a committee gave all the information in their power, about rooms, boarding, etc., and escorted the new students to places where such necessaries were to be had. A small hand-book was also presented to every one; this contained much useful information, such as a student would be in need of. By this means all were made "at home" at once.

THANKSGIVING.—The proclamation of President Harrison was issued just in time for the Sunday papers, which monopolized it as news. The document issued by Governor Fifer of Illinois is more Christian in tone than that from Washington. We prefer it and print it:

"During the year that is passed we have as a people been the recipients of innumerable blessings. Our fair State has been spared the wasting pestilence, society has been unusually free from civil commotions threatening the peace and security of our free institutions, while peace, abundance and happiness have prevailed within our borders. For these blessings it becomes a Christian people to return thanks to Almighty God. Therefore, I, Joseph W. Fifer, Governor of the State of Illinois, in conformity with the proclamation of the President and in obedience to a time-honored custom, do hereby appoint Thursday, the 27th day of the present month, as a day of public thanksgiving, and I commend to the people of this commonwealth that they properly observe the day by abstaining from the pursuit of their customary secular callings and unite in thanksgiving and praise to God for his infinite goodness and mercy and by invoking his divine blessing and guidance for the future. I recommend, too, that those enjoying abundance remember in charity the poor and needy. JOSEPH FIFER."

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

CHICAGO.

The fat stock show is in progress this week. The weighing of the most extraordinary lot of fat cattle ever shown in Illinois was finished Friday. The contest for prizes for cattle, hogs and sheep is said by the exhibitors to be the sharpest ever known in the West.

A corporation license has been issued to the Chicago and Calument Stock Yards Company, with a capital of $10,000,000, who propose to construct and operate near Chicago a stock yard's plant, including hotel buildings, and slaughtering, packing, and fertilizing establishments. It is understood that Armour and other large packers have purchased a large tract just outside the city limits in Indiana, where they will remove their business.

The liberal ministers in session in the city last week effected an organization called the Liberal Christian Alliance. Thomas, Swing the Unitarians and Universalists were engaged in the movement.

COUNTRY.

It is rumored that an English syndicate is to purchase Garden City, Long Island, and run it "something on the style of Pullman, Ill."

Near La Harpe, Ill., Tuesday, workmen unearthed wooden and clay images of peculiar design. They are believed to have been the work of an ancient race.

The overland Southern Pacific passenger train, south-bound, went through the long trestle over Lake Labish, about five miles from Salem, Oregon, Thursday night. The trestle must have given way as soon as the engine struck it, and the train and trestle all went down together. All were broken to pieces, and nearly every passenger on the train was injured. Five people were killed, and about 100 wounded.

It is now believed that the terrible explosion of the extensive Dupont powder works near Wilmington, Del., Oct. 7 last, which resulted in the death of ten workmen, an old lady a child, and the injuring of a number of others, may have been the work of a gang of fire-bugs who are secretly organized to do harm to the Dupont family. They are supposed to be revengeful employes who were discharged at the death of Gen. Henry Dupont, as several attempts were made last spring and summer to blow up the powder works.

The Irish members of Parliament, Messrs. Dillon, O'Brien and O'Connor, addressed a mass meeting at the Metropolitan Opera House, New York City, on Monday night, and raised a subscription of $33,000 in addition to $4,000 received from the box office to aid the cause of Home Rule in Ireland.

Henry M. Stanley, so the Pall Mall Gazette, London, announces, has sued Walter Barttelot, brother of the deceased major, and others who have brought charges against him in connection with the controversy regarding the rear guard of the Emin relief expedition, Mr. Stanley has engaged the services of Mr. George Lewis and Sir Charles Russell to represent him.

A collision occurred on the Pennsylvania railroad near Florence, Pa., Friday, between the first and second sections of the Western express, killing two passengers and injuring eighteen others. Only two in the car escaped.

At a mass-meeting in Lincoln, Nebraska, Nov. 16, presided over by Gov. Thayer, steps were taken for the immediate relief of the destitute in the western part of the State and a substantial fund was raised. It is designed to tide over all pressing wants by individual subscription until the meeting of the Legislature, when the State can take action. The

AN HONEST OFFER.

Inanother column will be found the advertisement of the great firm of J. D. Larkin & Company, of Buffalo. This firm is quoted in the Commercial Agencies as being worth $100,000. They have been in business a great many years, and their Sweet Home Soap, and Toilet articles are well known throughout the United States. Much pleasure is taken in calling the attention of the public to this firm's advertisement. The firm shows its reliability in the fact that it is willing to let anybody have its goods on 30 days' trial. The following is taken from the New York Illustrated Christian Weekly, dated Sept. 27, 1890.

COMPLETE CONFIDENCE.

If a business house is willing to send out its goods to any part of the country and ask for no pay, unless the goods after thirty days' examination are found to be as represented, they show their confidence to satisfy the public. We would advise our readers to carefully read the advertisement of J. D. Larkin & Co., Buffalo, N. Y., which appears on the last cover page.

We print a few of the many letters of appreciation Messrs. J. D. Larkin & Co. receive from parties who have ordered their goods. These letters need no further comment from us.

A Can. Minister's Experience.

St. Paulin, P. Qub. Can. Feb. 10, 1890.

I am happy to give this testimonial as to the excellency of "Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic." Suffering for a long period of nervous debility due to dyspepsia, I ascertain that since I made use of this remedy a radical change was operated on me; not only on the nerves, but even dyspepsia disappears promptly. Similar experiences have been made by many of my confreres with this remedy. I consider it entirely efficacious and proper to cure all nervous diseases and other cases depending from the same.

HOME AND HEALTH.

HOW TO CHOOSE A TURKEY.

On Thanksgiving Day every American family makes an effort to dine on turkey. The turkey, being a gift for which all Americans should be thankful, seems especially appropriate as a Thanksgiving offering. If you are a town-dweller you must secure your bird from a poulterer; and let me whisper to you not to rely too implicitly on his judgment. Tastes differ, and upon this occasion you wish to suit your own. Some persons prefer a gobbler to a hen-turkey, but I will advise you a hen. The meat is whiter, sweeter and more tender. The bill and toes should be soft, and the flesh have a bluish-white cast, twelve pounds being an exceedingly good weight. The fortunate country-dweller has his own turkeys, or should have at least, and can mold them at will. The feed can be so managed that the meat will be white, tender and of a delicate flavor, or the flavor may be greatly heightened by a change of diet. Chopped turnips, cabbage and parsley, varied with corn-meal, boiled rice and chopped celery tops impart a peculiar gamey flavor, which to many persons is very desirable. This food may be given three or four days before killing.—Mrs. S. T. Rorer, in Ladies' Home Journal.

HOW TO ROAST A TURKEY.

Select a large, fat, tender turkey, and have it nicely dressed, drawn, washed, wiped dry and well singed. Rub it all over, inside and outside, with pepper and salt. Make a stuffing of the following ingredients: One pound of light bread-crumbs, half a pound of butter, a heaping tablespoonful of finely minced onion, salt and pepper, one raw egg and enough water to mix rather soft. Stuff the breast first, and sew it up, then stuff the body. Rub the turkey all over with melted butter, and dredge well with sifted flour. Lay it in the pan on its breast, and pour in a quart of cold water. Have the oven well heated but not too hot, as the turkey must cook slowly to be done. Allow a quarter of an hour to each pound. Have some butter in a plate with a larding mop. From time to time baste the turkey with the gravy in the pan, rub over with the larding mop and dredge again with flour. As it browns turn from side to side, and last of all brown the breast. Frequent basting, dredging and turning, will insure perfect cooking. When done it should be a rich, dark brown all over, and when a fork is stuck deep into it no red juice should run. Remove it to a hot dish and, if the gravy is not quite thick enough, add a teaspoonful of flower creamed smooth with some of the grease skimmed from the gravy. If while cooking the gravy in the pan boils away too much, more water should be added. When the turkey is done there should be about a pint of gravy.—Anna Alexander Cameron in the Ladies' Home Journal.

HOW TO HAVE A GOOD DINNER.

So few persons have the privilege of a perfect Thanksgiving dinner, for the simple reason that the majority of individuals live at a distance from the abundant markets of our larger cities. But for all this, the success of a dinner depends greatly upon the tact and talent of the housewife. If she has the power to hold the appetite of her guests until the end of a thoroughly good dinner, and can assure them getting up from her table in a comfortable state of body and mind, she is indeed an artist, and would probably have the power to serve a lovely dinner, even in the midst of a forest.

Do not attempt a grand dinner, but have a satisfactory one. Begin your dinner, if it is convenient, with three oysters to each guest. This may seem a small allowance, but it is preferable to the conventional six. Have the plates filled with cracked ice and nicely garnished with water-cress, the oysters in their deep shells, neatly disposed of in the ice. Let your table be well laid with the best china you possess, and a spotlessly white table-cloth. Allow no dingy-looking goblet or dull silver to destroy the whiteness of the linen or the brightness of the table. Carl Benson tells us, "Over and over again he has generous feasts transformed into barbaric meals by the lack of clean plates, clean forks and clean glasses."—Mrs. S. T. Rorer, in Ladies' Home Journal.

THE THANKSGIVING DESERT.

The desert of a Thanksgiving dinner which, if properly managed, can be made the most attractive feature of the dinner, should be arranged with skill and good taste. Arrange the various fruits on high glass dishes, decorate them with an abundance of lovely fresh leaves, and have them placed on the table from the commencement of the meal. These, with the addition of plenty of carefully selected flowers placed in small vases and mixed freely with some delicate ferns, will impart a most dainty and artistic appearance to the whole.—Ladies' Home Journal.

SCROFULA

Is that impurity of the blood which produces unsightly lumps or swellings in the neck; which causes running sores on the arms, legs, or feet; which develops ulcers in the eyes, ears, or nose, often causing blindness or deafness; which is the origin of pimples, cancerous growths, or "humors;" which, fastening upon the lungs, causes consumption and death. It is the most ancient of all diseases, and very few persons are entirely free from it.

How Can It Be CURED

By taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, which, by the remarkable cures it has accomplished, has proven itself to be a potent and peculiar medicine for this disease. If you suffer from scrofula, try Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"Every spring my wife and children have been troubled with scrofula, my little boy, three years old, being a terrible sufferer. Last spring he was one mass of sores from head to feet. We all took Hood's Sarsaparilla, and all have been cured of the scrofula. My little boy is entirely free from sores, and all four of my children look bright and healthy." W. B. ATHERTON, Passaic City, N. J.

of pure Cod Liver Oil with Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda is almost as palatable as milk. Children enjoy it rather than otherwise. A MARVELLOUS FLESH PRODUCER it is indeed, and the little lads and lassies who take cold easily, may be fortified against a cough that might prove serious, by taking Scott's Emulsion after their meals during the winter season.

Beware of substitutions and imitations.

How to save money is a problem that interests everybody. One way to do it is to invigorate the system with Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Being a highly concentrated blood medicine, it is the most powerful and economical. It is sold for a dollar a bottle, but worth five.

If that lady at the lecture the other night only knew how nicely Hall's Hair Renewer would remove dandruff and improve the hair she would buy a bottle.

IN BRIEF.

According to the report of the California State Mining Bureau the impression that the gold mines of California are depleted below the point of profitable production is a mistaken one. The gold taken out has exhausted but little of the auriferous wealth of the State, and the annual production has not heretofore much exceeded what it may be reasonably hoped to reach and maintain in the future. Besides its gold-fields and silver-bearing lodes, California possesses the more common metals and minerals in great variety. There is hardly a county in the State but has valuable mineral deposits of one kind or another, and the distribution of these products is pronounced remarkable. Fourteen of the fifty-three counties make a notable production of gold, and twelve of gold and silver; five produce quicksilver, two borax, two salt, four asphaltum, two petroleum, three copper, etc. Were California even poor in the precious metals, it would yet become a great mining State. It is asserted in the report that gold-mining has not yet reached even the stage of sturdy infancy.

Photography is proving a wonderful aid to science. In no where is this more marked than in the science of astronomy. In the last issue of Mr. Sleads' most admirable review, he thus calls attention to the results and the possibilities of photography in this line of research: "The most astonishing results over all of the sciences have been produced in astronomy by the aid of photography. After an exposure of thirty-three minutes, the same instrument which renders visible to the human eye stars of the fourteenth magnitude, which in the entire heavens would register about 44,000,000 of stars, shows to the photographic eye 134,000,000, and, on an exposure of one hour and twenty minutes, would throw before the astonished gaze of the beholder a luminous dust of 400,000,000 stars. Never before in the history of humanity has man possessed the power of penetrating so profundly into the depths of the infinite. When it is remembered that, with the Lick 36-inch glass the moon is brought within about 100 miles of the earth, with this new 40-inch objective in the hands of the astronomer we may almost expect to be able to photograph the inhabitants on that satellite, providing, however, they remain sufficiently quiet during the lengthy exposure."

The largest cotton mill in the South is now being erected in Florence Ala., by New England capitalists. It will have 53,500 spindles. Southern cotton mills are extremely prosperous, earning dividends of from 12 to 25 per cent. At first only the coarsest class of goods were turned out by Southern mills, but the grade is now equal to any Northern. In fact, according to the Textile World, the goods of the Clifton Mills of the finest grade are being imitated by New England mills. There is no reason why the South can not manufacture cotton goods equal in every respect to the New England product. This investment of half a million dollars by New England parties shows that they believe this country offers the best field. A great deal of cotton is raised right around Florence, over 9,500 bales being raised in Lauderdale county alone. Water power is abundant also, besides an unlimited quantity of cheap coal, and the Tennessee River, in addition to her numerous railroads, gives Florence cheap transportation to the markets of the world. It is these advantages that are causing manufacturers to locate here. The new iron furnace, representing an investment of half a million dollars, is approaching completion. This is being erected by Philadelphia capital.

Of a kiss, at love's beginning,"— sings the poet, and his sentiment is true with one possible exception. If either party has the catarrh, even love's kiss loses its sweetness. Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy is a sure cure for this repulsive and distressing affliction. By its mild, soothing, antiseptic, cleansing and healing properties, it cures the worst cases. $500 reward offered for an incurable case.

Permanent Results,

And not a mere temporary exhilaration, are produced by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. This medicine, being an alterative, and working constitutionally, through the blood, its effects may not be immediately apparent in all cases, but the gain in health and strength, through its persistent use, is real and lasting. It reaches every drop of blood in the body.

"I have none but good words to speak regarding Ayer's Sarsaparilla. All during the winter I was languid, tired, and without any appetite, until I commenced the use of this remedy. I took three bottles. Its effects have been revivifying, and I feel as if I had entered a new life. I did not think it was in the power of medicine to produce such a wonderful change, as has Ayer's Sarsaparilla in my case."—Mrs. C. Johnson, 310 Hicks st., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"I have used Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and also other preparations of a like nature, for the purposes of a blood-purifier, and, while receiving no good, but often positive harm, from others, I have always derived benefit from Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and have no hesitation in recommending it to any one in want of a reliable blood-purifier."—Mrs. M. C. Hopkinson, 110 Merrimack Corporation, Lowell, Mass.

☞The safest and most reliable tonic, alterative, and diuretic is

Ayer's Sarsaparilla —FOR— Debility.

"I was a great sufferer from a low condition of the blood and general debility, becoming, finally, so reduced that I was unfit for work. Nothing that I did for the complaint helped me so much as Ayer's Sarsaparilla, a few bottles of which restored me to health and strength. I take every opportunity to recommend this medicine in similar cases."—C. Evick, 14 E. Main st., Chillicothe, Ohio.

"Ayer's Sarsaparilla is one of the very few proprietary medicines that I can honestly recommend. I have seen it used in this place, in a number of cases, with very satisfactory results, and I have used it in my own family, for salt-rheum, with abundant success. I consider it to be the leading blood-purifier of the day."—Charles C. Davis, Nashua, N. H.

"I suffered from general debility for fifteen years. A few bottles of Ayer's Sarsaparilla completely cured me, and I now enjoy good health."—Mrs. J. F. McElhinney, Truro, N. S.

Advices from Zanzibar say that the sultan's decree abolishing the slave trade is almost a dead letter, the Arabs persisting in the traffic under the very eyes of the authorities.

Dr. Koch, the inventor of the bacillus, s now reported as having discovered an absolute cure for consumption, based upon his bacillus theory. The cure is inoculation with a fluid which the inventor hopes to be able to place within the reach of everybody. There is a regular exodus from the Mediterranean shores of consumptives to Berlin, and the hotels are rapidly filling. Many American doctors have given notice that they are coming to hear Prof. Koch's lecture on Nov. 26. A host of foreign doctors are arriving. The Italian government has sent three physicians. Drs. Nothnagel, Billroth, and Kowalski of Vienna, praise Professor Koch's remedy, and say that it is the greatest discovery since that of Dr. Jenner.

The British torpedo cruiser Serpent foundered off the coast of Spain at a point twenty miles north of Cape Finisterre, Wednesday. Out of a total of 250 souls on board only three were saved. The Serpent went on the rocks during a storm. A heavy mist prevailed at the time of the disaster. Owing to the violence of the storm it was impossible to send assistance from the shore. Tremendous seas swept the decks of the doomed vessel, carrying away group after group of the unfortunate men on board. The Serpent's complement was 170 officers and men. The others on board were going to relieve men now on ships on the African station. The Serpent was a twin screw vessel of 1,770 tons and 4,500 horse-power. She carried six guns.

A collision occurred Tuesday morning on the Great Western railway at Norton-Fitzwarren station, near Taunton, England, between a goods train and a special train from Plymouth, which was conveying the passengers from the steamer Norham Castle, which had just arrived at Plymouth from the Cape of Good Hope. Ten persons were killed and eight injured. The collision was caused by the negligence of a signal man.

OUR MAMMOTH CHRISTMAS BOX

Our object in getting up this Mammoth "Christmas" Box is to introduce to the American people our "Sweet Home" Family Soap and fine Toilet Articles. They are the purest, best, and most satisfactory whether made in this country or England ; every one who uses them once become our permanent customer. We propose a new departure in the soap trade and will sell direct from our factory to the consumer, spending the money usually allowed for expenses of traveling men, wholesale and retail dealers' profits, in handsome and valuable presents to those who order at once.

Our goods are made for the select family trade, and will not be sold to dealers, and to induce people to give them a trial, we accompany each case with all of the useful and valuable presents named.

THIS BOY LAUGHS

because the Great "Christmas" Box has arrived and it will make 100,000 boys, girls, men and women, old and young, happy ; because it contains the greatest lot of Christmas Presents ever seen for the money. Beautiful things ! Something for everyone in the family, father—mother—all of the boys and girls—the baby—and hired girl. Such fun opening the box you never heard of. It is a great surprise to all who get it. It contains so many of the very things everyone wishes to receive. Nowhere can such liberality be found.

We do not ask you to remit in advance, nor run any risks, nor take any chances. We merely ask permission to ship to you a box of these goods, and if after 30 days' trial you are fully convinced that the soap is all we claim, and the extras all we advertise, you can then pay the bill. But if you are not satisfied in every way, no charge will be made for what you have used. How can we do more ?

To Get the Box simply write your name and address on a postal card and mail to us and we will ship you the goods on 30 day's trial, and you are under no obligations to keep the box if it does not in every way meet your expectations. We know the great value of our articles, and are willing to put them to the severest kind of a test, hence will send you the box on 30 day's trial and if not satisfactory will remove it.

A SET OF SOLID SILVER TEA SPOONS FREE.

Some people prefer to send cash with order—we do not ask it but if readers of this paper remit in advance we will place in the box in addition to all the other extras a set of SIX SOLID SILVER TEA SPOONS—plain pattern—very rich and elegant. This special offer is made with the understanding that you will recommend "Sweet Home" Soap to three or more friends (provided the goods prove all we claim) we believe your influence and future trade will be especially valuable to us (one box shown to our customers has often sold twenty others.) Persons remitting in advance can have their money refunded without argument or comment, if the box does not prove all they expect.

The above OFFER only holds good until January 1st. SEND IN YOUR ORDERS AT ONCE.

Kansas is surely in earnest for prohibition. It is reported that at the recent banquent given in Leavenworth in honor of Allen G. Thurman, the Democratic Nestor, thirty gallons of wine provided for the occasion were seized by the police and emptied into the sewers. Another supply of wine was secured, but the banqueters secured the protection of the sheriff and twenty deputies sworn in for that purpose, and had their spree.

If we hear little about the defeat of prohibition in Nebraska, we learn less about that of resubmission in Kansas. A heavy blow was predicted against the prohibitory law, but it did not fall. In a vote of 285,000 only 68,000 ballots were counted for the odious scheme to restore the saloons. Comparing this result with Nebraska, it would appear that where the saloon has been suppressed and prohibition given a practical trial it is accepted as the best condition of society. In Nebraska the voters had not seen this practical test, and were filled with doubts by the reports of such eminent men and friends of the saloon as Dr. Duryea of Omaha, who told them that prohibition was a failure in Iowa. The salvation of both the Democratic and Republican parties was also represented as depending on the vote to down prohibition. But it is amazing that nearly 30,000 voters in Nebraska should stand by the saloon infamy.

The Indian frenzy which has been the burden of the dispatches from Nebraska and the Dakotas for a week or more, may at any time as we write break out into massacre. There is evidence that this crazy, ghost-dance business is not altogether a possession of devils as to the Indians alone, but there is some of the white man's wickedness mixed up with it all. Gen. Nelson A. Miles of the department of the Missouri is quoted as saying relative to the impending Indian outbreak: "One great cause of all this trouble is the almost entire crop failure and the delay of the government in forwarding supplies. Congress failed to make the appropriation until late in the summer, and consequently the supplies have been tardy." The representatives of the Catholic missions among the Sioux also, have informed the officers of the Government that in their opinion the threatened uprising is due to fear of hunger more than to religious fanaticism. This does not cause great surprise, it is but a continuation of our criminal management of the Indian question for over a century. The public conscience has become hardened, it has heard the story so often. Will not God raise up for us some Penn to lead us to just and righteous dealing with the remnant of the red men?

PROF. H. WOODSMALL.

The fall of the Irish leader Parnell is told briefly in our news columns. Men may talk as they please about the nobility of human nature. Their boasting is daily put to shame. If a man who could lead a feeble cause to many victories with such intrepidity and apparent self-control and firmness as Parnell has shown, can weakly yield to a fascinating but vile temptation, not many of his fellows should care to trust themselves at great lengths or small. The churches of every class in Great Britain are firmly denouncing the guilt of the Irish leader, and it is quite probable that if he does not retire his party will suffer continual defeat. But it is a serious and pitiful part of this crime, that members of the Irish party on both sides the sea, but especially in this country, seek to belittle or condone it, and claim that after a brief retirement, Mr. Parnell's sun will shine forth with undimmed strength. This cannot be, if there is any truth left in the earth.

The great party organs are full of trivial news from all parts of the world, but they can give hardly a dozen lines to Nebraska where the most important election of the season was held. The temperance papers of that State give us at last the official count, which is 29,653 against prohibition in a total vote of 194,433. At the same time the license proposal was defeated by a vote of 15,520. The Prohibition Central Committee have issued a statement of the reasons for the defeat, and the means used to procure it. The true temperance men of the State have no need to be ashamed of their record, or of their vote of 82,390 against the saloon curse. It is understood that the Farmers' Alliance will contest the election of Boyd, the Democratic Governor, and of every Republican official supposed to have been elected. The notices charge at length that business men in Omaha and elsewhere formed a conspiracy to defeat the will of the people, and brought in vast sums of money for that purpose; that nearly three thousand foreigners were naturalized and their fees paid by outside parties just prior to the election; and that numerous other frauds and irregularities were practiced.

A formidable opposition has arisen to the secret societies of Northwestern University at Evanston, near this city. The anti-fraternity men not only have begun the publication of a successful paper to speak for them to the public, but have organized a society know as the "Massasoit," which has a large and growing membership. They marched the streets of the college town 400 strong lately, with a band and transparencies to celebrate their first bloodless victory over the fraternities, which was in the way of simple business success. The Alpha Phi ladies society, of which Miss Willard is yet understood to be a member, and to which she promised to keep secrets from even her revered old mother, will be one of the organizations which will be affected by this new anti-secret society. Every one who joins the Massasoit must sign a pledge that he will not join a secret society while in college. We trust its campaign against a great and popular evil in our colleges may be so wisely and happily conducted as to disintegrate and forever banish from Northwestern University the organizations which it opposes.

HIS COMING KINGDOM.

BY VICTORIA ALEXANDRA BUCK.

'Tis coming! 'tis coming! His kingdom is near,
His thunders sweep over the land!
Wisdom and honor and daring and love
Haste from the battle-field, stoop from above.
For the day of the Lord is at hand!
Who would sit down and sigh for a lost age of gold.
When the Lord of all ages is here?
True hearts will leap forth at the trumpet of God,
And those who can suffer, can dare,
That lost age of gold was a daring age, too.
And the meekest of saints can find stern work to do,
In this day of the Lord at hand.

Randolph, N. Y.

AN APPLICATION OF THE TESTIMONY OF PHILO JUDÆUS.

BY JOSIAH W. LEEDS.

EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE:—In the Oberlin letter of thy interesting correspondent, H. H. Hinman, printed in thy paper of the 6th inst., I find a reference to a Presbyterian pastor, who, while not a member of any of the secret lodges, yet appears to have apologized for their methods, "the secrecy, the oaths, and the signs of recognition, and found their counterpart in the practices of the earlier Christians as well as the Jewish church."

Well, the disciple of Confucius or Buddha, coming to this enlightened country, has no difficulty in both finding and affiliating with droves of the later Christians of this day, well instructed in the mysteries; and he finds that these involve some very serious obligations to the faithful, as do the secret lodges of his own countrymen. If in the literal carrying out of these oath-bound obligations, he should resort to assassination, as has lately happened in San Francisco, he will be able to declare that Christians and Jews are actively interested in societies of a secret and mysterious character, that they are bound by the most stringent oaths never to reveal the dark secrets they have learnt, and he will so state to any curious reporter, annalist, or historiographer of his native China or Japan, who may desire to have knowledge of the affairs and the practices of the American people.

Should our Mongolian, however, be one who was concerned to acquire a thorough knowledge of our language, religion and literature, he will presently discover that the most earnest followers of the religion of the Lord Jesus Christ will have naught to do with what their Bible declares to be "the unfruitful works of darkness;" that where such as these have found their feet entangled in the secret lodge, they have either quickly ceased to attend the meetings, holding themselves to be no longer members, or they have more publicly withdrawn, and, in doing so, have felt it their duty to reprove and condemn the evil into which they had fallen. In the biographies of estimable men, in essays which they have written, and in some of the current religious journals of the day, the honest inquirer will not fail to discover many testimonies and protests of the kind referred to.

Going back now to the asserted practices of the Jews and early Christians, remarked upon by the Presbyterian pastor, I adduce the following testimony of Philo Judæus, that eminent Jewish writer of Alexandria, the year of whose birth was nearly contemporaneous with that of Christ's appearance in the flesh. Philo says:

"All mysteries, all parade and trickery of that sort, Moses removed from the holy giving of the law; since he did not wish those that were trained under such a form of religious policy to be exposed, by having their minds dazzled with mysterious things, to neglect the truth, and to follow after that which belongs to night and darkness, disregarding what is worthy of the light and of the day. Hence no one of those that know Moses, and count themselves among his disciples, should allow himself to be initiated into such mysteries, or initiate others; for both the learning and the teaching of such mysteries is no trifling sin. For why, ye initiated, if they are beautiful and useful things, do ye shut yourselves up in profound darkness, and confer the benefit on two or three alone, when you might confer it on all, were you willing to publish in the market place what would be salutary for every one, so that all might certainly participate of a better and happier life?"

I believe that the dazzling inducement held out to the neophyte in Freemasonry is, that through advancement from one degree to another, to the Masonic brother is finally imparted wondrous revelations of the truth. Many trustworthy witnesses, nevertheless, have arisen, whose testimony goes to show that "by having their minds dazzled with mysterious things," the pursuers of this ignis fatuus have been brought "to neglect the truth, and to follow after that which belongs to night and darkness, disregarding what is worthy of the light and of the day."

If counsel such as that of Philo is good for the Jew, ought it not to be still more appropriate for the followers of Him who declared that "in secret he had said nothing;" in whom is no darkness at all, who himself is "the Way, the Truth and the Life?"

Philadelphia, 11th month 11, 1890.

THE STUDENTS OF KNOX COLLEGE, TORONTO.

THEY DISCUSS THE SECRET ORDERS.

At the regular meeting of the Metaphysical and Literary Society of Knox College, Oct. 31, 1890, the following question was discussed:

"Resolved, That secret societies should be discouraged by the church."

The leader on the affirmative, H. C. Foster, B. A., introduced the discussion by stating:

1. The question refers to systems, not individuals. What should be the relation between the two:—the church on the one hand and the secret societies on the other?

2. That secret societies would be viewed from the standpoint of the Christian church. The discussion had nothing to do with the question, were they beneficial from a worldly point of view? He then brought forward the following arguments:

1. They are detrimental to the work of the church because they are anti-Christian, not recognizing the Christian's God, but only the common deity, such as the heathen also do.

2. They supplant the work of the church by denying its claim as an institution of Divine power; by uniting men to an inferior organization and in a limited brotherhood based on purely selfish motives.

3. They teach a lower standard than the Bible, as the "Rule of Faith and Practice."

4. They teach obedience to the laws of the society before those of the Christian religion.

5. That those who obey the laws of the society will be blessed by felicity in the world to come; teaching that salvation is based on works, not upon faith in Christ's redemptive work.

Further points were adduced by the supporter of the affirmative, Mr. E. A. Harrison:

1. That although, at times, a society may be compelled to assume the form of secretism in order to right grievances, they should be discontinued when the work is accomplished.

2. They destroy true benevolence, as seen from the statistics of these societies, when compared with those inside the church. In some, 66–85 per cent of the funds are spent on themselves; whereas, in the latter 4-5 per cent only is thus required.

3. They develop a wrong standard of morality, inasmuch as members are pledged to support, more or less, each other in right or wrong.

4. That the benevolence which is considered the bulwark of secret societies is limited to such societies, and thus opposed to the teachings of the church, which is universal sympathy.

These arguments being substantiated by references to authoritative quotations from the constitutions of many of these secret societies, were not met or refuted by the negative supporters.

The leader of the negative, D. M. Buchanan, B. A., held,

1. That the evils consequent on the existence of such societies, depended not on their constitution, but on the men that were its members. This argument had little weight; as it depends upon a society who should be its members.

2. That instead of supplanting the work of the church, they worked in union with it,—supplemented the work of the latter.

This was met again by the affirmative in holding that the energies and means drawn into these societies, could better be utilized in the church.

3. The fact that much good is done by them in relief; in rescuing, as in temperance secrecy; —in education or to keep secrets—should make the church favor them.

This was met by the affirmative in showing the church found no fault with the good done, but with the means by which that good was accomblished; and the evil they did.

The supporter of the negative, Mr. McLennan, held:

1. We have a warrant for their existence, in the fact that each family is a secret society. This argument was not met.

2. The facts that they only admitted men who believe in a Divine being, and that only moral men could enter them, were a warrant as to their character.

Met to degree by the leader of the affirmative, by showing that they depended not on Christ and the Holy Spirit in working reform, and therefore should be discouraged by the church. He also corroborated some of the arguments brought forward by the leader of negative.

Basing the decision on the arguments produced, the decision was given in favor of the affirmative.

ANDREW CARRICK, B. A., Pres.

SUPPLEMENTAL—THE FAMILY NOT TO BE CLASSED WITH SECRET SOCIETIES.

The reader will observe that there was one argument, viz.: "We have a warrant for their existence in the fact that each family is a secret society," unanswered. This was due to lack of time, as the leader on the affirmative was limited to five minutes for rebutting. It would have been an easy matter to show that the family is not secret society. Because—

1. You will find the family in no catalogue of secret societies; neither does the community at large think of the family when secret societies are spoken of.

2. There is no oath taken by the members of the family that all secrets shall be kept inviolable, denying investigation by law, church, etc., as is the case in secret societies.

3. The recognition of the members of a family is not dependent upon secrecy, as is the case in secret societies. "The secret then, of our secrets, is simply this: to know each other and to prevent imposition."—Odd-fellow's Pocket Companion, p 316.

4. There is a vast difference between secrets and secretism, i. e., organized secrecy. The secrets of the family are simply accidents. If those secrets be revealed, the sacredness of the family is not necessarily impaired, but possibly enhanced, and the family vows remain just as binding. Not so in secret societies. There the secrets are a necessary part of their constitution. It is their chief corner-stone, their sole bond of union. "It is the principle of secrecy that forms our bond of union * * * * It constitutes our brotherhood, links us together in a community of feeling and affection, and enables us to preserve the organic capacity which in all other forms has crumbled to pieces."—Odd-fellow's Pocket Companion, p 318. That which makes a secret society to differ from all other societies is its principle of secrecy. The moment that is revealed, it may continue to be a society, but ceases to be a SECRET society.

5. The family is a divine institution. All God's dealings in providence from creation to the present time, and all his teachings in Revelation have been to reveal the secrets which surround himself, his kingdom and the future; not to conceal them. The family and all the divine institutions are intended to be in harmony with this principle; not antagonistic to it. It was not until Adam and Eve had sinned that they sewed leaves together as a "veil of secrecy" for their bodies, or retired into the "hidden shades" of the Garden from God. "Men love darkness rather than light, because their deeds are evil." The more sin, or imperfection, as the result of sin, a family has, the more it fears and shuns the gaze of the world. On the other hand, the nearer a family approaches the condition intended by God, the less it thinks about or fears the gaze of the world. Not so secret societies; they are simply a human institution and go upon the principle "always conceal, never reveal."

The supporter of the affirmative said: "This debate has been to me an eye-opener, and I would not take $100 for the information gained regarding secret societies. I never felt in preparing a debate that I was working directly for the Lord Jesus as I do in this."

Others expressed their interest in the question and desire more information. A thorough discussion of the question is needed in the college, as some of the students are members of secret societies. They have joined with a view of insurance or other equally honest motive, and have never stopped to consider the character of these societies. If they are members of an order, such as the temperance organizations, and do not see any evil in them, they need to be shown that these societies sanction, and are feeders to, those that are antagonistic to the church; and that a member of one of these societies is committed to the whole system, and unableto take a consistent and effective stand against them. H. C. F.

PRESIDENT SEELYE'S AMHERST LETTER.

The letter written by Dr. Julius H. Seelye to one of the Cynosure editors, reaffirms the views embodied in his letter to the Century published just exactly two years before. In that earlier one, he expressed the opinion that "these societies must give back to the college the tone they have first received." Coming from the homes of New England, and from the college chapel and class rooms, the Amherst men bring to the literary societies a high average tone, moral as well as intellectual.

One effect of this is the verification of the late president's opinion, of which he cannot be supposed to be aware. It is a secret, though not sworn or inviolable, that at least one Amherst society uses an expurgated ritual. The temper of Amherst steel is recognized in his own letter, where he says that the introduction of a new secret society, not literary but social, was "stoutly opposed." Yet he appears never to have heard a student declare that he would not take the regular initiation in a society already existing, and that, if it were demanded by the central authorities of the general order, as a condition of continued membership, he would leave the society altogether.

What Dr. Seelye aproves, then, is a high-toned literary society, that rejects with abhorrence and effective detestation something which, in those of the same order in other colleges, can now shield itself with his honored name. The president appears unconsciously to sanction and commend what the students and members themselves condemn and will not endure. CRUCIFER.

Sam Small, who now makes his home at Ogden, while superintending the building of the new Methodist University established in Utah, has very little faith in the pronunciamento of President Woodruff against polygamy in the Mormon church. Mr. Small points out that the Mormons get all their law by revelation, and President Woodruff took care not to say that his new order was by revelation. He simply counseled his people to give up polygamy, well knowing that they would not do so. It was meant to have effect on the outside world rather than on the Mormons, and to give greater force to the complaint of the Mormons that they are being persecuted by the government. Mr. Small believes that the Cullom bill should become a law, compelling these people to openly renounce polygamy as the rebels in the South were compelled to take the oath of allegiance, before they shall have the rights of citizens. This position of Mr. Small is not unreasonable, and if President Woodruff means that his pronunciamento shall be recognized as the law of the Mormon church, it can in no way harm his people.—Inter-Ocean.

HARVEST HYMN.

Once more the liberal year laughs out
O'er richer stores than gems or gold;
Once more with harvest song and shout
Is nature's bloodless triumph told.

Our common mother rests and sings,
Like Ruth among her garnered sheaves;
Her lap is full of goodly things,
Her brow is bright with Autumn leaves.

O favors old, yet ever new!
O blessings with the sunshine sent!
The bounty overruns our due,
The fullness shames our discontent.

We shut our eyes, the flowers bloom on;
We murmur, but the corn-ears fill;
We choose the shadow, but the sun
That casts it shines behind us still.

God gives us, with our rugged soil,
The power to make it Eden fair,
And richer fruit to crown our toil
Than Summer-wedded islands bear.

Who murmers at his lot to-day?
Who scorns his native fruit and bloom,
Or sighs for dainties far away;
Beside the bounteous board of home?

Thank Heaven, instead, that freedom's arm
Can change a rocky soil to gold;
That brave and generous lives can warm
A clime with northern ices cold.

And by these altars wreathed with flowers,
And fields of fruits, awake again
Thanksgiving for the golden hours,
The early and the latter rain.

—John G. Whittier.

THE FIRST THANKSGIVING PROCLAMATION.

It does not appear to have been very generally known that the centennial of our first national Thanksgiving proclamation occurred last year. That it was the one hundredth anniversary is evident from the following copy of President Washington's first Thanksgiving proclamation, furnished the Congregationalist by Rev. J. W. Wellman, D. D., to whom it came down as an heirloom from his great-grandfather, William Ripley, Esq., of Cornish, N. H. The document also sets at rest two questions which were considerably mooted during the late war; first, as to whether President Lincoln's proclamation for a day of public thanksgiving and prayer were not the first of the kind ever issued by a President of the United States; and second, whether this people is a nation, with a capital N. It reads:

BY THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.—A PROCLAMATION.

Whereas, it is the duty of all nations to acknowledge the providence of Almighty God, to obey his will, to be grateful for his benefits, and humbly to implore his protection and favor: and whereas, both houses of Congress have, by their joint committee, requested me, to recommend to the people of the United States, a day of public thanksgiving and prayer, to be observed by acknowledging with grateful hearts the many signal favors of Almighty God, especially by affording them an opportunity peaceably to establish a form of government for their safety and happiness.

Now, therefore, I do recommend and assign Thursday, the twenty-sixth day of November next, to be devoted by the people of these States, to the service of that great and glorious Being, who is the beneficent Author of all the good that was, that is, or that will be: that we may then all unite in rendering unto him our sincere and humble thanks for his kind care and protection of the people of this country previous to their becoming a nation; for the signal and manifold mercies, and the favorable interpositions of his providence in the course and conclusion of the late war;—for the great degree of tranquility, union and plenty, which we have since enjoyed;—for the peaceable and rational manner in which we have been enabled to establish constitutions of government for our safety and happiness, and particularly the national one now lately instituted;—for the civil and religious liberty with which we are blessed, and the means we have of acquiring and diffusing useful knowledge; and in general, for all the great and various favors which he hath been pleased to confer upon us.

And also, that we may then unite in most humbly offering our prayers and supplications to the great Lord and Ruler of nations, and besecch him to pardon our national and other transgressions;—to enable us all, whether in public or private stations, to perform our several and relative duties properly and punctually;—to render our national government a blessing to all the people, by constantly being a government of wise, just and constitutional laws, directly and faithfully executed and obeyed;—to protect and guide all sovereigns and nations (especially such as have shown kindness unto us) and to bless them with good government, peace and concord;—to promote the knowledge and practice of true religion and virtue, and the increase of science among them and us;—and generally, to grant unto all mankind such a degree of temporal prosperity as he alone knows to be best.

Given under my hand, at the city of New York, the third day of October, in the year of our Lord, one thousand, seven hundred and eighty-nine. G. Washington.

THE MENNONITES ON SECRET SOCIETIES.

At the eighty-fourth semi-annual session of the Eastern District Conference of the Mennonite church, held in Bowmanville, Pa., in September, the following able report was adopted as a statement of the convictions of the church respecting secret societies. The Mennonite of Philadelphia says:

The committee appointed at the May conference to find Scriptural grounds for our opposition to secret societies, read the following nine theses as a report:

1. Because they are worldly organizations, organized for the purpose of pursuing worldly objects only, yet by certain forms of religious exercises and religious ceremonies which they have, many of their members are persuaded to believe that the lodge contains all the religion necessary, and that on this account they can do without the church and church services.

2. Because they, in their religious ceremonies (addresses, prayers, etc.), intentionally do not make mention of the name of Jesus Christ, whereby they deny Christ who has said, "But whosoever shall deny me before men, him will I also deny before my Father which is in heaven."—Matt. 10: 33.

3. Because as secret organizations they contain secrecies to which those joining them are required to promise obedience, and to pledge themselves not to reveal them, before they know what they are and what they require of them. But Jesus says, John 18: 20, "In secret have I said nothing." The Apostle Paul exhorts, Rom. 12: 2, "To prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect will of God." And to the Corinthians the same Apostle writes (1 Cor. 10: 31), "Whether therefore ye eat, or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God." But in order to do anything to the glory of God we must necessarily know whether the thing is in accordance with the will of God before we undertake to do it.

4. Because they are oath-bound societies; but Christ teaches, Matt. 5: 34–36, "But I say unto you, swear not at all: neither by heaven, for it is God's throne; neither by the earth, for it is his footstool; neither by Jerusalem, for it is the city of the great King. Neither shalt thou swear by thy head, because thou canst not make one hair white or black."

5. Because they make brotherly fellowship with unbelievers, with godless and sinful persons. But Paul exhorts, 2 Cor. 6: 14, "Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers: for what fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness? and what communion hath light with darkness?" And Eph. 5: 11 he writes, "And have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them."

6. Because by their secrecies they occasion suspicion, and are objects of offense to many. Paul exhorts, 1 Thess. 5: 22, "Abstain from all appearance of evil."

7. Because they are partial and make an evil difference between those who are members and those who are not members, even where both are members of the same church, whereby they manifest a higher regard for the worldly organization of the lodge than for the spiritual organization of the church.

8. Because their much praised beneficence is not in accordance with the teachings of the Bible. God's Word teaches us to aid the poor, the needy, the sick and the helpless. The secret societies give assistance alike to the rich as well as to the poor. Jesus teaches us to do good unto those who are not able to reward us; the secret societies do good only to those who have bound themselves under similar circumstances to do good to others again. The Word of God desires that we shall do good unto every one in need of our assistance. The so-called beneficence of our "beneficial societies" is restricted to the members of the particular society who are of good standing and who have paid up all their dues.

9. Because a Christian can better fulfill his duties and obligations towards God and his fellow men; towards the family, the church and the world, if he is free from the bonds of secret societies and the obligations which these require of him, than he is able to do, if he is obliged to devote much time, much money and much attention to the things belonging to these societies.

After some remarks by different members upon the evil of secret orders the report was accepted as the declaration of the conference, giving the main principles for our opposition to secret orders. It was further ordered that the chair appoint a committee of one to have the declarations printed in tract form, in both English and German, for distribution.

A MYSTERY SOLVED.

Australian Methodists publish in Adelaide a paper called the Christian Weekly whose want of spirituality and otherwise worldly character has impressed more than one editor who gets it as an exchange. We stopped it as an exchange for this reason. Now another most esteemed editor writes us of his impression to the same end for some time. But the mystery is solved.

On a Friday evening in July last, the editor of the Christian Weekly, Rev. G. E. Rowe, a Wesleyan Methodist minister, was duly installed as "Worshipful Master of the (Freemason's) Lodge of Unity." After the installation the brethren turned "from labor to refreshments." "The most Worshipful Pro. Grand Master in proposing the health of the new "Worshipful Master" (Rev. G. E. Rowe,) named "toleration" as "the virtue" most eminently characteristic of Australian Masonry. He said:—

"When Lord Carrington came to Adelaide as Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of New South Wales to install His Excellency Earl of Kintore as Grand Master of South Australia, he was attended by the Bishop of Bathurst as Grand Chaplain. The Grand Chaplain of the Grand Lodge of Victoria was a Congregational minister, and the other day, in Hobart, a distinguished clergyman of the Church of England was installed as Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Tasmania, the chaplain of which lodge was the Jewish Rabbi. They had heard that evening the excellent observations of the R. W. the Deputy-Grand Master, who pointed out the great advantages of ministers of religion engaging themselves in the good and worthy objects in which laymen were so active, and in this connection the newly-installed Master of the Lodge of Unity had set a noble example to the clergy of South Australia. Bro. Rev. G. E. Rowe had the distinguished honor of being the first minister of any Methodist denomination in Australia who had risen to such a high and honorable position as that of Worshipful Master of a Masonic lodge. (Cheers.)"

But India can outdo that by far. We can point to a Masonic lodge here where Christians of different denominations, ministers too, join hand-in-hand both in "labor and refreshments" with Parsees, Mahommedans and infidels. The toleration of India stumbles at no such trifles as immorality or dishonesty, provided no Mason shall seduce another Mason's wife, sister or mother. We can point out well-known cases of this sort to our Australian friends.

One statement we can hardly credit. In the speech it was further mentioned. Rev. G. E. Rowe was just recovering from serious illness and that it was matter for congratulation that he was able to add the duties of "Worshipful Master to the arduous duties of his ministerial profession." We opine "his ministerial profession" is not over-burdened with "arduous duties" or he would have no time for Masonic tomfoolery. But Mr. Rowe in his reply surprises us not a little, on two points at least. Hear him:—

"In replying, Bro. the Rev. G. E. Rowe expressed his deep thanks for the very cordial manner in which the toast had been submitted by the Pro G. M. and received by the brethren. He only hoped that the wishes of the Pro Grand Master, in his position as Master of the Lodge of Unity, would be verified, and that the brethren would at the end of his term have no cause to regret having elected him to the high and honorable office. There had been nothing in his training for the sacred office of the ministry to make it obstructive to the Masonic craft. Methodism was not antagonistic in any way to Masonry, and Masonry was not in any way antagonistic to Methodism. (Cheers.) He appreciated the remarks by the Deputy Grand Master, and trusted that the departure marked that night, so far as the Methodist Church was concerned, would be a happy one, and that the brethren of the craft would have no cause to regret the appointment of a representative of Methodism to the office of Master of a lodge."

"Methodism not antagonistic in any way to Masonry," and vice versa. We recommend our readers to order from our Watchman book depot, "Masonic Oaths," price Re. 1-3-0, and carefully read the oaths attached to the first three degrees of Masonry, and judge for themselves of the sort of conscience he, Rev. G. E. Rowe, must have, thus to libel Methodism.

Our second surprise is over his audacity in congratulating Methodism on its new attitude toward Masonry. In India Christian men, true Christian men, quit the lodge and follow Christ. —The Watchman, Bombay, India.

NEW ENGLAND LETTER.

The election.—A new way to secure prohibition.—Juvenile military drills.—Father Ignatius.—Parlor meetings.—A word of exhortation.—The old Congregationalist responds to the rising tide of anti-secrecy.

The State elections being over, the next "agony" will be the mayorality contest in Boston. Mayor Hart has been disappointed of what he very evidently wished,—a renomination; but it ought not to be a matter for wonder to him, as in many respects he himself has been a disappointment to the class to whom he owed his election. The contest over the mayorality will doubtless be a warm one, but there is little fear of another O'Brien administration while the public school question continues at the front. Governor-elect Russel, is one of the youngest men who has ever attained to the position of chief executive in Massachusetts, and also the first to come from among the alumni of Boston University. It remains to be seen whether he will stand by the traditions of his party or show that he has some moral convictions of his own.

Williamstown, Mass., is a prohibition town, but the way in which it became such is unique, and perhaps may give a hint how to wipe out the saloon in some other places. Two saloon licenses were granted, but President Carter of the college bought them both, so that Williamstown is now practically no license.

What has caused of late such a remarkable rise of the military spirit that it has been deemed necessary to put school boys and even girls through a military drill? Well does one editor in commenting upon it call it "a modern infatuation." There is a tendency to glorify famous commanders that recalls the Napoleonic period, and suggests an apprehension to observing minds, that the nineteenth century may close as did the eighteenth, its skies lurid with wars and revolutions. What can be the moral effect on the youth of our country, of such a speech as that of Mr. Depew, at the recent Von Moltke celebration, in which he alluded fulsomely to the veteran Prussian as "among the great men whom God places in the highest seats in heaven!" It is surely time that Christian parents and Christian teachers should everywhere enter their strong and earnest protest against the young minds under their charge being thus early familiarized with the idea of war, by wearing its paraphernalia, though even in mimic show.

Bishop Paddock seems to have little faith in Father Ignatius, the English monk who is now in Boston dividing the honors as a celebrity with Stanley, as he refuses to allow him to preach in the pulpits belonging to his diocese. Father Ignatius may be a genuine and sincere, though mistaken Christian worker; but it is a mystery beyond all fathoming why, when a man has approached so near to the church of Rome, he should linger on its threshold and cling to the name of Protestant. It has its counter mystery, however, in such men as Dr. McGlynn, who thoroughly Protestant at heart and in his public teachings, still hesitates to declare himself one. The stories of self-imposed degradation endured in these English monastic orders, of which this English monk is the head, may or may not be exaggerated, but monasticism is a tree that will always bring forth the same fruit, whatever the church soil in which it is planted. Bishop Paddock has simply done his duty, and does not deserve the censure which he has received from many people who call him "illiberal," "narrow," "prejudiced," when the real narrowness and the real illiberality may be more properly claimed on the side of religious theories that belong to the dark ages, and seem an anachronism even to think of in the light of the present day.

Our indefatigable New England agent, Rev. J. P. Stoddard, is now working in the line of parlor meetings, and with very encouraging results. As he has just held one in my own home, I feel in a position to speak enthusiastically of this method, which does away with the expense of hiring a hall, and yet is always certain to reach a small, but select class of the most intelligent Christian people, whose influence in their own community will act like leaven. Let me recommend to all anti-secret workers, that wherever practicable they arrange for parlor meetings. Bro. Stoddard's informal talks, with their fund of racy anecdote, and their scathing exposure of lodge fooleries, are not soon forgotten by any one who hear them.

Brethren and sisters, suffer a word of exhortation. The least we can do to show our gratitude to the Lord, for sending us such a man as Rev. J. P. Stoddard to carry forward the standard of our New England work, is to sustain him to the uttermost with our prayers and our pocket-books. Let us all feel a sense of individual responsibility, and remember that the mites count. Our work must be built up through the united efforts of every man, woman and child who loves Christ, and abhors the anti-Christian lodge power. Pray much for our annual meeting, and if circumstances debar you from attending, delegate some one to take your place. Prayer, money and efforts expended now, will tell for more than at any previous period in the history of our cause in New England. Even the Congregationalist, which, as a noted clergyman of Boston recently said, "only turns over once in a hundred years," and is thus a perfect barometer to measure the popular interest in any reform, came out in a recent issue with so outspoken an editorial on "Churches and Secret Societies," that its readers must have looked again to see if it was really the staid, old, conservative Congregationalist, which could deliver such an opinion as this:

"It will be a disagreeable surprise to the public, generally, to see the announcement recently made, that a Congregational church has secured the services of a Masonic society to lay the corner-stone of its new building. No reason for it is given. No secret society, so far as we know, has ever called on any church to reciprocate such a favor. It would be extremely difficult, we think, to name any worthy reason why any church should give such an invitation. The church, by doing this, offends many with whom it claims to be in fellowship, confesses its own weakness, discredits its reason for existence, and will win nothing from the organization, with which it seeks to fraternize. Any church which seeks to gain prestige in a community, by calling on a secret society to conduct for it a religious service, must appear, even to the most charitable judgment, to be under the control either of foolish advisers or weak officers."

Good for the Congregationalist. One may not despair of seeing this organ of the Puritan faith an anti-secret paper yet.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 19, 1890.

A question which has for many years been a source of worry to the good people of the National capital, and of trouble, not only to them but to people in every section of the United States, has been taken up by the Pastors' Alliance of the District of Columbia, and there are good grounds for the hope of relief in the near future. I refer to the question of marriage licenses, and the loose and little understood laws in vogue in this District for their issuance, and governing the marriage ceremony. A committee has been appointed by the Pastors' Alliance, which is composed of ministers of all denominations, for the purpose of preparing a petition to Congress on the subject, and also to prepare a bill covering the whole subject, which, when endorsed by the Alliance, Congress will be asked to enact as a law in the place of those we now have.

This question concerns the people of the country at large far more than it does the citizens of the District of Columbia, for but a small, very small proportion of the marriage licenses issued here are for our own people; they are mostly for people from elsewhere. I cannot give a better idea of the present status of the matter than to quote a few remarks made by an eminent minister a few days ago. He said: "The whole system of issuing marriage licenses in the District of Columbia is in a most unsettled and unsatisfactory condition. Any one with a dollar in his pocket can procure a license. Now, the main object of a license is to furnish a record of marriages, but as it is now it makes no record at all, for a license is no evidence of marriage; any one of a number of circumstances might prevent the marriage from taking place after a license had been issued. The present marriage laws are also in a chaotic state. They are both uncertain and inadequate. Every minister should understand the marriage law, and yet I doubt if any two lawyers can agree upon it. Whom may a minister legally unite in marriage? I am sure I do not know. For instance, in the matter of age the old Maryland statute holds that a man must be twenty-one years of age and the woman sixteen. But does that statute still hold? I never, knowingly, married a girl under eighteen, and yet I doubt if I could be prosecuted for tying the knot around a girl of sixteen. There is also a statute forbidding mixed marriages, and yet two cases of miscegenation were reported last year and no one knows how many more may have occurred. There are many other doubtful features about the present laws, and I think every one will agree that in so important a matter as this, what is legal and what is not legal, should be made perfectly plain to all." *

—An edict of the Russian government restraining Protestant Christians from holding missionary meetings and sending abroad missionary gifts has been modified in the concession of permission that pastors shall be permitted to preach on the extension of Christianity and take collections for the benefit of foreign missions, subject to the approval of the local governors.

REFORM NEWS.

WASHINGTON IS A HEADQUARTERS.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 20, 1890.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—The wisdom of having a home for the N. C. A at the capital city is more and more apparent. Solid work in this center of influence and power cannot fail to have its effect on the country at large. The friends who have so kindly contributed to secure to the Association this home will be glad to know that their agent is meeting with much encouragement in bringing our special line of truth to the attention of the people.

Last Sabbath I spoke in three churches: the Second Baptist, A. M. E. Zion and the A. M. E. Metropolitan, to audiences aggregating over one thousand souls. Nearly one hundred copies of our paper make their weekly visit to homes in this city. As I see the way God leads, I am brought to realize the possibilities of this work. "According to thy faith be it unto thee." I believe if we take hold of the promises of God in faith we shall see marvelous advancement all along the line this winter.

I was especially blessed in proclaiming the truth in the Metropolitan Church Sabbath evening. This is said to be the largest colored church in the District. It was estimated that over seven hundred were present. My address was followed by an earnest exhortation by the the pastor, Rev. J. W. Beckett. Seven came forward and sought the Saviour with tears of repentance for sins. Bro. Beckett is in full accord with our work, and will arrange with me to address his people again. Rev. L. H. Jackson, whose people I addressed in the afternoon, rendered me much assistance by taking up a collection to subscribe for the Cynosure for himself. Said he, "Brother Stoddard takes subscriptions for a paper which I must have, and I must subscribe now. If you love your pastor enough to pay for it, now is the time to manifest it." As is the custom, one of the brethren was stationed at the table to count the money as it was brought to the stand. He soon announced more than enough to pay for the paper, and the collection stopped. Of course there were others wanted to take the paper that their pastor "must have," and I have been giving them the privilege as fast as I can. On Tuesday evening I spoke by special request to a sailor's literary society at the navy yard; subject, Temperance. I have two appointments for next Sabbath, and three for the Sabbath following. May God speed the right, is my daily prayer.

W. B. STODDARD.

THE FLOATING CHAPEL.

FINANCIAL REPORT.

Donations from all sources	$826 00
Of this amount I am to pay for copies of the Wesleyan, to be sent to colored preachers	$443 00
For the Christian Cynosure	$240 00
" Free Methodist	$ 8 00
" Baptist Standard	$ 2 00
Total amount for Preachers' Fund	$693 00
Cost of Chapel as far as completed	$1,800 00
Paid August 1, 1890	$ 800 00
Ten notes, payable one each month	$1,000 00

Since August 1, I have paid from my own funds $375.00, leaving only $625.00 yet to be paid on the notes.

I think I can pay all the expenses, donate $693.00 worth of subscriptions for colored preachers, and also pay the remaining $625.00 on the notes during the coming year.

The chapel is yet unfinished. We need one hundred more chairs, and lumber for seating the gallery. We also need paint, and shutters for the windows. With these we can darken the room and give temperance lectures in the afternoon for the public school children, showing with pictures the effects of alcohol on the human stomach. Two hundred dollars donated by friends of the work just now, would enable us to put the boat in first class shape.

We do not like to have people come to the door and then go home unable to get seats. Money to finish the boat, papers, books and magazines may be sent to us at Catlettsburg, Ky., until Dec. 20. Wish our friends could see the swarms of colored people who attend our meetings, and how pleased they are to get the papers. I. R. B. ARNOLD.

CORRESPONDENCE.

REVIVALS IN WEST AFRICA.

FREETOWN, Sierre Leone, Oct. 21, 1890.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—While up here on the mountain side enjoying a little rest with wife and the babies, I will send a few brief notes to you. Feeling somewhat worn out after a month of protracted meeting, we decided to try the mountain air for two weeks. The Church Missionary Society have a building on Mt. Leicester, overlooking Freetown and the sea, at about 1,500 feet altitude. Here we are comfortably settled and having many pleasant hours among singing birds, wild flowers and the clouds.

The revival service of which I have spoken was not so successful as we had hoped, yet was not unfruitful. Fifteen boys and girls of the Sabbath-school professed to give their hearts to Jesus, and have asked to be organized into a convert's class under the special care of the pastor.

While the meeting was in progress, we had a precious little prayer meeting at our home. Thirteen American missionaries, representing four different missions, gathered together for prayer and conference, and agreed together to observe the twilight hour daily as a time for special prayer for one another and the work on the West Coast. It was a precious privilege to be permitted to touch elbows about the throne of grace with so many fellow-workers in this great field.

Our hearts have been cheered of late not only by increasing interest in the temperance work in Freetown, but also by a strong movement in favor of better Sabbath observance. The latter movement gives greater promise of immediate success, from the fact that it has originated among the merchants and traders, the parties most concerned in the violation of the day of rest. The Sabbath is unusually well observed in Freetown proper, but of late years the harbor has known no Sabbath. The steamers utterly disregard the day, and this has accordingly brought about the disregard also of the shipping companies and the custom house and all harbor employes. The merchants propose to enter into a compact to ship no cargo on the Sabbath, and then finally to agitate for an ordinance prohibiting the landing of any.

The rains are almost over, and as the dry months are coming on our hearts are looking lovingly toward the regions beyond and planning how the Gospel may be carried to some who have never heard it. The fields are surely white for the harvest. Whether we ourselves remain in Freetown or go inland, we certainly are quite sure the Lord would have us make a forward movement, and are daily asking the great Lord of the harvest to send us men and means to reach beyond the coast work.

From all sides we get snatches of information about the doings of secret societies among the natives. It seems as though the devil has never been able to invent a false religion or other work of darkness without making use of the principle of secret mysticism. It is the base from which he operates in all lands. Yours in Christ,

H. W. JOHNSTON.

SUGGESTIONS FROM A WORKHOUSE.

CINCINNATI, Nov. 20, 1890.

EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE:—The past week has been spent at home. Sabbath morning I preached in the 1st English Lutheran church, Rev. E. K. Bell, pastor. At 3 P. M. I preached in the Workhouse. The chapel was filled with prisoners, male and female, and the platform with visitors. One week before I preached to an audience of United Presbyterians of the same size in Philadelphia. The attention given and interest manifested in the second were equal to the first. The old Gospel finds a response in the human heart. Notwithstanding their position as prisoners, they are human. As Shylock says of the Jew in the "Merchant of Venice:"

"Hath not a Jew eyes? Hath not a Jew hands, organs, dimensions, senses, affections, passions? fed with the same food, hurt with the same weapons, healed by the same means, warmed and cooled by the same winter and summer, as a Christian is? If you prick us do we not bleed? If you tickle us do we not laugh? If you poison us do we not die?"

Captain Morgan is the efficient superintendent of the Workhouse. He has reduced the cost of the institution from $72,000 to $58,000 annually. By carefully studying the markets and reducing the prices to the minimum, he feeds those prisoners at a cost of six cents each per day, and their appearance indicate that they are well fed. It is a law there that all must work. Many like the place so well, that after being liberated they commit some petty offense just to get sent back. It is an unfavorable commentary on our city home life that these women would rather serve here than as domestics in our homes; and these men would rather labor here, as the proteges of the law, than work for wages under an employer. Our reformatory system is radically defective. We must learn that prevention is better than reformation. Every boy and girl in the land should receive a common school education. This should be made compulsory. All should be taught habits of industry. Provision should be made that all may be employed. Work should be obligatory. Idleness should be a crime. Wages should be sufficient to provide for the family and lay by a little for a rainy day. Work should be a joy and not a cruel task. Saturday half-holiday should be secured for recreation. The Sabbath rest should be made universal. This, with the saloons banished from our borders, and a free and simple Gospel, would empty our prisons, fill our churches, beautify our homes, relieve the strained relations between labor and capital, and bring peace on earth and good will to men. J. M. FOSTER.

HOW TO HANDLE LODGE OATHS.

WESTON, Mich.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—As one of your constant readers, I want to express my pleasure the pursual of your columns affords me, especially the article concerning the late Dr. Nathan Brown, and also the letter of our old friend, Mr. Ronayne. It is so long since we have heard from him through your columns, we had almost lost sight of him in this busy, moving world. But it is manifest that his trenchant pen has lost none of its old-time vigor, nor his zeal in the cause abated. We hope to hear from him often.

The ground he takes in attacking Masonry, is the right one. The murderous oaths cannot be defended from the standpoint of either Christianity or good citizenship. Hence the only alternative is to deny them in toto. To those who are not informed these denials have great weight. For, say they, these ministers and other good men who are Masons, would not take such inhuman and barbarous imprecations on themselves, or if they did they would not deny it. And thus many are misled and deceived. How shall we undeceive them? What light can we bring to bear that will dispel their doubts and convince these honest minds that Masons do actually take these monstrous and horrible oaths, with such terrible penalties attached? When Mr. Hinman lectured here some years since, he stated that Wendell's N. Y. Reports contained these, or some of these obligations, sworn and subscribed to, and which are incorporated into those reports, and are authority in all courts of law in this country. This testimony was given during the progress of the trials concerning the abduction and murder of William Morgan by the Masons in 1826. I do not now remember the volume and page on which he said it could be found. Perhaps the Cynosure or Bro. Hinman can give the desired information, as it will be useful in proving what will otherwise be declared to be false and malicious slander. The reports referred to can be found in almost any good lawyer's library, and will be found helpful by our friends, in convincing the fraternity that we may know, and do know, just what obligations they take upon themselves.

A Masonic sheriff to whom I read the oaths as recorded there, seemed much astonished at the revelation, and stopped denying and fell to swearing; thus practically confessing the truth. Try it, friends. "He that doeth truth cometh to the light." C. QUICK.

RONAYNE IS RIGHT.

MALLET CREEK, O.

Editor Christian Cynosure,

MY DEAR BROTHER:—I have just read with great satisfaction the article of Edmund Ronayne "The Vulnerable Point in Masonry," in the Cynosure of Nov. 13; and I assure you he is right. For years I have seen what others did not seem to me to see in Freemasonry. And that is its oaths. I have never yet seen in print an analysis of its oath in the relation of the oath to the conscience. I am supremely glad that Mr. Ronayne has struck the chord. As I have contemplated it,—the oath —I cannot conceive of anything more diabolically and blasphemously infernal in its relation to the conscience.

Now let us see. What is an oath? Why, an appeal to God, with a wish or prayer to him, that he may damn you if you do not do as you promise. And this appeal to him is made with a sense of his omniscience and omnipresence, rendering your escape impossible if you do not do as you promise him. Can this position be otherwise than awful before God? Can any soul ever be justified in it, except in the most serious and solemn circumstances? Never. It is not possible that any one should ever be justified in assuming it, except in the sincerity of the heart and with an indubitable aim to do, and to conform exactly to the Divine will.

Now mark! In the Masonic lodge this position is assumed before God, the Searcher of hearts, in reference to his law. The candidate appeals to God with a prayer that God would damn him if he don't violate his law. This is the position the candidate is in. He swears by the Eternal that he will trample on his laws. He swears that he may be damned by God if he don't violate God's law!

What is this violation of God's law to which he swears, and failing in which he invokes the damnation of God? Why, declaring that his throat may be cut, or his bowels torn out, if he does not keep secrets not yet made known to him!! All summed up in a prayer of the candidate to God that he would damn him if he did not violate and reject his own law!! Can conception surpass in thought the infernal character of this, the Masonic oath? Now let it be charged home to the conscience of every Masonic preacher in the country, by the authority of God. I conclude, then, that Mr. Ronayne is correct when he says that "Freemasonry can be successfully combatted and exposed by simply constantly exposing its illegal and terrible oaths, and its awful and inhuman penalties."

Was there ever a snare equal to this oath? Again and again have I detected Masons (and "preachers" are no exception) in lying where their Masonry was involved. And this illustrates what President Finney says, that a "Mason who acknowledges the binding obligation of his oath" —I quote from memory—"will lie, and he cannot avoid it," where Masonry is at stake. Christianity in this country is suffering awfully from the whole lodge system. It is is in control of the princes of darkness, who who in due time, like Pharaoh and his hosts in the Red Sea, will be swept away by the Lion of the Tribe of Judah. And that time will be hastened, in my judgment, in proportion to the unfolding of the Masonic oath to the people. Mr. Ronayne is correct. (Rev.) C. CONKLING.

PITH AND POINT.

OUT OF DEBT, OUT OF DANGER.

I am deeply interested in all moral reforms, but I can plainly see that unless a reform against debt is now pushed, all other reforms will be swamped, as the temperance reform has been in Nebraska. Had "times" been prosperous the Prohibition amendment would have been quite likely to carry in Nebraska. A capital of debt is the scarlet sin of the West, and is meeting a fearful punishment. The sooner people can see it in that light the better for every cause that is good.—(Rev.) T. C. M., Douglass, Kan.

THE GERMAN BAPTIST CHURCH.

I am much pleased with the tone of the paper. I like it for its plain speaking on secret societies. I belong to a church that does not admit any into its fellowship who will not renounce all secret societies—that is, the German Baptist church. My prayer is that God's blessing ever be with you in your great work.—C. M. GARNER.

A PRAYER FOR UNION.

Go on with the noble work in which you are engaged, and may the Lord bless the Cynosure until all secret societies are done away with, and all divisions in the churches are done away with, and the "watchmen see eye to eye." That all Christians may love without partiality or hypocrisy, is my prayer.—NORMAN COUNTRYMAN, Creston, Ill.

KEEP ON THE GOOD WAY IN SPITE OF FROWNS.

We have been in the habit of reading a number of papers, some of them of a religious character, that we prize highly. But there are none we could not part with better than the Christian Cynosure. This is the first paper opened when the mail comes, and is read with deepest interest. We admire it for its uncompromising spirit; and then it is reliable; in short, in it are combined so many good qualities that we would not like to be without it. We have taken it ever since we heard there was such a paper. We expect to take it while we can read. We pray for the prosperity of the cause that it advocates. It is up-hill work with us. We meet a good many frowns. Praise the Lord, he yet lives. Yours in the fight.—J. GRIFFIN, Horton, Wis.

THE BIBLE HAS NO HELP FROM THE LODGE.

I have been reading your paper over one year with great interest, and it has been a great help to me. I have never taken any part in the secret lodges. I never thought I could serve two masters. These societies are a great drawback to our churches here. They claim that a man cannot understand the Bible unless he joins the Masons; but that seems to be quite contrary to the truth that God would call a man to preach the Bible and not give him an understanding of it. I wish the lodges were all put out of the world. May God help you to do all you can to save, or keep people out of the secret lodges. May God bless the Christian Cynosure.—WM. BELL.

THE SEVENTH-DAY ADVENTISTS.

I am very much pleased with the Cynosure, have taken it a number of years, and I appreciate its contents more and more every year, with the exception of a few unkind onslaughts against "Seventh-day Adventists." I have taken their paper for thirty years and have never seen in it one word against the Cynosure. Indeed, I first learned of the Cynosure by reading their papers, and thus became a subscriber.—O. HOFFER, Liberty Center, O.

The Cynosure did not criticise the principles held by the Seventh-day Adventists, but their forming sectarian divisions in the body of Christ. We might add that the efforts of some of their papers against the Christian Sabbath seem to us unaccountable and wicked. Possibly Bro. Hoffer has not seen the American Sentinel regularly.

GOOD WORDS.

I would be pleased to do more for the cause, but very little money comes into my hands.—MRS. F. H. C.

I am heartily with you in your work. May God's blessing attend your efforts.—S. W. M., Durham, P. Q.

I believe the best people of New England are ready to be enlightened in regard to the paganism of our land.—J. A. CONANT.

I cannot get along without the Cynosure. It furnishes me news that I cannot get anywhere else.—ROBERT BOYD, Reynoldsburgh, O.

The balance ($1) I will donate to the reform. I trust I may be able to still further assist in some way in the future.—J. B. C., Indianapolis.

I thank God for his love to us; may his blessing be upon the Cynosure and all its subscribers. My prayer is that its influence may spread.—SAMUEL BUSHY, Nickleville, Pa.

Since receiving and reading the paper, it has led me to forsake the secret society of which I was a member. I am doing all in my power to get others to subscribe.—(Rev.) T. R. R. BAUKES, Jacksonville, Fla.

It is very hard times here on account of failure of crops by drouth last summer. Money is hard to get hold of. I like the Cynosure very much, and do not want to be without it if I can help it.—M. L. W., Swedeborg, Mo.

Thank you for continuing the paper. I like the Cynosure very much. Believe it should be placed in the hands of every family where children can, as it were, grow up with it, so that its principles may become a kind of second nature to them.—ANDREW GILLIAM, Clayton, O.

LITERATURE.

ALDEN'S MANIFOLD CYCLOPEDIA OF KNOWLEDGE AND LANGUAGE. The appearance of Vol. XXV. of this admirable work indicates that it is now rapidly approaching completion. Among the countries, States and cities we find treated in this volume are: Montenegro, Montreal, Moravia, Moscow, Morocco, Munich, Muscat, Naples, Nashville, Nassau, Nebraska, and Netherlands. In the line of biography, we have Moody, the evangelist, with an account of the Northfield Seminary and the Mount Hermon School for Boys; Sir John Moore; Hannah Moore; Sir Thomas Moore, author of Utopia; Gouverneur Morris and Robert Morris; Oliver P. Morton, Indiana's great war governor; John Lothrop Motley, the historian; Valentine Mott; Neander, the church historian; Nelson, the admiral; and many other eminent men. Among the hundreds of topics coming under the head of general information, we notice: Moon, Mormons, 13 pages; Mortality, Law of, with useful tables; Motion, 6 pages; Movement Cure; Music, about 18 pages. The whole field of human knowledge is comprehensively covered, and the subjects have been well brought down to date. John B. Alden, Publisher, New York, Chicago, and Atlanta.

The latest issue of the American Law Register of Philadelphia discusses the international question of American rights in the Behring Sea over which Mr. Blaine has a controversy with the British foreign minister. It also contains a very full legal report of the celebrated California case arising from the shooting of Terry in defense of Justice Field by a U. S. marshal.

THE American Garden for the month gives the "Backwoods Gardens" a favorable notice. The fruits and vegetables of which we may learn something in the number are dewberrys, apricots, crabs, persimmons, grapes and celery. "NativeFerns" is a finely illustrated article.

The double number of the Law Register for July and August last contains a legal review of the "Original package" business. The subject from the standpoint of the courts seems to be exhausted, and hence the number is of great value to a large class of readers.

COMMENTS BY E. E. FLAGG.

1. A divine Companion.—vs. 13–16. Luke alone records this beautiful incident in the life of our risen Lord. We read in Malachi 3: 16, that one of the characteristics of those who love the Lord is to "speak often one to another" about him, and that when they do he hearkens, and it is written down in his Book of remembrance. This was probably near the hour of the evening sacrifice; but while the blind and formal worship of the temple had no attraction for the risen Jesus, he seems irresistibly drawn to these two humble disciples as they communed together in a vain attempt to get some mutual comfort in their terrible sorrow. So where two or three who sincerely love him meet together to talk about heavenly things, we can feel sure of his presence, though he may be absent from many a formal assembly, met to be entertained by fine singing or smart preaching. They "reasoned," questioned together. They could not understand this dark, hopeless ending of all their dreams and hopes. How was it possible for one who had himself raised the dead to be holden by the power of death? What could have been the divine meaning in sending such a prophet, if his life was to be only an ignis fatui, leading into deeper doubt and bewilderment till quenched at last in the tomb? Many of the dealings of Providence may seem very dark to us, but if we have Jesus for our companion we shall not be made sorrowful thereby, for his life and death will shed heavenly light on our darkest experiences. It is a blessed thought that we may often have him beside us though our eyes be holden to the fact, but if we desire such companionship our conversation must be in heaven.

2. The disciple's story.—vs. 17–24. There is a wonderful simplicity and pathos in their tale which must have greatly moved the heart of Jesus. They were loyal to him still, though seemingly a defeated leader; and they were not afraid nor ashamed to confess how they had built their faith upon him, as "he that should have redeemed Israel." He had been crucified as a malefactor, and his cause was so unpopular as to make it a matter of no little danger to be known as one of his disciples. It was a brave thing to do, thus to confess him before an unknown stranger, and without doubt Christ felt and valued their loving loyalty. He whose life was full of heroism, unshadowed by the smallest film of moral weakness, must delight in the same virtue in his followers. When we identify ourselves with an unpopular cause that seems to have no human prospect of succeeding, because we feel that it is Christ's cause, we can be certain of his loving sympathy. As they did not give the least credence to the story told by the women, the empty tomb only made their perplexity greater. So if we do not believe all Scripture we shall find dark shadows of mystery resting on even that portion we do believe. If we have no faith in a risen Christ we have his empty tomb to account for. If we cast out miracles as untenable, or reason them away, we have still the greatest miracle of all to explain, in Christianity itself and its existence to-day, as a divine influence on the hearts of men.

3. Rebuke and instruction.—vs. 25–27. We almost wonder why this rebuke as well as the discourse which followed did not at once open their eyes to the real personality of their strange companion. But if Christ should walk and talk with many of us in visible form to-day, would he not say the same thing? "Slow of understanding" because we do not avail ourselves of the Spirit's quickening aid; and foolish where we should be wise. "Ought not Christ to have suffered these things," etc. There is always a divine needs be to every human happening; much more must this greatest of all earthly events, the crucifixion and death of Christ, have been no accident but a carrying out of the divine purpose to save man which could not have been accomplished in any other way. We wonder at this or that dispensation of Providence. It seems dark and hard to us, but if we could always see this divine needs be we should see the light behind the cloud. "And beginning at Moses and the prophets." A strong faith in the Bible will give us strong faith in him who is its central figure. Much of the weakness in the religious belief of our time is traceable to the modern inclination to treat the Old Testament Scriptures as a superannuated system of dead and effete doctrines. Both are needful to a perfect man, as night and day to his physical nature. We are not only to read, but we are to understand them. There are probably many things connected with Christ's second coming that we misunderstand as deplorably as did these disciples his first coming. Yet it is the second rather than the first with which we are now most immediately concerned. The one is past; the other we are to prepare for and expect like faithful servants, who know not when their Lord will come.

OBITUARY.

ASA C. HAND died at his home in Dalton, Ga., Nov. 4, 1890, aged 82 years.

He was born in New Lebanon, N. Y., Nov. 15, 1808, and was at his death a member of the Wesleyan Methodist Conference of Minnesota. He resided in that State until two years and a half since, when he removed to the South on account of his health. For sixty years he was a true and earnest preacher of the Gospel of Christ, maintaining clearly every Christian principle. He was an earnest reformer, desiring always to stand on the solid rock of the truth. He felt that he was truly following Christ in making it an earnest work to aid in putting down iniquity in every form and place. Thus in the South, as in Minnesota, he faithfully testified against the lodge, and circulated the Cynosure, a paper which he loved much, and often said he could not spare. He distributed many books and other literature to aid his fellow citizens to see clearly the danger in the lodge system. His devoted wife who is left alone to mourn his departure warmly sympathized in his views and seconded his efforts. Both were corporate members of the N. C. A. and attended its annual and other meetings as often as possible. To her he willed his property, with the understanding that on her death it should be divided between the African Wesleyan mission and the National Christian Association.

His disease having reached a critical stage, an operation was performed, from the effect of which he did not rally. He lived two weeks, unable to speak except in monosyllables, and finally the end came quietly and with great peace. H.

A Dangerous Tendency.

The most important feature about that very common complaint, catarrh in the head, is its tendency to develop into some other more serious and dangerous disease. The foul matter dropping from the head into the bronchial tubes or lungs is very liable to lead to bronchitis, or consumption, that destroyer which causes more deaths in this country than any other disease. As catarrh originates in impurities in the blood, local applications can do but little good. The common sense method of treatment is to purify the blood, and for this purpose there is no preparation superior to Hood's Sarsaparilla. The powerful action of this medicine upon the blood expels every impurity, and by so doing cures catarrh and gives health to the entire organism.

To restore, thicken, and give you a luxuriant growth of hair, to keep its color natural as in youth, and to remove dandruff, use only Hall's Hair Renewer.

J. BLANCHARD, EDITOR.
HENRY L. KELLOGG, ASSOCIATE EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 27, 1890.

THE COLLEGE FRATERNITY DISCUSSION has an important item this week from an esteemed pastor in Masschusetts who shows that the Amherst societies whose praises are spoken by ex-President Seelye, differ in some material respects from the ordinary college societies. The interesting report from Knox College, Toronto, shows how ably college students can handle this question, and how readily they will accept right principles if they have a fair presentation. The history of Northwestern University this fall is notable proof that the secret society problem can be solved aright by honorable young men.

We give place to the portrait of a man whose efforts for the education of the colored race deserve a lasting memorial. Professor H. Woodsmall was one of the most devoted of all the men who have labored for the elevation and salvation of the black race in America. For thirteen years before his death in 1888 he taught in their schools, held institutes at central points, and established institutions which may long be a blessing to the race and to the nation. His efforts for education were not sentimental and one-sided, but were successfully directed to needed moral instruction, which counteracted the lodge and the saloon in every place where he taught in the South.

WILL THE JEWS EVER OWN CHRIST?—While this Cynosure is going to press, a conference of Jews and Christians is invited to meet in the First M. E. church, corner of Clark and Washington streets, Chicago, Nov. 24th and 25th inst. Several prominent Presbyterian and Congregational clergymen, with Rabbis Hirsch and Stoltz are advertised to speak. Rabbi Moses, a very able man, attacks this conference, the first in which Jews and Christians were ever invited to confer, and warns all Israelites to keep away. Next week our readers will learn what is done.

Paul (Rom. 11: 12, 25, 26) evidently expected that the Jews would one day receive Christ as their Messiah. (Isa. 9: 6, 7.) And the Saviour himself affirms, by implication, that the time would come when the Hebrews would say, "Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord." Matt. 23: 39.

POKING FUN AT CHRIST.

The whole Bible hangs on two simple propositions, viz., supreme love to God, and equal love to man; and as God is supreme goodness, and men equally immortal, there is no argument against love to God and man. Hence Satan admits the truth of religion, but seeks to mix some things with it to make it ridiculous.

All idolatry was and is a system of such contrivances. The pagan writers all admitted the one supreme God, but said they used the sun, moon, heroes, four-footed beasts and creeping things as helps to worship. This made worship ridiculous.

At Sinai, they introduced a calf as help to worship Jehovah, who brought the Israelites from Egypt, and they danced at the calf-banquet. Some twenty tribes of Indians are now holding Messiah-dances. Missionaries have taught them that Christ was crucified. A false Christ has appeared, showing the nail-prints in his hands, and the spear-wound in his side. He promises them to destroy the white people, bring back the buffaloes, and give earth to the Indians. And they worship their devil, who, Gov. Miles thinks, may be a Mormon priest, playing Jo. Smith for the Indians, and they worship him by Messiah-dances, in which they lose their strength, see visions, etc., etc. Of course they must steal the stock of the whites, who are to be destroyed next spring, and so will not need their horses and cattle. All the Western regiments are now moving toward North Dakota, and the villages where the Messiah-dances are kept up. As the whites are so soon to be swept off, it is no harm to kill them. And as lodge balls and banquets are the worship practiced by the murderers of Cronin in Chicago and Hennessey of New Orleans, so these poor Indians, and all of whom worship devils, have taken their lessons from the secret lodges to which our troops belong, who are now marching to exterminate them. A few years since delegations of Pueblo and cave Indians were in Washington, and the agents who had charge of them boarded with a Mr. Colton, who then kept the house which is now the N. C. A. headquarters, kept now by Mr. W. B. Stoddard. Those Indian agents were all Masons, and members of Indian lodges with other names. The writer learned this from the Coltons, and from the speeches of these agents which we heard in the Masonic Temple in Washington.

Yet these men, like the Indians now going on the war-path, professed belief in Christ, while they worshiped devils!

Mrs. La Fetra, then and since, kept the "Temple Cafe" by the side of the Masonic Temple. She has since become president of the W. C. T. U. in Washington; and her husband, a Mason, was helping to strip, swear, mock-murder, and raise Hiram Abiff from the dead, in that temple. "Fools make a mock at sin." But devils make a mock at Christ,—poke fun at him and make all true worship ridiculous.

MORE "DEAD FLIES."

"An Anglican monk" (so the papers call him) has appeared in Boston, and draws great crowds to hear him in public halls. "He is tall, thin, close-shaven head and face;" wears a black robe with a hood, girt with a knotted cord, with beads and crucifix at the waist; preaches and sings the love of Christ like the Salvation Army. He says, "Wherever there is a man who loves Jesus, whether he is a Roman Catholic, a Baptist, a Jesuit, or a Methodist, he is my brother;" and his eloquence is said to be phenomenal. Now what estimate should Christians put upon such characters and movements?

We answer: 1. They are not Christ's methods. The military power, titles and dress of the Salvation Army are not Christ's methods. Our Saviour and his Apostles used no tricks or tambourines to catch the multitude's attention; and when miracles had justified faith, they labored with their hands, and taught and applied simple, straightforward truth, supreme love to God and equal love to man; and shunned and opposed all soothsayers, conjurers, "books of curious arts," and all religious "traditions," and inventions of men as Gentile and demoniac.

This Boston Benedictine monk is called Father Ignatius," the name of the founder of the Jesuits, and praises Jesus as Loyola did. His family consists of one woman and three monks. He puts up at a hotel and pays his bills, and raises money from his crowds by selling little hymn-books.

But one thing neither Father Ignatius, nor Mormon priests, nor sorcerers, soothsayers, or spiritists are ever known to do. They do not oppose, much less "destroy, the works of the devil," for which purpose Christ was "manifested." (1 John 3: 8.) The Phillippian soothsayer endorsed Paul and Silas. Simon the sorcerer believed Christ. Devils believed and preached him; and Mormons call themselves his "saints." But the chief "works of the devil," by which he drags down mankind, are WAR, VICES, and FALSE WORSHIPS. Imposters do not oppose these, but Christ does. Jo. Smith was "General" of the "Nauvoo Legion;" voted the Democratic ticket with his Mormons; built a theatre and danced in it, when between 60 and 70 years old. Spiritists do not diminish brothels, nor will mediums or monks vote for the prohibition of saloons. But they will "deceive, if possible, the very elect."

WHO PUT THE BIBLE OUT OF THE SCHOOLS?

The answer is, Archbishop Purcell, of Cincinnati, in 1869. The writer was a pastor in Cincinnati in 1842. This Purcell, then simple Bishop, was on the school board, and there had been two or three Roman Catholics beside him in that body. He demanded that children of papists should not be compelled to hear the Bible read at the morning exercise, and the Board voted all he asked. From 1842 to 1869, a period of seventeen years, not one whisper of complaint was heard, and Bishop Purcell lauded the schools in public speeches. The cathedral was built before 1842, and to obtain money for the vast expense, Bishop Purcell wrote to the Austria Societate de propaganda fide for funds; and while a member of the school board and lauding the schools, he assured that society that his "pillow was nightly wet with his tears, shed over the twenty-four collossal school buildings which were destroying the children of the church!" His letter was written in English and turned into German by a young priest. Some one got the German copy, and translated it back into English, and it was published in the New York Observer; and the Cincinnati Gazette copied the letter and exposed the infamy and hypocrisy of the Bishop, who was still on the school board. He wrote a brief note to the Gazette, which had called on him to explain, saying: "It is sufficient for me to say that I did not write the original German nor the English translation of it. So he did not. He wrote in English, it was translated into German, and sent to Austria, and then done back into English. Tracy, of the New York Observer published the fraud. The Bishop wrote no more, but resigned from the school board.

What would have sunk him with honest men made him popular at Rome. He became Archbishop, borrowed one or two millions of money from Roman Catholics, and failed. What did he do with so much money? All at once ten Roman Catholics were (by purchased votes?) elected to the school board, and twelve foreigners were elected with them,—men who did not have any faith, did not want any, and did not want anybody else to have any. These twenty-two men, Nov. 1, 1869, passed the following:

"Resolved, That religious instruction, and the reading of religious books, including the Holy Bible, are prohibited in the common schools of Cincinnati!"

Up to that time, since 1842, there had been no word of complaint. The schools were the pride of the city, and good men had been on the Board. In 1857–8 so popular were the schools, so frec from all sectarianism, that Jews advocated giving up their schools, and sending their children to the public schools.

All at once, in 1869, a school board is silently elected, consisting of ten creatures of Purcell and twelve foreign infidels of the type of the five anarchists hung at Chicago, for the Haymarket murder of the police.

Now, is there any doubt that that sudden, silent revolution of the school board and the expulsion of the Bible was purchased by Archbishop Purcell's money? These twelve infidels had no bishop, no church, no belief. They "neither feared God or regarded man." But they hated the Bible which condemns sinners, and God who will punish sin. The Archbishop wished to be rid of the Bible, as the Jewish priests wished to be rid of Christ, that their authority over the people might be complete, not disturbed by the truths taught by Christ. The Bible was put out of the schools by an archbishop, and Rome is now following him.

Our President and the governors of our States have proclaimed Thanksgiving. So also has our Cardinal, James Gibbons, of Baltimore who represents the Pope of Rome, and acknowledges him as a foreign potentate and temporal ruler. He has addressed the priests of the Roman Catholic church ordering a special service on Thursday, thus authorizing the observance of the day. As a churchman he had no more need to issue his letter than have the Methodist or Episcopal bishops, but as representative of a European potentate who has numerous subjects in this country it is fully in harmony with the other proclamations.

—We get good news from Washington, though Washington heard ill news from the election. Read Bro. Stoddard's letter.

—New England and Iowa friends, be up and doing! Read what your leaders say on other pages. Now is the day for sacrifice, to-morrow comes the victory.

—The Oberlin trustees and faculty, who were so anxious to secure Dr. M. E. Gates, late of Rutgers College, now of Amherst, as the successor of Finney and Fairchild, may be surprised to learn that in an address, a part of which is published in the University of Michigan Palladium, he favors college secret societies as a correction of the "selfish tendency in all student life!" And yet President Gates is a LL. D., and is regarded as a philosopher.

—The western agent, Bro. C. F. Hawley, is expecting to preach and lecture at Kellerton, Iowa, on his way to the State Convention at Fairfield. Times and men have changed in Ringgold county. At this place, nine years ago, Elder Rathbun was mobbed.

—The work of our Bro. Johnston in Sierre Leone in connection with Rev. J. Augustus Cole, will be noted with much interest in his letter elsewhere. Both these brethren have done good work against lodge paganism in this country, one as editor, the other as N. C. A. lecturer. May God sustain them and give them success in their efforts against the works of the devil in Africa.

—The Pi Beta Phi girls' college secret society was founded in 1867 at Monmouth College, the headquarters of United Presbyterianism in the interior States, by students who knew that such an organization was in violation of the principles and laws both of the institution and of the church; and they may have been members of both. It has now some twenty local societies. There are but two in Illinois, which are numbered 2 and 3. No. 1 no longer exists, thanks to the conscientious efforts of the Monmouth faculty and the Presbytery behind it.

—We supplement our premium offer this week with an article of honest value for every household. If Ropp's Calculator (p. 7) will help Father in his business calculations, Mother should have her calculator also. The temperance printing house of Housh & Co., Brattleboro, Vt., supply it excellently. See page 13 for the HEALTH CALENDAR, which we are able to give at low rates to new and old subscribers. This useful present is of double value,—it is not only in very handy form for the housewife who often will refer to it hanging on the wall when a book would not be taken up lest it be soiled, but every member of the family will be benefited with a healthful variety of food. Economy, health and excellence are all desirably sought in this valuable compilation. Boys and girls can get each of these useful publications for New Year's presents for their parents.

PERSONAL NOTES.

—Friends will please note the change of I. R. B. Arnold's address. Read his report of the River Mission, and pray for its success.

—Rev. W. J. Gladwin, our Bombay missionary friend and co-worker in reform, was to start from London for India ("dear old India") on the 13th inst.

—Elder J. F. Browne gave an address on the lodge system at Berea, Kentucky, last week. Rev. H. H. Hinman was appointed to speak, but being absent of necessity, Bro. Browne took his place.

—H. J. King, father of H. C. King, professor of mathematics at Oberlin College, Oberlin, Ohio, committed suicide by shootiug himself through the heart two weeks ago. The reports indicate that his mind was affected by despondency. Prof. King has our sincere sympathy in this trying hour.

—Rev. C. H. Abbott, late of Geneva, Ill., has accepted the call of the church at Grand View, Tenn., of which Rev. A. J. Chittenden, for years pastor of the College Church, Wheaton, was late pastor. Mr. Abbott will also act as instructor in the institution of the American Missionary Association at that place. He removes his family this week. Both these earnest and esteemed pastors sought a Southern climate for their health, and both are warmly in sympathy with the N. C. A. and its work, Bro. Abbott having had experience of the bitterness of lodgery.

—Dr. H. M. Dexter, editor of the Congregationalist of Boston, died Nov. 13th. Dr. Dexter's career as a clergyman and writer has extended over fifty-six years. His first pastorate, after he had completed his theological studies at Andover, was at Manchester, N. H., which he left after five years to accept a call to the pulpit of what is now the Berkeley Street church in Boston. In 1851 he assumed the editorship of the Congregationalist, and from 1859 to 1866 edited the Congregational Quarterly in conjunction with Drs. Clark and Quint. In 1867 he resigned his pastorate to devote himself exclusively to editorial work and authorship.

THE NEW ENGLAND CONVENTION.

The New England Christian Association will meet at 7 o'clock Tuesday, Dec. 16, 1890, in the lower chapel of Park Street Congregational church, Boston, and hold services the following day and evening. The public are cordially invited to attend. This association furnishes a common center where, irrespective of denomination, party or sex, all may unite in a free investigation of the secret lodge system and all practical questions connected with the coming of Christ's kingdom and the accomplishment of his will on earth. Names of speakers and outline of program will appear later; meantime write to or call on J. P. Stoddard, 309 Tremont street, Boston, for information, documents, etc., and send in your names early for enrollment.

J. A. CONANT, Pres.
ELIZABETH E. FLAGG, Sec'y.

BOSTON IS READY.

Friends in New England will please notice the call for the annual meeting, Dec. 16th and 17th prox., and aid in making it a success by their prayers, their presence and their contributions. I am glad to announce, and every friend of the cause will be glad to know that the following pastors in Boston have promised (D. V.) to be present and take part in the discussion: A. J. Gordon, D. D., James M. Gray, D. D., R. D. Grant, F. O. Cunningham, E. M. Darst, E. Edmonds, J. Hood and pastor Johnston. Others will be seen and their names added later. Evangelists Leyden, A. A. Hoyt, and Wm. F. Davis will also take part.

From outside the city I have the promise of the following clergymen or Christian workers to be present and aid in the discussions: Bro. Hezekiah Davis, of Conn.; Jacob Davis, and L. W. Frink, L. E. Lincoln and Z. Graves, of Mass.; J. E. French, S. C. Kimball and C. L. Baker, of N. H.; A. M. Paull, of R. I., and several others who will contribute prepared addresses or brief talks as time will permit and occasion require.

Brethren, the enemy has come in like a flood. It is no time to lag or show indifference or cowardice; but it is time for earnest prayer and fasting, and to "give the more earnest heed as ye see the day approaching." Who is on the Lord's side and not afraid to enroll in this conflict? Let us hear from you. Your brother and fellow laborer,

J. P. STODDARD.

RALLY ONCE AGAIN.

To the New England readers of the Cynosure,

KIND FRIENDS:—What can we do to more vigorously push forward the anti-secrecy cause in New England during the year 1891?

The year 1890 is nearly passed, during which time Rev. and Mrs. Stoddard have been earnestly working for the cause in this land of the Pilgrims, making many sacrifices, even confining their home to small, incommodious rooms that they might not be burdensome to others; thus manifesting the spirit of the Apostle who wrought with his hands when it was his right to live of the Gospel. Shall we permit Bro. and sister Stoddard to thus labor and withhold the little assistance we may render? Cannot every one of us contribute a little to this work also; arrange for lectures or distribute anti-secrecy literature in our respective communities?

If all who are in sympathy with this reform would contribute a little, might we not raise five thousand dollars for this work in New England? And yet Bro. Stoddard modestly suggests that even two thousand dollars will do good service in pushing forward this work. And what are two or five thousand dollars when compared to what the fraternities expend when they simply wish to have a gala day, and make a show to outsiders! The writer has been informed that one of the fraternities expended over twenty-five thousand dollars in a parade in one of our New England cities recently. If they can do that for self-glorification what ought we to do for Christ and those for whom he died?

The annual meeting of the N. E. C. A. is advertised to meet in the vestry of Park Church, Boston, commencing December 16th at 7 o'clock in the evening, and continue its sessions during the next day and evening. Now let every reader of the Cynosure in New England, who is in sympathy with this reform, plan to be at said meeting if possible, and ready to report the encouraging features of the work in their community; also what they think is most needed to help the cause in said community.

Come, brethren and sisters, come to this meeting filled with the spirit of prayer and a readiness to work for the Master as the Holy Spirit may lead. May the Lord grant that the darkness cast over New England by the lodge may be dispelled and the church shine forth in the glory of Christ's righteousness. J. A. CONANT.

IOWA STATE MEETING.

IOWA FRIENDS, ATTENTION!

BIRMINGHAM, Iowa, Nov. 20, '90.

DEAR FRIENDS:—We wish in every way possible to urge upon you the importance of your aid in making a success of the Iowa annual State meeting. This convention has been appointed at Fairfield, the county-seat of Jefferson county. The place has good railroad facilities and is, therefore, easy of access, especially to persons in the eastern part of the State. There are only a few anti-secret families in Fairfield, but we feel certain they will do the best they cau to entertain those who come as delegates. It is only nine miles from Birmingham, the headquarters of our reform in Iowa, and we can depend on a good delegation from this place, as well as several other neighboring localities. It is the intention to have a basket dinner in the church on Wednesday, Dec., 3d, which will furnish opportunity for a good time socially. We hope the friends at Birmingham aud other neighboring points will join hands and all work to make this part a success. A splendid program has been arranged. We need only to mention a few of the speakers to iusure a rich treat in the way of addresses: Pres. C. A. Blanchard, Rev. M. A. Gault, Rev. C. F. Hawley are on the list. They have all promised, God willing, to be present, and they will surely come. We believe this is a crisis period in the history of our anti-secret reform work in Iowa. A high tide period is apparently setting in. Many of the friends seem to be taking new courage and are ready to help push this reform work with renewed energy.

On the other hand, to all human appearances, secret societies seem to be taking the State. The "miuor orders" are establishing their dark-lantern lodges in every city, town and hamlet. The enemy is "coming in like a flood." Let us hope, pray and trust that the Lord will raise up a standard agaiust him. More still, let us, by the Lord's help, aid in lifting up that standard. We need a live State agent in the field all the time. One who will keep the anti-secret sentiment alive in the old reform centers, and also move out into communities where the lodge has never been discussed and there unfurl our banner and plant the priuciples of our reform. Let us all unite and push the work euergetically and systematically. Come to the State meeting and help plan and arrange. If you cannot possibly attend, send in your mite to help pay expenses, and pray earnestly for its success. Do not forget the dates, Dec. 2d and 3d. Yours,

W. L. ENLOW, Ed. Free Press.

THE HOME.

COMPENSATION.

A THOUGHT FOR THANKSGIVING.

It was the time of autumn,
When leaves are turning brown,
Green to yellow and pied to black;
And some were tumbling down.

It was the time of autumn,
When fruits are gathered in,
Some for the press, some for the vat,
And some for the miller's bin.

Then poor men fell a-playing,
For that their work was o'er;
And rich men fell a-sighing,
That they could play no more.

For the summer time is a merry time
If a man have leisure to play;
But the summer time is a weary time
To him who must work all day.

Then thanks to God the Giver,
Who loves both great and small;
To every one he something gives,
But to no man giveth all.

The rich, who careth for himself,
Finds, after pleasure, pain;
But the toiler whom God careth for Rests, and is glad again.

OUR PURITAN HOLIDAY.

For our great American holiday of Thanksgiving we are indebted to the Puritan Pilgrims of New England, though the idea of setting apart a day of general thanksgiving was far from being original with them.

Those familiar with the history of this long-suffering people are aware that the persecutions which they endured in England under Mary, Elizabeth and James caused a number of them to emigrate in 1602 to Holland, where they established themselves in the city of Leyden, and where they were joined by their remaining brethren in 1608. The appointment of a thanksgiving day for some special blessing had long been a custom among the Dutch, as well as among other nations of Europe, and the general gratitude to heaven for some great war victory, for the proclamation of peace, or for deliverance from pestilence or famine, often found expression in this way.

When, after fully satisfying themselves that their principles could never take root in Holland, and that their number, instead of increasing was gradually diminishing there, the Puritans had abandoned that country, had landed upon Plymouth Rock, and had found a home in a new world, they retained the old Dutch custom of a general thanksgiving for special blessings. An unusually bountiful harvest was always deemed a fitting occasion for the appointment of a thanksgiving day by the governors of the colonies of Plymouth and Massachusetts Bay, and as the earth began to reward more abundantly the labor which the colonists bestowed upon it, the harvests became so uniformly plentiful that an annual Thanksgiving Day followed as a natural sequence.

This observance has always been both a religious and a social one. The early Puritans attended "meeting," as they called their church service, twice on every Thanksgiving Day, and this pious custom has been continued in many parts of rural New England down to the present time, though the most pious dwellers in the cities and large towns now deem attendance upon one service a sufficient opportunity for offering their thanks.

What a quaint appearance a rural New England "meeting house" presented at a Thanksgiving service seventy-five years ago! The pulpit towered high, and was surmounted by a huge sounding-board, which seemed liable to fall and crush the minister at any moment. Upon an elevated seat in front of the sacred desk sat the ruling elder, facing the congregation. Upon another less elevated than his, sat the deacon, while the plain seats in the body of the house were occupied by the fathers and mothers of families, with their children and hired help. The pastor opened the service with a prayer of at least fifteen minutes' length, and followed it with the reading and exposition of a chapter of Holy Writ. Then the ruling elder gave out a psalm, in which all the congregation joined, and when it had been sung the minister preached for one hour, measuring the time by means of an hour-glass. Prior to the contribution which followed, one of the deacons would rise and say: "Brethren of the congregation, now there is a time remaining for thanksgiving and contribution to the Lord, wherefore, as the Lord has prospered you, freely offer." Collection-plates or baskets were not passed from seat to seat, but a large box of wood was placed upon a stand or table near the pulpit. When the deacon had resumed his seat, the whole congregation arose and proceeded to the contribution-box. First came the magistrates and "chief gentlemen," then the elders, then the deacons, and after them the entire assembly. They deposited their offerings one by one and then passed to their seats again. These contributions consisted not only of money, but of notes of hand and any article which could be sold or otherwise profitably appropriated to the benefit of the church, thus making up a strange, miscellaneous collection of goods and chattels of various descriptions.

It was the custom in the old Puritan churches to endeavor to reconcile upon Thanksgiving Day any disputes which might have occurred among the members, whether arising from the affairs of the church itself or from private transactions. In the former case, when there was a division upon any question of doctrine, church policy or discipline, it was often customary to call in as arbitrator some wise and good man—usually a clergymen or elder—from another church. Rev. Mr. Buckley, of Colchester, Conn., a distinguished Puritan, was famous in his day as a casuist and sage counselor. A church in his neighborhood had fallen into unhappy divisions and contentions which they were unable to adjust among themselves. There was appointed a committee, whose members laid the case before Mr. Buckley, and desired him to communicate his judgment in writing, that it might be read to the assembled congregation at the close of the morning service on Thanksgiving Day.

Now it happened that on the outskirts of the town, Mr. Buckley owned a farm which he had entrusted to the care of a hired man. In dispatching a letter to his farmer, at the same time with his letter of advice to the church upon the question submitted to him, the papers were inadvertently mixed, and the document intended for the good elders and deacons was sent to the hired man, while the letter intended for him was handed to the pastor at the termination of the morning service on Thanksgiving Day. Imagine the amazement of the good man and his congregation when he read as follows: "You will see to the repair of the fences, that they will be built high and strong; and you will take especial care of the old black bull."

For several minutes a profound silence reigned among the good brethren. All were completely puzzled by this mystical advice. But at length there was found among the more discerning ones an interpreter, who arose and said: "Brethren, this is the very advice we most need. The direction to repair the fences, is to admonish us to take good heed in the admission and government of our members. We must rule the church by our Master's laws, and keep out strange cattle from the fold. And we must in a particular manner, set a watchful guard over the devil, that old black bull that has done so much damage among us."

All now perceived the wisdom and fitness of Mr. Buckley's advice, and resolved to be governed by it. As a consequence, all animosities subsided, and perfect harmony was restored to the long dissentient church. What was contained in the church letter, sent the farmer, and what effect it had upon him, I am unable to say.

Strict as the old Puritans were, they were not opposed to certain games—particularly those of an outdoor character. Bowls and backgammon were permitted, and the young men and maidens were not restricted, in the colonies of Plymouth and Massachusetts Bay, at least, from participating in them upon Thanksgiving day, after they had devoutly attended two meetings. Some of the old English fireside games were also permitted, and many a bevy of Puritan lads and lassies participated in snap-dragon, or blind man's buff on Thanksgiving night. This custom of making the occasion one for family and social reunion, and devoting it largely to innocent amusment, is still one of the most honored in connection with Thanksgiving Day, and nowhere more so than in New England.

The Puritans and their descendants for many years after them were strongly opposed to the introduction of any musical instrument at divine worship. But in 1799, a member of the choir connected with the Hingham, Massachusetts, meeting-house—the oldest church in the country, having been built in 1681—had learned to play upon the violincello, was anxious to exhibit his skill, and accordingly brought his big fiddle into the singing gallery on Thanksgiving morning. While the hymn was being read he ventured to try his strings, to ascertain if the instrument were in tune, and thereby attracted the attention of the pastor. The good man paused, laid down his hymn book, and proceeded with his sermon, as though singing formed no part of public worship, and finally dismissed the congregation without note or comment. The members of the choir were indignant. The young men and girls resolved not to go into the "singing seats" at all in the afternoon, and their elders who did go there wore a look of stern resolution. The pastor read a psalm and sat down. No sound followed. After a long silence he read the psalm again, with flushed face and stern manner, looking interrogatively at the gallery. The choir leader—my great-grandfather, by the way, from whom the story has been handed down to succeeding generations—could bear it no longer, and called out decisively, "There'll be no singing here this Thanksgiving."

"Then there'll be no preaching," said the pastor, and taking his cocked hat from its peg, he marched out of church, leaving his congregation paralyzed with astonishment. The big fiddle did not again appear in the "singing seats."

The general observance of an annual Thanksgiving Day spread very slowly outside of New England. An American edition of the Episcopalian Prayer Book dated 1780, strongly advised it, but the recommendation was not then acted upon. Thanksgiving Day was not regularly proclaimed by any State governor outside of New England till 1817, and it is only within twenty-four years past that it has been customary for the President of the United States to proclaim it.—Christian Standard.

A UNIQUE PROCLAMATION.

WHEREAS, It is a good and ancient custom to set apart after the harvest, a day for public thanksgiving and praise to Almighty God:

Now, therefore, John D. Long, Governor, by and with the advice of the Council, appoint therefor Thursday, the 24th day of November next.

"Unto Thee, O God, do we give thanks."

"Thou visiteth the earth and waterest it. Thou blesseth the springing thereof. Thou crownest the year with thy goodness. The pastures are clothed with flocks; the valleys also are covered over with corn; they shout for joy; they also sing."

"Blessed is he that considereth the poor."

"Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest."

O painter of the fruits and flowers,
We own thy wise design,
Whereby these humble hands of ours
May share the work of thine!

Apart from thee we plant in vain
The root and sow the seed;
Thy early and thy later rain,
Thy sun and dew we need.

Our toil is sweet with thankfulness,
Our burden is our boon;
The curse of earth's gray morning is
The blessing of its noon.

And still with reverent hands we cull
Thy gifts each year renewed;
The good is always beautiful—
The beautiful is good.

Given at the Council Chamber in Boston, this 29th day of October, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and eighty-one, and of the independence of the United States of America the one hundredth and sixth. JOHN D. LONG.

By his Excellency the Governor, with the advice of the Council. HENRY B. PIERCE, Secretary.

God save the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

The man who examines himself and his ways through life, has little to do in examining them when he comes to die.

THE TWILIGHT OF THANKSGIVING.

The day has lengthened into eve,
And over all the meadows
The twilight's silent shuttles weave
Their somber web of shadows;
With northern lights the cloudless skies
Are faintly phosphorescent,
And just above yon wooded rise
The new moon shows her crescent.

Before the evening lamps are lit,
While day and night commingle,
The sire and matron come and sit
Beside the cosy ingle;
And softly speak of the delight
Within their bosoms swelling,
Because beneath their roof to-night
Their dear ones all are dwelling.

And when around the cheerful blaze
The young folks take their places,
What blissful dreams of other days
Light up their aged faces!
The past returns with all its joys,
And they again are living
The years in which, as girls and boys,
Their children kept Thanksgiving.

The stalwart son recalls the time
When, urged to the endeavor,
He tried the well-greased pole to climb,
And failed of fame forever.
The daughter tells of her emprise
When, as a new beginner,
She helped her mother make the pies
For the Thanksgiving dinner.

And thus with laugh and jest and song,
And tender recollections,
Love speeds the happy hours along,
And fosters fond affections;
While Fancy, listening to the mirth,
And dreaming pleasant fictions,
Imagines through the winds on earth
That Heaven breathes benedictions.

THANKSGIVING PROCLAMATIONS BY THE CONTINENTAL CONGRESS.

Major C. E. Bliven, of Chicago, says the Inter Ocean, has in his possession a complete set of the journals of the Continental Congress. A distinguished Englishman said of the addresses made and the papers read before this Continental Congress, that they would live long after the debates in the British Parliament were forgotten. These volumes are, in fact, a treasure-house stored with the very best of what has come to be known as political literature. From these volumes we copy the following documents, one being the proclamation issued by the Continental Congress about a year before the Declaration of Independence, and the other being the very first Thanksgiving proclamation issued in the name of the United States. These two documents are not only interesting, but they are worth the close study of all who have given attention to the development of American ideas.

HUMILIATION AND PRAYER.

Under date of Wednesday, June 7, 1775, in the "Journal of Congress" (page 114) is the following entry:

"The Congress met according to adjournment.

"On motion.

Resolved, That Thursday, the 20th of July next, be observed throughout the twelve United Colonies as a day of humiliation, fasting, and prayer; and that Mr. Hooper, Mr. J. Adams, and Mr. Paine be a committee to bring in a resolve for that purpose.

Under date of Monday, June 12, 1775, is the following:

"The committee appointed to prepare a resolution for a fast, brought in their report, which, being read, was agreed to as follows:

"As the great Governor of the world, by his supreme and universal providence, not only conducts the course of nature with unerring wisdom and rectitude, but frequently influences the minds of men to serve the wise and gracious purposes of his providential government; and it being at all times our indispensable duty devoutly to acknowledge his superintending providence, especially in times of impending danger and public calamity, to reverence and adore his immutable justice, as well as to implore his merciful interposition for our deliverance:

"This Congress, therefore, considering the present critical, alarming, and calamitous state of these colonies, do earnestly recommend that Thursday, the 20th day of July next, be observed by the inhabitants of all the English colonies on this continent, as a day of public humiliation, fasting and prayer; that we may, with united hearts and voices, unfeignedly confess and deplore our many sins; and offer up our joint supplications to the all-wise, omnipotent and merciful disposer of all events, humbly besecching him to forgive our iniquities, to remove our present calamities, to avert those desolating judgments with which we are threatened, and to bless our rightful sovereign, King George the Third, and to inspire him with wisdom to discern and pursue the true interest of subjects, that a speedy end may be put to the civil discord between Great Britain and the American colonies, without effusion of blood; and that the British nation may be influenced to regard the things that belong to her peace before they are hid from her eyes; that these colonies may ever be under the care and protection of a kind Providence, and be prospered in all their interests; and that the divine blessing may descend and rest upon all our civil rulers, and upon the representatives of the people in their several assemblies and conventions, that they may be directed to wise and effectual measures for preserving the Union, and securing the just rights and privileges of the colonies; that virtue and true religion may revive and flourish throughout our land; and that all American may soon behold a gracious interposition of heaven for the redress of her many grievances, the restoration of her invaded rights, a reconciliation with the parent State on terms constitutional and honorable to both; and that her civil and religious privileges may be secured to the latest posterity.

"And it is recommended to Christians of all denominations to assemble for public worship, and to abstain from servile labor and recreation on said day.

"Ordered, That a copy of the above be signed by the President, and attested by the Secretary, and published in the newspapers and in handbills."

THE FIRST NATIONAL THANKSGIVING.

Under date of Friday, Oct. 31, 1777, in the Journal of Congress for 1777 (page 464), is the following:

Resolved, That a committee of three be appointed to prepare a recommendation in the several States, to set apart a day for thanksgiving for the signal success lately obtained over the enemies of these United States. (Surrender of Burgoyne.)

The members chosen, Mr. S. Adams, Mr. R. H. Lee, and Mr. Roberdeau.

"Saturday, Nov. 1. 1777.—The committee appointed to prepare a recommendation to the States to set apart a day of public thanksgiving, brought in a report; which was taken into consideration and agreed to, as follows:

"Forasmuch as it is the indespensable duty of all men to adore the superintending providence of Almighty God; to acknowledge with gratitude their obligation to him for benefits received, and to implore such further blessings as they stand in need of; and it having pleased him in his abundant mercy not only to continue to us the innumerable bounties of his common providence, but also smile upon us in the prosecution of a just and necessary war, for the defense and establishment of our unalienable rights and liberties; particularly in that he has been pleased in so great a measure to prosper the means used for the support of our troops and to crown our arms with most signal success; it is therefore recommended to the legislative or executive powers of the United States to set apart Thursday, the 18th day of December next, for solemn thanksgiving and praise; that with one heart and one voice the good people may express the grateful feelings of their hearts, and consecrate themselves to the service of their divine benefactor; and that, together with their sincere acknowledgments and offerings, they may join the penitent confession of their manifold sins, whereby they have forfeited every favor, and their humble and earnest supplication that it may please God, through the merits of Jesus Christ, mercifully to forgive and blot them out of remembrance; that it may please him graciously to afford his blessings on the governments of these States respectively, and prosper the public council of the whole; to inspire our commanders both by land and sea and all under them with that wisdom and fortitude which may render them fit instruments, under the providence of Almighty God, to secure for these United States the greatest of all blessings, independence and peace; that it may please him to prosper the trade and manufactures of the people and the labor of the husbandmen; that our land may yield its increase; to take schools and seminaries of education, so necessary for cultivating the principles of true liberty, virtue, and piety, under his nurturing hand, and to prosper the means of religion for the promotion and enlargement of that kingdom which consisteth in righteousness, peace and joy in the Holy Ghost.

"And it is further recommended that servile labor and such recreation as, though at other times, innocent, may be unbecoming the purpose of this appointment, be omitted on so solemn an occasion."—Journals of Congress, 1777, p. 467-8.

GIRLS' AND THANKSGIVING.

The time has come for every girl to make Thanksgiving. Somebody sighs and wonders what they have to be thankful for; somebody else is very positive that it is certain she has nothing to be thankful for; but there isn't a human being on the face of God's earth who can't find something for which to say, "I thank Thee, oh God." One girl has that greatest of all blessings—good health; another the blessing of a bright, happy home; another, though she lies on an invalid's couch, the blessing of sunshine and the consideration of those who are less afflicted. One is glad because on her third finger is a bright ring that means she has become mistress of somebody's heart; and another is glad because worry and troubles are all swallowed up in that great pacifier—work. It will do more for you and for me when our hearts are full of sorrow, and our eyes sore with unshed tears, to feel that the hands must be busy and the brain must be at work. If on Thanksgiving Day you can do nothing else, then get down on your knees and thank God for work. It is the best gift that out of his plenty he can offer you.—Ruth Ashmore, in Ladies' Home Journal.

OLD AUNT HANNAH.

A THANKSGIVING STORY.

The wind went whistling through the bare branches of the great trees, and tossed the dead leaves about the avenue. Old Aunt Hannah drew her shawl more closely about her, and buried her nose in the warm fur of her old-fashioned muff.

Four young faces pressed close to the window. "Oh, dear, there she comes!" said Bella. "I knew she would come!"

"I wish we could have one Thanksgiving without seeing her old phiz at the table," said Ted.

"I wouldn't care, if Cora hadn't been invited," said Clara; "but I think it was too bad in papa to invite Aunt Hannah, when he knew how ridiculous she is. Of course, she will wear those old black kid gloves with the long fingers. I am sure she would look enough like a mummy, if she left those off."

"She will take one off, when the desert comes on," said Bella.

"She will expect us to sing 'Rock of Ages' in the evening," said Clara.

"Now, she has come, let us try to treat her decently," said Bella. "Tom, won't you go and bring in her bag?"

"Yes, I will," said Tom; "for I like her."

"Lord love him!" said Aunt Hannah, as he ran down the steps without a hat, and grasped her old carpet bag; "he looks as if he's glad I'd come."

"I saw you blowing round," he said, as he put out his stout little arm to steady her, as a fresh gust of wind swept around the corner of the house.

"I ain't quite so steady on my feet as I used to be, Tom. I was thinking as I came in the gate that I was a good deal like the leaves, and the wind seemed to think so, too."

"But the wind really isn't anybody, you know," said Tom, gallantly: "no*body* would think so."

"Lord love him!" said she.

In spite of the polite greeting she received from the other children, old Aunt Hannah felt that perhaps she would not have been missed if she had not come. A tear started to her eye; but she wiped it resolutely away, and turned with a cheerful smile to greet Tom's father and mother.

Tom showed her every attention; but the others were soon called away to welcome Miss Cora, a pretty girl with rather a foolish smile and a very broad sash ribbon.

"Clara thinks Cora is all creation," whispered Tom. "She lives in New York. She goes to school where the girls go. Don't you think she looks sort of silly?"

"I don't think she looks as shrewd as a nut doll at a fair," said Aunt Hannah, "but she's a sight prettier."

When dinner time came, no one quite dared to ask Aunt Hannah not to put on the old black gloves. And, when Cora saw the long fingers reaching far beyond the old lady's shrivelled hands, she laughed aloud. Aunt Hannah did not appear much embarrassed. She only smiled, and said: "I do not belong to your generation, Miss Cora. If your generation has advantages over mine, so, if I have not forgotten, mine had some over yours."

The dinner passed off pleasantly enough, the children were merry, and everything was good.

When evening came, Tom sat upon his father's knee and asked for a story.

"No," said Ted, "let's play some games."

"No: Clara is going to play for us to dance," said Miss Cora.

"Yes, that's the best," said Bella.

"We can sit up all night, if we want to, on Thanksgiving," said Tom: "let's do all of them."

"Sometimes, papa can't think of a story," said mamma; "but to-night, I know, he wants to tell you one."

"Do you like stories?" Clara asked Miss Cora; and, as that young lady admitted that sometimes she could endure one, if well told, papa gained courage, and began:—

"In an oak grove, not a thousand miles from this very fine place, there lived a squirrel with his little family. He was a pretty good sort of a fellow, and had a pretty good sort of a wife, and four pretty good sort of little squirrels. He also had a pretty good sort of a house for a squirrel. He liked everything about his house excepting one thing: and that was a heavy stone that rested on the top of it. This is how it happened that the great stone rested on the house. One day, he found the nuts and acorns were nearly gone from his cellar. He went as fast as possible to a rich old fox, and asked him if he could spare him some acorns.

" 'Ay,' said the old fox, 'if you will let me put a heavy stone on your house to always remind you that you owe me the acorns.'

" 'I will try to wait a little longer,' said the squirrel: 'my wife can't bear to live in a house with a stone on the roof, be it ever so small.'

"But the acorns grew fewer, and the nuts were gone. The squirrel went again to the fox, and said, 'Put on the stone, and give me the acorns; for my little squirrels must not know that the cellar is almost empty."

"The old fox put on the stone, and gave the acorns. 'I will let it rest there for three years,' he said: 'then you shall pay me the acorns, every one. If you do not, the house is mine."

"One day, it was Thanksgiving Day, the young squirrels were running about, and seemed very happy. They were going to have a fine dinner that day. Early in the morning they looked out and saw under the oak trees an old-fashioned looking squirrel with a bag. She was not very strong, and the rude wind often held her back; but she only grasped her old bag more firmly, and trudged on. She had come some twenty miles to eat dinner with the young squirrels; yet all but one sat at the window and saw her drag along her old bag, nor offered to go to help her. Yet that very bag contained the acorns for the old fox, so the heavy stone might be lifted from the house of the young squirrels. Perhaps you think this old squirrel was very rich, and had stores of nuts and acorns; but it was not so. She lived in a little, old house, in a town where they had built up all about her. 'Come, come,' said her neighbors, 'we don't want to see that little, old house standing there any longer. You belong to another generation. Name your price for your land, and let us tear down your house.'

" 'No, no, I never will sell!' she said. 'Nothing can induce me to sell.' But, when she heard of the great stone that lay upon the roof where the little squirrels lived, she said: 'Buy my land! buy it, but leave enough for the little, old house to stand upon, for in that my mother and my grandmother lived and died.'

"The noble trees that her father had planted were cut down, but she turned away her head, and thought only of the little squirrels, that now they need not leave the house they loved so well; and she put the acorns in her shabby, generous, old bag, and started. Don't you think it ought to be a real Thanksgiving for those miserable little squirrels?"

Mamma's eyes were full of tears. Clara looked very sober, and Bella sniffed two or three times.

"Father," said Ted, "do you mean that you put a mortgage on this house?"

"Yes, my boy: I had to do so."

"O father! Did Aunt Hannah pay it for you?"

"She is going to lend me money to lift the great stone," said his father.

"And I laughed at her!" said Miss Cora.

"There is nothing for you to be ashamed of," said Clara: "she is no relation to you; but I—I"—

"But I am ashamed of myself," said Cora, "and I want to ask your aunt to forgive me."

"I had forgotten it, my child," said Aunt Hannah.

"How I pitied the old lady squirrel when papa was telling the story!" said Bella. "Yet I saw Aunt Hannah coming up the avenue all alone, and I never went to meet her."

"There is nothing we can do for her," said Clara; "and she has done so much for us!"

"Yes, you can," said the old lady: "you can all sing 'Rock of Ages.' "

They sang it as they had never sung before. "Lord love them, every one!" said Aunt Hannah to herself. "They are not of my generation, but His generation can never pass away."

"May the four young squirrels crack nuts for many a Thanksgiving Day to come by this fireplace," said papa, "but may they never forget the hand that lifted the great stone from the roof."

Everybody said, "Amen!" and old Aunt Hannah looked very happy.—Christian Register.

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

—Mr. Moody Sabbath morning made his appearance at the church which bears his name, on the corner of Chicago and LaSalle avenues, for the first time since last spring, and began there a revival meeting that will continue ten days. Mr. Moody comes direct from Albany. Every foot of available space in the church was occupied and, as nearly as could be ascertained, about 2,200 persons were present, chiefly from the working classes.

—Geo. C. Needham is giving daily lectures to the students at the Missionary Training Institute, Minneapolis.

—The Moravians have a mission in that most inaccessible region, Thibet. The station is thus described: "The mission premises lie about 9,400 feet above the level of the sea, and 1,000 feet above the narrow ravine down which the foaming torrent of the Sutlej rushes. The village of Poo is the largest in that remote district, but exceedingly inaccessible, the high passes leading to it being very difficult at all times, and impassable for a good part of the year. Here live and labor a missionary pair, who are occupying about as isolated a post as could well be found in any mission field on the face of the earth. Their nearest postoffice is fourteen days distant over Himalayan mountain paths. Ten years or more may pass without their receiving a single visit from a European. But for thirty-two years this outpost has been faithfully held, as a center for evangelistic labors."

—In China, says the Episcopal Recorder, missionaries proclaim the Gospel in the streets, and large crowds gather to hear them, or at least to satisfy their curiosity, yet the civil authorities do not interfere to prevent the preaching of a strange religion. In this country, or in some parts of it at least, it is quite different, and in Boston the preaching of the Gospel on the Common is forbidden, and the preachers themselves are arrested because they cause a crowd, and create so far a disturbance. Certainly the government of China appears more enlightened than that of Boston, largely controlled as it is by the Irish Romanists, who are clamoring for home rule in their own prolific island.

—Apropos of a prediction which Robert G. Ingersoll made ten years ago, Chaplain McCabe sent the following note to the infidel lately: "Dear Colonel:—Ten years ago you made the following prediction: 'Ten years from this time two theaters will be built for one church.' The time is up. The Methodists are now building four churches every day—one every six hours. Please venture upon another prediction for the year 1900."

—The English Church Missionary Society asks for 1,000 additional missionaries to go out within the next five years. The appeal opens the way for the employment of evangelists, lay workers, and even of mechanics and laboring men and women. As this society is the organ of the Church of England, which possesses vast wealth, it is believed the money will be forthcoming provided the volunteers appear.

—The National Baptist convention (colored) lately meeting in Nashville, Tenn., voted to cease the exchange of pulpits with "pedo-Baptists and Campbellites," and to refuse the reception of members of such churches, even though they had been immersed. The reason for such extraordinary resolutions was that the proscribed bodies are not churches and have therefore "no power to administer these ordinances."

—The Chicago City Missionary society which was formed just about eight years ago has already organized 25 new churches and erected 17 buildings. The churches and missions now under care of the society are 35; ministers employed, 22; students employed as visitors under the society, 46. There are 45 churches and 65 Sabbath-schools of the Congregational order within the city limits; 22 of the former and 28 of the latter were organized by the aid of this society, and also 3 suburban churches with three schools. Ministers employed by this society are preaching in German, Welsh, Norwegian, Swedish, Bohemian and English.

—A report from Seattle, Wash., says that Charles L. Terry, ex-United States Customs Inspector, who is charged with an attempt at smuggling while engaged in customs service, who has been absent from the United States for several years, returned quietly to that city lately and gave himself up. While in Victoria he professed religion during one of Moody's meetings and was induced to surrender to the Government valuable lands in Seattle in restitution. Terry says that he will plead guilty to any charge that he knows to be true and is willing to suffer the penalty.

—At a meeting Wednesday in Philadelphia it was decided to hold the Methodist Ecumenical Council at Washington, beginning the third Wednesday of October, 1891. The home delegates will number 300, and the foreign 200.

—The Baptists of Minnesota are to have a rolling tabernacle, a railroad chapel on wheels, which is to travel all over the Northwest, carrying two missionaries. The chapel car is sixty feet long and ten feet wide. At one end a space about eighteen feet long will be fitted up for living purposes. The remainder of the car will be furnished as a chapel. This car will run upon the extended system of the Northern Pacific and Wisconsin Central railroads, and doubtless upon other roads also. The Episcopal bishop of Minnesota already has such a car in operation.

EDUCATIONAL NOTES.

—The German Theological Seminary of the General Synod of the Evangelical Lutheran church was established in Chicago in 1885. It is located on Ashland avenue and Augusta street, and had last year an attendance of twenty students. Prof. J. C. Brodfuehrer of the faculty was an interested member of the late Sabbath convention in this city.

—Miss Guinness, daughter of H. Grattan Guinness, of London, is visiting the colleges of this country in the interests of the "Student Volunteer Association." She was lately at Evanston, Ill., and addressed the young ladies at the Woman's College Tuesday evening, and a union meeting of all the students in the University chapel Wednesday evening of last week. A number of students gave their names for the missionary field.

—It is proposed to erect a statue in Troy, N. Y., to that famous educator of other days, Mrs. Emma Willard. She was born in 1787, and died in Troy in 1870. All former pupils of the Troy Female Seminary, all children and relatives of deceased pupils, and all who think the memory of the pioneer in the cause of women's greater culture worthy of remembrance are asked to send a contribution to the fund for the erection of this statue, and thus join in raising a lasting memorial to the teacher of her sex. It is believed by the trustees that for this purpose about $15,000 will be needed.

—Princeton stands second to none of our American colleges in the part her graduates have played in the general history of the United States. Her roll of fame is long in proportion to her numbers. She has given her country nine of the fifteen college graduates who sat in the Constitutional Convention, one President, two Vice-Presidents, four Justices of the Supreme Court—one a Chief Justice—five Attorney-Generals, and fifteen other Cabinet officers, twenty-eight Governors of States, a hundred and seventy-one Senators and Congressmen, a hundred and thirty-six judges, forty-three college presidents, and a hundred and seventy-five professors, eighty of whom have been appointed since Dr. McCosh became president.—Harper's.

—The annual commencement exercises of the Iowa Agricultural College at Ames were held lately, and a large class was graduated. The board of trustees were in session during an entire week, seeking to allay some internal dissensions in the institution, the exact nature of which is not made public. The troubles came to a climax on the 13th inst., when President Chamberlain, Professor Smith, of the chair of agriculture, and Professor Mount, of the chair of civil engineering, tendered their resignations, which were accepted. President Chamberlain is an able educator and writer on agricultural topics, besides being an earnest Christian and in sympathy with Christian reforms. His resignation is a great loss to the institution.

LODGE NOTES.

Leaders of the Farmers' Alliance in Kansas have decided to establish an assessment life insurance branch in the order.

The waiters at the Boston Oyster House in this city went out on a strike at noon one day lately because non-union men had been employed.

Hiram Bassett, Past Grand Master of Masons, and considered the biggest Mason in the world, died at Millersburg, Ky., at the age of 70 years. He had taken every degree known to the order.

The Beta Theta Phi fraternity of Beloit College formally opened their new chapter house with a reception Nov. 14. The chapter house was built during the past season by Mrs. Ella D. Adams expressly for the Beta society, and cost $6,000.

The Denver meeting of the Knights of Labor unanimously re-elected Powderly general master workman. The assembly passed a resolution continuing Powderly's salary at $5,000 per annum, but upon the latter's request the amount was reduced to $3,500.

The Delta Kappa Upsilon fraternity held a three days' convention in New York. The convention was held with closed doors. There was considered a report of the detailed catalogue, containing the biographies of each of the 10,000 members of the fraternity, living and dead.

At the national fraternal congress held at Pittsburg, Pa., a proposition to unite with the National Mutual Benefit society for the purpose of formulating laws to be presented to the legislatures of the various States providing for the punishment of fraudulent insurance associations was rejected.

Prominent members of the Sacramento Typographical Union and the Council of Federated Trades were conducting a systematic boycott against the Bee of Sacramento, Cal., for refusing to reinstate a discharged employe and a number of strikers. Judge Armstrong granted an order forbidding the boycotters doing any acts tending to injure the business or property of the paper. The decision is of great interest here, as it declares the illegality of the boycott in the State.

Representative members of the Minnesota insurance organization known as the Knights of Aurora held a meeting in Topeka, Kan., for the purpose of forming an independent order to be known as the Fraternal Aid association. Some time ago the managers of the Knights of Aurora were accused of fraudulent practices and an investigation was instituted by the insurance commissioner of Minnesota. Although the charges were not proved it was shown that instead of 20,000 members the society had only 2,200, of which 1,500 were in Kansas. This fact induced the Kansas lodges to form an independent order.

PAPERS AND MAGAZINES FOR THE FREEDMEN.

In addition to our regular Gospel and reform work, we are distributing thousands of papers among the Freedmen. The pastor of the African M. E. Church in Gallipolis, Ohio, said: "Our people are very poorly supplied with good reading matter. They are far behind the times. We are very grateful to you for what you are doing for our race."

Religious papers, books and magazines should be sent in boxes or barrels by freight to us at Catlettsburg, Ky., until Dec. 20. I. R. B. ARNOLD,

The importance of purifying the blood cannot be overestimated, for without pure blood you cannot enjoy good health.

At this season nearly every one needs a good medicine to purify, vitalize, and enrich the blood, and Hood's Sarsaparilla is worthy your confidence. It is peculiar in that it strengthens and builds up the system, creates an appetite, and tones the digestion, while it eradicates disease. Give it a trial.

Hood's Sarsaparilla is sold by all druggists. Prepared by C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.

Charming people, these exceptional people! Here's a medicine—Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery for instance, and it's cured hundreds, thousands that're known, thousands that're unknown, and yet yours is an exceptional case! Do you think that that bit of human nature which you call "I" is different from the other parcels of human nature? "But you don't know my case." Good friend, in ninety-nine out of a hundred cases, the causes are the same—impure blood—and that's why "Golden Medical Discovery" cures ninety-nine out of every hundred. You may be the exception. And you may not. But would you rather be the exception, or would you rather be well? If you're the exception it costs you nothing, you get your money back—but suppose it cures you?

Let the "Golden Medical Discovery" take the risk.

We take pleasure in calling the attention of our readers to the advertisement of the Chesebrough Manufacturing Company, which appears in another column. This company are the original discoverers and only manufacturers of Vaseline, which is known all over the world as the best emollient and the most valuable family remedy in use. Their goods are sold by druggists throughout the country, but we wish to caution our readers, when buying, to accept only goods in original packages, and labeled Chesebrough Manufacturing Company, as sometimes unscrupulous dealers try to substitute preparations which are of little value when compared with Vaseline, and some are injurious and unsafe to use.

By sending the company a dollar by mail the sender will receive free quite an assortment of these beautiful and valuable goods without any charge for delivery. We know whereof we write, when we say the "Vaseline" soap is a revelation.

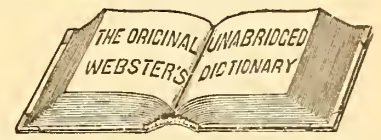
REMARKABLE OFFER!



Nearly everyone is familiar with the name, but it has been estimated that only one in every two hundred and eighty persons in the United States is fortunate enough to have access to the valuable information contained within the covers of the grandest work ever written by mortal man,

Webster's

UNABRIDGED DICTIONARY.

That this is an unfortunate state of affairs will be admitted by all, and it is due to the fact that no one save the rich could afford them.

The Dictionary is a necessity in every home, school and business house. It fills a vacancy and furnishes knowledge which no one hundred volumes of the choicest books could supply, and all young or old, educated or ignorant, rich or poor should have it within reach and refer to its contents every day in the year.

The Loomis reprint contains all the matter as compiled and arranged by our esteemed and honored author and statesman

NOAH WEBSTER.

About forty years of his life was devoted to this great work, and when we consider the fact that this book contains about 100,000 words, we will appreciate that these years must have been well spent.

Some idea of the magnitude of this book may be gained from the fact that it contains over 440 cubic inches of paper and has about 300,000 square inches of printed surface.

In addition to the 100,000 words it contains a portrait of the author, together with his biography and a valuable table of 12,000 synonymous words.

By special arrangement with the publishers, we are permitted to furnish this valuable volume: 1st. To any subscriber to our paper; 2nd. To any renewal subscription; and 3rd. To any person who has paid a full year's subscription within the past six months, on receipt of $1.50 for the paper one year, and two dollars and seventy-five cents to cover express charges, packing, etc., of the Dictionary.

HOME AND HEALTH.

OVER-EATING.

Over-eating tends to make men stupid, dyspeptic, nervous, irascible, arrogant, and sinful; and hence when men begin to think on their ways, and regard God, they frequently lose all relish for food. At other times God calls them to fasting, that their stomachs may become empty, and their blood cool, that their passions may be subdued, their heads be more clear, and they be in a condition to listen to the call of God, the voice of wisdom, the pleadings of conscience, and the dictates of common sense.

A large portion of the diseases that afflict mankind would doubtless be cured by judicious fasting. A man who requires a pound of food, eats two pounds; and in order that he may get it down, flavors it with spices, covers it with condiments and stimulant, whips his jaded appetite to the utmost, and washes it down with stimulating drinks. So the food is swallowed; the stomach overloaded, inflamed, stimulated, toils beneath the load. The process of digestion is so protracted and imperfect that the food ferments, turns sour, evolves gases; and sometimes different kinds of food mingling together in decay, evolve new gases and poisonous mixtures, which ruin health and destroy life.

When at last the heated, acrid, burning, half-digested mass passes from the stomach, it irritates, inflames, and poisons every organ it touches. The system is not nourished as it should be, and instead of the bland and healthful ingredients which should produce pure blood with a taste somewhat resembling new milk, a foul, briny, irritating, unhealthful current is set flowing into every part of the body, clogging, overworking, overloading, and diseasing all of the vital organs.

There is often twice as much food in the system as can be disposed of. Half of it, half spoiled, is taken up and used as well as such material can be, to repair the natural waste. The rest is pumped and driven here and there, till it can be dumped somewhere, disordering and overworking all the organs of the body in its course, and producing not only bodily sickness, but mental misery, disorder and sin.

Hence the Lord calls men to penitence and fasting, to humiliation and prayer, that they may recover their normal tone and condition, and be prepared to listen to the voice of God, instead of being ruled by passion, driven and controlled by appetite, and misled through the blindness of their own wills, and the hardness of their own hearts.—Ex.

AN OLD THANKSGIVING DINNER.

How well I remember that old Thanksgiving dinner! Father at one end, mother at the other end; the children between wondering if father will ever get done carving the turkey. Oh, that proud, strutting hero of the barnyard, upside down, his plumes gone and minus his gobble! Stuffed with that which he can never digest! The day before, at school, we had learned that Greece was south of Turkey, but at the table, we found that turkey was bounded by grease. The brown surface waited for the fork to plunge astride the breast-bone, and with knife, sharpened on the jambs of the fireplace, lay bare the folds of white meat. Give to the boy disposed to be sentimental, the heart. Give to the one disposed to music, the drumstick. Give to the one disposed to theological discussion, the "parson's nose." Then the pies! For the most part a lost art. What mince pies! in which you had all confidence, fashioned from all rich ingredients, instead of miscellaneous leavings which are only a sort of glorified hash! Not mince pies with profound mysteries of origin! But mother made them, sweetened them, flavored them, and laid the lower crust and the upper crust, with here and there a puncture by the fork to let you look through the light and flaky surface into the substance beneath. No brandy, for the old folks were stout for temperance, but cider about half-way between new and hard. Dear me! What a pie!—Dr. Talmage in Ladies' Home Journal.

By All Odds

The most generally useful medicine is Ayer's Pills. As a remedy for the various diseases of the stomach, liver, and bowels, these Pills have no equal. Their sugar-coating causes them not only to be easy and pleasant to take, but preserves their medicinal integrity in all climates and for any reasonable length of time. The best family medicine, Ayer's Pills are, also, unsurpassed for the use of travelers, soldiers, sailors, campers, and pioneers. In some of the most critical cases, when all other remedies have failed, prove effective.

"In the summer of 1864 I was sent to the Annapolis hospital, suffering with chronic diarrhea. While there, I became so reduced in strength that I could not speak and was compelled to write everything I wanted to say. I was then having some 25 or 30 stools per day. The doctors ordered a medicine that I was satisfied would be of no benefit to me. I did not take it, but persuaded my nurse to get me some of Dr. Ayer's Pills. About two o'clock in the afternoon I took six of these pills, and by midnight began to feel better. In the morning the doctors came again, and after deciding that my symptoms were more favorable, gave me a different medicine, which I did not use, but took four more of the pills instead. The next day the doctors came to see me, and thought I was doing nicely, (and so did I). I then took one pill a day for a week. At the end of that time, I considered myself cured and that Ayer's Pills had saved my life. I was then weak, but had no return of the disease, and gained in strength as fast as could be expected."—F. C. Luce, Late Lieut. 56th Regt. Mass. Vol. Infantry.

"Ayer's Pills are

The Best

I have ever used for headaches, and they act like a charm in relieving any disagreeable sensation in the stomach after eating."—Mrs. M. J. Ferguson, Pullens, Va.

"I was a sufferer for years from dyspepsia and liver troubles, and found no permanent relief until I commenced taking Ayer's Pills. They have effected a complete cure."—George W. Mooney, Walla Walla, W. T.

Farm Notes.

BEWARE OF CHEAP FOOD.

Farmers who sell the best they raise and keep the poorest for home consumption "miss it" most decidedly. No less an authority than the Kitchen truly observes that it is false economy which induces people to use cheap butter, cheap meat, cheap flour, and other cheap articles of food. In nine cases out of ten cheap articles of food are either damaged or adulterated, and are dear at any price. They are seldom what they purport to be, and if not really dangerous to use, generally prove unsatisfactory to the purchaser or consumer. Of all cheap things, cheap articles of food should be most carefully avoided. Bread that is heavy or sour has passed the bounds of redemption. Butter that has become rancid can not be regenerated by the addition of coloring. Meats that are tainted can by no chemical process be restored to their original condition, and the secret of infusing freshness into stale vegetables and decayed fruits remains undiscovered. To use low-priced stuff for food is not only extravagant and foolish, but criminal. It is a flagrant violation of the laws of physiology and hygiene, and a defiance of disease and death. Therefore, beware of low-priced articles of food.

—Hens that are kept in close quarters need bits of meat, and gravel or pounded bones to supply the material of this sort which they pick up for themselves when allowed to forage over the farm. At this season of the year a little cayenne pepper—a spoonful to a dozen hens—mixed in meal mush, will perceptibly quicken their disposition to lay. To keep them from eating their eggs, and each other's feathers, as they are liable to do when closely confined, it is a good plan to set them at work in the way suggested by an exchange: One good method is to cover their yard, when not in grass, with some sort of litter—straw, leaves, corn stalks, salt hay, sea weed, vegetable tops, etc., and then scatter grain over this frequently, and cover most of it. This will necessitate "scratching" for it, and they will undertake it without any further urging. Where litter is abundant the work of the fowls in scratching may be utilized in getting the litter reduced to a "very fine tilth," as farmers say of ground well prepared for seed. They will scratch a moderate layer of straw or salt hay out of sight after a while, if allowed to do so, and even corn stalks also, after sufficient exposure to the weather has made the stalks brittle. Another good plan is to plow or spade their enclosure frequently; sow it with corn or other grain, and harrow or plow this under. It will soon sprout, and while the green tops will be eagerly eaten, the half decomposed grain is also a dainty food for fowls, and the work of scratching it out will furnish agreeable employment and exercise till it is all gone. And still another excellent plan is to lightly bury beef heads or tough pieces of refuse meat in the chicken yard. In due time, in warm weather, this becomes inhabited, which the hens are not slow in discovering. Of course scratching is resorted to, and their reward is not only the crop of offensive insects themselves, but the putrid flesh also, in amounts proportioned to their industry. Fortunately a chicken's gizzard is a chemical laboratory of such power that everything going into it is deodorized and purified before being changed into flesh and eggs, and so there need be no scruples about feeding such articles. Let the owner exercise his ingenuity to keep his fowls at scratching, and it will close the door to many vicious habits.

"Arcn't you ever going to grow old, like the rest of us?" asked a man of an acquaintance he hadn't seen for some time. "Well, not so long as I can purify my blood with Ayer's Sarsaparilla," was the apt reply. This man knew what he was talking about.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

WASHINGTON.

The case of the Japanese, Shibuya Juguiro, confined in Sing Sing prison under sentence of death by means of electricity, was argued before the United States Supreme Court Friday. The question at issue is the validity of the New York electrocution law and the case is a sequel to the Kemmler execution.

CHICAGO.

There was organized in this city during the past few days one of the largest corporations in its line in the world. The new company will be known as the American Harvester Company, for the manufacture of harvesting machinery, with a capital stock of $35,000,000. The directors will be Cyrus H. McCormick, William Deering, the Hon. Walter A. Wood, Lewis Miller, Col. A. L. Conger, and Gen. A. S. Bushnell. It is a combine of the mower and reaper manufacturers of the country.

Francis Conley, 6 years of age, who had his left leg cut off by a Van Buren street car May 1, 1888, was given $19,000 damages by a jury in Judge Altgeld's court to help him through life. The company was sued for $25,000.

COUNTRY.

Returns from twenty States indicate a net prohibition gain of over 40,000, over the vote for Clinton B. Fisk. Michigan gains 15,000, Indiana gains 3,000, Massachusetts gains 5,000, New York over 4,000 gain, Iowa, Maryland, Rhode Island and New Jersey increase the Fisk vote. North Carolina gives in ten counties more than Fisk got in the whole State. California and Tennessee more than double the Fisk vote.

An improvement in the money market was noted Wednesday at Philadelphia, the action of the clearing-house in issuing loan certificates tending to allay apprehension. Six banks were given $11,000,000, their customers needing the money.

The failure of Barker Bros. & Co., bankers and brokers at Philadelphia, occurred last week Tuesday. It is said that the liabilities will be about $3,000,000, but the creditors are not numerous. The failure was caused largely by various unprofitable railroad investments.

An extensive bank failure was reported at Kansas City, Mo., Nov. 21, involving no less than six financial concerns in the southwest. They are all practically under one management.

A meeting of the Bureau of the Siberian Exile Petition Association was held in New York, and it was announced that 100,000 names had been obtained to a petition which is to be forwarded to the Czar with a view to induce him to set some of the Siberian exiles at liberty.

Mount Diablo Vineyard Company's Winery and Distillery at Clayton were seized by the Deputy Internal Revenue Collector on Friday for illicit distilling. The company will be to considerable expense before they get through with the Government as the fine will be several thousand dollars, beside the duty on the brandy.

Word has been received from Seven Lakes, in the Gallinas mountains, Lincoln county, New Mexico, that four sheep herders were killed recently by a hailstorm. Sixteen others and 1,600 head of sheep are missing. The messenger says that the hailstorm was the severest ever known in the mountains.

The plurality of Boyd (Dem.) for Governor of Nebraska is 144, the Republicans electing the rest of the State ticket. The Independents control the Legislature.

P. W. Gallaudet & Co., bankers and brokers at New York, failed Tuesday afternoon for about $1,000,000 due to general appreciation and the calling of loans.

THE INDIAN FRENZY.

BLUNT, S. D., Nov. 23.—The excitement at this place in reference to the Indian trouble is at is height. Gen. Bowers and members of the Midland Pacific survey, at work eighty miles west of Pierre, reached here this afternoon. They say that the Indians are in a frenzied condition, and are liable to commit murder at any time. Friday night at 11 o'clock fifty Indians surrounded their camp, burst into the tent, and took possession. They were all well armed with rifles and side arms, and could have massacred the whole outfit, but after a pow-wow the reds left, telling them to be many miles away before the sun rose. Our people will ask the Governor for arms and ammunition. It is feared that much damage will be done if proper precautions are not taken. The Indians on the Winnebago, south of town, have left to join the ghost dances at Rosebud.

MANDAN, N. D., Nov. 23.—People continue to come in from the country bordering on the Reservation. Provisions and ammunition have been moved into a coal mine, which is impregnable, and which citizens and settlers expect to be driven into.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 23.—C. A. Painter, agent of the Indian Rights association, with headquarters at Philadelphia, arrived here this evening from the reservations of the Cheyennes and Arapahoes in the Indian territory. He says the Messiah craze has taken possession of the Indians there and they have commenced a series of ghost dances.

BISMARCK, N. D., Nov. 23.—The military authorities' count at Standing Rock shows that a large number of Indians did not appear for rations, and to-day a scouting party crossed the river to the east side to look up the wandering Indians. All the schools at the agency are closed on account of the excited state of the reds. An Indian council was held yesterday at the agency, and the friendly chiefs all avowed allegiance to the agent and reiterated their opposition to Sitting Bull and the Messiah doctrines.

FOREIGN.

Uruguay is another South American country which is getting into financial trouble. The interest on its debt amounts to $5,000,000, and it is compelled to borrow money to meet the interest alone. Investors who were pinched in the Argentine catastrophe will take care not to get involved in Uruguay speculations if they do not wish to meet with another similar disaster.

The trial of the O'Shea divorce case opened in the Divorce court, London, on Saturday, the 15th. Mrs. O'Shea refused to make any defence, but made counter-charges of both adultery and cruelty against her husband, Captain O'Shea. Mr. Parnell failed to appear in court to refute the charges of seduction preferred against him by Capt. O'Shea. The utter collapse of the defence is tantamount to an acknowledgment of guilt to the court, and will result in Mr. Parnell being condemned to pay the costs of the divorce proceedings. It is generally regarded as imperative that Mr. Parnell should retire from the leadership of his party, but Mr. Parnell shows no signs of any such intention.

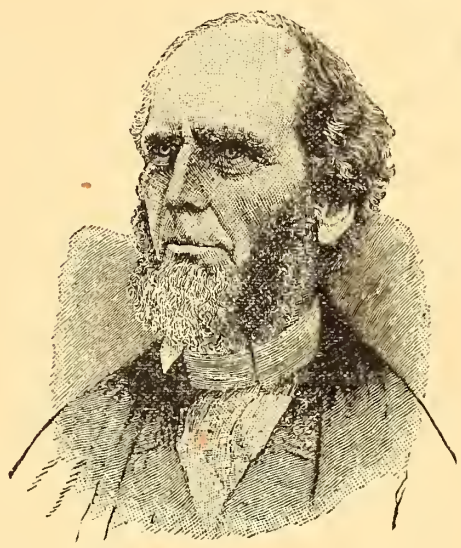
A Boston infidel sheet begins: "The N. Y. C. R. R. having denied the right of organization to their employes, thereby rendering them powerless or reducing them to practically the condition of serfs, now proceeds to build immense new freight warehouses." The note continues to berate the railway company as a heartless, conscienceless oligarchy, whose only aim is to make dollars for the rich at the expense of the poor. This is most mendacious writing, as the utterances of infidelity usually are. The New York Central road has denied no such right; but in refusing to give further employment to Knights of Labor, it performed an act for which all men, and especially poor men, should be grateful. That secret lodge is one of the most grinding of tyrannies. It began first a secret war on the road under the lead of its chief Powderly, as his letters produced in court show; and made open war when smoked out of its oath-guarded den. Had it succeeded against the road, the lives of all who travel that line would have been endangered in proportion to the insecurity of a management, divided between the railway offices and the laborers' palace in Philadelphia where the lodge has its quarters. And if the road is run at the expense of the poor, let it stop running, and then see who suffer most, the rich or the poor. No doubt there are evils connected with the management of that road which at times affect poor men; but such writing as the above is as false as lying can make it.



CHARLES G. FINNEY.
First President of Oberlin College.

The late decision of the Supreme Court fairly overshadows in the grandeur of its possibilities the mischievous "original package" affair. Under it our States no longer need to go through the agony and perplexity of a constitutional amendment, but State laws will be sufficient. Every legislature has in that decision a broad and solid platform for the wisest and most thorough prohibitory laws. The Voice gives play to honest witticism at the expense of the once popular sumptuary fallacy, which the decision finishes at a stroke:

"DIED—On Nov. 10, 1890, from a sledgehammer blow upon the cerebellum, dealt by Justice Field of the United States Supreme Court, 'Old Sumptuary,' a hoary-headed old bogy, and the only legitimate son of 'Father Democracy.' Deceased had for several years been very lame in both legs, but his favorite disease was consumption (of what it is needless to say). He was a half-brother of one 'Raster.' Father Democracy will be glad to receive the 'cordial sympathy' of all surviving Republican relatives of said 'Raster,' as well as the condolence of the entire Red Nose Fraternity."

The friends of the Sabbath have from time to time been petitioning for the suppression of the Sunday mail. So long as the Government is a Sabbath-breaker the railroads are compelled to be, and this opens the door wide for business of every kind. Postmaster General Wanamaker's personal convictions are for the Sabbath-rest, but replying to a reporter he says the order must come from Congress to change the present law. He says that to stop the handling of Sunday mails means to stop the wheels of the railroads throughout the country at 12 o'clock Saturday night. In that event there would be no protection for mails in transit. Hundreds of thousands of dollars pass through the mails every day, and the custody of the mail in a car standing on a track while crossing the prairie, or even at a small village, would be a serious matter. But this reason is rather fictitious. Large cities are now strung across the continent at easy distances. The mails can be easily guarded at such points. Mr. Wanamaker says, however, that if a considerable majority of any community petition for the closing of their local office, the request will be favorably considered. In many towns this would lead to the suppression of all other business, which is opened because the postoffice sets the example. The record of the Postoffice Department has been a grand one the past year, for the suppression of the lottery is recorded on its banner. Mr. Wanamaker's annual report urges again the postal telegraph system. We hope he may see it established before he goes out of office.

Saturday night the delegation of the Irish Land League spoke to thousands of their countrymen in this city, and raised some $20,000 for their political campaign fund. We have been reading that large sections of Ireland were soon to be in a starving condition, and an American committee to raise relief funds has asked us to refrain at present from contributing, as the English government has promised relief. But these Irish patriots who are raising money by the hundred thousand for Irish politics seem to have no thought for their starving countrymen. They do not refer to them. They have another serious case to settle, however. There are six of these representatives. Five of them have issued a manifesto denouncing the course of their political leader, Parnell, and demanding that he withdraw to privacy. Parnell's course is singular. Instead of retiring from the leadership of his party when his adulteries were likely to bring it into condemnation and destroy the Irish cause, he last week published to the world his determination to keep his place, His resolution was suicidal, and he would drag down his cause in his fall. For Gladstone had already publicly declared his purpose to no longer give his aid if an adulterer was leading the Irish party. The manifesto of the Irish delegation issued Monday in this city will go far toward a settlement of the question. Mr. Parnell has failed in a prime qualification of statesmanship. He has failed to recognize the fact that public and private morals are inseparably joined, and that in the convictions of the civilized world they cannot be disunited. His fall is a lesson to many of our own American politicians; and the firm stand of conscientious men across the water is an excellent example also for the American people.

REFORMING FROM THE OUTSIDE.

BY REV. ALEXANDER THOMSON.

This seems to be the order of the day. Anarchists scream it; Socialists proclaim it; and "Looking Backward" endorses it. And now Mr. Ronayne has mounted on his war horse and charges in the same direction; and I for one do not propose to deny that there is much of truth in what he says. Would to God there were less!

The cities are pest-houses of vice, and sin in rags and sin in silks grovels or drives through wide Christendom to-day. General Booth has startled the world with his "Darkest England," and the world of decency becomes pale and horrified as it gazes at the devil's caldron he exposes to view. Yet it is only to the uninformed that this is a surprise. The world-wide unrest, that is like the premonitory rumble of an earthquake, speaks of a suffering that is rapidly growing desperate.

But while all this is considered, have things become so bad as Mr. Ronayne would indicate? Has humanity fallen so far that it can no longer be moved by the living truth? Have the masses so turned their backs upon the only world Saviour that an appeal to them in his name, and on behalf of the everlasting principles of truth, will not only find no response in righteousness, but the very knowledge that a certain course is opposed to the religion of Jesus, will be the highest recommendation for them to enter upon it?

We cannot believe this. It was the Master who said, "Ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free;" and here he evidently did not mean merely that truth that appealed to the selfish nature of man, or merely to his patriotism, but the truth that is summarized in the Ten Commandments, and in the life and work of our Lord. Suppose we do stop teaching that Freemasonry is opposed to the religion of Jesus; that we say not a word upon its influence on individual Christian character, or on the church of God, and confine our attention wholly to attacking it as an enemy of the state, with a view to win over to our side the men who hate the Lord of life, and are successful. What then? Freemasonry would probably lose its power, but live on in the dark, and these God-hating allies would originate some other evil that would be as bad, before the smoke of the battle had lifted. Attacking evil outwardly is like cutting off the top of a Canadian thistle, the hated and prolific root is still in the ground.

I really cannot think, if I understand him, that our vigorous thinking and writing brother is in earnest on this subject, and I cannot perhaps better close this paper than by quoting the substance of the closing paragraph of an address I lately delivered: "If I knew that the saloon should last a thousand years and strew the coming ages with the wrecks of humanity; if I knew that the lodge power should continue to grow till no man should be allowed to buy or sell who could not make some secret sign or give some mysterious grip; if I knew that human selfishness would increase till men devoured each other like eels in the ooze of a river, I would still proclaim the great principle of the kingdom of righteousness; I would still walk forward in the way of God's truth; for only in that way lies the sunrise."

OBERLIN COLLEGE AND THE GREEK FRATERNITIES.

OBERLIN, Ohio, Nov. 2, 1890.

Yours in regard to a discussion of the question of "College Secret Societies" was duly received. The attention of the Faculty was called to it, and it was referred to a committee of which I am chairman. We have given the subject due consideration.

We find our duties here at present very exacting—the fall term being the busiest of the year—and we have but just closed a series of religious meetings, which for two weeks have absorbed much of our time and strength. Under these circumstances, there does not appear to be any member of the Faculty who feels that he can add to his other labors the work which you propose.

In the meantime, the position of Oberlin upon this subject, both as to theory and practice, is unmistakable. As to the general position of secret societies, our views are quite well represented in an address delivered some months since by our Prefessor King, with which, I think, you are acquainted. Yours very truly,

JAMES MONROE,
Professor of Political Science and Modern History.

THE OBERLIN FACULTY IN 1874.

We have views on the subject, but no secret societies and no experience. The early founders of the school were decidedly opposed to secret societies, and the principle was adopted at the beginning of excluding them. Consequently no secret society has ever been established among us The views of our Faculty on this question are just as decided as ever. There is but one opinion among us. In behalf of the Faculty,

JOHN MORGAN,
JAMES DASCOMB,
JAS. H. FAIRCHILD.

FROM THE PRESIDENT TO PRESIDENT E. E. WHITE OF PURDUE UNIVERSITY.

OBERLIN COLLEGE,
OBERLIN, O., Oct. 19, 1881.

MY DEAR SIR—The regulation of Oberlin College excluding secret societies, has never, so far as I am aware, worked to the disadvantage of the college, but, as we all believe who have had responsibility in its affairs, has proved most wholesome and profitable.

I have been connected with the college during all its history, and have never heard from any source a word of complaint as to the prohibition of secret societies among the students.

The rule was introduced at the first organization of the school. I was a young student at the time and have no knowledge of the special views on the subject of those concerned in the organization, but the rule has been maintained because we believe that secret societies are unhappy in their influence upon college discipline, giving opportunities and occasions for combinations among the students against good order and the best administration of affairs—that they are unhappy in their influence upon the personal character of the students, begetting false ideas and methods of influence and power, and making demands upon their time and interest without any adequate return. They absorb all the attention which students can afford for society work and prevent the prosperity of any but secret societies. In our college we have three open societies among the young men of the college classes, all prosperous and vigorous. Secret societies often bring in outside influences, I think, to disturb more or less the administration of affairs.

These are among the reasons which have influenced us in our position, but the question is so fully settled with us, and so naturally that I do not remember that we have ever formally considered it. Some of our Faculty have been connected with secret societies in Eastern colleges, yet I do not remember ever to have heard from one of them a suggestion unfavorable to the attitude of this college on that subject. Fraternally,

JAMES H. FAIRCHILD.

FROM THE FIRST PRESIDENT OF OBERLIN.

"We have, then, the implied testimony of Freemasons themselves, that the Christian church ought to have no fellowship with Freemasonry as thus revealed, and that those who adhere intelligently and determinedly to such an institution have no right to be in the Christian church. God demands, and the world has a right to expect, that the church will take due action and bear a truthful testimony in respect to this institution. She cannot now innocently hold her peace. The light has come. Fidelity to God and to the souls of men require that the church, which is the light of the world, should speak out, and should take such action as will plainly reveal her views of the compatibility or incompatibility of Freemasonry with the Christian religion."—From Pres. Finney's book, "Character, Claims and Practical Workings of Freemasonry," pp. 260, 263.

WHAT MAKES SECRET SOCIETIES ATTRACTIVE.

However much any one may be opposed to secret societies, he must admit that they have some peculiar attraction, particularly for young men.

The Congregationalist, while disavowing any knowledge "about the inside paraphernalia and ceremonies of the lodges," advised the churches "to try to find out what makes the secret societies so attractive, and then furnish these things, or their equivalent, so far as it lies within the province of the church to do this."

It seems to us that the following are some of the reasons which induce men to enter secret lodges:

1. Curiosity. They are eager to know what their friends and acquaintances are doing in their "secret chambers." They imagine that there are some great and valuable secrets, a knowledge of which they will gain, and can only gain, inside the lodge room. Curiosity operates very powerfully on some minds, particularly on the minds of children and persons who are "children in understanding." If you give a little child a rattle, it has great curiosity to know what it contains; and at the first opportunity will break it, if it is possible to do so, that it may find out what is in it. When the child learns that there is nothing of interest or value in it, it is greatly disappointed. So not a few of those whose curiosity induces them to enter the secret lodge soon leave it in disappointment and disgust.

2. Worldly advantage. It is well understood that most of these societies make provision for caring for their members when they are sick or disabled. The secret labor organizations provide more or less support for their members when thrown out of employment. In case of death some of the orders pay a considerable amount to the family of the deceased.

In order that these advantages may be enjoyed men enter these organizations. They do not make any inquiry with regard to the effect membership in the order may have upon their religious interests, or if they do, they persuade themselves that they will not suffer in this regard.

Other reasons might be named, but these are sufficient to indicate the elements of attraction in most of these societies. It would be hard for the church to furnish either similar or equivalent attractions.

As well might the churches try to find out what is so attractive in low class theaters—we hope we are not again subjecting ourselves to a suit for libel—dance houses, and other dens of iniquity, and furnish "equivalent attractions." In our judgment many churches have already gone quite too far in the way of furnishing "equivalent attractions" to get people into the church. The only proper object of attraction, by which men are to be drawn to Christ and his church, is the cross of Christ. "And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me."—United Presbyterian, Nov. 4, 1890.

PRESUMPTUOUS CLAIMS OF LODGE AND JESUIT.

[Rev. William F. Davis, the evangelist who was imprisoned on sentence of one year in Suffolk jail, Boston, for publicly preaching the Gospel on the Common, spoke by request in Music Hall in that city on Sabbath afternoon, October 26. His subject was, "The cause of public truth and liberty as involved in the free publication of the Gospel." A thousand people were present. Rev. A. H. Plumb, D. D., pastor of the Walnut Ave. Congregational Church, presided; and Edward Everett Hale and Rev. A. A. Miner, D. D., followed Mr. Davis with brief addresses. At such a meeting and under such circumstances Mr. Davis made the following strong indictment of the secret lodges in the course of his address, as it appears in the American of Boston, Nov. 1st, 1890.]

Quite properly did Cardinal Manning, in a sermon preached by him in 1869, put these monstrous claims of the Pope into these words, in which he speaks as the Pope's mouthpiece: "I claim to be the supreme judge and director of the consciences of men—of the peasant that tills the field and the prince that sits on the throne; of the household that lives in the shade of privacy and the legislature that makes laws for kingdoms. I am the sole, last, supreme judge of what is right and wrong." Very fitly did Gladstone characterize the operation of these decrees upon the minds of Romanists who yielded to them, as "*moral murder * * stifling conscience and conviction.*"

When the Pope, the head of the Romish church, sets such an example, who can wonder that his professed followers try hard to follow him? If, in every papist we have not a traitor and a blasphemer of the most pronounced and incurable treachery and impiety, it is because he has not yet sunk to the depths of this abysmal example which the Pope has furnished to all his followers. Moreover no true man within the Romish church ever will suffer himself to be drawn down into this bottomless pit. He will draw back betimes as Luther and Calvin did, as Chiniquy and O'Connor, and a host of others have done, God bless them!.....

The majority of those who have attended Music Hall meetings on the afternoons of the Lord's day during two or three years past, are doubtless wide awake to the preposterous claims of the Roman pope. But, who has warned them adequately of equally overweeningly blasphemous assumptions, published to the world by Masonic so-called grand lodges in their official organs, the Keystone and the Voice of Masonry? Last fall a Chicago preacher and a California "colonel" on this platform assured the public of their extended acquaintance with Masonry. Why did they not enlighten their hearers as frankly concerning the conscience-binding utterances of Masonry as on the wickedness of Romish pope, and cardinal, and bishop, and priest!

I buy in open market a copy of "Voice of Masonry and Family Magazine. John W. Brown, P. M. K. T. and 32 degrees, A. G. Mackey, M. D. K. T. and 33 degrees, editors. Chicago and New York. Published monthly."

This number happens to be the fifth month of 1876. On p. 387 of this magazine the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania is represented as having adopted and ordered to be printed a report which is here given in full, and from which I quote a few sentences:

1. "It is admitted as a primary Masonic principle, that Freemasonry is limited by neither latitude nor longitude, but over the world it may exist as an institution subject to no laws but those which it makes for itself." p. 387.
2. "The establishment of a Grand Lodge is by Masonic authority solely and exclusively." p. 387.
3. "To attempt to prove that a Grand Lodge must be both sovereign and supreme is a work of supererogation; it is a proposition that demonstrates and proves itself. These words express their own exclusive meaning. The highest power is the supreme power which possesses the functions of declaring law and enforcing obedience. Sovereignty is that supreme authority which demands allegiance and compels the duty involved in it." p. 389.

Here is all blasphemy and tyranny imaginable formulated and published unblushingly to the world. Can it be truly denied that whoever ignorantly pledges his allegiance to Freemasonism as here authoritatively published by its official heads is a dupe of knaves? Can we avoid believing that whoever intelligently swears allegiance to such pretensions is a traitor to Christ and to civil government in that act?

"Col. ———" stood up in this hall one year ago the 20th day of this month, if the "standard and reliable anti-papal publication" containing the full report of his speech, handed me by Deacon Bradbury, reports him correctly (p. 11. Romanism the Peril of our Country,) and said, "Some good people dislike secret societies. Then in the name of God direct your forces against the Jesuits." Amen! say I. Nobody but a Jesuit, who knows what the Jesuits are, can find fault with that. But the report does not show that that sentence was applauded. When, however, the speaker of the day uttered the next sentence he was greeted with applause. What was that next sentence?

"When the twenty-three thousand Knights Templars paraded in Washington the other day, there was a moral force representing three-fourths of a million of Masons that are ready when necessary to lay down the trowel and grasp the sword in defence of the free institutions of America." [Applause.]

Imagine men laying down the trowel which they never took up!

Citizens, I am just as willing to wear an iron yoke weighing two hundred pounds made by Leo XIII. as one of the same pattern and weight made by self-styled Sovereign Grand Inspectors General of Masonry. It is just as disgraceful to any man to be stripped of his clothes and manhood, to be blindfolded and with a rope about his body be led around in a secret lodge by "Freemasons" (who are not free and are not masons) as to be a papal puppet and a Jesuit's tool. The knowing ones who are well acquainted with their own Masonic literature, knew perfectly well that "The Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite" "of thirty-three degrees" as it is called, this Knight Templarism which was here praised, is itself chiefly the offspring of an apostate to Rome, Chevalier Ramsay, and the Jesuit college at Clermont in France. That is, according to the standard Masonic historians, Rebold, Mackey Macoy and Folger, twenty-five degrees out of the thirty-three degrees of this leading Masonic rite are Jesuitism. When Satan can cast out Satan then Templarism can cast out Jesuitism!

Now we are prepared to understand some of the remarks of these Masonic orators. When a Chicago preacher says "the question of our order is to-day not whether the Pope shall recognize us, ... but rather whether we shall recognize the Pope," which was greeted with applause and laughter (p. 11, Giordano Bruno and the Baltimore centennial), we are doubtless to understand that if the present Pope becomes a Mason, as the Nun of Kenmare, sister Cusack, tells us Pius IX. did, then the Masons will cordially receive him into their loving embrace. But, until then, each stands off and brags at the other about his pitiful infallibility, supremacy and sovereignty.

"The free institutions," also, "in defense of" which Masonic Templars profess themselves to be "ready, when necessary, to lay down the trowel and grasp the sword," appear in the light of the lodge deliverances to be little or nothing more than this whole system of abominable pageantry, tawdry tinsel and blasphemous bombast which names itself Freemasonry and claims to be "self-existent," self-sufficient, "universal," "sovereign" and "supreme." Just as when the Pope and papists speak of the paramount claims of Christianity, they mean simply and always, the preposterous claims of Romanism and Jesuitism.

Is this audience prepared to greet as on a social level, the withered harlot of the Vatican, if she only incestuously marries her own bastard offspring, Masonism? Suppose Leo XIII. should join the Masons, and a Masonic preacher thenceforth should recognize him as a Masonic "right Worthy Grand" this or that, and should ascribe his previous unfavorable rhetoric concerning Romanism to an overdose of quinine; must Deacon Bradbury and L. T. Townsend, and A. A. Miner and others, whose words have leaped up from this platform to fly around the world, go and get a Jesuit priest to come here and sprinkle dirty water on them in absolution, after they have crawled in penance through Boston gutters on hands and knees, from convent to cathedral? If only Jesuitism returns, like a dog to its vomit, and swallows down again those nauseous twenty-five degrees of the "Scottish rite" which it spewed out upon this unfortunate country in the year 1761 in Charleston, S. C., must this Music Hall audience become street beggars, asking the passers-by to give them a nickel to help build a monument to a man, whose chief claim to memory is that he deserves oblivion? I would rather be behind the bars at Charles Street jail for freely preaching the Gospel of Jesus Christ to the common people on their own common lands. Amen, and amen! If I am mistaken, show me wherein. If this is right, let us stand by it, and the gates of hell cannot prevail against us.

JOSEPH COOK.

Of all I wish to say of secret societies, this is the sum:

Secret oaths—

1. Can be shown historically to have often led to crime.
2. Are natural sources of jealousy and just alarm to society at large.
3. Are especially unfavorable to harmony and mutual confidence among men living together under popular institutions.
4. Are dangerous to the general cause of civil liberty and just government.
5. Are condemned by the severe denunciations of many of the wisest statesmen, preachers, and reformers.
6. Are opposed to Christian principles, especially to those implied in these three texts:

"In secret I have said nothing."

"Be not unequally yoked together with unbelievers."

"Give no offence in anything, that the ministry be not blamed."

7. Are forbidden in some portions of our Republic by the civil law, and ought to be in all portions. Many European governments hold Freemasonry under grave suspicion as a mask for conspiracies against throne and altar. In Prussia, Poland, Russia and Spain Freemasonry is prohibited by law.
8. Are forbidden to church members by some Christian denominations, and ought to be by all.—From address of Joseph Cook to Christian Conference, April, 1890.

"As to the question of the attitude of Christians toward the secret orders, two or three things seem to me very plain. One of them is this: that the whole movement of things on the line of secrecy is thoroughly antagonistic to the movement on the line of Scripture and Christianity."—From address of Rev. E. P. Goodwin, D. D., pastor First Congregational Church, Chicago, to Christian Conference, April, 1890.

LAMPS IN PITCHERS.

GEORGE WASHINGTON, in Farewell Address: "Let it simply be asked, where is the security for property, for reputation, for life, if the sense of religious obligation desert the oaths which are the instruments of investigation in the courts of justice? And let us with caution indulge the supposition, that morality can be maintained without religion."

GOVERNOR RITNER, in response to a communication from the Legislature of Pennsylvania, prepared a vindication of General Washington from the stigma of adherence to secret societies, in which he proves from authentic documents:

1. That in 1768 Washington had ceased regular attendance on the lodge.
2. That in 1798, shortly before his death, his opinions were the same as thirty years before when thirty-six years old.
3. That he was never "Grand Master" or "Master" of any particular lodge.
4. That in 1781, as appears by the record of King David's lodge, Newport, Rhode Island, it was not agreeable to Washington to be addressed even as a private Mason.
5. That all the letters said to be written by Washington to lodges are spurious.

"The whole movement of Christianity, what is it? It is light against darkness. It is as the shining of the sun. That doesn't have lodges. That doesn't have little dark rooms into which it disburses its beams. The business of the sun is to scatter light, and the business of the church of Jesus Christ is to scatter the light of the Sun of Righteousness. He is to be the light of the world everywhere. He says, 'In secret have I said nothing.' Everything was open. There was never any little cabal, any little gathering with its secret passes and grips. The mere attempt to couple such a thing with the work of the Lord Jesus shows its folly."—From address of Rev. E. P. Goodwin, D. D., pastor First Congregational Church, Chicago, to Christian Conference, April, 1890.

"God's Word prohibits the believer from forming alliances with the ungodly in society. Whenever the Christian surrenders himself to the society of the unbelieving world, his heart will be led away from God. This is especially true of thousands of Christian men who have deliberately yoked themselves up with unbelievers in all manner of secret societies. This course of false alliance is doing more mischief to individual Christian men by turning their hearts away from God and his service, and to the church by depleting and robbing her of her male membership, THAN ANY OTHER ONE ENEMY OF CHRIST. There never was a time when the cry, 'Come out from among them and be ye separate, saith the Lord,' was more needed than now."—From Dr. George F. Pentecost's Bible Studies, 1889, p. 389.

"I do not see how any Christian, most of all a Christian minister, can go into these secret lodges with unbelievers. They say they can have more influence for good, but I say they can have more influence for good by staying out of them, and then reproving their evil deeds. Abraham had more influence for good in Sodom than Lot had. If twenty-five Christians go into a secret lodge with fifty who are not Christians, the fifty can vote anything they please, and the twenty-five will be partakers of their sins. They are unequally yoked with unbelievers. 'But, Mr. Moody,' some say, 'if you talk that way you will drive all the members of secret societies out of your meetings and out of your churches.' But what if I do? Better men will take their places. Give them the truth anyway, and if they would rather leave their churches than their lodges the sooner they get out of the churches the better. I would rather have ten members who were separated from the world than a thousand such members. Come out from the lodge. Better one with God than a thousand without him. We must walk with God, and if only one or two go with us it is all right."—Address by Dwight L. Moody in Farwell Hall, Chicago, 1876.

"I belonged to two secret societies, and have bumped against nearly all of them, and know what I am talking about. Their sociability and benevolence may be all well enough; but they belong to the world. . . . . I have about made up my mind that the whole thing is of the world, and the enemy of God and his church Brethren, why don't you say Amen? You know I am telling the truth; and I pray that you may have grace to receive it in love, as I have spoken it. As Christ's disciples we can make no compromise with the world The friendship of the world is enmity against God."—From Bible reading, by L. W. Munhall, evangelist, on Separation, given Feb. 25, 1890, at Somerville, Mass.

COLLEGE ETHICS.

The opening lecture of President J. P. D. John, of De Pauw University, before the college students is one which is worthy of the broadest circulation. It is a stern criticism of the sentiment which so generally prevails among college students that a more elastic code of morals applies to the wearers of the cap and gown, and that municipal ordinances are in force only up to the college gate.

"Accurately speaking," said Dr. John, "the very theme is an absurdity.

"College ethics! We do not speak of college axioms, for an axiom is an axiom, in college or out of it. We do not speak of a college multiplication table, for five times five are twenty-five in the bank as well as in the shades of the academy. We do not speak of college gravitation, for a student falling from the college tower will strike the ground as hard as will the citizen who falls from the court-house spire. Gravitation simply asks the question how high is the fall? College ethics? College right angles! College parallel lines! The college north star!

"I have chosen this illogical combination from the fact that there is a sentiment generally prevalent among college men that the combination is not illogical, but that there is such a thing as college ethics.

TWO STANDARDS OF CONDUCT.

"Put in plain English, the sentiment which prevails in many colleges is this: To tell a lie is wrong on the street, but right in college. To cheat is wrong in the market, but right in college. To use personal violence is wrong in a saloon, but right in college. To boycott is wrong in Ireland, wrong even in the business circles of the United States, but right in a college. To destroy property is wrong in a cowboy but right in a college student. To take a bellowing calf up a man's stairway, through his attic and leave it upon his roof, half frightened to death, and half frightening to death the immediate neigbors, is wrong in a town boy, but right, even manly and honorable, in a college boy. To violate the golden rule is wrong in a heathen, but right in a Christian, provided the Christian happens to have his name on the college roll. The golden rule, so beautifully exemplified by the Divine Teacher, is binding upon the conscience of the pirate of the high seas; of the liquor seller, as the young man appears at the bar for his first drink; of the Indian with his tomahawk uplifted; of the gambler in his den of infamy—but forsooth this same golden rule was not made to measure the conscience of a Christian who has matriculated in a Christian college.

"Again, to restrain a man of his liberty without cause, and to add personal violence to this restraint, is wrong, even among savages; but to tie a young man to his bed post, to shave his head, to hang him until he chokes, to put him into a perspiration and then give him a shower-bath of ice water, to put him into his bed that has been saturated with water, and after all, to seal his lips with the threat of worse personal violence, or even death—this is only a huge joke. Such contemptible and criminal proceedings, it seems, is right or wrong according to the way we spell the work describing it. If we spell it as they do in the street, m-u-r-d-e-r, it is wrong; but it is all right, and a great joke, if we spell it as they do in some colleges, h-a-z-e."

Dr. John proceeds to handle without gloves the other prevalent college customs which tradition has led us to regard as privileged, and thus closes his argument:

"What is right in your college life, is right anywhere and everywhere. What is wrong anywhere else is wrong in college. The golden rule does not bend around a crooked college act. A foot is twelve inches in college and out of it. A pound is sixteen ounces in the store and in the class room. A dollar is a hundred cents on examination day, and it will be a hundred cents on the judgment day."—Christian Statesman.

"I would do almost anything in my power to help on the work of rescuing all Christian men from the 'grip' of Masonry and all other secret and un-Christian societies. I believe that Masonry is an incalculable evil and essentially anti-Christ in its principles and influence."—From Dr. George F. Pentecost's Letter to Conference of Christians on Secret Societies, Chicago, 1887.

NEW ENGLAND LETTER.

A new name for deacon—The mayorality contest—Evangelist Davis' speech and the anti-Romanist press—Shall New England fall under the rule of the lodge.

Elderly and even middle-aged people can remember when the office of deacon was held in high honor, and good men aspired to it believing what Paul wrote that "they that have used the office of a deacon well, purchase to themselves a good degree and great boldness in the faith which is in Christ Jesus." To those who still cling to this old-fashioned idea it must come with something of a shock to hear that in many of our stylish Congregational churches, the name is being dropped as if it was something to be ashamed of, and a more modern term, "ministration committee," substituted in its stead. The ridicule which has been heaped on deacons by fourth-rate wits does not altogether account for the change. It marks a period of spiritual declension when this sonorous old Greek word, made sacred by its universal use in the church for centuries, can be substituted for such a meaningless term as "ministration committee" without a shock to any truly devout mind. I say nothing of its outrageous violation of every canon of literary taste, or how it would sound to call Stephen, or Phillip, and other holy men who adorned the office in the ages of the primitive church, by such a title. Let us keep to the old Scripture terms. It is safe to say that the church that has grown too fashionable to retain them is a church that has compromised with the world and lost all her spiritual power over the hearts and souls of men.

The Prohibitionists of Boston have nominated a full city ticket. There is also a decrease of two thousand in the number of women voters registered, which would seem to indicate less enthusiasm than in the two previous years. While Mr. Matthews, the Democratic candidate, is a man of irreproachable character, his affinities and sympathies are all with the Romanist party, and his attitude towards our free schools may be judged from the fact that in a speech at the State House he called the deliverance of Boston from the prize-fighting, saloon-keeping oligarchy which had hitherto ruled it, "the most disgraceful page in that city's municipal history." The same women whose heroic efforts brought about this result in 1888 may have something to say in 1890 which will not be favorable to Mr. Matthews. The latter is, like Russel, quite a young man. This seems to be the case with the Democratic party leaders very generally, and it is asserted by some that this influx of young men into the Democratic ranks is owing to the Republican policy of reserving its honors for those who have been longer in the field. If so, it is only another proof that greed of office—not principle—is the controlling factor on both sides. Whether the choice of such Rehoboam-like counsellors will be any particular gain to the Democratic party remains to be seen.

How long will anti-Romanists continue to pat Masonry on the back, and bid for the support of a power that is own brother to Jesuitism? Evangelist W. F. Davis recently addressed a large audience in Music Hall on the subject of the papacy. Now everybody knows that Bro. Davis is "an all-around" man, and the word policy as used in the modern compromising sense is not in his dictionary; but why was he applauded whenever he touched Jesuitism, and his remarks on Masonry received with a silence that, to quote from F. O. Cunningham in Messiah's Herald, "spoke volumes?" The Woman's Voice did perhaps as well as could be expected, when, after remarking that "space did not allow a full report of the Anti-masonic portion of Mr. Davis' speech," it went on to—leave it out entirely. I trust that Mrs. Trask Hill has ere this read and considered the very able expose of her false position by Mr. A. Paull in a recent issue of the Independent Citizen of Providence. It is so exhaustive and convincing that it would seem as if nothing more could be said on the subject. But I fear that even this most forcible article, or a hundred like it, will not convince where there is so strong a disposition not to be convinced. The American reported his speech in full. The British-American Citizen reported only the anti-Romanist part, leaving out entirely, and without a word of mention, the Anti-masonic passages. Yet this same paper considers it a great grievance as well as gross injustice that the daily press of Boston pursues exactly the same tactics by refusing to report anti-Romanist meetings. The false and misleading statements contained in Sherman's Masonic address last winter in Music Hall the Citizen could find room for, but a denunciation of the anti-Republican and anti-Christian methods of the lodge, though from the lips of the man who has suffered a year's imprisonment for his anti-Romanist principles, it quietly "suppresses."

Boston's Board of Aldermen are thinking about passing a law to limit the heighth of buildings at the Hub. Perhaps it would be well for Chicago to do the same, as I notice that she is going to have a new Masonic building of twenty stories. The earthquake in the Mississippi valley in 1812 occurred when there was little or no population, and the few settlers lived in log cabins, yet the traditions which have come down to us of its horrors, when even the graveyard at New Madrid, with all its sleeping inhabitants, was precipitated into the river, and large lakes many miles in extent were made in an hour, are enough to cause a shiver at the thought of such Babel-like structures. Though eighty years have elapsed since the catastrophe to which I allude took place, with the Charleston earthquake still fresh in our memory, we cannot safely predicate for any part of our country absolute immunity from such terrible visitations.

New England is passing through a crucial period. Shall she continue New England with all the name implies? As the glory of ancient Israel was dimmed, and finally went out in darkness through the reign of false worships, so will hers if her sons and daughters are not awakened to the danger. Shall she be left with only the traditions of her past? Shall the lodge have the flower of her manhood, and the churches of Christ dwindle and die in its parasitic embrace? Who will come forward to the help of the Lord against the mighty, and with their prayers and their pocket-books sustain our noble standard-bearer, in this to human view, most unequal conflict? God hath need of such to-day. Now is the time to show that the true New England spirit is not dead; that she has yet her Gideon's band, with One for a Captain and Leader before whom all the forces of Baal shall become, when he once makes bare his arm, as the chaff of the summer threshing floor. ELIZABETH E. FLAGG.

REFORM NEWS.

WHAT MUST BE IN NEW ENGLAND.

BOSTON, Nov. 25, 1890.

DEAR BRETHREN OF NEW ENGLAND:—Suffer a few plain words from your fellow-laborer. I do not write to "kill time" or to amuse those who read, but to state facts that ought to, and I trust will, stir your hearts.

In 1880 the National Christian Association had the first and third degrees of Freemasonry publicly worked in Music Hall, Boston, by Past Master Edmond Ronayne, of Keystone Lodge, 639, Chicago. The city was stirred and the good results of those meetings remain to this hour. The people, as a rule, were not prepared to accept kindly such a vigorous presentation of the subject, and a reaction followed. It was too strong meat for babes to digest.

In December, 1889, the N. C. A. held a convention in Tremont Temple, at which the lodge system was discussed by some of the ablest men in the nation and a spirit of inquiry awakened, less demonstrative, but more permanent than in the convention of 1880. The Board of N. C. A. directors sent me here in January, 1890, to continue the work, and supplemented contributions on the field, so as to furnish a salary at the rate of $1,000 per year until July 1, when this arrangement ceased. Since that date subscriptions taken for the Cynosure, given by the N. C. A., and the voluntary offerings of friends have been our sole reliance for daily bread, and for the tract work and other necessary expenses. Mrs. Stoddard and myself have lived day by day on the fulfilled promises of God, and have no regrets or murmurings for the past, but thanksgiving and praise alone for blessings "new every morning and fresh every evening." The great need there was an enlightened conscience and an intelligent understanding of the lodge; to know how it works and what it does. Both Mrs. Stoddard and myself began with the A B C of the system and have been building from the foundation. The Home Guard and tracts have pioneered the way for the Cynosure and parlor meetings, and we are reaching out to meetings of larger dimensions than can be accommodated in private houses. The nearly one hundred copies of the Cynosure now read weekly in and about Boston are doing a grand educational work. The approaching annual meeting is approved and will, God willing, be attended by such pastors and evangelists as Gordon, Gifford, Grant, Gray, Foster, Darst, Edmunds, Johnston, Hood, Davis, Cunningham, and others who will speak freely or as opportunity may offer. A still larger number of Christian workers from abroad expect to add their presence and weight to the meeting. The ministry of New England orthodox churches, with few exceptions, are opposed to the lodge; but many are perplexed to know how to overcome an evil they greatly deplore. The New England work has, or will soon reach a crisis, and it remains for the friends to say whether it shall go forward or backward. To push it forward will require prayer, effort and sacrifice, but neglect will certainly produce disastrous effects.

It is in your power, dear friends, to make the annual meeting, Dec. 16 and 17, the first in a series of grand victories in the coming year, if you will. But if you take little interest, make no sacrifice, have no heart in the work, no faith in God; and have before you the fear of the lodge, and in you the love of the world, you may expect to see the work of spiritual desolation and death march on unrebuked; and do not flatter yourselves that you will escape, when He shall "make inquisition for blood." God, in his divine ordering, has set before the Christian people in New England the success or failure of this cause for years to come. Its decision involves the question whether the lodges or the prayer-meetings, whether Satan or Christ shall have the young manhood of the New England States. If any are too cowardly to fight the good fight of faith, or too indifferent to the welfare of the church and the nation to make sacrifices or offerings of service or money, let them remain silent at home; but let the Davids and Deborahs, who have faith in the God of battles, come with their pebbles and their slings, and let us pray and sing discomfiture into the camp of the Midianitish host, and convince even "the uncircumcised in heart" that the God of Israel is in New England, even unto this day. "Who is on the Lord's side," let him show his faith by his works. Your fellow-servant among the anti-secretists, J. P. STODDARD.

THE N. C. A. COLLEGE AGENT IN KENTUCKY.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Nov. 22, 1890.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—I reached Louisville, Ky., on the 11th inst., having traveled all day by the Monon route from Chicago. The sky was perfectly clear when we started, but we ran under a cloud before we were half way, and arrived in a heavy rain. Louisville is said to contain 150,000 inhabitants, and Jeffersonville and New Albany are very near together, although they were formerly seven miles apart. The three cities are connected by bridge and railroads, and you can cross the river and ride to almost any part of them for a nickel.

In the summer of 1834, I spent a part of my vacation in missionary work at New Albany; and gathered also into a day school twenty-three colored pupils. Now, I looked in vain for the little empty store room that was used in our work, or the village tavern where I stayed. I could not ascertain the spot, even, where they stood.

On Friday I addressed the faculty and students of the State University, and my address was well received by an audience of 200 in the chapel. I made arrangements to donate them a five dollar library, which the dean, Prof. D. F. Sneed, said would be very acceptable.

Afterwards I called on Dr. Broadus, president of the Baptist University, who said he was too much occupied to give me a hearing. So I looked up the Plymouth Congregational church and found that Rev. G. M. McClellan, the pastor, was in Hartford, Conn., finishing his course in theology. A student of State University who is pastor pro tem invited me to preach there on Sabbath morning, which I did. The day was dark and rainy and the congregation was not all out; but we had a very pleasant time and a good Sabbath-school.

In the afternoon I addressed a large mission Sabbath-school which is sustained by the United Presbyterian church; and most of the classes are taught by its members. It is a Christ-like enterprise and appears to be very successful.

On Monday I visited the Southern penitentiary of Indiana in Jeffersonville, and called on the chaplain. He took me through the immense structures, the chapel capable of seating 700, the work shops, the library, and the hospital, where the doctor was treating four patients at the time. I distributed some tracts; but the chaplain did not want any anti-secrecy books in the library.

On Tuesday I went out to Henry county, Ky., and visited Eminence College, which is under the care of Pres. W. S. Giltner. He told me they had no secret societies in the college, and they would gladly receive and use our anti-secrecy volumes. The next day I visited Shelbyville, but found nothing but a girls' school, and a few young ladies in a Normal class; and finding no opening for reform work I came on to Lexington.

S. F. PORTER.

THANKSGIVING IN WASHINGTON.

WASHINGTON, D. C.,
Thanksgiving Day, 1890.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—This morning, as the church bells were calling to the courts of praise and thanksgiving, a few white men dressed in Knights Templar garb, with trump and drum paraded Pennsylvania Avenue. As if not to be outdone by their white enemies (I say enemies, for the white lodgers exclude the colored from their secret conclaves), a company of colored secret society enthusiasts, arrayed with the usual play things calculated to attract the eye and tickle the ear of ignorance and superstition, have just passed. While beholding their display of vanity, I thought of the Pilgrim Fathers, and wondered what they would have said of such follies had they occurred while they were raising their hearts and voices in thanksgiving to God for his wonderful deliverance.

Going to the bakery for bread this morning I was told there was none to be had. On inquiring the reason, I was told the Bakers' Union had a ball last night, and they were all too drunk to bake this morning. I found some later, baked by non-union men. These are the men that are organized to protect themselves against the cruel capitalists! Are not their stomachs treated much worse than the capitalists treat them, if the baker's story is true?

I heard Dr. Corey, pastor of the Metropolitan M. E. Church, this morning. His discourse was studied and thought-compelling. He spoke, of course, of the great attainments and possibilities of our people. His clear and forcible address held the undivided attention of his audience for more than an hour. As he is not thought to be a reformer, and I am, it is but natural for me to criticize many statements which he made. He said the Negro problem,—what shall be done in the South? and the immigration problem,—what shall we do with the thirteen million from foreign lands? were two great problems to be settled. I do not consider either as problems. The colored people are here to stay. As Mrs. Lathrop says, "Much of the best American blood flows in their veins." If the white people treat them as they should they will let them stay.

I called at the home of a colored friend yesterday, and the mother came to the door carrying in her arms her baby weighing fifteen pounds, and yet less than a month old. If ease and luxury kill off the whites and the colored take the land, they can blame none but themselves. There is no problem about it. It's plain on the face; and the sooner our clergy and Congressmen stop worrying about the Southern problem, and turn their attention to the lodge and saloon,

THE BETTER WILL IT BE FOR THE COUNTRY!

My work of the week past has been much as former weeks. New names have been added to the Cynosure list and addresses given. Sabbath afternoon I addressed a young people's society in the First Colored Baptist Church of Georgetown. In the evening I spoke to Dr. Stewart's people, corner M and 10th streets, N. W. The best of attention was given and it is believed good was accomplished. Rev. Alexander and Dr. Stewart both expressed themselves as opposed to the lodge. I have three appointments for next Sabbath.

On coming out of Rev. Alexander's church I saw three men talking, and soon found one was much offended at what I had said. He said he thought I was crooked; I was talking about something I knew nothing about, etc. I expressed a willingness to learn if he had any knowledge to impart. He inquired if I knew who preserved the Bible, or some question of that kind. He asked if I had never read in the Bible where twenty thousand Knights Templars went to preserve the life of Paul. I offered a reward if he would show me the place. He has not yet found it. It seems strange that people living in this age can believe such fables. But we have to take things as they are and try and make them better.

This has been a pleasant day to me. I have thought much of my dear grandmothers, who have both gone home during the year past,—my father's mother having just passed to the further shore. Eternity alone will reveal what their lives here have accomplished. Truly I have reason for thanksgiving that I have been favored with grandparents whose names will be remembered as "blessed." W. B. STODDARD.

CORRESPONDENCE.

THE MASONIC OATH NOT THE WHOLE OF MASONRY.

THOMPSON, Pa.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—I have read with much interest and profit Bro. Ronayne's article, "The Vulnerable Point in Masonry." While his words are full of force and importance, I was impressed that from another standpoint some of his statements are liable to mislead. Doubtless there is a very large class of people who care nothing whether Masonry is Christless or not, unless they prefer it should be so. Whether that class is larger than another class who hold that Masonry is not a Christ-excluding religion; that it is nearly or quite as good as Christianity, if not a modification of it, I am not able to say. Of one thing I am convinced, that there are tens of thousands who if convinced that Masonry antagonizes Christianity at every point, as we know it does, such knowledge would keep them out of the lodge. They are in a measure educated into Christianity, but not sufficiently in that and in Masonry to see and weigh the contrast between the two systems.

If I mistake not here, there is no more vulnerable point than the one in question. An infidel Mason would prefer the system to be what it is, radically anti-Christian; but he knows very well that men go into the lodge by being deceived as to its real character, and that the best part of its membership is decoyed into the lodge by the plea of "good men," Christians, and ministers of the Gospel, in the folds of lodgery.

Masons are sharp enough to see that if that part of their recruits drawn from the Christian folds are kept out by correct views of the subject, the most reliable of their members would be wanting. Masons are shrewd enough to see that without the redeeming elements decoyed into their ranks they would soon become obnoxious to Christendom and rot down in their infidelity and treason toward God and society.

That the mode of attack recommended by Bro. R. is a strong one, and important, cannot be doubted, but it seems to me that the thousands who do care whether Masonry is Christian, semi-Christian, or infidelity, unmitigated anti-Christ, are the people to look after for reasons paramount to all others.

Only for this impression would I submit these suggestions to our able and dear brother, Ronayne, and to your readers. I have no desire to even seem to controvert the article in Cynosure of the 13th inst. I am quite familiar with his able work for the great Master. God bless him.

NATHAN CALLENDER.

BRO. DAVIDSON REAPING IN JOY.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Nov. 20th, 1890.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—I left the city on Nov. 5th, and visited and preached at the following places: Plaquemine, Fordoche, New Texas, Raccourci, West Melville, Alexandria and Boyce, La. I find that my visit to those places two years ago has not been forgotten, nor has it been without some good results. I found the old lodge hatred toward me in these places had somewhat died out, and many who looked at me with contempt and scorn two years ago shook cordial hands this time. Among them was a young man, P. G. M. C. and N. J. of the G. U. O. I. F. This young man I found in bed sick. He cordially received me and said he was ever looking to Jesus. The Cynosure has done much to strengthen the cause of righteousness and impede the progress of lodge iniquity. I think the N. C. A. would do well to place an agent in the field steadily in these parts.

I succeeded in a few days on my journey to raise over $27 to help my church, more than I collected in twelve months two years ago on the same field of labor. This alone is good evidence of a decrease of the lodge prejudice, when it is to be remembered that I distributed both books and tracts exposing the lodge. Your readers have already heard of my troubles in my church here because of lodge persecution, but God has helped me, and there is not one secretist left in my church. I ask the friends to pray for me, and if they can render me any assistance it will be cheerfully received. Yours in the work,

FRANCIS J. DAVIDSON.

A GOOD LESSON TO STUDY OFTEN.

KINNEY'S CORNERS, N. Y., Nov. 17, 1890.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—I have been much benefited for many years by the precepts and examples of many who have written articles for this paper. May God bless them for it, and may he increase the number who are willing to stand up and be counted as being straight up and down for Christ and his cause at all hazards.

Let the late lesson about the Crucifixion be studied again by us with care and much praying. Are we willing to be crucified with Christ as was Paul? If we would save others, it may be necessary for us to give up our own lives, or at least all earthly things, and be willing to follow him without the camp bearing his reproach.

Brethren, we can afford to do it. If we be endued with power from on high, we shall find peace and joy in doing the work that we feel called to do by the leadings of the Spirit. A man has got to be devoted and consecrated to the work to face the gigantic evil of Masonry; and, by helping to expose its snares and delusions, do something to keep it from making new victims.

I believe we are gaining ground in the fight, and that the Cynosure and other papers should be circulated by tens of thousands. Ignorance has much to do with the indifference of many in this matter. If they had the case fully presented to them, let us hope they would become aroused and do their whole duty. F. A. ARMSTRONG.

THE WISCONSIN ELECTION.

WAUPUN, Wis.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—The world still moves on, and so does the spirit of reform. Although our much desired school law has been defeated, may we not hope for a national law that shall require the children of these United States to understand the national language, and to be instructed in Uncle Sam's schools sufficiently to understand the Constitution of the United States, and transact business by use of the English language; and to know to what government they belong, and to what government they may look for protection from all foreign and home tyranny; to learn that they are free men and free women; to learn the true meaning of liberty; to know that they have a lawful as well as a God-given right to own and read their Bibles; and to know that they may pray directly to God himself for forgiveness of sin, which if they confess and forsake they will receive pardon? Let our children know that if the priest knocks their parents' heads with a cane or any other weapon in order to extort money from them, which the pressing wants of the family demand, he is amenable to the law; that their necks are not to be trodden under the feet of priest, pope or any other creature, unless they like imbeciles place them there themselves; that true loyalty is due to God, and to his government, to truth, to liberty.

We hope that safe laws will yet be enacted. "Truth crushed to earth shall rise again." The law has been defeated by selfish, crafty politicians, designing priests, liquor rings and ignorant Roman Catholics, which constitute the body of the Democratic party. It was called "the compulsory school law." It ought to have been called the protective school law.

Two weeks ago Mr. Hawks, a young gentleman from Chicago, preached Sabbath morning in the Free Baptist church from the text, "Thou shalt have no other gods before me." Monday and Tuesday evenings he spoke on Romanism at the same place to attentive listeners, who were able to appreciate and give verbal reports of the lectures. It is said that at the last election here which followed the lecture so soon, one young Roman Catholic, when told by the priest that he would go to hell if he voted the Republican ticket, replied, "Hell it is then; I shall vote the Republican ticket." Mr. Hawks is a good speaker, well versed in history, and brought forth facts that all American citizens should know. He is fearless and independent, a clear thinker, a good reasoner and well understands his subject, and should be sustained by all true friends of liberty. He is now contemplating starting an anti-Catholic paper in Hillsdale, Mich. Let all who believe in reform, act and not be silent. In the days of slavery Oberlin sent up a great anti-slavery light which could not be darkened or overcome.

Wheaton has raised another light to melt away the powers of darkness. It may be for Hillsdale to raise another mighty flame that shall consume a blighting Jesuit power. Let us all over the country help to feed those heaven-born flames of light. And from Berea, Ky., comes the Reunion. Let us read and pray as our Saviour prayed.

MRS. L. C. ANDREWS.

PITH AND POINT.

DEAR MOTHER HAVILAND CANNOT EXPLAIN THIS CONTRADICTION.

It is a mystery I cannot understand, how Christians and ministers of the Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ, can fore-swear themselves by taking illegal, DEATH-PENALTY oaths, originated in heathen darkness, and taken from sun worshipers. How they can trust a false religion in the left hand, and hold the true in the right, in which they profess a living faith! It is a problem hard for me to solve. Yours for the pure and spotless church of the Lord Jesus Christ.—LAURA S. HAVILAND.

A MAN WORTH SEEING.

I thank God that he has raised up a man and placed him in the judiciary of the United States, like Justice Field, who has in his late decision in reversing the decision of the court of California, placed the saloon-keeper with his saloon in the category of evils to be hedged in by law, as we in the country hedge in with steel-barbed wire, a vicious beast that cannot be trusted to run at large. I would be glad to look upon a picture of Justice Field in your excellent paper, but would not dictate to you.—S. KIRKPATRICK, Waterman, Ill.

A BROTHER EDITOR'S BLESSING.

Boldly and fearlessly attacking and fighting the Prince of Darkness in his strongholds, the anti-Christian secret societies, these most deadly enemies of the Christian religion and of all civil and religious liberties, I earnestly pray to the Lord our God, that he may evermore crown your efforts with success, through the grace of Jesus Christ, our only and most blessed Saviour.—(Rev.) WM. WEINBACH, Sebringville, Ont.

A FIRE AMONG THE SOUTHERN LODGES.

I don't know how I could do without the Christian Cynosure in my family. I have ever striven against all secret orders and have done all in my power to put them down. In my settlement, far and near, the Christian Cynosure has been a burning fire among all secret societies. I have spent much time in sending and carrying papers among my friends, and desire to do more for the paper than I am physically able.—(Rev.) AUSTIN CURTIS, Clito, Ga.

GOOD WORDS.

You may stop my bread and butter, but don't stop the paper. I think it is the paper that will do good if supported. I am only sorry that I cannot send you more. I am, however, working up subscribers, and have the promise of some; but it is hard to get any in such a lodge-ridden place as this. I will never give it up. Try! try again!—GEO. OLIVE, Santa Cruz, Cal.

I am trying to do a little for the good cause by distributing your tracts, and I let my neighbors read the Cynosure. Here, in South Dakota, there are a few of our ministers who would like very much to take the paper, but are too poor. The Lord bless you, dear brethren, in your good work.—L. H. NOREM, Sioux Falls, S. D.

The Cynosure is a great feast for me, though I am 84 years old.—G. J. GRAHAM.

There are often letters from members of our Cynosure family which breathe an encouraging spirit, but from which extracts cannot easily be taken. Thus Elder Barlow writing from his home in Bloomington, Wis., for the Cynosure to be sent to a friend, says of him that he was beset last summer by grangers and Masons to join them. He had nearly consented. "Of course," writes Bro. Barlow, "I discouraged this; and requested him to wait until I could send him from your office the Grange Ritual and Ronayne's Exposes, which I did. He is cured; and I have advised his taking the Cynosure."

A WOMAN'S EXAMPLE.

A good woman, whose testimony for Christ we are sure has influence with those about her, writes from South Dakota paying for her paper for two years. She apologizes for a little delay, saying, "I have so much to do and think of, I am trying to do the work for twelve with no help except what the men help me." And yet though so full of care and labor, she adds, "I will try to get some new subscribers." God bless such a worker! We know he must remember and reward her. Are there not some other good women who can have equal zeal for God's work?

PASSING AWAY.

Yet another, a faithful wife, writes from Pennsylvania and from the side of a dying husband: "It is with the deepest regret that I write to you that I cannot take the Christian Cynosure another year. We have read together every paper by course for many years and appreciated its worth." The dying one is resigned to the will of God, and looks forward to his reward with confidence. God be thanked for such consolation to the wife and friends at his side.

LITERATURE.

THE POETICAL WORKS OF JONATHAN W. MOSS. The gentleman whose handsomely engraved portrait forms the frontispiece of this elegant volume is one of the steadfast supporters of our reform in West Virginia. The readers of the Cynosure are somewhat acquainted with his vigorous and earnest prose, if they have never read his poems. This work is a fine volume of 230 pages handsomely printed and finely illustrated, a large number of the engravings having been made especially for it. The writing manifests strong sense and an earnest adherence to moral rectitude, in opposition to priest-craft, or the dissimulations of false theorists in religion, as well as to the grosser sins of intemperance and tobacco using. "Lovegood's Army" gives Mr. Moss's idea regarding the conduct of moral reforms, that there should be no parleying with cowardice or indecision, but that the battle should be joined without delay in the name of Him who ever conquers. We do not know that the volume is on sale, as it seems rather to be a private enterprise of the author.

The current Scribner's Magazine is a holiday number. Some popular names are in the list of writers, but on the whole the number will fall short of the popular interest awakened by some excellent late issues. There are several short stories of more or less interest. One of them represents a long sentimental conversation carried on by an engineer and fireman of an express train running fifty miles an hour. The humor of it is that men would talk of love and disappointment in shouting tones so as to make each other heard. Sir Edwin Arnold, whose Oriental poetry is famous, writes on Japan, the first of a series of papers. William H. Rideing, editor of Youth's Companion, writes entertainingly of the old castles of Kenilworth and Warwick; and an article on Neapolitan art sketches the painter Morelli.

S. Brainard's Sons Company publish a song service with responsive readings commemorative of the birth of the Saviour, composed by Mr. Robert L. Fletcher, a gentleman who has in the intervals of business cultivated an excellent musical taste. Though ostensibly prepared for the popular "Christ-mass" season, there is nothing in words or music to prevent their use either during the actual season of the year when Christ was probably born, or at any time; for taking the Scripture together the followers of Jesus must daily rejoice in his birth into human form and human temptations and not set aside a day for a celebration of it to please "the world, the flesh," and above all the devil.

The Pilgrim's Progress Company is a unique business title. A publishing firm in this city has adopted it. They issue the immortal work of the Bedford tinker in a remarkably neat and inexpensive form for ten cents a copy. Their edition of 25,000 is claimed to be the best and only illustrated pocket edition of the Pilgrim's Progress. It is well adapted for general circulation in our Sabbath schools and would be a good substitute for some of the trash that has found its way to their hands.

SECRET SOCIETIES CONDEMNED

BY GREAT MEN IN THE CHURCH.

REV. LEONARD BACON, D. D.—Wishing you good success in your war against secret societies.

REV. B. P. AYDELDOTTE, D.D., former president of Woodward College, O., (a renouncing Mason):—Freemasonry is a lie all over.

REV. JUSTIN EDWARDS, D D., author and head of Andover Seminary:—Whenever the cause of temperance is veiled in darkness and secrecy, it must lose its hold on the public confidence and sympathy.

REV. M. BENNETT, long presiding elder M. E. church—I am pleased to be counted in for the movement which is being inaugurated against tyrannical organizations and factitious distinctions in society.

DR. THOMAS SCOTT, the great commentator:—Rash oaths are above all things to be avoided; but if men are entangled by them, they ought rather to infringe the sinful oaths than to add sin to sin and ruin to their own souls.

REV. J. C. K. MILLIGAN, editor of "Our Banner:"—Through such silence, secret connivance and horrid oaths "ever to conceal and never reveal," the state of our country is rapidly becoming such as to alarm every Christian philanthropist.

REV. B. T. ROBERTS, editor of the Free Methodist:—For us to keep silent respecting Masonry, and thus tacitly endorse the idea that a man can both accept Christ and deny him—that is, be a good Mason and a good Christian at the same time, would be treason to Christ.

JOHN G. FEE, Berea College, 1868.—It is Freemasonry, Odd-fellowship and kindred associations that have spawned and now lend respectability to "Regulators," "Ku Klux Klans," and other bands of midnight assassins now ranging through Kentucky and other portions of the South.

REV. J. P. LYTLE, D. D.:—Masonry has damned all who ever trusted in it for salvation. It is now leading away thousands from the church, and from paths of virtue by association with the intemperate, unclean and profane, and is dragging them down the road which leads to the chambers of eternal death.

REV. EDWARD BEECHER, D.D.:—If on such anti-Christian grounds, prayers are framed, rites established and chaplains appointed, ignoring Christ and his intercession, God regards it as a mockery and an insult to himself and his church. In it is revealed the hatred of Satan to Christ. By it Christ is dethroned and Satan exalted.

REV. W. W. PATTON, D. D., 1869:—However secret societies may differ among themselves, yet they are all anti-republican in their tendencies; and are all leading to the same results, viz., a substitution of worldly and selfish innovations for moral and religious influences, and, ultimately, to the theoretical and practical neutralization of Christianity.

REV. JAMES H. FAIRCHILD, D.D., Pittsburg address:—The point is not that the working of a secret organization may be perverted to selfish ends, but that in its very nature it strongly tends to such perversion. A worthy institution may be perverted, but an institution in which the tendency to perversion is inherent and constitutional, is not a good institution.

REV. DR. JAMES. B. WALKER, author of "Philosophy of the Plan of Salvation."—There is probably not one in a thousand who enter the lodge, who know, when blindfolded they take the terrible oaths, that Masonry is an anti-Christ and one of the most powerful enemies of Christ that exists. But this is put beyond the possibility of a doubt by the highest Masonic authorities.

REV. NATHAN BROWN, Editor "Am. Baptist" and missionary to Japan.—If Freemasonry had existed in the days of Christ, and in the same form that it exists with us, he could not have condemned it more distinctly than he did in his Sermon on the Mount: "If ye do good to them that do good to you, what do ye more than others? Do not even the publicans the same?" The Gospel is at war with every system of clique or clan, caste or combination that seeks to create distinctions in the human family.

JOSEPH COOK:—I do abhor the selfish, clannish spirit of secret societies.

WILLIAM OTTERBEIN, founder of the church of the United Brethren in Christ:—A Freemason cannot be a Christian.

BISHOP WARBURTON:—Each of the heathen gods, beside the worship paid to him in public, had a secret worship to which none were admitted but those who were prepared by previous ceremonies.

RICHARD S. STORRS, D. D., pastor of the Church of the Pilgrims, Brooklyn.—My judgment and feeling are both strongly opposed to the secret lodge system. I heartily agree with what Dr. Howard Crosby has so forcibly said about it.

CARDINAL MCCABE, Dublin:—Secret societies, which seem to possess a fatal charm for our people, have from time to time drawn thousands of misguided youths within the fatal circle from which there is no escape.

REV. LEBBEUS ARMSTRONG:—Among the various stratagems of Satan in opposition to God and holiness, and for the purpose of destroying the souls of men, the institution of speculative Freemasonry holds a pre-eminent rank.

HENRY G. LUDLOW, pastor Spring St. Presbyterian Church, New York, 1829:—I can hardly think that any candid and intelligent Master Mason can seriously assert that Masonry should be kept up. For my own part I have ever been disgusted with its nonsensical ceremonies, and ashamed of myself for submitting to them.

GEORGE F. PENTECOST, D, D., pastor of Tompkins Avenue Congregational church, Brooklyn, editor of "Words and Weapons."—I would do almost anything in my power to help on the work of rescuing all Christian men from the "grip" of Masonry and all other secret and unchristian societies. I believe that Masonry is an incalculable evil and essentially anti-Christ in its principles and influence.

H. L. HASTINGS.—Freemasonry is the one institution of this country that will not bear investigation. Schools are inspected; churches throw their doors open and invite the strictest scrutiny; political parties are examined, searched and riddled if anything like corruptness is seen or suspected in connection with them; all these institutions simply ask a fair field and no favor.

REV. J. E. ROY, D. D., Secretary American Missionary Association:—A man is not fit to be a juryman who has taken these Masonic oaths and holds to them. Such a man is not competent to be a constable or a justice of the peace. He has disqualified himself practically and really, for he has by these oaths perjured himself for the one side or the other, and so is unable to do justly in his official relation between man and man.

REV. JAMES H. BROOKES, D. D, editor of the "Truth," and pastor of Washington Avenue Presbyterian church St Louis:—It would give me pleasure to aid you in your work of seeking to bring Christians out from entangling alliances with secret societies. It seems to me that the positive injunction of the Holy Ghost, "Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers," applies particularly to those disciples of our Lord who have been led into such societies.

THE BISHOP OF BIRMINGHAM, ENGLAND:—Freemasonry is built upon the basis of a natural religion having for its foundation the honor and worship of the Supreme Architect of the Universe, but excluding the divine Incarnation and the mysteries of human redemption. Whilst using the sacred Scriptures, as Freemasonry it ignores the divine doctrines of the Christian faith. Pretending to a special and progressive illumination, it resembles, and through several of its writers even claims descent from the secret societies of Pagan Egypt, Greece and Samothrace.

REV. HENRY JONES:—On what then does the whole superstructure of Freemasonry rest but a base fabrication of wicked men, who in some dark and apostate age of the world, have risen up, united into a secret society and darkly handed down their inventions to flatter us to believe that their institution is good as having originated among wise and good men; and being ignorant of the manner in which their false pretensions would be exposed, have told us that it was established on certain specified facts and events, which by looking at them carefully, and comparing them with our Bible, we find never had existence?

Sermon on Odd-fellowship and other secret societies, by Rev. J. Sarver, pastor Evangelical Lutheran church. This is a very clear argument against secretism of all forms, and the duty to disfellowship Odd-fellows, Freemasons, Knights of Pythias and Grangers, is clearly shown by their confessed character as found in their own publications. 10cts each.

The Christian Cynosure.

J. BLANCHARD, EDITOR.
HENRY L. KELLOGG, ASSOCIATE EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, DECEMBER 4, 1890.

THE EXPERIENCE AND TESTIMONY of Oberlin College could not be omitted from such a discussion of the college secret societies as is now appearing in our columns. The three dates about cover the time during which the secret society question has been prominently before the American people. But before this date President Finney had begun in the New York Independent that remarkable series of articles on the mother of American secret societies—Freemasonry, which were refused after a few numbers had appeared, and were soon after published in his well-known book. Before this time also the First Congregational Church of Oberlin, of which Mr. Finney was so long pastor, took action excluding members of secret societies from its communion. Next week we hope to give to Dr. Howard Crosby of New York.

AFTER ELECTION is always a good time to pick up the threads of work undone or hastily dropped at the call of party or other public interest. Congress met Monday and listened to the President's message.

Dear Cynosure readers, we have a message for you. Only four weeks remain of 1890. We made a request of each of you some time since that you find us another reader beside yourself whose name should go on our subscription list. That request seemed a reasonable one to us in the circumstances. Did it not to you? Now we should be glad indeed, if you would respond to that conviction of reasonableness and find that one new reader during this December month. It is a good month to work in, and there is much business a Christian man or woman might do which would not so much promote the kingdom of Christ by far as to increase the circulation of the Cynosure.

SIGNS OF CHRIST'S COMING.

JEWS AND CHRISTIANS MEET.

November 24th and 25th witnessed four extraordinary meetings, afternoon and evening of Monday and Tuesday in the First M. E. Church of this city. They were meetings of Jews and Christians for conference. If any such meetings were ever held before, we know not when or where. Jewish Rabbis and Christian ministers were the speakers.

One leading Chicago Rabbi warned the Israelites to keep away, through the public prints, and others spoke against it in private. But the large attendance exceeded the expectations and hopes of those who favored the meetings, and Jews asked Christians at the close, "When will we have another such a meeting?"

Dr. Goodwin's opening speech excelled all we have before heard from him in power and research. He read Moses' predictions of the dispersion and persecutions of the Jews and gave the history of their fulfillment down the ages, so literal and exact that the prophecy seemed like a history of their sufferings written on sight. And he showed from personal inspection and observation that Palestine is a ruin and a monument; once populous and rolling in wealth, and now given up to jackals, wolves, owls and Arabs. Its decay

"Has dried up realms to deserts."

And the cause of this three thousand years of agony foretold by prophets is the forsaking of God's worship and worsiphing devils. (Deut. 32: 17.) They sacrificed unto devils, not to God. And "when the Lord saw it, he abhorred them." (v. 19.)

Yet the Rabbi who made the sweetest, most eloquent and learned speech of the Israelites, lately assured the writer that he had taken the first degree in Masonry, which swears the candidate to consent to have his throat cut if he tells what is done or said in the lodge; and it is as clear devil-worship as ever was offered to Moloch or Dagon. Chicago Jews are being rapidly swept into the lodge. We predict they will not stay there.

The Rabbis were all learned and eloquent, and were warmly applauded. One thing they lacked, however; that is a Saviour. They have abolished their priesthood and sacrifices, and now have to deal directly with the Infinite and Holy God. They are situated like Job before he "knew" that his Redeemer lived, and that he should see him. They have no days-man between them to lay his hand on both. This leaves them terribly ignorant of the New Testament. Rabbi Stoltz said Christ never "spoke of himself as the Son of God." If this were true, it were of no moment. Men and devils called him the "Son of God" between thirty and forty times, and he never corrected them. His enemies said "he made himself the Son of God," and he did not deny it, though for that they were about to kill him. He addressed God as his "Father" with whom he "had been in glory before the world was;" and the angel told his mother, "He shall be called the Son of God" (Luke 1: 35). Christ claimed to fulfill those predictions; and when he was twelve years old he said to his parents, "Wist ye not that I must be about my father's business?" (Luke 2: 49) thus claiming directly that God was his father. These are but fragments of proof that he spoke of himself as the Son of God.

Then again, the same speaker says the Jews did not crucify Christ, but the Romans; and he says "the New Testament affirms this in the most unequivocal language." This is far the worst thing this amiable Rabbi said. Peter said to the Jews, "Whom ye slew and hanged on a tree." The Jews said, "We have a law, and by our law he ought to die." Pilate declared him innocent of treason to Cæsar; and how dares this Rabbi say "it was an execution for political treason!!" and that "the New Testament affirms it!" When the New Testament says Pilate acquitted him of their charges of treason and blasphemy, declared him innocent and wished to release him; but the Jews, priests and people, declared that Pilate would be guilty of treason if he let him go; and clamored for Barabbas, when Pilate stated his purpose to release Jesus. May the God of this brother open his eyes. No; the blood of that Jesus has been on them and their children for near two thousand years. Nothing else explains the history of the Jews, which is an exception to that of the human race! Let this brother do as did Nehemiah and Daniel. Let us, said they, confess "our sins, and the sins of our fathers." His learned and excellent speech shows the teachings of Moses and Christ to be one; and Moses "spake of him." The time is at hand when "all Israel shall be saved." Let us love and pray till it come, and the world's salvation with it.

THE MISSIONARY BOARDS AND THE SECRET LODGES.

The secretaries of missionary societies, employing some three thousand missionaries, have lately been asked to forward Joseph Cook's address, urging that adhering Freemasons and others who take disloyal secret oaths be disfellowshiped by all churches, to each missionary in their employ. The results thus far are as below:

Dr. James Tompkins, Secretary of the Illinois Home Missionary Society, has received sixty copies of the address, which he sends to the sixty missionaries in his field.

Dr. A. J. Gordon writes as follows:

DEAR BROTHER BLANCHARD:—I should be glad to have the pamphlet by Joseph Cook, on "Disloyal Secret Oaths," in the hands of every missionary and minister in the United States. It is time our Christian pastors led the people in this matter. You may use my name to this effect. Cordially yours,
A. J. GORDON.
Boston, Sept. 23, '90.

Rev. Dr. Morchouse, Secretary of the American Baptist Home Missionary Union, promised to send Mr. Cook's address to the eight hundred Baptist home missionaries.

The Faculty of Chicago Theological Seminary adopted the following approval:

CHICAGO THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY, Oct. 27, '90.
The Faculty of Chicago Theological Seminary are of the opinion that the address of Joseph Cook on Disloyal Secret Oaths would be of service to every home missionary in our country.
Sec'y of the Faculty.

From Secretary Bliss, of the New West Commission:

I favor sending copies to each of the "New West Commission."
CHARLES R. BLISS, Secretary.

There are seventy of these teachers, most of them in Utah. Secretary J. E. Roy, representing the American Missonary Association, writes:

I shall be glad to have Joseph Cook's address on Disloyal Secret Oaths furnished to every missionary preacher and teacher of the American Missionary Association.
JOS. E. ROY, Western Sec'y.

Dr. Strieby, Secretary of the A. M. A., favors sending Mr. Cook's address to missionaries. He represents five hundred. Drs. Clark and Kincaid, of the old American Home Missionary Society (1,700 missionaries), are written to on the subject. Other secretaries will be addressed, and copies of Mr. Cook's speech will be furnished for missionaries gratis from the office of the National Christian Association, No. 221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill. (See page 3 of this paper.)

THE MORMOMS—PROGRESS.

Secretary Chas. R. Bliss of the New West Commission, at the annual meeting in Dr. Goodwin's church, Chicago, Oct. 14 ult., reports that "in 1880 Mormonism was in a state of incipient revolt." "The national flag was dishonored." "The U. S. courts in Utah were destitute of power to execute their decrees." "Their delegate in Congress was an open and avowed polygamist." A bishop, the husband of four wives, two of whom were a mother and daughter, was heard by Secretary Bliss to say: "We are polygamists, and we want the world to know that."

In the same report, p. 10, the secretary says that to-day "the (Mormon) people betray no inclination to revolt." "Its leaders say they will never oppose the execution of national laws." "They profess a love for the flag, and a willingness to defend it." "Polygamy in Utah is carefully hidden from public view." "Polygamists have been disfranchised." "The Mormon church has been disincorporated; and its funds, amounting to nearly one million dollars, is held by the Government for common schools." "And a common school law, having points of marked excellence, is enacted by Mormon votes." And "the Mormon President, with the approval of seers, apostles, revelators, priests, bishops, and ten thousand saints, has published a decree that polygamy must cease." "Ogden and Salt Lake have passed permanently out from under Mormon control."

The above stupendous facts, given by Secretary Bliss, who has sixty teachers scattered throughout Utah, are completely reliable.

THE MORMON RELIGION.

Sunday, Nov. 2d ult., in the great Tabernacle meeting Apostle Abraham H. Cannon said that Prophet Joseph predicted the war of the rebellion "under the inspiration of the Almighty," and referred to its remarkable fulfillment.

Twenty-six years ago the writer was two weeks in Salt Lake City. Heber C. Kimball, Brigham Young's "model saint" in that same Tabernacle, spoke of our civil war then raging. He said nearly these words:

"Prophet Joseph, you all know, predicted this war. He said the North and the South would fight like the Kilkenny cats, till their men destroyed each other." "Then," said this gloating ruffian, "then who will have the wives and daughters of those men?" It seems the war did not turn out just as "Prophet Joseph" predicted. Yet five to ten thousand Mormons, many of whom heard Kimball, now swallow Apostle Abraham's declaration that the infamous prophecy has been literally fulfilled. So much for their prophecies.

Charles W. Penrose followed Apostle Cannon. He said, "God did not create matter, but spoke to the pre-existent elementary materials which always existed." He said, "Faith is inherent in everybody; it is part of our existence." And if we walk in his (Christ's) ways," etc., "we will come up like Jesus Christ to the fullness of the Godhead bodily." And, among "the gifts of the Spirit," he mentioned "healing," "being healed," "tongues," "prophecy," "visions" and "divine dreams." "He (Penrose) deprecated the practice of holding dances in houses erected for the worship of God." This is from the Deseret Weekly of Nov. 15. Pages might be filled with such stuff taught for religion, for which "The only cure is sovereign grace,

And the Physician, God."

Secretary Bliss has promised to send Joseph Cook's pamphlet to his teachers in Utah; and now that the Congregational church papers are opening on the lodge-idolatry, which is Mormonism, a general national revival of religion may save Mormons, and us also.

ASSAULTING MINISTERS.—Papers, which advocate saloon licenses, are assailing preachers of the Gospel who, it alleges, omitted the name of Christ in their prayers in the late Jew-Christian Conference. Prints which fear not God or regard "the Lord's day," seem to have taken our Lord himself under their care, and send ignorant reporters to interview the ministers of Chicago on the subject.

The Christian-Jewish Conference was called by known worshipers of Christ, and met in a Christian church. They prayed as did Moses, Nehemiah, Daniel, and all the saints who went to heaven by the light of the Old Testament, which Christ gave his sanction to as "the Scriptures," saying, "They are they which testify of me."

Two Freemasons, sworn to have their throats cut if they obey Christ by telling "on house-tops" secrets received in Masonic "closets" where Christ is never worshiped, flaunt their unholy lodgism at honest clergymen who, wishing to obey the divine command "Be courteous," did not think proper to invite Jews to meet them and then pray at their errors in their own house; and perhaps they went too far. The papers claim they did not mention Christ; but Prof. Curtis, who led the devotional exercises the second afternoon, closed in the name of Jesus; and an intent listener on the the last evening, who was watching for this omission, says Pres. C. A. Blanchard used that ever-blessed name several times. The Tribune prints a most garbled and untruthful form of words, which it attributes to him.

The devil stirs this turmoil because the time approaches when "all Israel shall be saved" and say, as our Saviour intimates they shall say, "Blessed be he who cometh in the name of the Lord."

BRO. H. W. FOWLER, Phœnix, Arizona, sends us strictures on the Cynosure's notice of the Free Methodist Conference, Chicago, with a request to publish. This we should be glad to do for our earnest brother, but we are certain he has mistaken the drift and meaning of our article; and, if not, we have mistaken our own meaning; and a discussion of mistakes is profitless. We regard, and the Cynosure has always esteemed, the Free Methodists as sincere and worthy Christians; and, moreover, as faithful and fearless reformers. So our article affirmed. We have met with them, preached for them, and rejoiced in the good accomplished by them. Two of their ministers, Fanning and Underwood, moved us to call the Aurora Convention, which resulted in the national movement against secret societies, which Superintendent Roberts has so firmly and ably sustained.

Our friendly warning might have been given to thousands of other Christians to "be vigilant" to resist Satan. So Paul counseled his churches. So John Wesley warned Wilberforce that Satan would endeavor to "wear you out." And Scripture and history show that the devil assails most those from whom he fears most; that evil angels attend religious meetings, and mingle their works in revivals to spoil the movement, as did the soothsaying damsel in the revivals under Paul and Silas in Philippi. And what is most horrid, he assailed the Saviour himself and desired to sift Peter; and counterfeited the Holy Ghost, and presented himself as "an angel of light," ministering to the very "heirs of salvation." These terrible adversaries are far too little noticed at the present day.

—This number of the Cynosure is sent to the Congregational ministers of the country, to place before them the letter of the committee of their denomination appointed at the April Conference.

—The fall elections are now settled, the official count made, and we are ready again for business in Washington and Chicago. Our friends have voted and persuaded other voters; now let them put in a day's work and get voters for the Cynosure. At $1.50 each it is cheap and profitable for both voters and workers.

—The Christian Instructor has opened a branch office in this city under charge of Rev. J. A. Collins, who edits an interesting Chicago department, only there should be a standing notice of the location of his office. Some twelve years ago Revs. A. T. McDill and A. G. McCoy obtained control of the Instructor and removed it to Chicago, but its Eastern subscribers were too strong, and the paper had to go back to its Philadelphia home. A Chicago department is a good beginning, however, for something better in time.

—A letter written from the library of Wooster University, Ohio, shows that the copy of the Cynosure sent to the students of that institution is read with some interest and profit. "I pray God to bless the efforts of the Cynosure," says the writer, "and to hasten the day when our colleges will be free from selfish and exclusive rings and our beloved country from dangerous secret organizations."

—Rev. R. N. Countee writes to Mrs. S. B. Allen of Wheaton under date of the 20th ult. that he is again a great sufferer from nervous prostration, and is confined to his room but not to his bed. In connection with his church work he has a large number of orphan children to care for; four of them are taken into his own family. For these and other poor he can make good use of cast-off clothing, shoes, and also books and papers. Bro. Countee's residence is No. 20, Turley St., Memphis.

—In the Department of Current Religious Thought in Messiah's Herald, Boston, Rev. F. O. Cunningham, the editor, stands manfully by the Evangelist Davis in his Music Hall speech, from which we print on the 2d and 3rd pages of this number. The Herald says: "But we would kindly yet seriously question whether enlisting the co-operation of Freemasonry as a system in the contest with Romanism is not a good deal like fighting the devil with fire? All the arguments urged by Joseph Cook, in his speech at Chicago last May, against Jesuit and Mormon oaths and secrecy, apply with equal right to Masonic and Odd-fellows' oaths. A good cause is not ashamed of light, and is not benefited by secrecy. God may use the Masons to carry out his plans concerning Romanism, as he used Cyrus to overthrow Babylon, when its cup of iniquity was full, but that would not justify God's people in joining the Persians."

PERSONAL NOTES.

—Rev. A. T. McDill, one of the warm friends of our reform in Southern California, is preaching at Beaumont and also editing a paper published at Santa Ana.

—Mrs. R. R. Johnston of Highland Park, Oakland, is president of the California W. C. T. U. Rev. N. R. Johnston, her husband, was long the missionary of the Covenanter church to the Chinese in that city.

—Rev. John Harper, of Smithville, Ill., attended the recent Sabbath convention in this city. Rev. Dr. Kennedy, of Sandwich, was also present and spoke during the convention. These ministers, with Rev. Mr. French of this city, represented the United Presbyterians in that meeting.

—A note from Rev. J. F. Avery, pastor of the Mariners' Temple, New York, and editor of Buds and Blossoms, tells us that he was lately burned out. The family escaped unharmed, but their clothing and much other property was lost. Books and papers were saved, but in a worthless condition. His loss awakens much sympathy among his many friends throughout the country.

—It is said of Rev. Dr. William LeLoss Love that during his ministry of forty-three years, he has received into the Congregational communion nearly 1800 new converts. His six pastorates were held in New Haven, Conn., New York city, Berlin, Conn., Milwaukee, Wis., East Saginaw, Mich., and South Hadley, Mass., where he aided as a trustee in raising Mount Holyoke Seminary to the rank of a classical college. Amid urgent pastoral duties, Dr. Love has found time to prepare three volumes of great value, viz, "Wisconsin in the War for the Union," "Christ Preaching to Spirits in Prison," and "Future Probation Considered." The design of the last work (published by Funk & Wagnalls) is to examine the theory of probation after death by the light of Scripture and religious literature during the three centuries next preceding Christ, and the three centuries next after him. Dr. Love is now at Clifton Springs, New York. When a pastor in Milwaukee twenty years ago, his opposition to the secret orders was well known.

TO EVERY CONGREGATIONAL MINISTER.

A PERSONAL AND SPECIAL REQUEST.

Dear brother in Christ:—At the Christian Conference on Secret Societies held last April in Chicago, and addressed by Dr. E. P. Goodwin, Joseph Cook and others, committees were appointed to represent the different denominations present and work among them respectively. The Committee for the Congregational churches have agreed as a first step to secure, so far as possible, the general opinion of all the pastors of the denomination; and the committee respectfully asks you to consider carefully the following questions and return your answer to the chairman at Bartlett, Ill.

We adopt this method of addressing you, instead of a special letter, simply on the score of economy. We trust you will recognize the fact that a saving of $150 is something to an ordinary pastor, and write just as freely, fully and heartily as if a special letter was sent you through the mail. Yours in Christ,

(Rev.) ALEXANDER THOMSON,
Chairman, Bartlett, Ill.
(Rev.) M. A. KELSEY, Hart, Mich.
(Rev.) J. P. DYAS, Henry, S. D.

QUESTIONS.

1. Are you opposed to all secret societies?

2. If not opposed to all, please name those you believe harmful to the church, the state, and the home.

3. What in your opinion are the best methods of opposing them?

4. Do you believe that this subject should be discussed at our associational meetings?

—During October and November, Elder J. F. Browne visited churches in Jackson, Rock Castle, Jessamine, Bracken and Lewis counties. He preached in many places and it is hoped he can continue in this itinerant work.

—Last April on her 95th birthday the mother of the New England secretary, Rev. J. P. Stoddard, wrote an interesting and encouraging letter to the Conference on secret societies, meeting in this city. On Monday of last week this elect and pious lady who had walked the earth nearly a hundred years passed on to the reward of the just. She has been living most of the time for some years with a daughter in Galva, Ill. For a year or two she was with her son in Wheaton, and while there walked on the evening of her 94th birthday to the College and back to a literary entertainment of the students, a distance of half a mile each way. This incident shows the vigor of her frame even in such extreme age. She was a pious, God-fearing woman, deeply interested in the reform in which her son and grandson are engaged, a constant reader of the Cynosure and contributor to the funds of the N. C. A. It was to Bro. Stoddard in Boston an aggravation of his grief that distance prevented his being by the side of the aged saint when she closed her eyes on earth, as well as from attending the funeral.

AN ACKNOWLEDGMENT.—The N. E. Secretary and wife are under obligations to Bro. and sister Wm. F. Davis for a most enjoyable Thanksgiving. It was an occasion of delightful Christian fellowship. A real Gospel feast in which the givers, owing to our limited quarters, could "hope for nothing again." They have our grateful appreciation of their generous hospitality and our prayers for their abundant reward in that world of light which is the eternal home of the saints.

JAMES P. and ANNA E. STODDARD.

THE NEW ENGLAND CONVENTION.

The New England Christian Association will meet at 7 o'clock Tuesday, Dec. 16, 1890, in the lower chapel of Park Street Congregational church, Boston, and hold services the following day and evening. The public are cordially invited to attend. This association furnishes a common center where, irrespective of denomination, party or sex, all may unite in a free investigation of the secret lodge system and all practical questions connected with the coming of Christ's kingdom and the accomplishment of his will on earth. Names of speakers and outline of program will appear later; meantime write to or call on J. P. Stoddard, 309 Tremont street, Boston, for information, documents, etc., and send in your names early for enrollment.

THE HOME.

"EVEN AS HE IS PURE."

Thou who seest my soul within,
Thou who knowest my unknown sin,
Through thy holy eyes let me
Learn what sin is unto thee!

O my Saviour undefiled,
Leave me not by self beguiled,
Blinded by my heart's deceit,
For thy friendship all unmeet.

If there be in me a thought
That thy dear name honoreth not,
Pierce it with thy pitying gaze
Till its silence turn to praise!

Make me, pure one, as thou art,
Pure in soul and mind and heart,
Never satisfied with less
Than thy perfect holiness!

Bathing in thy love's full stream,
Let my life fulfill its dream,
Beautified with every grace
Shining on me from thy face.

Lord, we all to thee belong,
Keep us faithful, pure and strong;
While we tread this earthly sod,
Give us hearts at home with God!

—Lucy Larcom.

WHAT IS MEDITATION?

The pious and learned John Gerhard, whose little book of "Sacred Meditation," though over three hundred years old, is still a favorite with many Christians, says in one of his meditations on "Rules for a holy life": "Devout and holy meditation will bring knowledge to thee; knowledge, conviction; conviction, devotion, and devotion will incite thee to prayer." That these blessed fruits will come of devout meditation will seem evident when we well consider what such meditation is. It is something much higher and more strenuous than mere religious revery, with which some would confound it. In this state of mind there is neither effort nor purpose, but a mere drifting of the thoughts which, like a thistle down, follow every casual current and eddy of the vagrant fancy.

Nor is the more serious and deliberate exercise called musing on religious themes sufficiently dignified and arduous to bring the results attributed by Gerhard to "devout and holy meditation." It is true that the intensely earnest and spiritually minded Psalmist could say of himself, "While I was musing the fire burned;" for one who, like himself, had "hidden the law of God in his heart," could only need at any time the spark of the Holy Spirit upon such ready fuel to set his whole soul aflame with devotion. But in natures less exalted and spiritually quickened the exercise of musing is rather a play of the imagination than a strenuous and sustained effort of the mind to penetrate and absorb some great truth of God's Word. Meditation is no mere surface play. It is rather, as Vinet has suggested, "an effort of the soul to enter to the middle of a subject," which he says is the primary idea of the word "meditate," and so finds its heart and feel the quickening power of its life.

So also it is more than to reflect, which is a turning back of the mind; it is more than to consider, which, as the term implies, is a sitting down, as it were, to think; it is more than to contemplate, which adds the idea of sitting, as in a temple, for pious consideration. These latter exercises send the mind abroad upon some object external to itself. Accordingly, the Psalmist speaks with propriety when he says, "When I consider thy heavens, the works of thy fingers," etc. These same works of God when thus regarded may be said to be contemplated, as when Crabbe says, "The heavens and all the works of the Creator are objects of contemplation," etc. But "devout and holy meditation" is rather employed about things which concern the soul, its experiences, needs, and privileges. Even when it deals with objective truth it is with the purpose of appropriating and profiting by it. Indeed, it is a process of spiritual digestion.

It is not in vain that the divine Word speaks to us of its truth as something to be eaten, digested, and assimilated. "Son of man," said the Lord to his servant Ezekiel, "eat that thou findest, eat this roll [book], and go speak unto the house of Israel." The angel which gave the "little book" unto John said to him, "Take it, and eat it up." We speak of devouring a book, tasting, eating precious words. Thus the Psalmist who "meditated in the law of the Lord day and night" spake of God's Word as "sweet to his taste as honey and the honeycomb." Such an exercise of the mind as is analogous to eating and appropriating necessary food is meditation. And just as certainly as bodily feasting will give physical strength, so certainly will devout meditation give saving knowledge, conviction and devotion.

All our deepest and most personal convictions come to us through just such exercises. An enthusiastic painter will sit down and for hours and days will contemplate some master-piece of art in his line until the form and spirit of the admired model shall have wrought itself into his soul and become a part of his very being. He, in the expressive language of Scripture, has eaten the picture, or, in the thought of our subject, has meditated upon it till it has become his own. Plato says of Socrates, the father of Greek philosophy, that his master, when absorbed with some deep problem in ethics or philosophy, would stand for twenty-four or even thirty-six hours in an unchanged attitude, and that too in the midst of exciting surroundings, in utter unconsciousness of them until he had finished his meditations. It were easy to multiply instances to show how, by deep and continued meditation, the great thinkers of mankind have arrived at their singular knowledge. So true is the judgment of Gerhard, that "meditation will bring knowledge to thee," and a knowledge that will issue in conviction, devotion and prayer.

And yet it is to be feared that Christians in these days are not enough given to this holy and exalted exercise. The temptations to a contrary state of mind are, from our very circumstances, peculiarly powerful. So hurried is our modern life, so intense are its outward strivings, so sharp are its competitions, that men are strung to such a pitch of endeavor as leaves but little leisure, and less inclination to that tranquil, patient searching after and feeding upon divine truth which invigorates and purifies the soul. Add to this the fact that there never was a time before in the history of the world when all manner of publications were so cheap, numerous, and attractive, and which swarm around us everywhere to arrest our eyes and occupy our thoughts. Travel was never before so cheap and rapid, so comfortable and attractive, as now. And whilst the men of this age may be congratulated upon these improvements, it must be admitted they bring with them the danger that those who enjoy them are likely to do so at the expense of those quiet hours and prolonged self-communings which marked the religious habits of our fathers in their less exciting days.

It is certainly opportune in these stirring times, and amid the universal "running to and fro" of men, to emphasize the duty and necessity of "devout, holy meditation." We need in these days to take very literally the Saviour's injunction, "Enter into thy closet and shut thy door," etc. Ours is a most practical, aggressive, adventurous age; for we are putting our business into our religion, and are girdling the earth with our churches and our missions. But are we not attenuating our piety, and rolling out our fine gold to a very thin foil, to give it the requisite extension? The knowledge which reading, observation, travel, and discourse, can give, was never so abundant. The knowledge which meditation alone can furnish was never so endangered.—Joel Swartz, D. D., in the S. S. Times.

A committee of ministers and laymen headed by Dr. I. N. Hayes, of Pittsburgh, Pa., about three weeks ago called on President Harrison and urged that Christ be suitably acknowledged in his then forthcoming Thanksgiving proclamation. We regret to place on record that he refused the committee's request, stating that he did not believe it would be in harmony with our institutions. But even on the principle that the majority rule, the President did wrong. There are in our country 13,000,000 church members, or including their families, 45,000,000. To this number we must add 10,000,000 to cover the nominal Christians in our midst, bringing the number up to 55,000,000. The remnant of our population, 7,500,000, is made up of infidels, Jews, etc. If, then, the majority govern, why are the wishes of 55,000,000 unheeded and the demands of 7,500,000 acceded to? Has this minority done aught by which they can claim this rejection of Christ as their right! Remembering what the Lord Jesus Christ is to this nation—its divine ruler and source of authority—President Harrison's attitude to this Christ-rejecting minority as well as to his 55,000,000 followers, is beyond explanation or justification.—Christian Nation.

LIVING IN THE DARK.

Mrs. Jefferson, the wife of a wealthy gentleman in New York, wished one day to send some directions to a seamstress.

"I will drive over to see her," she said. "It is easier to explain what I desire to be done by talking than by writing."

The girl was found in a poor little house by the roadside just out of the city. She came out, smiling, to meet her customer, and as Mrs. Jefferson entered the house, the father and mother, white-haired old Germans, rose to greet her, their faces beaming with kindness and welcome.

The room was bare but clean. An open Bible lay on the stand; a fat cat slept in the sun by the door. But Mrs. Jefferson's eyes were fixed with delight on the roses that climbed over the side of the house and the plants that filled the windows.

"How is this, Mary?" she said. "I am a dear lover of flowers, and pay a skilfull florist to attend to my plants. This rose never grows so luxuriantly under his care; it is actually covering your roof. The plants I have in my house, too, soon lose their freshness, while yours run wild with blossoms. Why is it?"

"We have the sun and air, madam," said Mary. "That is all."

As Mrs. Jefferson drove homeward these words remained in her mind. She was annoyed at her failure with flowers. She had never considered money in the purchase of the costliest roses and the rarest orchids, but their beauty soon faded. Money could not bring sunlight and fresh air into her stately dark palace.

It seemed to Mrs. Jefferson, as she drove on silently, that there were other flowers which would not bloom in her house. She, and her husband, and daughter, lacked no luxury which wealth could command. They were people of culture, they had travelled everywhere, and were well received in society; yet there was little of brightness in their lives! A laugh was rarely heard, or a look of affection exchanged among them.

"The sun," she thought, bitterly, "does not shine into our house! There is no love there to make us happy and light-hearted."

It was only too true. Her husband fretted incessantly about his business; this man had made a fortune by a lucky chance; that one had succeeded in politics. He was envious and cynical. Her daughter found a gay life unsatisfactory and hollow; yet she sought nothing better, and passed half her time in sleep or in complaints. Mrs. Jefferson herself, in all her splendor, wearied of the monotous days.

Yet these poor people, in their meagrely furnished house, were healthy and happy. Even in old age they were glad to be alive.

Then she remembered the open Bible, and the tears rose to her eyes.

The sun shone into their windows to make their flowers grow, and God's sun was in their hearts to make their lives bloom and bear fruit.

Faith and love! These are things which no money can buy, yet which God gives freely to rich and poor alike, if they but seek them in the right spirit.—Youth's Companion.

TWO SURPRISES.

When Mrs. Curtis, of New York, was sending her daughter to visit, for the first time, her cousins in a Pennsylvania inland town, she warned her anxiously not to allow her manners or opinions to be influenced by them.

"You are at an impressible, imitative age," she said. "Remember that these poor girls have lived in an out-of-the-way village. Their minds necessarily will be untrained, their views narrow, and, I fear, their manners bad."

Mary went, and found herself in a home where the habit of thought was far higher and broader than in her own. Her cousins were familiar with books and pictures of which she had never heard; they had friends among men of note both in this country and in Europe.

"I am surprised," she wrote frankly to her mother. "I have come to a place where I can improve greatly both my mind and my manners."

About the same time Jane Hoyt, the daughter of poor, devout parents in a country neighborhood, went to New York to visit her relatives in that city for the first time. Her mother, too, bade her good-bye with an anxious heart.

"You are going among fashionable people," she said. "Their hearts are doubtless given to folly and money. Riches, fine clothes, balls, receptions, all those things will win away your heart from the higher and truer life. Remember how hardly shall those who have riches enter into the kingdom of heaven. They are, I am afraid, serving Mammon. Do you serve God."

After a few weeks Jane wrote to her: "I have been greatly surprised as I have learned to know my cousins. Their wealth is great. They are leaders in society. But they are faithful servants of Christ. Their words and thoughts are ruled by him. They not only pray for the heathen and send money for them, as we do, but they take a vigorous part in visiting the poor, in helping the sick and prisoners, and in many schemes for lifting and teaching the dangerous classes. It seems to me, too, that they judge those who are not like themselves more charitably than we do in our village."

Young people, and those who live narrow, isolated lives, are apt to judge of their fellow-men in classes. Anybody outside of their own clique or town must be lacking in good-breeding or in knowledge; the wealthy man must be sordid; the fashionable woman a slave to wickedness and folly.

Charity is most quickly taught by intercourse with the world.

"The mair I gae aboot," says Jean Muckrose, "the mair I see that men are much alike, whether they stan' on the bare earth or on a pile o' siller, or wear a shepherd's plaid or a gown o' gold. God's eyes sees only the man inside o' the claiths."

VICTOR GLADWIN'S REMARKABLE ESCAPES.

I. FROM DEATH BY A FALLING BAMBOO IN BOMBAY.

When Victor was six years of age, he went under a large Mango tree in which a native boy was knocking down fruit with a long bamboo. We called our boys away, but they thoughtlessly soon returned. In a few moments the native carelessly dropped the pole, and it fell with the sharp point downward, striking our dear boy's foot, cutting off the fourth toe of his left foot. Only an inch or two nearer and the spear-like point would have struck his head, and it must have killed our darling son instantly. But God spared him for our home and for his work. He was laid up a month with the amputation, and bears this reminder of God's special care.

II. FROM DEATH BY RUNAWAY HORSES IN IOWA.

During last summer's vacation my sons were helping their cousins at farm work. Victor was upon a load of hay, and went to the front to get down. His cousin called out for him to descend at the rear of the wagon. But he, thinking the horses to be gentle, climbed down at the front, and was going out upon the pole between the horses to reach the ground. One of the team, being a colt, took fright, and away they ran. Victor seized the pole and held on bravely while the horses ran about a quarter of a mile. It was a desperate situation for a lad of fourteen; the frightened horses running with a load of hay after them, their sides at times almost crushing him as they galloped over the field. With an extraordinary presence of mind—given him at the time by the Lord—Victor clung to the wagon pole with a death-like tenacity; and feeling the bridle-reins danging about him, he seized one and drew it in until the horses stopped.

His cousin ran anxiously after them, expecting every moment to find Victor's body trampled by the horses or crushed by the wheels of the loaded wagon. But he escaped wholly unhurt.

Thus again was the life of our precious son providentially spared to serve the Lord with us here on earth.

Notice that both the above dangers would have been avoided if Victor had heeded the warnings in time. And have we not all been equally tardy in heeding the warnings and calls of our Heavenly Father? And how have we suffered and lost for our neglect!

As I look out upon the Atlantic, how my Father's word comes home to my heart, "O that thou hadst hearkened unto my commandments: then had thy peace been as a river, and thy righteousness as the waves of the sea," Isa. 48: 18.

WALLACE J. GLADWIN, Missionary to India.
S. S. Germanic, Oct. 14, 1890.

It is an old saying, and one of fearful and fathomless import, that we are forming characters for eternity. Forming characters? Whose? Our own or others? Both. And in that momentous fact lies the peril and responsibility of our existence. Who is sufficient for the thought? Thousands of my fellow beings will yearly enter eternity with characters differing from those they would have carried had I never lived. The sunlight of that world will reveal my finger-marks in successive strata of thought and life.—Elihu Burritt.

TEMPERANCE.

THE GREAT SALVATION.

[Rev. John A. Todd, the evangelist, who has been very successfully laboring in New Albany, Ind., writes in a private letter to the N. C. A. treasurer of an interesting case of reformation, which we have permission to print:]

I called at a drunkard's home, and his wife told me he was not in, but while she was talking he staggered in from the kitchen, saying, "I've come in to see about my sins," and she went out. He asked me if I thought there was any hope for him. I told him that Jesus could save him. He said, "I'm a great sinner," and sat down on a chair with his head bowed over. I asked him if he wanted me to pray for him. He said, "Yes, pray for my soul! Pray for my soul!" After a very short prayer, I left the house, fearing that I would interfere with the Holy Spirit's work to stay longer.

The next morning he came to see me. I was not in, but saw him on his way home, and went with him to his house, read and prayed with him and his wife. He was a little intoxicated, but not so drunk as the first time I met him. He had a jug of whisky in the house that I did not know of, but heard of it before night, and it sent me to my knees for him. I felt that I must trust the Spirit, and not be doing so much of the work myself. He came to meeting that night, confessed Christ and prayed with me, and I heard from a lady that he emptied the jug of whisky.

He grows; has resisted Satan in one of his dens; had to go into a saloon to collect some money from the saloon-keeper, to whom he had sold some produce; was asked to drink, but refused. He said to me, "Everywhere I go, it seems that Christ is with me all the time." He said at another time, "Instead of thinking about evil things, I'm all the time thinking about the Lord." Last night he and his wife were out to the meeting and very happy.

AN APPEAL TO CHRISTIAN VOTERS.

At the recent meeting of the Ashford Baptist Association of Pennsylvania, the temperance committee reported among others, the following resolution. It was discussed, and opposed by some of the ministers and other delegates, and rejected. Please read it carefully:

Resolved, That over and beyond all connection with and allegiance to human organizations, stands loyalty to Christ, to his truth and his church; and, therefore, as the disciples of Christ we cannot consistently give our sanction or support to any organization that endorses or sanctions the liquor traffic, but that we are to "come out" from all such, have clean hands, and, on the lines of God's truth, to stand for sobriety and do all we can to advance the principles of his righteousness.

The above resolution was voted down by ministers of the church of Christ! It seems to us a humiliating, and terribly sad fact!

When we go to cast our ballots, are we not to take our religion with us? Are we not to vote as we talk on this very important question of temperance? Are we not to cut loose from every organization that sanctions and favors this awful traffic in the bodies and souls of men?

Are we to make our Christianity secondary to our political party creed? Never, no never. Christ and his church first and always.

We cannot consistently support any party, that, in any way, sustains the greatest evil of our times—the rum traffic. If we do help such a party God will hold us responsible for the work of ruin and death caused by this license curse in so far as we, by our vote, give our sanction thereto. "Come out from among them, and be ye separate," saith the Lord.

When will the church of Christ arise, in the strength of our Lord, and march forward in solid column, against this terrible foe of God and man? When will our ministers and church members "come out" from the old parties, allied as they are to the liquor interest, and vote with the only party that stands on the doctrines and principles of God's Word, namely, that of prohibiting, not licensing, evil, vice and crime? Let us not forget our responsibility to the Most High, while we go forth as citizens, and as the professed friends of Christ, to the solemn use of the elective franchise. Heaven hasten the day when the whole church of God shall do her duty in this matter.

DR. CROSBY'S VIEW.

At the annual meeting of the Church Temperance Society, Rev. Dr. Howard Crosby spoke upon "Restrictive Liquor Legislation." Dr. Crosby said he belonged to that class which did not believe in carrying legislation upon the liquor question to the extremity of prohibition, but he believed in punishing the drunkard.

"We place the thief, the slanderer, and the murderer," he said, "in the penitentiary and coddle the drunkard. I would have a law so framed that every man, no matter to what family he might belong, who should be found drunk upon the street should be imprisoned for one month the first time, two months for the second offence, and I would add a month each time for each offence.

"There ought also to be laws preventing all secrecy. The traffic should be conducted as openly as the dry goods business. There should be no side doors, no back doors—only one door leading to the main street, and the windows should be without screens. Then there ought to be a severe punishment for the liquor dealer who breaks the laws. What is a fine of $25 to a man who is making $300 every day? It is a little money that he pulls out of his vest pocket. He should be punished by imprisonment at least for the second offence. Such a punishment would have some effect."

T. S. Clouston, M. D., says in the late annual report of the Royal Edinburgh Asylum for the Insane: "Alcohol is the most frequent single exciting cause of mental disease, and it acts as a predisposing cause in very many cases. In 16.4 per cent of all the admissions to the asylum during the past fifteen years drink has been given as the cause." This may be taken as about the general experience of the country.

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

—Mr. Penzotti, a minister of the Methodist Episcopal church and an agent of the American Bible Society, a man of estimable and spotless character, a preacher of rare fervor and power, and a pattern for believers in simple faith, has once before been subjected in Peru to the indignity of confinement in the common jail. That was at Arequipa, somewhat more than a year ago, and after confinement for nineteen days he was set free by order of the national government. He is now nearer the national capital and held in stronger bonds, awaiting trial on charges which we have not seen clearly stated. He was arrested in Callao on the 25th of July, and at the latest date, the 4th of October, the case had not come up for trial.

—The Northwestern Presbyterian says: "It begins to look as if the Presbyterian and Methodist churches in Canada might be united within the next few years. Principal Grant, of Queen's University, looks for it. There is a feeling in the air that it is coming. The first impression might be that no two evangelical denominations were farther apart. But the differences may not be so serious as they seem. Most Methodists would make splendid Calvinists if you kept a few trademarks of the doctrine out of sight so that their prejudices were not aroused. Their presiding elders and bishops correspond to our missionary superintendents and secretaries. They are not so closely related to us as the Congregationalists, and therefore there is less friction between us. They are not so far away or so exclusive as the Baptists and Episcopalians. They are thoroughly orthodox upon all the live questions of inspiration, atonement and the future estate. They have a magnificent enthusiasm which we ought to share. They admire our solid qualities.

Stranger things have happened than such a union would be."

—The United Presbyterian congregation at Tarkio, Mo., Rev. W. P. McNary, D. D., pastor, at its late communion had an accession of thirty-six new members—20 by certificate and 16 by profession of their faith.

—It appears from the comparative summary of the recent Southern General Assembly (Presbyterian) that in the past five years there has been an increase of over twenty-five thousand members in the Southern Church, and an increase in contributions over those of 1886 of $400,000.

—Rev. John McKim, Episcopal missionary from this country, writes from his station at Osaka, Japan: "The church at home may be assured of this—that the religion of Christ is firmly rooted in Japan. No opposition or prosecution can pluck it up. Although the total number of converts is not greater than 100,000, Christianity is already a power whose influence is felt all over the empire."

—The receipts of the New West Commission for the year ending June 30, 1890, were $72,940.52. The total receipts of the society since its organization September 1st, 1879, have been $501,144.52 The society supports 75 teachers in thirty-two schools and academies, with 3,284 pupils, 967 being children of Mormon parents.

—Sabbath observance is making great progress in Paris. A determined effort is being made to close all places of business on Sunday.

—The Church Missionary Society of England proposes to send out 1,000 new missionaries during the next five or six years. A much larger proportion than heretofore will be laymen.

—The American Baptist Telugu Mission calls for a reinforcement of twenty-five men in the next two years. One missionary, Dr. J. E. Clough, of Ongole, has under his care more than 17,000 Christians.

—Rev. Henry Richards, from the Congo State, is now visiting America. His thrilling accounts of the great revival at Banza, Manteke, have excited great interest in Boston, New York and Philadelphia.

—The "Henry Reed," the Baptist mission steamer on the Upper Congo, ran 6,000 miles last year in its missionary work. The American Baptists also have a mission steamer on the Lower Congo, called "The Evangel."

—The appropriations of the American Baptist Missionary Union for the year ending March 31, 1890, are $503,159.53. The society calls for an immediate special contribution of $50,000 to meet the deficiency caused by the passage of the silver bill.

—The American Baptist Missionary Union has just sent out about 40 missionaries to Burmah, Assam and India. This is the largest number of missionaries ever sent from this country at one time by any denomination.

—The Great International Sabbath-school Convention, at Pittsburgh, reported a total of 10,328,298 persons attending the Sabbath-schools of the United States and Canada. Of this number 609,014 are in Canadian schools, leaving 9,719,284 in the Sabbath-schools of the United States.

—Mr. Dumont, an earnest and sincere young man, and disciple of the late Dr. Dollinger, the leader of the "Old Catholics" in Germany, is about starting a mission in the Englewood district of Chicago. He prefers to call his mission the Independent Catholic, and following Dr. Dollinger hopes to lead many now living as Romanists into the true fold where Jesus Christ is the true shepherd. He is raising a small fund to begin with tract and Sabbath-school work, which he is confident will grow into a strong, self-supporting church. The work is endorsed by a number of the city pastors, and as the young brother Dumont appears to be sincere in his efforts to win men to the truth, his efforts seem worthy of encouragement.

—Rev. B. Fay Mills began a series of union meetings Nov. 19, at Syracuse, N. Y., in which all the Baptist churches join. Union prayer-meetings have been held, and already the Spirit is moving upon the hearts of men, and all are praying for a pentecostal blessing. Mr. J. Mills after leaving Oberlin labored in Plainfield, N. J., and the awakening in that city has been of a remarkable character. The whole city has been deeply stirred, and as the result of the services, in which nearly all the churches have united, several hundreds of persons have professed conversion. About ninety-five per cent of the Sunday-school scholars have confessed Christ.

—The Pittsburgh conference of the Free Methodist church adopted the following at its late meeting: "We believe that our position as a church against all secret societies, though they may come to us under the guise of temperance organizations, or claim our sympathies as does the Grand Army of the Republic, is correct for the following reasons: The cause of temperance is best promoted by efforts that are open to the light of day. The brave and noble men who, under God, were permitted to save our national life, were under no necessity of forming a secret organization to promote even their own best interests. Though these secret societies may appear under ever so fair colors, yet in their very make-up their affiliations are such with the ungodly and profane, that a Christian by becoming a member of any of their lodges, thereby endangers his spiritual life.

BIBLE LESSON.

STUDIES IN THE NEW TESTAMENT.

COMMENTS BY E. E. FLAGG.

1. Jesus makes himself known.—vs. 28–31. Here again we are met by another of those natural and graphic touches so peculiar to Luke. The stranger who had joined them was about to pass on as courtesy required, and they with Eastern hospitality urge him to abide with them, "for the day is far spent." A great deal has been made by cavillers of this simple and natural action of our Lord as if it involved something like insincerity; and even Christian commentators have been foolish enough to spend a great deal of time and ingenuity trying to refute what needs no refutation. Tried by the standard of our own common, daily life we can see that it was eminently proper and natural for Jesus to act as if he was about to pass on. And if they had not constrained him to stay we are sure he would have done so. Jesus will not intrude himself uninvited into our hearts and homes. It is true he "stands at the door and knocks," but there must be a readiness to receive him before he will enter. And yet when sincerely invited how graciously he responds! There are many practical suggestions in this part of our lesson. First, we need that Jesus should "abide with us." Some are satisfied, or seem to be, if they can feel his occasional presence, but though this is much better than never to have him with us at all, it is a very poor substitute for our privilege to have him always with us as our constant Guide and Helper. Second, how shall we secure this wonderful blessing? How can we constrain" Jesus to abide with us?" By acting as if we wanted him; by a sincere endeavor to have all our words and deeds the same that we would have them if he was sitting beside us in visible form;—or in other words to obey the apostolic command, "Whether ye eat or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God." Third, when Jesus enters our souls as an abiding guest, it is always to bless us, and by this we recognize his presence. Life takes on a new sweetness, and in the words of Keble:

> "Old friends, old scenes will lovlier be,
> As more of heaven in each we see;
> Some softening gleam of love and prayer
> Shall dawn on every cross and care."

2. They who have found a risen Christ will hasten to tell others.—vs. 32–35. They wonder now that they had not recognized him before. Who but the Lord himself could have so expounded the Scriptures as to make their hearts thus burn within them? And yet we have the same Scriptures; and though we have not Jesus Christ in visible form to open their meaning to us, we have the Holy Spirit which he promised should take its place. "And they rose up the same hour." They thought not of eating or drinking till they had told the blessed news. Nor did they stop to think how their message would be received. They must have remembered how they themselves had discredited the story of the women and treated it as a idle tale. What could they expect but to be met with the same incredulity? Yet all the same they hastened to Jerusalem to tell the wonderful thing that had happened. How often Christians keep some blessed experience to themselves through fear that because it is something strange and different from what others have known it will not be believed. But we are to tell what God has done for us despite of man's unbelief; and often we shall find as did these disciples, our own testimony most unexpectedly confirmed. No part of Christian truth was ever left without witnesses even in the darkest ages. There is always a remnant "according to the election of grace" who keep the fires of devotion burning even when the church is in its lowest state of declension.

3. Jesus appears in their midst.—vs. 36–43. Even as they were speaking Jesus in breathing, bodily form stood among them, with the common Eastern salutation on his lips, "Peace be unto you." And yet they are terrified. With all this flood of testimony they seemed not to have grasped the idea of a physical resurrection, and thought it was merely his spirit which they saw. Such a belief as this would have been fatal to the spread of the Christian faith. There would have been no martyrs willing to die for an apparition; and the very fact of his having appeared at all even in ghostly form would soon have become a discredited myth. He tells them to handle him and even eats before them. These are among the "infallible proofs" which Luke refers to in the first chapter of Acts—which could not be gainsaid nor reasoned away. As he rose so shall we rise—human yet incorruptible. There would be less terror of death among believers if they thought more on this glorious truth.

EDUCATIONAL NOTES.

During the past two years Minnesota and Wisconsin have established more than 1,200 school libraries, which are virtually libraries for the districts where the schools are located.

Yale College has this year some 400 students entering its freshmen classes in the scientific and classical courses; and it has in its various apartments no less than 143 instructors, including its lecturers.

Susan La Flesh, an Indian girl. who graduated in medicine from one of the colleges of New York, after going through the Hampton, Va., school, is practicing among her tribe, the Omahas, with reported success.

The Methodist church in America which has taken a deep interest in the up-lifting of the freedmen has now among them 22 colleges, seminaries, or academies, manned by 206 teachers and filled with 5,684 male and female students.

The University of Minnesota is having an interesting lawsuit over the possession of a seventy-pound aerolite which recently fell near Forest City, Iowa. The university purchased it from the tenant of the farm upon which it fell, but the owner of the land now claims the meteor.

The Students Christian Association of the University of Michigan are undertaking a good work for missions by sending a medical missionary to China. Dr. Grant, a graduate of the institution, is supported by them, his salary of $800 being raised by weekly subscriptions among the students of the various departments.

A scholarship of $200 is offered by the Vassar Students' Aid Society to a student who passes without conditions all the requirements for admission to the Freshman Class of Vassar College at the examinations to be held in June, 1891. This scholarship is offered as a loan, and covers one-half of all charges made by Vassar College for one year's board and tuition.

Mr. Moody, in the Sunday-School Times, tells of visits to colleges and the impressiom made upon him as to religious progress. He speaks of encouraging features, and notices the "strong, manly tone of the Christian life and Christian work of these college students." He regards as a most favorable thing the fact that the Christian work in most colleges is organized.

Parsons College, a Presbyterian institution located at Fairfield, Iowa, rejoices in the increase of endowment by $60,000, and in the completion of the college building by the erection of the east wing, at a cost of $15,000, the generous donation of Elder W. R. Aukeny, of Des Moines. Of the increase to the endowment, $40,000 is the gift of Gen. Parsons, of St. Louis; the remaining $20,000 has been given by other friends of the institution.

The Bryant School, a flourishing institution at Roslyn, Long Island, N. Y., one of the prettiest villages near New York City, makes a very kind offer to the children of missionaries. It will educate them as far as the close of the sophomore year, so that they can enter the junior class at college at half price. In case of a few ministers, who, on account of small salary may be unable to educate their children, the same privilege will be extended.

John H. Keane, the Roman bishop who is erecting a great university in Washington, was lately at Ann Arbor, Michigan, and as Hezekiah showed the envoys of Babylon all his treasures, the authorities of the University spent a half day looking over the institution with the representative of the pope, who left them with the flattery, "that the Catholic University, the University of Michigan, Johns Hopkins and Clark were the only universities in America."

Mrs. Harriet Crocker Alexander, daughter of Charles Crocker, the California millionaire, will present Princeton University, New Jersey, with a fine hall. The new building will be used for commencement exercises and all the higher functions of university life. It will be the finest, most costly and best equipped building of its kind belonging to any college in the country. The best architects will be consulted, and also the best taste and precedent in buildings of this style. The new hall is to be a memorial of the Alexander family, fifteen of whom have been graduated from Princeton.

THE PEACE QUESTION AND THE PASTORS.

PHILADELPHIA OFFICE OF THE CHRISTIAN ARBITRATION AND PEACE SOCIETY, 310 Chestnut St., Nov. 28th, 1890.

To the Clergymen of the United States:

The following gentlemen were our delegates from the United States to the Universal Peace Congress, held in London, July, 1890, namely:

Rev. T. S. Hamlin, D. D., Washington, D. C.,
Rev. Edward Braislin, D. D., Brooklyn,
Rev. W. A. Campbell, D. D., Richmond, Va.,
Mayor W. Taylor, Ellyson, Richmond, Va.,
Mr. John P. Branch, Richmond, Va.,
Prest. Isaac Sharpless, Haverford College,
Rev. Julius E. Grammer, D. D., Baltimore,
Rev. W. U. Murkland, D. D., Baltimore,
Mr. Richard C. Morse, New York,
Mr. James Wood, New York.
Rev. Philip S. Moxom, D. D., Boston,
Mr. James H. Chace, Providence,
Prest. Benj. F. Trueblood, Penn College, Iowa, and the undersigned.

The Congress recommended the observance of the THIRD SUNDAY IN DECEMBER each year as Peace Sunday throughout the world. At a meeting of our Board, held November 12th, it was resolved to request you, through the press, if consistent with your sense of duty and propriety, to do all in your power towards securing the general observance of this third Sunday in December as Peace Sunday, and also to present this momentous matter, in whatever way you deem wisest, both before your church and your Sunday-school. The Congregational and Baptist Unions of England have accepted the proposal, and, so far as possible, their ministers will preach in reference to Peace on that day. What day can be more appropriate for this purpose than the Sunday which commemorates the birth of the Prince of Peace?

We possess much valuable literature on this great subject which we will gladly furnish to those who ask for it.

GEO. DANA BOARDMAN,
President.

J. B. WOOD, Secretary.

OBITUARY.

MRS. DR. S. A. STERRETT.—Mention was made in our columns some time since of the death of this estimable lady. The relation which she and her husband sustained to our own work, and the cause of Christ, merits, however, a more extended notice than we were able at that time to give. Their home at 907 Pennsylvania Avenue, Pittsburg, was for all the years during which they occupied it the resting place of those who were laboring in various reform enterprises in that city. Not far distant from the Reformed Presbyterian church, it was the custom of Dr. A. M. Milligan during his life usually to take dinner ou the Sabbath at Dr. Sterrett's, and rest there until the afternoon service. In the temperance movement, Mrs. Sterrett was so deeply interested as to take part in the street and saloon campaign of the women, and together with a number of her coworkers, she was at one time locked up in the city prison for her efforts in this direction. In the cause of National Reform, both her husband and herself were, as was to be expected, deeply interested, and one ot the last things which she did, was to send a check for $1,000 to the treasurer of the National Reform Association. Geneva College, which was their denominational school, was also generously assisted, the sum of about $25,000 being given to it at various times by the doctor and Mrs. Sterrett. All the regular benevolences of the Reformed Presbyterian church were generously sustained and many of them remembered; particularly was she interested in the Foreign Mission Society, having had different members of her family connected therewith for many years.

Peculiar

Peculiar in combination, proportion, and preparation of ingredients, Hood's Sarsaparilla possesses the curative value of the best known remedies of the vegetable kingdom. Hood's Peculiar in its strength and economy, Hood's Sarsaparilla is the only medicine of which can truly be said, "One Hundred Doses One Dollar." Peculiar in its medicinal merits, Hood's Sarsaparilla accomplishes cures hitherto unknown, and has won for Sarsaparilla itself the title of "The greatest blood purifier ever discovered." Peculiar in its "good name at home,"—there is more of Hood's Sarsaparilla sold in Lowell than of all other blood purifiers. Peculiar in its phenomenal record of sales abroad no other Peculiar preparation ever attained so rapidly nor held so steadfastly the confidence of all classes of people. Peculiar in the brain-work which it represents, Hood's Sarsaparilla combines all the knowledge which modern research in medical science has To Itself developed, with many years practical experience in preparing medicines. 100 Doses One Dollar

Her death occurred at the Walter's Park Sanitarium, where, for a few weeks she, in company with her grand nephew, Sterrett Metheny, had gone for rest and recuperation. It was quite in accordance with her habit of living that a special request in her will directed that her funeral expenses should not exceed $100 Heaven is richer and earth more empty because of her departure.

SUBSCRIPTION LETTERS.

The following have made remittances of money to the Cynosure from Nov. 24 to 29, inclusive:

R. Hembrough, J. P. Bartlett, G. Olive, Rev F L Grundtvig, W W Leighton, Rev J R Calloway, Prest I C Ketler, J W Hartzell, C F Moore, A J Pierce, I Sanders, R.H. Carmon, Rev A J Horton, Rev A H Minnewan, Rev A Turmo, Rev. C. D. Trumbull, W C Bissell, Rev. J. P. Richards.

We've heard of a woman who said she'd walk five miles to get a bottle of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription if she couldn't get it without. That woman had tried it. And it's a medicine which makes itself felt in toning up the system and correcting irregularities as soon as its use is begun. Go to your drug store, pay a dollar, get a bottle and try it—try a second, a third if necessary. Before the third one's been taken you'll know that there's a remedy to help you. Then you'll keep on and a cure 'll come. But if you shouldn't feel the help. should be disappointed in the results—you'll find a guarantee printed on the bottle-wrapper that'll get your money back for you.

How many women are there who'd rather have the money than health? And "Favorite Prescription" produces health. Wonder is that there's a woman willing to suffer when there's a guaranteed remedy in the nearest drug store.

Dr. Pierce's Pellets regulate the Stomach, Liver and Bowels. Mild and effective.

"At last, I can eat a good square meal without its distressing me!" was the grateful exclamation of one whose appetite had been restored by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, after years of dyspeptic misery. A teaspoonful of this extract before each meal sharpens the appetite.

HOME AND HEALTH.

Dr. Stanley M. Ward states that he has found fresh buttermilk very serviceable in relieving vomiting of various forms, even at times the vomiting of pregnancy. The remedy is administered ice cold, in doses of about half a teaspoonful, repeated every fifteen or twenty minutes. In the case of children with cholera infantum he has often succeeded in quieting the stomach by interdicting everything else and using a few drops of fresh ice-cold buttermilk at intervals varying in length according to the severity of the case.

At Martinsville, Ind., many cases of diphtheria, some of them fatal, lately puzzled physicians for some time. Several afflicted families it is positively known could not have contracted the malady from any infected person. Inquiries by a physician of an afflicted household four miles north of the city revealed the fact that three cats had died very suddenly and mysteriously. It is believed they died of diphtheria and that they had communicated the malady to the children.

A quick and easy method for determining whether or not a fabric is "all wool" is given in the London Lancet. This is to separate the warp from the woof and to hold each to a flame. Wool burns into a shapeless mass and no threads can be traced in its ash. If removed from the fire before it is all burned it ceases to blaze; cotton, on the contrary, continues to burn steadily, and its ash retains the shape of the thread.

A new local law has been enforced at Hardanger, in Norway, to the effect that no girl shall be eligible for the marriage state until she is proficient in spinning, knitting, and baking. This might dismay some of the most "eligible" of modern society.

GOOD VS. BAD COOKING.

The Boston Transcript calls the attention of the culinary charlatans of summer hotels and boarding houses as well as those who scurry about the cook stoves of a million homes, to their responsibility when it is remembered that good cookery is indispensable to the highest type of Christian life and everywhere makes for righteousness. Quoting from Mrs. Ewing in her recent address on cookery, at Chautauqua, it finds this text:

Of the fifty thousand drunkards who die in United States every year, a large proportion have the appetite for intoxicating drinks aggravated, if not implanted, by the food which constitutes their daily diet. Grease-soaked meat, watery vegetables, sloppy coffee and bad bread, in many cases compel a resort to stimulants. With such conditions, why should anybody be surprised at the drink habit? Poor coffee produces unnatural thirst for lager beer, and there is a terrible affinity between sour bread and sour mash whisky.

There is a deal of truth in the statement that "You cannot be good when you are hungry," and none probably knows it any better than the Boston disciples of Mrs. Parloa and Mrs. Ewing; but there are those who have not attained this discipleship, for the Transcript says there are many people hungry and only half fed in very respectable and painfully ignorant homes. This writer with painful memories of indigestion continues:

After all that has been said against it, probably two-thirds of the cooks of America put vegetables on to boil in cold water, and that this land labors in the darkness and under the bondage of fried beefsteak the most cultivated and conservative must admit, if ever they have tried to worry through a meal at the average railroad eating-house from Maine to Florida, from New York bay to Puget Sound; and—we say it sadly, but with profound conviction—the railroad eating-house is the index-finger pointing out the average culinary culture of the masses of our 65,000,000 of citizens.—Selected.

All scalp and skin diseases, dandruff, falling of the hair, gray or faded hair, may be cured by using that nature's true remedy, Hall's Hair Renewer.

The Voice

Is easily injured—the slightest irritation of the throat or larynx at once affecting its tone, flexibility, or power. All efforts to sing or speak in public, under such conditions, become not only painful but dangerous, and should be strictly avoided until every symptom is removed. To effect a speedy cure no other medicine is equal to

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

The best of anodynes, this preparation rapidly soothes irritation, strengthens the delicate organs of speech, and restores the voice to its tone and power. No singer or public speaker should be without it. Lydia Thompson, the famous actress, certifies: "Ayer's Cherry Pectoral has been of very great service to me. It improves and strengthens the voice, and is always effective for the cure of colds and coughs."

"Upon several occasions I have suffered from colds, causing hoarseness and entire loss of voice. In my profession of an auctioneer any affection of the voice or throat is a serious matter, but at each attack, I have been relieved by a few doses of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. This remedy, with ordinary care, has worked such a that I have suffered very little inconvenience. I have also used it in my family, with excellent results, in coughs, colds, &c."—Wm. H. Quartly, Minlaton, Australia.

"In the spring of 1853, at Portsmouth, Va., I was prostrated by a severe attack of typhoid pneumonia. My physicians exhausted their remedies, and for one year I was not able to even articulate a word. By the advice of Dr. Shaw I tried Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and to my surprise and great joy, in less than one month I could converse easily, in a natural tone of voice. I continued to improve and have become since a well man. I have often recommended the Pectoral, and have never known it to fail."—George R. Lawrence, Valparaiso, Ind.

FARM NOTES.

HOW TO TRAIN A HORSE.

Prof. Gleason, noted horse trainer, has some good ideas about governing and managing equines. For example, he says the word "whoa" is often misused, or rather, used so it does not mean anything. "Now the word 'whoa' is the greatest command that we give in horsemanship. Never utter it unless you desire your horse or horses to stop. It is quite common to say 'whoa,' when it is only intended to go slower, or when the horse has not stirred a foot, to let him know of your presence. One day when your life may depend upon a 'whoa,' you will find that your horse is not stopped by it, because you have entirely played it out for him. Never lie to your horse, never deceive him or make false motions, for if you do you will never make a success as a trainer of the horse. Mankind are too apt to depend on their own strength to beat the horse, without making use of their reasoning powers to out-general him; and in many instances an exercise of tyranny over the horse only engenders a rebellious spirit on the part of the animal. Lay aside your strength, and use your reason."

RAISE AND NOT RACE HORSES.

An anonymous writer, who evidently possesses good sense, observes that it is the custom with many farmers whose horses show any degree of speed in trotting or pacing to take them around to all the country fairs as racers, instead of putting them on the market as roadsters, and getting fancy prices for them. In doing this they spend time and money on them, generally get little or no return for it, and often ruin the horses. A farmer should stick to his business, and let others do the racing. His business is to raise and not race horses, and whenever he gets out of his sphere he is almost certain to lose money.

Of Vanderbilt's action in weeping upon the neck of Maud S. when parting with her, the Philadelphia Press says: "This is one of the most touching instances of watering stock in the whole Vanderbilt history."

THE AMOUNT OF PRODUCE A WELL MANAGED GARDEN IS CAPABLE OF YIELDING.

The Boston Transcript says: "The amount of produce a well managed garden is capable of yielding is well shown by the following statement recently made by G. W. Hallock & Son concerning their fifty-eight acres of land near Greenpoint, Long Island, during last year: 3,750 bushels of onions and 4,500 bushels of carrots; early cabbages, 5,500 barrels; early potatoes, 2,500 bushels; strawberries, 11,000 quarts; onions from sets, 2,260 bushels; white beans, 160 bushels; carrots, 11,000 bushels; late potatoes, 450 bushels; onions from seed, 3,900 bushels; ears of corn, 2,000 bushels; Brussels sprouts, 500 bushels; potato onion sets, 10 bushels; carrot seed, 40 pounds; onion seed, 100 pounds; Brussels sprout seed, 4 pounds; cabbage seed, 2 pounds; Hungarian grass, 3 tons; cabbage plants to carry over, 250,000.

Sweet Breath.

There are two causes why your breath is offensive: One is you have the first stages of catarrh, though you may not know it. Another reason is you do not clean your teeth properly. If you will cure your catarrh by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, and clean your teeth carefully by using Hood's Tooth Powder, your breath will be sweet and your general health better.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

CHICAGO.

The trustees of the Church Home for Aged Persons are about to extend the privileges of their institution. Encouraged by their success in providing a home of rest for aged ladies, they now intend to open a department for aged gentlemen and aged couples. It is proposed to provide comfortable rooms for aged persons, particularly men of the various professions who have seen better days. The home is located at 4333 Ellis avenue.

Articles of incorporation of the American Underground Mining Exhibit Company (limited), capital stock $1,000,000, to build an underground display mine to exhibit the mineral resources of the United States at the World's Fair at Chicago, have been filed with the Secretary of State of Illinois.

The November meeting of the Chicago Congregational club was Monday addressed on the subject of "Penal Institutions and Prison Reforms," by ex-President Rutherford B. Hayes and the Hon. Frederick H. Wines, secretary of the state board of charities.

Morris Reinniker, a boy who lost a finger in handling a brick machine while in the employ of the Anderson Pressed Brick company, was given a verdict of $3,000 by a jury in Judge Baker's court in his suit for $15,000 damages.

THE INDIANS.

The reports from the Indian agencies where the devil-possessed dances have been going on were much modified early last week and the alarm of the Dakota settlers was nearly removed, but the news of Monday morning is again alarming.

The Sioux tribe at Regina, Northwest Territory, say they will shortly move across the American boundary at the request of their brethren there. This undoubtedly is a result of the Messiah craze.

From Pine Ridge Agency: Red Hawk and Grey Belt, agency police, have just returned from spy work at the camp of the hostiles in the Bad Lands. One had his horse shot from under him and both were chased away with bulletts. The hostiles said they were prepared for the last great battle in history. All are thirsting for blood.

A dispatch from Dickinson, N. D., says: "The Indian troubles are causing much alarm to the settlers at remote places west of here. Citizens of Belfield, twenty miles west, were surprised yesterday to see settlers with their families coming in from all directions. They were all very much scared, having heard that the Indians were camped on Grand River, fifty miles south. The situation was so alarming that a leading citizen arrived here from Bedfield to-day to consult with the authorities and learn the truth of the situation."

It is believed the Bad Lands in Montana have been chosen for the rendezvous of the revolting Indians. Hundreds of cattle, and wagon loads of flour have been stolen, it is reported, and run off to this stronghold.

COUNTRY.

The mayor of Cincinnati has threatened to revoke the license of a public hall if the proprietor permits the anarchists to celebrate there.

Three men were killed and five injured by the explosion of a boiler at Mertztown, Pa.

The whaling bark Ocean arrived at San Francisco Thursday, bringing 4,000 gallons of oil and 3,200 pounds of bone. She reports the loss of six sailors. They had mortally wounded a whale and approached too close. The whale struck the boat and the men were thrown out and drowned or killed.

The Department of State at Washington has received information that Moussa Bey, who has been persecuting American missionaries in Turkey, has been banished to the interior of Arabia.

A span of a bridge over the Kaw River at Kansas City, Mo., gave way while a freight train was crossing and the entire train was precipitated into the river. The fireman and a Negro who was stealing a ride were killed and five others were injured.

A boiler in Edward Trexler's stove factory at Mertztown, Pa,, exploded at 7 o'clock Monday morning, killing three men and seriously injuring five others. The force of the concussion was felt a distance of five miles.

While skating Sunday near Phillips, Wis., Charles Osterman, Edward Brown and Fay Bartoe, aged respectively 16, 14 and 11, were drowned.

James Stockton met his wife in Memphis, Tenn., Friday for the first time since the Johnstown flood. Each had mourned the other as dead, believing that they had been bereaved by the awful disaster. Mr. Stockton had gone to California, and Mrs. Stockton was in Massachusetts.

FOREIGN.

The earl of Aberdeen has offered to contribute £1,000 toward putting into operation Gen. Booth's scheme of social regeneration.

A final treaty of peace between San Salvador and Guatemala was signed Sunday in the capital of the latter country. General Sanchez, leader of the Guatemalan rebels, surrendered on Monday.

A serious riot took place near Moscow last week, 100 peasants being wounded by soldiers for refusing to obey the commands of newly appointed district officials.

A violent shock of earthquake was felt Friday throughout the Danube Valley. The inhabitants were panic-stricken and fled in terror from their houses. No serious damage is reported.

The decisions of the tariff committee so increase restrictions on commerce as to threaten to isolate Russian trade from the rest of the world. Even farming machinery is subject to a high tariff.

Thanksgiving-Day was celebrated in Berlin by 400 Americans, who attended a banquet given at the Kaiserhof.

The steamship Australia arrived Friday from Honolulu. The Hawaiian Minister of Foreign Affairs is said to have stated on Nov. 20 that King Kalakana would leave on the United States flagship Charleston Nov. 25 for a visit to California, but would not extend his journey further.

THE TIME for prompt, energetic action and if need be of self-denial for a good cause is NOW if ever it is to be. A. D. 1890 is almost gone. Have you, dear friendly reader, made any effort yet to enlarge the "Cynosure" list? Can you not speak to a neighbor and get a new subscription or encourage a renewal. Just now a few words from each of a few thousand friends of the N. C. A. would give a mighty uplift to the reform.

The secret society known as the National Farmers' Alliance and Industrial Union met last Tuesday at Ocala, Florida, for its annual convention. The session is secret, but the press seems to obtain the proceedings as readily as if there were no such injunction. This Alliance, though bound by secret obligations, has already been the scene of most unfraternal and heated quarrels. The principal difficulty lies in the management of Dr. Macune, who is editor of the National Economist, chairman of the executive committee and also of the legislative committee. Under his management the paper has fostered monopolies, and opposed measures which the Alliance has endorsed. He is charged with receiving passes for railway travel and spending his time in political work. The tendency of this organization is directly toward a new political organization—a political party on the foundation of a secret society, and controlled by secret obligations. Such a combination would deserve the condemnation of every patriotic American; and the villainies which would very soon begin to thrive under its shadow would soon cause a general outburst of indignation.

The criticism of Dr. George upon the Thanksgiving proclamation of President Harrison finds an echo in our Washington letter The annual message exhibits the deplorable lack of moral courage on the part of our chief executive equally with the former document. The message though a well written document shows a mental subserviency which no one can admire in an American President. The late elections everybody can see is a rebuke of the late tariff legislation, but Mr. Harrison assumes to ignore that fact. He urges, too, the Lodge election bill upon which the Republicans themselves are much divided. The measure aims to suppress a great evil which ought never to have been allowed to grow to its present proportions, but as gross frauds have been practiced in our Northern States in favor of the saloon as the Southern whites have perpetrated on their black fellow Americans. This fact is ignored, but much comfort is taken in the large revenue paid by whiskey distillers into the U. S. Treasury. No defalcations have occurred in collecting the millions of revenue, but the poor Indians have been robbed by some covert rascality. Why not find and shoot the real authors of our Indian scare, instead of the wretched redskins. The President would have done better if he had had a more courageous and independent spirit in his annual advice to the representatives of the people.

Powderly, chief of the Knights of Labor, was at the Farmers' Alliance meeting in Florida and made a remarkable speech, if the press reports are accurate. He attacked the employment of labor-saving machinery because it defrauded workmen, he said, of the right to work. He was especially bitter in his denunciation of the electric devices of all kinds, and declared that captalists in their greed had even cornered God's wrath and compelled it to do their bidding. Such sentiments show a cracked brain, as if his late defeat and exposure in New York had overbalanced his mind. This supposition is more especially plausible since he was talking to planters whose cotton crop depended as much upon labor-saving devices as upon the soil from which it grew; and almost as much might be said for the wheat crop and the corn.

The Protestants in the north of Ireland, who have been praying to be saved from Irish Home Rule controlled by the Pope in Rome, are taking courage. The affairs of the Home Rulers are in the direst confusion; the leaders are pitted against each other, and the world beholds with some regret what kind of a body an Irish Parliament might be. After several stormy meetings of the Irish members of the British Parliament, in which Parnell presided, a crisis was reached on Saturday after a letter from Gladstone was read agreeing to confer in confidence with any Irish leader but Parnell. Parnell refused to allow a motion asking him to retire, and amid a wild uproar forty-five members withdrew, the best of the party, leaving twenty-eight with Parnell. Justin McCarthy was elected leader by the majority, and they will start a paper. Parnell retains control of the minority, and of the National Land League organization with its funds amounting to about $100,000. The Irish press stands by him and many of the local branches of the League are declaring in his favor, while others vehemently condemn his course. The seceders rely mainly on the priests and heirarchy of the Romish church in finally obtaining a popular verdict. Both parties are preparing for the struggle that impends when the appeal is made to their Irish constituents.

The sentiment below given at a recent banquet will be commended by every right-minded citizen. It will not please the office-grabber, who serves his country by the day and for what gain can be made at the expense of his fellow citizens. The speaker on that occasion said: "This is 'our' country because the people have established it, because they rule it, because they have developed it, because they fought for it and because they love it. And still each generation of Americans holds it only in trust for those who shall come after them; and they are charged with the obligation to submit it as strong and sound as it came to their hands. It is not ours to destroy, it is not ours to sell and it is not ours to neglect and injure. It is ours as our families are ours and as our churches and schools are ours—to protect and defend, to foster and improve." If we withhold the name of the speaker these words will be admired by many who frown at the mere mention of the name of Grover Cleveland. He seldom said anything better.

When we boast of the greatness of America it is well to consider whether or no our self-gratulations are deserved. We are told by some compilers of statistics that although we have but one-twentieth of the world's population, we consume 28 per cent of the world's crop of sugar, 30 per cent of the world's crop of coffee, nearly one-third of its production of iron, about a third of the steel and copper, more than a quarter of the cotton and wool, a third of the india rubber of the world, more than half the world's supply of tin, and 40 per cent of all the coal from the world's mines. We expect when a machine is fed liberally the product will be in proportion. If America is so vast a consumer of the world's products, we must show immense results or deserve blame rather than praise. Not alone in material prosperity and physical comfort should this be manifest, but vastly more in mental and moral culture and in religious development and energy. It may be seriously questioned whether we excel in any respect what may be reasonably demanded of us.

PRESIDENT HARRISON'S DEISTIC PROCLAMATION.

BY REV. H. H. GEORGE, D.D.

Thanksgiving is over; and many a Christian heart has been sincerely joyful as it recounted the blessings rich and numberless that had been received in the year gone by. Many a group of assembled worshipers have filled their sanctuaries with anthems of praise to an exalted Saviour, whose death has secured to them such an inheritance of blessing.

A sense of humiliation, however, was felt, wide as the Christian song was sung, that the Executive call to this delightful service was so far from a recognition of that Divine Lord Christ, from whom all these blessings come. Christian people worshiped Christ, although that call would not so much as name his name.

Our President knows—I do not say he ought to know—he does know that there is no worship through any other name than that of Christ Jesus. That everything else is mockery. He did not mean to call this nation to mock God: and yet when he refused to name the name of Him through whom alone the nation could approach God in worship, what else can it be than mockery. Nor was it an oversight. A committee of able, earnest Christian men had waited on him some time before, purposely to press this point. They had besought him to most seriously consider the duty and necessity of it, and had even with him bowed before the throne of grace and entreated Divine direction for him. Yet after all this he issued a purely deistic proclamation. Ought not Christian people cry out against such a substitution of deism for the only religion of the cross? President Harrison seemed to forget that Scripture which says, "He that hath not the Son hath not the Father," and attempted to call the nation to worship him without the Son, which is not to worship him at all.

That such a call to worship can be made grows out of a fatal mistake when our Constitution was framed and adopted, in that it did not by clear and explicit terms recognize the Lord Jesus Christ as the source of all authority and power, as well as the fountain of all blessing, both spiritual and secular. From this omission has grown much of the deistical spirit of religion in our land. This has not only allowed it, but given a national encouragement to it, until thousands have fallen into it and assert that it is the true idea, and they want nothing else. They hate the name of Christ, and they are glad to accept a sham in the place of Christian worship.

In a land of Bible-diffused light do not men know that deism is but another form of paganism? As Baal was the Phœnician image of a god, and Jupiter the reality of Roman abstraction, so deism is the imagination of a god in our advanced day. But there is no worship in it, and there cannot be. Of Jesus alone the Scripture says, "Neither is there salvation in any other; for there is none other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved."

Among other evils that have grown out of such a deistical drift is the so-called religion of secret societies,—Masonry, for example.

This fraternity has its paraphernalia of worship; with Scripture mutilated to suit its deistical service; prayers made for the purpose; and hammer, and trowel, and square—dead, material, metal instruments, that are a suitable representation of a dead worship—and all under the name and appearance and make-believe of a religion. Such is only the natural fruit of such a deistical tendency in our religious life. It has not been emphasized enough from our pulpits, religious platforms and presses that deism is a sham substitute for religion. While it puts on the appearance, and makes believe, it can be nothing but sheer mockery.

Is it not better to give everything its right name? If we are talking about worship, call it worship and go about it in the way that God has commanded worship. If we are playing at religion, and want to make a mockery, let us call it mockery and ask the people to a sham service.

Here, no doubt, is one and perhaps the main secret of the fact that our national Thanksgiving is fast growing into a national "holiday." If it be for deistical worship, why not make it a holiday? Such an idea will loosen from the mind and heart the sacred bands of worship, and will give the day over to feasting, accompanied with folly and forgetfulness of God. I have no objection to a national holiday, not by any means; but I feel that it is a pity to set aside a day for holy worship and then turn it into a general play day. Better we worship God on the day we set apart for that purpose, and find some other day to be given to play.

It is the mistake of mistakes to pretend a religious service, and go about it in the way of a mockery. "Be not deceived; God is not mocked; whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap."

Beaver Falls, Pa.

THE BEN-EVOLENT SOCIETIES AND THE MAL-EVOLENT SOCIETIES.

The Boss looked out and called aloud: "Come here, Ben! What are you doing, Mal?"

"I was helping Ben," says Mal; and Ben quietly told the Boss that Mal was not helping him although he pretended to. The Boss believed Ben, and told him to take charge of Mal, and see that he did the work properly, and if not to discharge him.

Mal suspected that his work didn't please and hated Ben so much that although they were both of the Evolent family, yet he felt certain they could not live together without the open repture of his pretended friendship. Therefore Mal determined to get rid of Ben and thus avert, if possible, the blow from his own head.

They were both members in the order of the grand United Brotherhood, where Mal's influence far exceeded that of Ben's; and consequently Ben disappeared in a way unknown except to a chosen few of Mal's own personal friends. Ben was a relative of the celebrated Dr. Cronin.

Societies, organizations and orders abound, and they are all engaged in specially benevolent objects. Juvenile societies among churches also abound which are based on the same secrecy principle as the older societies. They are therefore excellent training schools which prepare the rising generation for the duties required by the secret societies which are "working for the good of humanity," as a writer in one of our city papers says, and "Foremost among the enterprizes in this direction is the building of the new Masonic Temple."

The cranks and bigots who can't see how much more good is done by the societies than by churches should have their tongues tied, or should be imprisoned as a nuisance to the community. But as our civil government won't do so, any person can see the advantage of having societies for valuable services of this kind to be done secretly, and in nine cases out of ten nobody else disturbed thereby. Who will deny that such services are purely benevolent to all sensible people in every church and in every state? Why not save the state the trouble of hanging all the John Browns by removing disturbers of the peace away from among our glorious, free, prosperous and enlightened—yes, and benevolent people, as seen in all their active societies, associations and orders, and even in their slow-going old churches, some of which very cordially welcome lodge members and acknowledge the benefit thereby obtained!

True, the religious rites are not exactly the same; but as lodges welcome all religions, of course the rites and prayers must be made agreeable to all who are ready thus to be of the one brotherhood of mankind, by laying aside, so far, the peculiar ideas of each; for every one is at liberty to indulge his own ideas anywhere else than in the lodges of such broad, liberal, benevolent brotherhoods.

Of course the Roman Catholic must give up the authority of his church and the pope within such an order as Freemasonry, just as Protestants surrender their Bible and Christ, or Mohammedans their Koran and prophet, or the Jew the Old Testament and Moses. Otherwise they cannot become members of that ancient benevolent society, the distinguished source of most of our secret orders.

JOB COLDANHOT.

CIVIL GOVERNMENT AS RELATED TO DIVINE LAW.

BY REV. H. H. HINMAN.

The Bible teaches that human governments are of Divine appointment. "The powers that be are ordained of God" (Rom. 13: 1). It teaches not only subjection to the authority of the State (Titus 3: 1), but that the State itself is subject to Divine law. "The nation that will not serve thee shall perish" (Isa. 60: 12).

I propose to consider what are the moral duties of the State, and in what respect they differ from the duties of the individual. States as well as persons should "do justly, love mercy, and walk humbly before God." To do justly, the State must refrain from all invasion of the rights of other States, its own citizens, or of any sentient being. It should execute justice between every man and his neighbor and carefully defend the rights of all men, not only in its own domain, but, as far as practicable, among all mankind. It should protect public morals by making virtue easy and vice difficult, and hence should suppress all kinds of business that experience has shown to be destructive of the highest good of society. It should sacredly keep all righteous promises, either to nations or individuals. It should provide for its own stability and defence by securing general education and morality, and by the inculcation of the principles of international comity, and providing for peace by the arbitration of differences.

The State should "love mercy," i. e., be practically benevolent, by providing for the helpless poor, the imbecile and the insane, and the relief of general distress in case of public calamity. The State should be interested in the well being of all mankind and any great crime against humanity, such as wars of conquest, the slave-trade and the sending of opium and alcoholic drinks to barbarous peoples, ought to secure its attention and intervention by all legitimate means. The State should show mercy to those convicted of crime, but only when the ends of justice and the interests of society have been adequately secured. It should forgive the wrongs done by another State, and do good in place of the injury received, in all cases, except when the rights of its citizens would be seriously impaired thereby. The Golden Rule applies to nations just as truly as to individuals.

The State should "walk humbly before God," by a careful obedience to Divine law, so far as it is applicable to a corporate body. It can, and ought to, keep the Sabbath. It should humbly recognize the authority of God as the source of all law, in all its official acts and declarations, and it should recognize his providence in all events. It should secure adequate religious instruction to the inmates of alms-houses and prisons, and all legislative bodies should invoke the blessings of Jehovah. As the State cannot compel obedience to God it ought not to establish religion or prohibit the free exercise thereof. But no religious acts inconsistent with fundamental morality, as revealed in the Christian Scriptures, and in the moral consciousness of mankind, ought to be tolerated. The State should protect men in their religious privileges and in their right to keep the Sabbath.

Wherein the duties of the State differ from those of the individual. As we have seen there is much in common, but, the State is the trustee of the rights of its citizens. As such it has no right to waive their rights or to condone offences against them. It may punish criminals. It is bound to do so. It is "a messenger to execute wrath upon him that doeth evil" (Rom. 13: 4). The individual may waive his personal rights, condone and forgive offences against him, but he is expressly forbidden to execute vengeance (Rom. 12: 19.) and is commanded to forgive. He may appeal to the law for personal protection, but he must commit its execution to the State.

The State may defend itself and its citizens by all lawful means, even to the extent of taking life. The individual is nowhere authorized, by the law of Christ, to use violence in defending himself against his neighbor; on the other hand, he is expressly forbidden to do so. (Matt. 5: 36.) Against wild beasts or insane men there might be the right of self-defence, but otherwise it is better to suffer wrong than to disobey God. Happily if we dwell in the secret of the Divine presence we "shall abide under the shadow of the Almighty."

Berea, Ky.

It is amusing to see the agony of the public press trying to condemn Mollie Maguire, Clan-na-Gael, and Mafia, without condemning the other lodges. Masonry is the mother of the whole iniquitous brood, and all must stand or fall together. The snaky power of secretism to charm and deceive good men makes it a tremendous power for evil. Lodgery is of the devil, and it hinders every good work in the world.—Aurora, Knoxville, Tenn.

The manner in which marriage licenses are now issued here is simply disgraceful. Any person applying for a license and tendering the fee of one dollar gets it; no questions are asked as to the age, color, or condition of the applicant, or of the person he or she proposes to marry, nor whether they have a legal right to marry, and the license directs any properly ordained minister to marry the couple, provided he finds no legal impediment to the marriage. Just here a great difficulty arises, for it would be difficult to find two experienced lawyers who would agree as to the "legal impediments" that exist against marriage in this District, and to cast the burden of responsibility upon the minister of the Gospel, who is not a legal officer and has no right to administer an oath, is certainly wrong. How can the minister know whether there is a "legal impediment" which might apply to a couple presenting him a regularly issued license, and how can he possibly find out? The proper place to settle the question of the legal right of the parties to marry is before the court officials who issue the license; they have the necessary legal authority to find out; ministers do not.—Washington Letter.

Fair and frank discussion of living issues is in order. If Masonry has a right to live, let it not only assert but prove that right in the field of open debate. If Odd-fellowship has any just claim on the sympathy and toleration of American people, let it make that claim known. If the multitude of inferior organizations and fraternities are any special benefit to the world, please make it manifest. We have read of a "Good Samaritan" lodge, and have wondered at the simplicity and ignorance of those who thus named it. The good Samaritan ministered to one who not only did not belong to his fraternity, but who had a national antipathy to men of his race. In this the spirit of Christ was manifest, in that he ministered to an enemy. It is not well to degrade the term brother by applying it to a clannish organization which confines its benefits to its own members.—Messiah's Herald.

MY OBJECTIONS TO SECRET SOCIETIES IN COLLEGES.

BY REV. HOWARD CROSBY, D.D.,
(Pastor of Fourth Ave. Presbyterian Church, New York.)

[Dr. Crosby, when he contributed the following article to the Congregationalist in 1871 (Vol. 23, No. 21), was Chancellor of the University of New York. He occupied this position from 1870 to 1881. He graduated from that institution at the age of eighteen, and was its Professor of Greek from 1851 to 1859. He afterward held the same position in Rutgers College, New Jersey. He has long been known as one of the ablest of American educators, scholars and divines, though his views of the temperance question have in some respects been displeasing to the advocates of that reform. He is also the author of several valuable and popular religious works. In response to a request for a contribution on college secret societies to appear in the present discussion, he replied that his engagements would not permit his writing, but that his convictions were unchanged since 1871 when he wrote this often-quoted article for the Boston paper. His present opinion was given in that writing. It was reprinted in this paper in May, 1871. We take pleasure, after these years, of again publishing it for the readers of to-day.—Ed. Cynosure.]

The heart of man loves secrecy, because it is an element of power. The honest heart, which would not seek secrecy as a cloak of sin, may yet rejoice in the necessary secrecy of a superior knowledge or experience. There is a pleasure, too, in having others aware that there is this reserved power within us, but of the high moral character of this pleasure we may have our doubts. Of its prevalence, however, we can have no doubt. The child in the nursery cries out in triumph to its fellow, "I know something that you don't;" and is as proud of its bit of concealed information as a man might be of a golden fortune. The nursery recognizes power in the little boaster, even when the other envious toddlers force their responsive shout of "I don't care." He is known as the possessor of a secret, and the heartlets around are longing to share it with him. Conscious of his power, he can now safely ask for a piece of candy from this one, or a bite from the apple of another, without fear of a refusal.

Solid, studious men get this power in a legitimate way. By long toiling through the intricacies of expressed truth in any of the departments of science, they grow from neophytes to veterans in knowledge. They are charged batteries of information and wisdom, and are naturally and necessarily hailed as such by the community. Hidden treasures lie within their minds, and the world pays respect to the power that is implied. For power is man's grandest crown, and knowledge (as the adage says) is power.

Where men cannot gain this position of influence in the legitimate way, either from want of capacity, or indolence, or the necessities of youth, there is a very natural endeavor to gain it by trick and assumption. Lying diplomas bought or stolen, flattering endorsements of obligated friends, the whimseys of political chicane will do for them what only hard labor could do for honest men. So are born "quacks," not panoplied from the head of Jove, but like the filthy harpies, from the seed of the hundred-headed Typhon. In this wicked world of ours, Minervas are the strange birth of miraculous labors, while the monsters of hypocrisy are the products of the ordinary generation of vice.

We have no hesitation in writing secret societies among the quackeries of this earth, a part of the great system by which the mud-begotten try to pass themselves off as the Jove-born. Leave out those secret associations, whose concealment is for safety, as in political crises, and a secret society is a deception, more or less innocent according to the character of its contents.

My first objection to the secret societies of our colleges is founded on the above considerations. They are pretences, and thus at war with truth, candor and manliness. "Omne ignotum pro magnifico" is the principle from which they draw their life. However harmless in their actual operations or undertakings, however well composed in their membership, however pure in their meetings they may be, the fact of secrecy is insidiously weakening the foundations of frank truthfulness in the youthful mind. The Sophomore wears his badge, an emblem of a sham, and feels a glow of pride in supporting an hypocrisy. This language is not too strong to those who are accustomed to trace the great evils of our world to their germs, and who would strangle the tiger when he is a manageable cub. These little (?) divergencies from truth in children and youth become the gigantic frauds of great world-life by the simple action of time upon divergent lines of progress. There can be no more important instruction inculcated on our young men than the necessity of truthful openness as the very warp of all virtue. Everything that conflicts with this is a poison and will leave its mark upon the character. A sham is not only in itself a mean thing, but it blocks the way to truth. A lazy soul (and I believe all souls in the flesh are lazy) finding a quasi success in the sham, gives up the pursuit of the true. The lad who receives honor among his comrades because he wears a mystic skull and bones upon his breast, will proportionally lose so much of his zeal for scholarship and all else that constitutes true worth. He has his fortune (he thinks) and he does not care for new ventures or investments.

My second objection to secret societies in our colleges is in the opportunity given by the secrecy to immoralities. I do not speak ignorantly but from a personal experience. Thirty years ago I was a member of a college secret society, and, while I had upright fellow-members, and we encouraged literary culture, I found the association was chiefly a temptation to vice. The promise of secrecy prevented all disclosure to parents, and the seclusion was thus perfect. We met in a back room of a hotel, liquor was brought from the bar-room for the company, and, as in all such styles of association, the conversation gravitated to the obscene and sensual. At times the scene became painfully demonstrative. I do not charge all or any of our college secret societies with such excesses at this day. Thirty years may have wrought a change. The very society to which I belonged, I have reason to believe, at this time is perfectly free from these stains. But still they all offer a remarkable opportunity for sins, in which publicity would not allow their members to indulge for a moment.

A man is certainly no better morally for a restraint from any sin, but the community is better off by his restraint, and he himself is on a more hopeful road. Youth should be especially a season of restraint for the most obvious reasons, and any secrecy established at this crisis of life is in direct war with restraint.

A third objection I have alluded to above. The confidence between parent and child is broken, and hence destroyed, by these secret societies. How a father's heart sinks as his son, returning from college at his first vacation, refuses, for the first time, to be full and candid in his communications! He has joined a secret society, and his father is no more a confidant. The sacredness of love receives its first blow; its beauty is rudely defaced. A free and entire communion between the young and their parents is both the safeguard of the young and the comfort of the parents. This the secret societies of our colleges overthrow. I have referred to the father because the mother is generally prepared to see her growing son apply to the father in all his growing experiences, and, with the self-sacrifice that has its only home in a mother's heart, she yields that proper and natural inquisition which she has maintained so long. When, however, this new form of the family bond is broken, there is no heart that bleeds so freely as the mother's. The secrecy of the college society renders it peculiarly adapted to be a rival to the family. Now a young man too easily learns the false and sad lesson that it is manly to slight domestic ties, and substitute a species of club-life in its place, and where that club-life takes on the fascinations of secrecy, the danger is greatly augmented.

These are my three main objections to secret societies. They refer to the general principles of morality, and may be applied to all secret societies among the young. But there are other local objections that belong to the college, and these I will briefly enumerate.

I have some experience as a college officer, and for years occupied the post of secretary of the Faculty in one of our institutions, which post was that (among other things) of chief of police. The delinquents were consigned to my care. It was mine to advise and chide, to visit parents, and to communicate the verdicts of the Faculty, and in this way the statistics of college derelictions came constantly under my eye. The observations I now offer are made, therefore, from a double opportunity which I have enjoyed.

Under this preamble I put my fourth objection, that college secret societies interfere with a faithful course of study. The college curriculum demands the whole energy of a student. All that he can reserve from necessary recreation should be given to his studies. This is his great work, on which his whole life depends. Failure here will run as failure in some form all through his decades. There is a tide of practical opposition to this plain truth manifest in some of our oldest colleges. Recreation is made the business (it appears) of college life. Boat clubs and base ball clubs, instead of forming amusements for tempora subseciva, demands a course of training that successfully competes with the college curriculum. I object to secret societies that they do this same thing. They absorb the attention. The nucleus of college life is there rather than in the lecture-room or study. I always found the best students were those who either kept out of the secret societies, or who entered very slightly into their operations. Some of the societies strove to gain the best students, it is true, and so to gain a high standing with the Faculty and the college, but these best students were generally figure-heads. The Napoleons of the secret societies were very low on the college record. These societies upset the foundations of honor by making it honorable for a member to neglect his college duties in order to perform the behests of his Alpha Mu or Tau Delta, and so they shield the offender against academic law, and give to him a sort of glory, where he should be drenched with disgrace.

A fifth objection is found in the natural use of these societies for disturbance of public order. Absurd initiations (either real or pretended), rivalries, and conspiracies find their home and nature in these hidden communions. Out of the darkness dark deeds grow. An enmity against a student or a professor is systematically fostered into persecution in these favoring caucuses of secrecy. A young man who would never have thought of violence, is led by the false sense of honor which reeks in secret societies, to join hand with others in a crime against the State. Of course this is not the universal and inevitable issue of secret societies, but this has frequently been their history, and they are naturally fitted for such results. The minor disturbances of college order, of which they are the causes, are legion.

The sixth objection I have to offer is their evil influence upon the regular literary societies of the college, which are instituted as adjuncts of the curriculum. The secret societies are more fascinating. They assert themselves in the literary societies by the quarrels of rival factions, and literature flies out of the window. I believe that I am right in asserting that in most of our colleges the literary societies (most important helps to the student in composition and oratory) have been utterly ruined, except as alumni centers, by the secret societies.

My last objection is their expensiveness. The great majority of students are poor. They need to live with a strict economy. The secret society asks more of them, oftentimes, than their education asks. Even buildings are put up for the societies, and extravagantly furnished, and for these the students are taxed. To refuse payment would be to suffer disgrace. Debts are incurred, and mental agony sown broadcast by these inflictions of a bastard honor, which are throwing obstacles in the way of the education of the poor, while good men throughout the country are laboring to open college education to all.

I know that many excellent men, long after they leave college, support these societies. Ministers of eminence are their chaplains (save the mark!) and statesmen wear the mystic badges. But for all that, I cannot but believe that the principle on which they rest is pernicious, and nothing is gained by them which might not be gained far better by open dealing. The principle is not only pernicious, but childish, an anti-climax which may have weight with some who would prefer to do wrong than to be reckoned as lacking wit.

NEW ENGLAND LETTER.

The weather—What makes the charm of secret societies—Father Ignatius and Bishop Paddock—Mrs. Phelps Ward's new summer home—Connecticut to have the Australian ballot system—The mite box plan; shall we adopt it?

Thanksgiving day brought with it a cold wave which only added to the brightness and cheer in countless happy homes. The fact that this time-sanctioned holiday comes at the gloomiest season of the year is really one of its chief attractions, and those foolish iconoclasts who want it appointed a month earlier have surely not looked very deeply into the subject, or considered that being essentially an indoor festival it would lose half its claims on the popular affection if held when brighter skies and longer days tempted to outside diversions. This morning the mercury at zero, and a fierce northern blast that cannot have been long on its way from the Arctic circle, makes one glad that the little musk-rats and beavers have been provided with fur of triple thickness, which is one among the "unfailing signs" by which the weather-wise prognosticate a winter of unusual length and severity. So far their predictions seem in a fair way to be verified. And by the way, what is the peculiar charm that dwells in certain things?—in this study of the weather, for instance. Is it the pleasure of entering into Nature's secret counsels as it were? of having the angels of cloud and wind for teachers? or something more subtle still, akin to that of astrologers and necromancers and other dabblers in forbidden arts? Whatever it is, the local weather prophet is still an important character in many sections of New England; and though like his brother wizard, with his divining rod of witch hazel, his shadow is constantly growing less. It seems a pity that it should be so, for so far as the writer has had the honor of his acquaintance he is always a quaint, original character, which he is good-naturedly ready to impart in the same way it was given him—without money and without price.

"Who has his own free, bookless lore,"

The Boston Traveler contains, semi-weekly or oftener, a special department of several columns devoted especially to secret society news, headed by an appropriate cut of a very dudish individual knocking for entrance at the door of a lodge. The matter therein contained is made up of items of merely local interest from the various lodges, and is not very entertaining to an outsider; but I have noticed of late an unusual degree of laudation of secret societies in general and of some in particular, from which I infer that the labors of Bro. Stoddard are stirring up the craft and putting them on the defensive. In a recent issue considerable space was devoted to kindly explaining to the uninitiated why "there is a peculiar charm in belonging to a secret society;" and possibly this is what has led me into the present train of thought. Charm in the original Latin means a magic spell, an incantation; but we have lost the old idea, and now use it indiscriminately for a snake or a bird, both of which may be said to "charm," though in vastly different ways. So there is a charm in ascending the lodge ladder as well as in discerning the face of the sky, which is thus expounded:

"The idea that you possess a key to something that everybody has not; that by the use of a talismanic word known only to yourself, and those who have obtained it in the same way that you have, you gain admittance into tastefully furnished halls, not only among your acquaintances but in places remote from your home; that by a sign unknown to the bystander you can warn a friend of danger, or communicate to him your own distress—carries with it a fascination that holds you fast to your association and draws other men to your side."

A franker statement than this of the utterly and thoroughly selfish nature of the lodge bond is seldom seen. The same authority gives us an extract of a letter from an Odd-fellow's lodge in Japan, which states that the order is increasing in that country, but its membership is as yet confined to foreigners, "the government being opposed to all secret societies or meetings." If Japan continues this wise policy she may save herself a world of trouble in the future.

Bishop Paddock has written a reply in defence of his position in refusing to let "Father" Ignatius preach in the pulpits of his diocese which ought to silence his most captious critics. He has at least saved himself from the humiliation of first giving him a license; and then when he had finished his campaign and all the mischief was done, of feeling obliged to revoke it, as did Bishop Clark of Rhode Island, on the ground that the license was granted under a misapprehension, and without an intelligent understanding of Father Ignatius' practices and doctrines. But ought not the good Bishop, as a faithful shepherd of souls, to have made himself acquainted with those "practices and doctrines" before giving the license?

If the Boston Political Class for women could become a feature in the social life of all our cities and towns, it would do much to enlarge and broaden their outlook, and make such sweeping strictures on the sex cease to be truth. From a very small beginning it has now grown to be a regular Association, which meets in the Church of the Disciples on Warren avenue every alternate Wednesday afternoon to study such subjects as, What has been done by the Fifty-first Congress? The Federal Election Bill, Reciprocity with the South American States, and kindred matters. They also hold free public meetings occasionally with addresses on various political topics, the last one having for its theme, Publicity as a Basis for Social Progress. They have not yet got so far as to take hold of The Lodge as a Factor in Politics, but the day is fast approaching when its influence cannot be ignored.

Connecticut is to have the Australian ballot system, which seems everywhere to be conquering its way in spite of the objection made by some that it bears too hard on the illiterate voter. America ought to have no illiterate voters, and if it wakens the ambition in our foreign element as well as a portion of our native born, to be intelligent citizens rather than tools of the saloon, it will be a blessed day that it was introduced.

"Mite boxes" are now the fashion; and being a Scriptural as well as a common-sense fashion, why not try the mite box plan in our reform work? The New England secretary throws this out merely as a suggestion, but she would be very glad to hear from any who would favor it as a means of interesting even the youngest, and making them feel that they too have a share in this blessed labor of saving New England for Christ. Friends, talk the subject over with the young people who gather around your firesides, and report at our annual meeting.

REFORM NEWS.

THE IOWA STATE MEETING.

A GOOD REPORT OF A GOOD MEETING.

FAIRFIELD, Iowa, Dec. 4th, 1890.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—The annual meeting of the Iowa Christian Association closed last evening. The meeting was well attended, all things considered, and the interest was good throughout. God in his all-wise providence having called away our beloved and devoted president, Rev. Wm. Johnston of College Springs, Rev. D. McKee, of Clarinda, one of the vice-presidents, was called to the chair. The brother who was to have made the opening address was unable to be with us on account of sickness, and the brother who was to have replied was called away to another part of the State by pressing work. Besides these, all the expected speakers reported and gave us very interesting and profitable addresses.

Rev. C. F. Hawley addressed us on "The Religion of Masonry;" Rev. P. A. Seguin of Chicago, on "Why I left the Roman Catholic Church;" Rev. S. A. Gilley of Marengo, on "Secrecy and the State;" Rev. M. A. Gault, on "Dangers which Threaten the Republic;" Rev. T. P. Robb, on "Lodge Oaths;" and last, but not least, President C. A. Blanchard.

A number of reform songs were sung at the sessions specially devoted to speaking by Rev. F. J. Wilson of Wayne, Iowa, which added much to the interest and enjoyment of the convention.

The forenoon session of Wednesday was devoted to business. Amendments to the constitution were submitted by W. L. Enlow, which were adopted. The date of the annual meeting was fixed on the second Tuesday of November. The following resolutions were adopted:

WHEREAS, The highest interests of the human family have always been conserved by the use of methods which are accessible to the individuals of the community, without regard to race, birth, or other distinction; and

WHEREAS, The highest welfare of the persons making up the community at large is dependent upon the proper recognition of our mutual dependence upon each other; and

WHEREAS, God has wisely ordained that the affairs of our secular and social relations shall be under the control of the State, while the concerns of the soul are committed to the church of Jesus Christ; therefore,

Resolved, 1. That every work of benevolence, charity, or reform which is along the line of evangelism or social elevation, and which is under the auspices of the church, or with the consent of the State, has our heartiest sympathy and our moral support. We commend the many noble lines of charity which are doing duty in saving God's poor ones as far as these use methods which are open, and in other ways in harmony with the divine law of universal benevolence.

2. It is the duty of the State as the ordinance which God has appointed for the administration of civil affairs to guard the citizens against the secret plots, plans and designs of those who may choose to band together in secret clans, fraternities, circles, or whatever they may be called. To this end the State owes it to the general good of society to treat as outlaws all associations which club together in the lodges of the present day, especially those which bind their members under blasphemous and murderous oaths, such as the Jesuits, the Clan-na-Gael, Freemasons, and the rest of the line from the same source.

3. We hail with gladness the fact that the line of worthy opponents of the lodge evil is being daily augmented, and while the lodge boasts the "good man" argument we are able to cite a list of worthies whose names are reverenced and their opinions respected, all over the world. With the name of Joseph Cook at the head, we can follow on with a line of worthies who have always championed the truth even though unpopular—a noble band that stand without peer and with few equals.

4. It is our settled conviction that the church of Jesus Christ is the great agency in the hand of God for the overthrow of the entire lodge system; and until the church will stand to the front and do her two-fold duty of testifying for the truth and rescuing the needy, the lodge system is destined to flourish. But if the church will testify faithfully concerning the evil of secretism, the unscriptural and demoralizing character of the heathenish rites of the lodge, exercise paternal discipline upon those who thus go outside of the pale of the church to set up a secret rival, and by this means will purify herself of the evil. Again, when she shall remember the words of our Lord Jesus Christ—"the poor ye have always with you, "and begin to do the works of charity—her legitimate work,—but which is made the excuse for the lodge existing at all, and as well the matter of vain boasting, then will the system of modernized paganism vanish from the earth.

5. We heartily commend to the friends of the cause, the Christian Cynosure, the Birmingham Free Press, and other publications which clearly and consistently testify against the lodge, and urge all friends to give these a liberal support.

6. We give our endorsement to Rev. C. F. Hawley, District Agent, promise him our moral and financial support, and commend him to all the friends of reform as a workman that needeth not to be ashamed. We are reluctant to consent to that arrangement by which he ceases to devote all his time to the work in our own State; and only accede to the arrangement, because we see that the general cause will be conserved by it.

Respectfully submitted,
T. P. ROBB, Chairman.

The Association adopted the following plan of work:

1. That enrollment cards be printed in the following form: [This card beside enrollment provides for a monthly subscription, one-half of which is to be expended in State work, the other to be received back in literature, to be supplied from the Birmingham Free Press. But if above 40 cts per month the money supports a State lecturer.]

2. That the offer of the Free Press be accepted to furnish that paper to members, whose subscriptions only amount to 60 cents a year, at 30 cents a year. And that it be understood that the Free Press be sent to each member as all or part of the literature due him from the Association on this plan, unless the member or some of his family is already a subscriber.

The following were elected the officers for the ensuing year:

President, Rev. S. A. Gilley, Marengo, Iowa.

Vice-presidents, Rev. C. E. Harroun, Rose Hill; Rev. James Parker, Cedar Rapids; Rev. D. McKee, Clarinda; Rev. L. Mendenhall, Fairfield; Isaac Gibson, Salem; John Dorcas, Shiloh; W. H. Hilton, College Springs; George Heaton, Fairfield.

Secretary, Rev. T. P. Robb, Linton, Iowa.

Treasurer and Financial Agent, W. L. Enlow, Birmingham.

Rev. T. P. Robb was appointed fraternal delegate to a meeting of the National Reform Association to be held in Albia, December 4 and 5.

A hearty vote of thanks was given to the kind friends in Fairfield for their abundant hospitality, as also to the friends in Birmingham, who provided a basket dinner for many in the church.

The executive committee consisting of the president, secretary and treasurer, have authority to manage the work during the coming year, as also to determine the place for our next annual meeting.

As we separated from the closing session of the convention the general expression was, "We have had a good convention," and "It was good to be here." C. D. TRUMBULL.

LIVELY DEBATE IN WASHINGTON.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 3d, 1890.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—Sabbath was an eventful day for our reform here. In the morning I gave a missionary address to Rev. Carroll's people, M. E., Georgetown. The people received me kindly and listened attentively to what I had to bring. There was much in the service that I could commend; but as a reformer is supposed to try to right wrong, I will note those things which did not meet my approval, hoping it may be helpful to many who read.

At the close of the service something less than forty lodge notices were read. Each, according to the notice, was to have a grand time for which they invited the people to pay. There was to be a "clothes-pin game" in one church, and for the benefit of the church in which I spoke there was to be a "pigeon pie." It was explained that a live pigeon was to be let out of a pie in the church, and the one catching it alive was to receive a prize. To those who profess to be Christians and countenance such things, I would commend to the prayerful reading of John 2: 13–17. No wonder pastors complain of the few who attend religious service, and spend half their time trying to get free-will offerings from the people, when such things are tolerated.

According to arrangement I read a paper on the religious character of Freemasonry, before the Young People's Society, Second Baptist Church, Washington. As is the custom, my paper was vigorously discussed by those present who desired to do so. My first proposition was: Masonry has a place and form of worship, and as the Jew can join in this worship it cannot be Christian. I said: "At the corner of 9th and F streets, you will see a large building with the words 'Masonic Temple' in large letters. What is a temple? What was the Jewish Temple? Where is the temple of Christ to-day?" The very fact that they call their place of worship a temple, shows that they have worship. The Washington Star in an issue of recent date stated that certain men met "at the holy house of the temple" and marched to the "temple." What would be the "holy house" of the temple? Naturally the place where the holy man of the temple dwelt, the priest of the temple. Who is this so-called "holy priest of the temple?" Albert Pike. Who is Albert Pike? An ex-rebel general. What did he do in our late war? When our boys in blue lay wounded and bleeding on the battle field at Pea Ridge, this so-called "holy" man commanded a lot of Indians to scalp them. According to the statement of one of his family, he had the reputation of being the most profane swearer west of the Mississippi. The religious service conducted by this man is called "holy!!"

There were some young men present from Wayland and Howard Universities. So far as I know those who spoke from these institutions spoke favorably of the paper. The opposition consisted largely of assertions and questions. I was kindly allowed a few moments to reply.

The following are a few points I noted: (1) Masonry is the mother of all secret societies. No reply needed. (2) A man cannot be a good Mason unless he is a good Christian. Reply: "My nearest neighbor is a Jew, a liquor dealer, and if this statement is true, a good Christian, for he is a good Mason." (3) Our emblems, instructions, etc., are all taken from the Bible. Reply: "So is much of the Koran and Joe Smith's teaching. If this is true, it is simply another case of mixing good with bad, which is condemned in the Bible." (4) Christ went among the Jews, etc. Reply: "But he did not offer their sacrifices and thus deny himself."

Some of the questions asked were as follows: Supposing a gentleman, who is of high reputation, keeps all the commandments, etc., sees fit to go into a secret society, will he thereby lose heaven? The questioner wanted a direct pointed answer. Reply: "Such a case is not supposable, as it does not exist. A man who keeps all the commandments, does not join an oath-bound secret society."

Another questioner wanted to know why I did not go to the white churches; why did I not lecture on slavery, etc., inferring that I could not lecture in the white churches and that I favored slavery. I replied that I had lectured in five white churches to one colored; gave some of my grand-father's Abolition history, and concluded with the statement that slavery was a dead issue. I was there to discuss an issue which was manifestly alive. This was received with much applause.

A vote of thanks was given and a resolution passed requesting that I re-read my paper on the third Sabbath afternoon in December. This I shall try to do, although it will interfere with other plans. Will not the one hundred and twenty-five, who read our paper in Washington, consider themselves a committee to be present at this discussion with their friends? Remember the time, December 21st, 3 o'clock. Place, Second Colored Baptist Church. Come early, as the president of the society tells me the house will not hold the people who will want to hear this discussion. Above all, come praying God to own his truth and succeed the right.

W. B. STODDARD.

CORRESPONDENCE.

THE KENTUCKY CONSTITUTION.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—The Kentucky State Constitutional Convention has been in session at Frankfort since early in September. There are a hundred members. Hon. Cassius M. Clay, of Bourbon county, the largest farmer in the State, having some 3,000 acres, a graduate of Yale College and candidate for governor in the coming election, is president. Hon. Proctor Knott, the Congressman who made the celebrated speech against Duluth in 1869, Gov. Buckner and ex-Gov. Blackburn, are among the members. In view of the fact that the old constitution contained no recognition of God, it is interesting to note that the following preamble was unanimously adopted:

"We, the people of the commonwealth of Kentucky, grateful to Almighty God for civil, political and religious liberty which we enjoy, in order to secure to ourselves and to succeeding generations the continuance of these blessings."

The discussion of the Bill of Rights brought out many eloquent speeches. It was stated that the first formal Bill of Rights was the Magna Charta, wrested by the barons with sword in hand on the meadow, twenty miles from London (called from the horse races the Running Mead), June 15, 1215, from King John. Lord Chatham characterized the Bill of Rights, the Petition of Rights and the Magna Charta, as "the Bible of the English Constitution." The work moves along very slowly. It will probably be late in February, 1891, before they have completed it.

I have lately made a canvass of Covington, Ky. I first saw Rev. Dr. Robinson of the Union M. E. church. He was formerly located in Cleveland, Ohio. Rev. Jas. P. Mills, secretary of the American Sabbath Union District Association, preached for him twice while there. Dr. Crafts engaged to spend a Sabbath in his and the Presbyterian church four weeks ago. But at the last moment he telegraphed that he could not come. The way is open for my work.

I next saw Rev. Dr. Davis of the First Baptist church. He is a thorough-going Southerner, being raised in Alabama. Being very conservative he could not give any encouragement. Rev. Dr. Blackburn of the First Presbyterian church was raised twenty miles from Pittsburgh. While in the Allegheny Seminary he heard Drs. Sloane and Milligan, and was well acquainted with our work. He and Dr. Robinson will arrange for me to visit their churches the same day. Rev. Mr. Rollins and Rev. Dr. Keene also were ready to make appointments. J. M. FOSTER.

COLORED REFORMERS IN ARKANSAS.

BRINKLEY, Ark., Nov. 22d, 1890.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—I have been in this State for two weeks. The visit to the Baptist State Convention was quite a treat. Here I found a large number of young men, pastors of the most prominent churches of that denomination in the State. They raised $708 for educational work. Their school, the Arkansas Baptist College at Little Rock, is an institution owned and controlled by the colored people of the State. It is now six years old, and has acquired in that time ten thousand dollars worth of property in the way of real estate, and its first building, barely ready for entrance and operation, will be worth $5,000 when completed. The school, however, is now operating on the first floor while carpenters do their finishing work above.

This school hopes to be counted among those missionary and industrial schools of the South that are working reforms and mighty social changes among our people, so long enslaved and so recently liberated.

The first feature of this school's industrial department is that of a printing outfit. The students do job work and get out the weekly paper known as the Baptist Vanguard. This paper serves as a college paper as well as an ordinary weekly among the weeklies.

Prof. Jos. A. Booker is both editor of the paper and president of the college. He is outspoken, both as editor and as teacher, against the lodges. He was once a member of the Immaculates. He soon afterwards entered Roger Williams' University (Nashville, Tenn.), his alma-mater. There he met this question of reform, then under the light of free, bold discussion. Also, the tracts and other publications of the N. C. A. were scattered through the school by teachers and pious students. By these agencies he was soon convinced, and was put down once for all against the lodges.

If there is one of the Lord's stewards anywhere who as yet has not made himself immortal, he can have a good opportunity to do so by helping this struggling institution. Friends and workers of reform can find a strong ally in the Vanguard while its present editor is at its helm.

SOCIETY QUESTION.

This question is being discussed from nearly every important pulpit in the State. Rev. J. P. Robinson, C. P. Jones, Prof. J. A. Booker, president of the college, and several others in Little Rock, Rev. J. R. Bennett in Hot Springs, and others, are stirring matters and their people are dropping off from the heathen worship rapidly. These pastors are using every honorable effort to supply vacant pulpits with anti-secret pastors. A church in Little Rock is without a pastor, waiting to find such a one. It looks as if the lodge is doomed among the Baptist pastors of Arkansas.

Strange to say, while the whites of nearly every State are getting the saloon-keepers out of their lodges, in this State the saloon thugs run the lodges among the colored people. The Grand Master (?) of the Masons is a saloon-keeper, and I have been told the leaders of every secret order in the State are saloon-keepers and toughs.

THE LIQUOR QUESTION.

There is more independent thought among the colored people of this State possibly than any other Southern State. They have gone with first one faction and then with another, until they are sought for in a campaign likethecommonpeople of the North. In Monroe county there is no saloon and the colored people are largely in the majority. They are beginning to learn that there is not much personal liberty in wasting their money with the liquor men. In the Third Ward in Little Rock, as long as the colored people could get their vote counted they kept saloons out, but in the past election the liquor men stood in with the other fellows, and counted the vote to suit themselves.

I have spoken nearly every night since I came to the State to large crowds, on the lodge and liquor question. The pastors are anxious to have anti-secret tracts to use among their people. Our Prohibition friends could do great good in this State among white and colored. Yours in the work, L. G. JORDAN.

A DARK SIDE OF CITY LIFE.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Nov. 25, 1890.

EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE:—Your readers will remember that a few weeks ago a man gave his Masonic jewels to Mr. Needham, and promised for Christ's sake never to go into the lodge again. Now, the Masons have promised to "heal" him if he will return to the lodge; and last night they invited him to take another degree of Masonry—a degree which they said was so beautiful, and with which he would be so well pleased that he would be willing to walk all the way to New York, if that were necessary, to get it. But he declined, preferring to go with Christ to a mission and work with God for the salvation of men; where he related the incident.

Our brother is warned never to go into a lodge again and let them put the hoodwink and cable-tow on him once more, or he may find to his eternal ruin what Mackey means when he says in his Masonic Lexicon, "The cable-tow has another use, and not figurative, with which Masons are well acquainted;" and they may send him farther than New York—even to their "Grand Lodge above"—the bottomless pit, as they sent Miller of Belfast, Ireland, for saying that Jachin and Boaz was a true book, luring him into the lodge by the promise of a degree gratis, and then choked him with a cable-tow, tore his heart out and flung his lifeless body out of the lodge window into the dock, out of which they fished him in the morning, claiming that he had been murdered by some unknown parties. They buried him with Masonic honors, transferring him by their prayers to their "Grand Lodge above," which can be nowhere else but in hell. See affidavits filed in Boston by Anderton, an eye-witness to the murder. Verily, all the white cannibals were not in Africa with Stanley.

Our lodge-ridden city, full of the spiritual harlots of the lodge, finds its chief glory in doing what caused God, speaking after the manner of men, to repent that he had made man, and made him to resolve upon the destruction of man from the face of the earth, leaving it a lifeless globe of matter like the moon floating in space, as a shapeless wreck in mid-ocean—a mere gravitating force to keep other unfallen worlds in place. "But Noah found grace in the eyes of the Lord."

A few days ago I had occasion to call upon a police official in relation to a certain bad house owned by a brewery company and made to do double duty for the devil as a saloon and a house of assignation. That city official informed me that the merchant princes of the city and the great hotel keepers demanded the existence of such houses, although in violation of city ordinance No. 10, as a business necessity to accommodate their customers and prevent these customers from going to Minneapolis to find the "house of her whose steps take hold on hell." And so, to satisfy the greedy avarice of merchant princes, the city is full of deep pits, the mouths of strange women, into which they that are abhorred of the Lord do fall.

Dear readers of the Cynosure, pray for our dear brother who has escaped from the lodge, and also for our mayor, that he might find Christ and have power to execute the righteous laws we have.

Our pastors are so weak that they cannot speak the truth in their pulpits, even those who confess privately that Freemasonry "is a damnable thing." The First Baptist church has passed a resolution that excommunicates Christ from its fellowship if he appears there in the form of a man and testifies to the truth against what Judge Whitney with good reason called "the darkest and most damnable institution that ever scourged the earth or cursed mankind." Their resolution is that no member of, or visitor to, their church shall ever again mention the subject of Masonry in any of their meetings. The secretary of the Chamber of Commerce offered the resolution, the pastor called for a vote on it, and the church passed it and made it the law of their social organization they call a church.

If my mother were living I would be ashamed to have her go through this city and see the theatre bulletin boards. Every virtuous woman in the city is insulted by the exposures of female nakedness on these theatre bulletin boards. Sabbath evenings the young people throng these theaters, while a meagre few may be seen at the "young people's prayer meetings." Yours for righteousness, WILLIAM FENTON.

PITH AND POINT.

A CHEERING NOTE FROM DR. H. H. GEORGE

I am feeling some better, and hope after a little to enter the work for my Master with renewed vigor. I am wearying for active work in the great moral conflicts going on. How busy Satan is; and how glad we are that in the great struggle as to who shall rule this world, Christ or Satan, the issue is not doubtful. Your paper is doing a glorious work against the kingdom of darkness.

A WORKER AMONG THE COLORED CHURCHES.

You can now enter my name on your list as a worker for this paper. I expect to do all that is in my power by the help of God, to aid the cause of the Christian Cynosure. Please send samples of papers to these parties whose names I send. I will do all I can to secure their subscriptions.—(Rev.) AUSTIN CURTIS, Clito, Ga.

STANDING BY THE COLORS IN KENTUCKY.

I am receiving your paper regularly, and am very well pleased with its contents. I am scattering the copies over my neighborhood. We esteem the paper as a welcome visitor. I know of but one minister beside myself who does not hesitate to condemn the lodge as anti-Scriptural, anti-American, and without doubt detrimental to the best interests of the "Negro race;" and in fact to all people. I repeat—only one minister in what is regarded as western Kentucky. I shall always feel very grateful to you, and also to the donor, for your paper. I preached one sermon against the lodge this summer, and made several speeches. I used for my text Deut. 6: 14: "Ye shall not go after other gods, of the gods of the people which are around about you." I used all the tracts that I received a year ago, and could have used as many more. I wish that I could buy them. "For one ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure." Therefore I endeavor to give the people information before they join or even have an opportunity to do so. May God bless and prosper the good work.—(Rev.) E. J. SIMPSON, Weston Ky.

HOW THE LODGE CAN RUN AND RUIN BANKS.

There was a bank failure in Marshfield, Webster Co., Mo., in 1884, and the people were thunderstruck by it. There were about twenty-two indictments found by the grand jury against the parties concerned in the failure; and yet nobody was convicted. They were charged with squandering $60,000 (sixty thousand dollars). The owners of the bank were Freemasons. There were two merchants in the town who were losers, and a meeting was called by these two men. It consisted of the president, cashier, two merchants, and one of the leading lawyers of the town. They all belonged to the same order, and they helped the bank so that it continued to run two years and eight months in this condition. The people on the outside were not informed of the circumstances, but all who belonged to the order were notified and they got their money; and the loss at last fell on those who did not belong to the order, and the names of the men who did this wrong did not appear on the books any more as depositors. The case was prosecuted before the grand jury, but the foreman was master of a lodge, and the court and all the lawyers belonged to the same order.—M. WILSON.

LITERATURE.

WHEN JESUS WAS HERE AMONG MEN. By E. M. Waterworth. Pp. 94. Price 60 cents. London Religious Tract Society. For sale by F. H. Revell, New York and Chicago.

This is a handsomely illustrated little volume in large type, a beautiful gift for a child. The wonderful, ever-new story of the Lord Jesus is told in four chapters—Waiting, Working, Suffering, Resting. The language is very pleasantly adapted to the child-mind, yet is in nothing weak or trifling, but adapted to the greatness and preciousness of the theme.

ONE HUNDRED POEMS. By Jane A. Van Allen, A. M. Pp. 160. Price 25 to 75 cents. J. S. Ogilvie, New York.

This volume of poems seems written with the best of intentions, but with a preparation unequal to the excellency of the themes suggested by the titles. There are about one hundred short poems on religious topics. The whole list of religious sentiments and virtues come under review, but all that is said of them could have been as well or better told in prose.

The December Century presents a strong list of writers in the names of Gen. Bidwell, Austin Dobson, Cecil Thaxter, Maurice Thompson, Lyman Abbott, Elizabeth Stuart Phelps, and others. The California series recently and attractively begun by General Bidwell, in the account of the first emigrant party in 1841, is continued by the same pen, in which "Life in California before the Gold Discovery" is described. The writer tells of scenes with which he was familiar and, being evidently a young man of unusual energy and enterprise, he was personally participating in the important events of the country from 1841 to 1848, when James Marshall, one of his employes, accidentally discovered gold on a branch of the American river above Sacramento. Bidwell himself believed for several years that gold existed in the mountains and made earnest efforts to find it, without success, mainly because of his not understanding a single Spanish word. Another California article, "Ranch and Mission days in Alta-California," continues this entertaining and romantic historical series. The American navy series is also continued in "Laurels of the American Tar in 1812" which is strongly illustrated. The story of the first Western explorer of Thibet is continued, and opens to barbarian eyes the curious and unattractive customs and religious rites of a strange people. Dr. Abbott, editor of the Christian Union and pastor of Plymouth Church, Brooklyn, answered the question, "Can a Nation have a Religion?" His liberal principles are maintained in the article. Dr. Abbott was a leading spirit in the "future probation" attack on the American Board.

Charles H. Sergel & Co., Chicago, have published, at a popular price, an American edition of General Booth's remarkable book, "In Darkest England and the Way Out." This book, in which is announced and described a wonderful undertaking of the Salvation Army, involving an outlay of $5,000,000, and towards which amount subscriptions are pouring in from all parts of the world, "sounds a note," says the Review of Reviews, "that will reverberate round the globe. ..... No such book so comprehensive in its scope, so daring in its audacity, and yet so simple and practical in its proposals, has appeared in these times." The first edition of this book was sold in London within three hours after issuing, and the entire American edition of five thousand copies was sold on the day of publication.

For "Black Beauty," that wonderfully useful and popular story of a horse, the publishers paid Miss Sewell only £20. They have already sold over 100,000 copies. The American Humane Education Society has printed 150,000 copies, and it is the ardent wish of the president, George T. Angell, to have means to give a million copies to the poorer white and colored people who deal with mules and horses in the Southern States. A special edition for Sunday-schools and libraries is to be issued by a Boston publisher.

The opening paper in the Arena for December is on "The Christian Doctrine of Non-resistance," and embodies the views of Count Tolstoi and Rev. Adin Ballou as set forth in an extensive correspondence carried on during this year by these two great modern apostles of the doctrine of non-resistance. It is a paper of great interest, and probably shows the real attitude of Count Tolstoi on this question more clearly and forcibly than anything else he has written.

The editorial care of the Missionary Review of the World now devolves wholly on Dr. A. T. Pierson since the recent death of Dr. Sherwood. The December number Dr. Pierson writes on the present outlook for evangelical religion in France. During his visit to that country some months since his observations were carefully directed to this subject, and he writes with fervor respecting the mission work of which Dr. McAll is the head, and the pressing necessity of sustaining it with vastly increased resources. Stratford Canning, Lord Stratford de Redcliffe, the noble Englishman and friend of missions, is the subject of an interesting sketch by Mrs. Dennis of Bierut, Syria. Mr. Canning for many years represented England at Constantinople, and his personal exertions seemed to be for years the only human bulwark against the Moslem hate of Christianity. Another biography is of Mrs. Thomas C. Doremus of New York, a great lover of missions. Dr. John Ross of North China, writes of "The Chinese Missionary Problem," and Dr. D. L. Leonard on the Mormons, whose recent movements he thinks are to be mistrusted as insincere. Rev. Dr. Thomson of Edinburgh, writes a second paper on missions in Basuto land, South Africa. The general missionary intelligence and correspondence is as full and interesting as ever.

St. Nicholas, always bright and fascinating, is peculiarly so for December, only there is a part of the fascination which we must condemn as mentally harmful for young readers. But the finely illustrated sketch of Holland life and story is instructive as well as entertaining. So is the story of the "Bay Settlers," which pictures the trials of the early Kansas settlers. Joaquin Miller tells a stirring story of his frontier experiences as an express agent, and Adele M. Field tells how elephants are hunted in Siam.

OBITUARY.

JOSEPH M. FRY died at his home in Ligonier, Ind., Saturday, Aug. 16, 1890. He was born in Westmoreland county, Pennsylvania, May 1, 1812. When he was ten years old his father's family moved to Ohio and settled in Stark county, where Joseph grew to manhood. In 1833 he was married to Miss Sarah Smith, with whom he lived for more than forty-five years, when she was called to her eternal rest July 26, 1878. To them were born three children, two of whom are living. He moved with his family from Stark county to Crawford, Wyandotte Co., Ohio, about 1840. While in Crawford he was converted to God under the ministrations of John W. Barns. Nov. 21, 1849, he arrived with his family at Ligonier, Ind., where he lived until his death. In May, 1863, he put on Christ by baptism, and was a member of the Disciple church in Ligonier until Jan. 2, 1872, when he was expelled on a Masonic charge, a report of which was given in the Christian Cynosure of Oct. 9, 1873. In July, 1879, he was cordially received back without acknowledgment and with full liberty to "sit in judgment on all institutions, theories and isms gotten up by man or men." It was conceded by the Mason pastor that "he not only had a constitutional right, but had a God-given right to investigate all institutions, theories and isms and express his convictions as to their harmony with the teachings of Christ." But lodge rule in the church and Mason pastors in the pulpit marred his enjoyment, and he finally refused to hear Masons preach, or to support them in any way.

He remembered the Morgan excitement, and was ever opposed to oath-bound secrecy. He was earnest and convincing, and in the places where he lectured, the lodge has gone down and the building appropriated to other uses. He loved the Cynosure and the principles which it advocates, and would always read that paper first.

Having been an Abolitionist and an Anti-mason it would be but natural that he should be a Prohibitionist, and so was instrumental in getting three legal votes for St. John, the first ever cast in Ligonier. But he rests from his labor; and his works do follow him. The funeral sermon was preached by Rev. J. W. Warner.

"Forlorn and forsaken
Though now we may be,
Oh Jesus, awaken
Still more love to thee."

HENRY L. KELLOGG, ASSOCIATE EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, DECEMBER 11, 1890.

NO DISCUSSION OF COLLEGE FRATERNITIES would be complete which should ignore Dr. Crosby's forcible analysis and strong condemnation of them. Miss Willard and all of us may object to his temperance views, but her position respecting these societies would be amended excellently if it came up to Dr. Crosby's position as expressed on our third page.

Next week we hope to give something of the history of this discussion in connection with Princeton College and the venerable Dr. McCosh.

The Cynosure promised to make the discussion of the college secret societies a specialty until January 1st. But it will be continued incidentally so long as there is any thing to be said worthily upon it.

IRELAND AND THE PARNELL IMBROGLIO.

Ireland is the enigma of the nations. In the political earthquake in which Europe, England excepted, went down before the genius of Napoleon, Irishmen led the armies and taught the politics of England. "The Iron Duke" quieted Europe by the sword; and Burke stilled the tempest of revolution by his pen. More people, perhaps, have sung the sweet lyrics of Moore, and read the poems of Goldsmith, than have heard of Waterloo, or read Burke's "Thoughts on the French Revolution." And these are but a few of the distinguished Irishmen. Few statesmen have excelled Grattan; and few orators have equalled Curran and Phillips; and, John Randolph and Wendell Phillips being judges, none ever excelled Daniel O'Connell as orator or philanthropist.

These were all Irishmen! And yet the Irish people, with the advantage of insular position, soil, and climate, have been "hereditary bondmen" for three centuries and a half; while Scotland and Wales have defeated her armies in battles and furnished kings for England!

What is the matter with Ireland?

Not two weeks since, thousands of American Irish met at Battery D, and the Second Armory in Chicago, and raised some twenty thousand dollars for Home Rule; but they did not raise a penny to save thousands of their countrymen from starvation in the expected famine. In the last famine, fifty years ago, while thousands were dying of hunger, and Protestant farmers were sending ship-loads of corn from the cold, hard hills of New England, to feed those famishing Romanists, that very year, Irish priests collected and sent enough money to the Pope, in "Peter's Pence," to have saved the multitudes who died in their cabins of starvation!

What is the matter with Ireland?

Irishmen have betrayed Ireland. Pitt carried his union in the year 1800, by Irish votes; votes bought openly, like cattle and vegetables in the market. In 1690 William III., Prince of Orange, defeated James II. at Boyne-water, and stopped the horrible massacres of Irish Protestants, set on by Irish priests. Orange lodges were formed by the Protestants, with the oaths and degrees of Freemasonry slightly changed, to take care of and protect Protestantism against the "Green" faction; and the fruit of those lodges has been two centuries of Orange and Green mobs and murders. Once formed, the Orange lodge became, like Masonry, an independent worship of devils; forgot its original object, and spread like Mormonism, and other secret worships, all over Europe and America. A while since Orangeism asked Dr. Williams of the South Congregational church, Chicago, to allow them to show their ribbons, march to band music, and attract members and fees by using his church on the Sabbath day. Their application was defeated by one of the church officers.

This is the matter with Ireland. Pope Adrian IV. gave all Ireland to Henry II. of England for an annual tribute, and the Irish priests led the people to submit to be sold for money by their pope. When Luther learned from the Bible that popery was "the mother of harlots," and moral "abominations;" Scandinavia and England followed him. But Ireland clung to her priests, and her priests to the pope of Rome. The Romanists are now 76 to the 100 of the Irish population. The Protestant Orange lodges are little better. The Irish Parliament which sanctioned the gift of their country to Henry II. by the pope for money, was quashed by Mr. Pitt's union in 1800, their "Home Rule" ceased, their commerce went to England; and O'Connell said, "the very rats left their warehouses with tears in their eyes."

To restore that "Home Rule," and recover that commerce and abolish landlordism, is what Gladstone and the Irish party now labor for; and the "Exiles of Erin," the world over, pour out their money and their prayers. O'Connell had promised them an Irish parliament sitting in College Green, "as sure as the sun shone in the heavens." He died, and his heart was taken out and sent to Rome.

The ground error, the rock on which the hope of Ireland is wrecked, is this: "They have other priests beside Christ." And Paul says, Heb. 7: 24, "This man, because he continueth ever, hath an unchangeable priesthood." So, since Christ came, and abolished the Levitical sacrifices and priesthood, there are no priests but counterfeits and usurpers. And these Irish priests, what are they? and what is the religion they teach? They are all sworn aliens, by their oaths to an Italian priest, who claims church power and state; and who once absolved subjects from their allegiance to their lawful governments. They are all unmarried men, to whom all women must confess their secret sins. They claim power to leave men and women in hell by not praying them out of purgatory, or to send them to heaven by absolving their sins. In short, their religion is a lie, and they are its priests. And, in some of our cities, nine-tenths of the saloon-keepers are Roman Catholics. This, THIS is what is the matter with Ireland!

Moved by British sense of justice, Gladstone and a powerful party are for dissolving Mr. Pitt's union and giving Ireland Home Rule. Mr. Parnell has been leader of the Irish wing of that party. He is a nominal Protestant leader of Roman Catholics. Like Alexander Sullivan, whom the murdered Dr. Cronin accused of swindling Irish Americans out of $200,000 given to help Ireland, Parnell is now convicted by the courts of using his salary, given by American Irish, to support his adultery with a Mrs. O'Shea, who is a wife with four daughters. Mr. Gladstone and his party refuse to work with such a leader; and Parnell calls them "English wolves, howling for his blood!" And Chicago saloon-keepers pour out money and turn out men to sustain him. This is "the Parnell imbroglio," and the end is not yet.

THE INDIAN TROUBLES.

Lieut. Wm. Tirtlott came to Wheaton College from the Sioux Indians, where he had been employed by the government to build houses. He said the Indian agents commonly kept stores at the rendezvous where the Indians came for their government supplies. Their stay was prolonged and their time spent in gambling with cards, bought at the agent's store. He tried to prevent their purchasing the cards, telling them they were "bad."

They would put up their blankets and everything drawn in their supplies, and gamble themselves naked. Squaw mothers would sit at cards till they sank to sleep on the ground from exhaustion, and after snatching a little sleep arouse up and continue to play; and such was their neglect of their children at such times that rows of little graves out back of their camp had received the infants, who die from their mother's neglect. This was thirty years ago.

Gen. Grant was the first President who appointed Quakers and missionaries, instead of political bummers, as Indian agents. But noticing Gen. Miles' statement that hunger was causing the present Indian troubles, we have wondered whether our Indian agents are now good men. Burke said, "I never knew a man that was bad, fit for any purpose that was good."

General Miles is in command of the department which includes all the Indian agencies East of the mountains, with headquarters in this city. His judgment ought to be good concerning the cause of the trouble. His opinion that present hunger and prospective starvation is the main reason, is confirmed by Gen. Brooke, who is in immediate command of troops at the Pine Ridge Agency in South Dakota. On arriving at the agency his first report was to the effect that the supply of food was totally inadequate. It is no wonder the starving, ill-clad Indian should rejoice in a belief that a Messiah of some kind should come to his relief.

Prof. Robinson of Kenyon College, Ohio, spent some time last summer among the Sioux, and gives his opinion very much to the dishonor of our government in the New York Tribune, thus:

"These Sioux were recently persuaded to sign a treaty for the sale of their lands. That treaty, founded on the Dawes bill, was negotiated by General Crook—the Indian's friend, as they fondly called him—Governor Foster, of Ohio, and General Warner, and these three gentlemen promised the Indians that if they would sell their lands they should be fed and clothed until their farms might render them self-supporting, that their rations should not be diminished, and that nothing they then received or enjoyed should be taken from them. Many of the Indians, from the recollection of previous contracts, could not believe in the white man's good faith, and several of the more hot-headed young braves were on the point of bundling off the Commissioners in a cart to the station at Rushville and shipping them home to Washington. But, relying on the past uniform uprightness of General Crook, the older, wiser Sioux succeeded in persuading the tribe to accept and sign the treaty. And yet, within a month after the signature, at Pine Ridge, the beef issue was reduced 1,000,000 pounds for the year, at Rose Bud 2,000,000, whilst their annuities and other supplies were likewise curtailed. It has been said that General Crook felt so sorely about this breach of faith that it probably hastened his death, for he had always been scrupulous in keeping his word in all dealings with the Indians, and it was their confidence in his integrity that induced them to sign away their lands."

In view of these facts the first duty of Congress is to order a rigid investigation of this whole trouble and if the responsibility for it can be fixed, let the guilty ones be justly punished as the agents of an uprising that threatens and may yet cause the loss of many lives.

SHALL THE OLD BOOK STAND.—H. L. Hastings, 49 Cornhill, Boston, has published a lecture under the above title, which seems to us to excel all writings of its kind. It certainly excels all the writings of its kind which we have read, and we judge that the mass of readers are of our opinion concerning it, from the fact that a full million are already disposed of, and the second million is under way. The tract or pamphlet costs but five cents, with a reduction when a quantity is purchased; and we fervently advise every minister, missionary and Sabbath-school teacher to obtain and read this lecture for his or her own satisfaction. And when they have done this, they will long to aid, as we do, to induce others to do the same. It is written for and has already been read by the million, and will yet be read by other millions; and the need of it for the masses is as great as its excellence. We well remember when we did not know what proofs were relied on, that the Bible was in very deed the word of God; and our soul fainted within us with longing to know. This pamphlet meets and satisfies that longing. And though men of corrupt minds may still doubt or deny the Bible, this argument will satisfy all others.

AMHERST COLLEGE has secured President Merrill E. Gates, of Rutgers College, New Jersey, to succeed Dr. Seelye. Oberlin had called the same gentleman. Now, behold, he is reported by the Michigan University Palladium as favoring college secret societies to "correct the selfish tendency in student life!" It is to be hoped this is a mistaken report. If not, Oberlin is fortunate in escaping such a president; and Amherst, which was founded by pious people as a breakwater against Cambridge baptized infidelity, is on the road to a worse irreligion than Cambridge was ever accused of. Cambridge still has a rule against secret societies procured by John Q. Adams, Edward Everett and Josiah Quincy.

When the scotched snake of secretism began to crawl back into colleges, the beloved scientist, Pres. Hitchcock, wrote to the presidents of nine of the chief colleges for their opinions of the college secret fraternities. All but one condemned them as evils. Pres. Hitchcock gave those answers in his last book, "Reminiscences of Amherst College." If Pres. Gates has declared in favor of those children of the Greek mysteries, his presidency will prove a curse to the college.

Hon. Seth M. Gates, father of this young president, when a law student in Leroy, N. Y., was wheedled into a Masonic lodge. He seceded, and declared the secrets correctly revealed, and the institution itself to be not "the hand-maid of religion," but "the devil's counterpart and counterfeit of it." And in the New York Legislature he helped to overthrow it. As a member of Congress, and officer of the Congregational church in Warsaw, N. Y., his whole life was a consistent testimony against the lodge. And, forty-eight years after his secession, he wrote to our Christian Association, after a whole life spent in civil office, "I wish once more, in my advanced age, to lift my warning voice, publicly, against Freemasonry and all kindred organizations." If there is an anti-secret society in Amherst, which will request it, we will reprint and send copies of the able letter of Hon. Mr. Gates to the Amherst students, to lay before their president and see how the son will answer the father.

THE EVANGELICAL ASSOCIATION, once known as Albrights, like the United Brethren, are being rent into two parties. Albright began to organize churches in 1790 and held his first general conference in 1816. Like the Brethren, they rejected slave-holders and Freemasons from fellowship: and all such bodies are now suffering from the secret machinations of the lodge, as slavery rent the churches before the war.

The Evangelical Messenger (Nov. 20), the organ of the association, quotes Lyman Abbott and the Southern Methodists as favoring strong government and an order of bishops, as the cure of their evils. And, very likely, some such question will be started to divert attention from the secret lodges which are eviscerating the churches. So did not Christ and his apostles. They assailed practical abuses; fasted, and prayed for the Holy Spirit. Mighty revivals in the Old Testament times followed the overthow of the false worships by Josiah and Hezekiah. While the one general charge brought by Jeremiah and Ezekiel, who saw Israel swept four times into captivity, was the blending of sun-worship and Baal-worship with the worship of God. "In my house have I found their wickedness, saith the Lord." "They prophesied in Baal and caused my people Israel to err." Jer. 23: 11, 13; and Ezek. 8: 16.

—Our thanks are due to Dr. C. D. Trumbull for his excellent and very prompt report of the State Convention in Iowa.

—Pres. C. A. Blanchard, who attended and addressed the State Convention at Fairfield, Iowa, says it was the best meeting of the reform he ever attended in the State, all things considered.

—The Independent Christian of Wellesley, Mass., and the Christian Witness of Newmarket, N. H., both publish Miss Flagg's address on Odd-fellowship at the New Hampshire State meeting last September.

—Our California agent, Rev. M. H. Nichols, has been kindly received by the Congregational, Presbyterian, Baptist and German pastors of San Francisco. A long letter of much interest will appear from him in our next.

—Bro. Stoddard in Washington is quite successful in reaching the colored churches. He finds many members of secret societies but is heard with little manifestation of prejudice, and in general with a sincere desire to know the truth. He goes to Philadelphia this week.

—The Odd-fellow order seems to be working a kind of lodge revival and bringing in delinquent and half-scceded members. Of this class over 5,000 are reported as brought back into the lodge in Illinois alone last year. The proportion between the new members initiated and the backsliders still holds good, however. Of all who are made Odd-fellows during the year a proportion of more than one-half drop out before its close. These facts show how weak are the lodge bonds in a large proportion of cases, and makes us hope for the true revival day when God shall reveal himself against the lodge iniquity. They will then be few, indeed, who will not forsake this folly.

—At a Masonic banquet in this city lately at which Rev. Dr. Thomas did the religion as Grand Chaplain, and sherry, claret and champaign glowed in the glasses, one speaker, Warvelle, the "Junior Grand Warden," declared that "Freemasonry was the origin of the Republic." Another, a visitor from Newton Lodge, Iowa, aggrandized Masonry as "the great conservator of the morals of young men;" while another, a General Atkins, declared that there was a mystic power in the little bronze button of the G. A. R., which rivalled that of the Freemason's badge. Such sentiments as these, given with approval in the presence of the bright lights of Masonry, must not be forgotten.

THE NEW ENGLAND CONVENTION.

The New England Christian Association will meet at 7 o'clock Tuesday, Dec. 16, 1890, in the lower chapel of Park Street Congregational church, Boston, and hold services the following day and evening. The public are cordially invited to attend. This association furnishes a common center where, irrespective of denomination, party or sex, all may unite in a free investigation of the secret lodge system and all practical questions connected with the coming of Christ's kingdom and the accomplishment of his will on earth. Names of speakers and outline of program will appear later; meantime write to or call on J. P. Stoddard, 309 Tremont street, Boston, for information, documents, etc., and send in your names early for enrollment.

J. A. CONANT, Pres.

ELIZABETH E. FLAGG, Sec'y.

PROGRAM OF THE NEW ENGLAND MEETING.

TUESDAY EVENING.—Addresses by Rev. Wm. F. Davis, Chelsea, and Rev. O. P. Gifford, D. D., Brookline.

WEDNESDAY A. M.—Address on "The Influence of the Lodge on the Social Habits of Drinking and Smoking." Addresses by Rev. A. A. Hoyt of the Independent Christian and L. E. Lincoln.

AFTERNOON.—Addresses by Rev. L. W. Frink, Rev. E. M. Darst, and Elder Hezekiah Davis.

EVENING.—After devotional services conducted by Rev. Dr. J. M. Gray, addresses by Rev. Dr. A. J. Gordon, Rev. Roland D. Grant and Rev. F. O. Cunningham. Mr. F. W. Mellen will conduct the singing.

PERSONAL NOTES.

—Rev. M. A. Gault, district secretary of the National Reform Association, is about to conduct a campaign in Tennessee, beginning at Memphis.

—Rev. John Todd, the evangelist, has returned from Southern Indiana, and will remain a few days in Chicago attending Mr. Moody's lectures in the Training School.

—Rev. Dr. William Wishart of Monmouth, lately visited the U. P. Theological Seminary at Allegheny to speak in a course of lectures before the students. His subject was, "The Associate Presbyterian Church," and the reports commend it highly as a masterly effort.

—Rev. J. C. K. Milligan of New York, who has been editor of the Banner for seventeen years, ever since its foundation, gives his valedictory in the last number. The Christian Statesman Co. of Philadelphia publish the magazine, and desire that the discussion of the present agitation in the Reformed Presbyterian church be much restricted. Dr. Milligan being much interested in the movement, which we fear may culminate in severe and unwise action, preferred to resign than be thus limited.

—Mr. Geo. C. Hall, who has been for five years the successful business manager of the Woman's Temperance Publication Association of this city, has resigned. Expressions at the W. C. T. U. Atlanta meeting that a woman should be in charge of the business decided him to positively decline serving longer. The Union Signal and other publications have been financially very successful under his management. He accepts a position under Funk and Wagnalls, publishers of the Voice, New York.

—Frederick Douglass, United States Minister resident and Consul General to Hayti, accompanied by his wife, have just left New York for Port au Prince in the Royal Dutch West Indian mail service steamer Prinz Mauritz. Mr. Douglass has been absent from his post for three months, and to a reporter he said to-day, "I am glad that I am returning to my post. Personally I like Hayti very much, and also its people." Of President Hippolyte Mr. Douglass said: "The President is firmly seated and very popular and I can see no danger of his government being upset."

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 3, 1890.

There is a feeling of regret that the President, in his annual message to Congress, did not pay a little more attention to the question of moral reform, in which thousands of the best men and women in the land are so deeply interested. I have read the message carefully, and the following paragraphs contain everything he said on these important subjects:

"At the last session I returned, without my approval, a bill entitled 'An act to prohibit book-making and pool-selling in the District of Columbia,' and stated my objection to be that it did not prohibit, but in fact licensed what it purported to prohibit. An effort will be made under existing laws to suppress this evil, though it is not certain that they will be found adequate."

The parents of boys who are being ruined by this form of gambling are naturally wondering why Mr. Harrison did not ask for the enactment of a law for its suppression about which there will exist no doubt, instead of saying that an "effort will be made under existing laws," which will prove a stumbling block in the efforts to get such a bill through Congress, as it will be argued by the gamblers and their paid attorneys that there is no need for a new law until all now on the statute book have first been appealed to, knowing that each appeal will give them more time to prey upon gullible young men and boys.

Mr. Harrison said of the lottery law:

"The passage of the act to amend certain sections of the Revised Statutes relating to lotteries, approved Sept. 19, 1890, has been received with great and deserved popular favor. The Postoffice Department and the Department of Justice at once entered upon the enforcement of the law with sympathetic vigor, and already the public mails have been largely freed from the fraudulent and demoralizing appeals and literature emanating from the lottery companies."

Of Mormonism he said:

"The increasing numbers and influence of the non Mormon population in Utah are observed with satisfaction. The recent letter of Wilford Woodruff, president of the Mormon church, in which he advised his people to 'refrain from contracting any marriage forbidden by the laws of the land,' has attracted wide attention, and it is hoped that its influence will be highly beneficial in restraining infractions of the laws of the United States. But the fact should not be overlooked that the doctrine or belief of the church, that polygamous marriages are rightful and supported by divine revelation, remains unchanged. President Woodruff does not renounce the doctrine, but refrains from teaching it, and advises against the practice of it because the law is against it. Now, it is quite true that the law should not attempt to deal with the faith or belief of anyone; but it is quite another thing, and the only safe thing, so to deal with the Territory of Utah as that those who believe polygamy to be rightful shall not have the power to make it lawful."

No fault can be found with what the President says as far as he goes, but he does not go far enough for the ruler of what claims to be the most enlightened nation on earth; the nation which, although not recognizing God in its Constitution, recognizes and reveres him in its courts and in its thousands of Christian homes. Surely the President of such a nation might have said something more in behalf of the great moral reforms so near and dear to the hearts of all Christians, and the fact that Mr. Harrison is a God-fearing Christian himself makes it all the more remarkable that he did not.

Senator Manderson yesterday offered a resolution which was adopted by the Senate, calling on the Secretary of War for information as to what, if any, steps have been taken for the disarmament of Indians on reservations in Nebraska, North Dakota and South Dakota. Just before the resolution was offered a petition was presented from citizens of Nebraska asking that the Sioux Indians be disarmed, and that they be deprived of their horses and given oxen in lieu of them. It would appear to ordinary people that these Indians never should have been allowed to acquire possession of rifles and ammunition. Then there would have been no necessity for disarming them; nor occasion for the alarm which now exists in their vicinity.

Rev. Dr. Sunderland wants "the Daughters of the American Revolution," a recently formed society, to raise $50,000 in 25-cent donations for the purpose of purchasing a statue of George Washington, to be presented to France in return for the statue of Lafayette which that country has presented to us, and which is to be shortly erected in Washington. *

THE HOME.

BRIGHT BE THE SKIES ABOVE THEE.

BY VICTORIA ALEXANDRA BUCK.

Affectionately inscribed to a cherished friend.

Bright be the skies above thee
Maid of the sunny brow!
Oh, that the world might love thee
As angels love thee now!
Fair as the sunlight gleaming
Upon the sparkling sea,
Be the smiles of heaven beaming,
Friend of my love, to thee.

Bright as the streamlet dashing
Adown the mountain glen,
Fair as the sunbeams flashing
On heather, brake and fen,
Pure as the Alpine river
That floweth to the sea,
Be the years of time forever,
Friend of my heart, to thee.

Randolph, N. Y.

PERNICIOUS LITERATURE.

The following capital address was delivered befor the Christian Convention recently held in Dublin.

Rev. Thain Davidson, D. D., of London, spoke for some time on "The spread of deleterious literature." He said that it seemed to him the memorable bonfire which was kindled at Ephesus in 59 A. D., when £2,000 of pernicious literature was destroyed, conveyed a lesson much needed at the present time. There were many libraries that would be the better for weeding, and as for circulating libraries and the railway bookstalls, there were in them tons weight of literature that ought straightway to be consigned to the flames. The fire he had mentioned was the result of the Apostles' direct preaching of the Gospel, and we might rest assured that when God's pure truth was being proclaimed throughout the world, there would be a prompt endeavor to stem the tide of evil occasioned by an ungodly press. He hoped to see in all our large towns in the kingdom a stop put to the printing of unwholesome literature, which was poured from the press each day, and it was that literature which was the direct cause of much of the infidelity and skepticism which existed in these days. The issue from the press of sensational, indecent and atheistical publications, was a great impediment to the spread of the Gospel. It was hardly possible to over-estimate the power of the press. The great battle between truth and error was to be fought, not with the sword, but by types and the printing press. Such were the facilities now presented by the press and the postoffice, that any one who possessed any enthusiasm made abundant use of paper and printer's ink; and when they saw the enormous sale of frivolous and trashy literature, and the endeavors made to propagate error, every Christian incurred a great responsibility, and was guilty of a very great sin of omission, who did not endeavor to stem the tide of bad books. Luther, it was related, routed the devil by flinging a pot of ink at him. A well-administered pot of ink had often put the devil to flight. The devil had far more reason to fear the pen than the pistol. With a movement to introduce better books, a different spirit abroad in the land, and a revival of religion, there would be a very different story. The vapid, trashy literature at present in the libraries and bookstalls would be done away with, and a very different class of pabulum provided for the mind. There were newspapers, periodicals, pamphlets and books, which men of the world daily devoured to their moral detriment, and which they would not look at for a moment were they but converted to God. Infidel tracts and attractive works of fiction, containing covert attacks on the faith, betting newspapers, and ton loads of frivolous and sensational rubbish, highly illustrated, were thrown broadcast. Young people got hold of them, their young minds were inoculated with the deadly virus, and an appetite formed for a style of reading which blighted and withered up every sound principle in the soul. Christian workers were laboring under a great disadvantage while the young they were seeking to benefit were filling their minds with the trash which had been alluded to. Secularists and advocates of free thought had determined to make free use of the printing press to an extent never before attempted for the propagation throughout the land of their principles; and they were circulating their publications in the workshops and factories and every rendezvous of the workingman, trying to inculcate the belief that every form of belief was simple superstition. The next best thing to burning the bad books was to circulate good ones in their place. He spoke next of the filthy, indecent literature sold unblushingly in the streets of London, and it was more than time, he said, that the practice was put a stop to by legislation. (Hear, hear.) Mr. Samuel Smith had done much in his time to stop the sale of such publications. With regard to atheistical pamphlets, he said the very virulence of the attacks on Christianity, and the outrageously coarse blasphemy, defeated its own ends. Trashy novels emasculated the mind and rendered the people unfit for the common prosaic duties of every day life. Life was neither a comedy nor a tragedy, men were not altogether knaves or gods, women were neither altogether angels nor fairies. Such literature had been proved to be the temporal and spiritual ruin of tens of thousands of men and women, who at one time had given promise of leading happy and useful lives. Sunday newspapers were unfavorable to the growth of real piety. He would let the workingman have his pipe if it did him good, but the Sunday newspaper should be removed out of his way. The prominence now given to racing and betting news in newspapers was a terrible incitement to evil. (Hear, hear.) He had warned young men against betting and gambling, and that had led him to read the betting and gambling news. (Laughter.) Such rubbish! Some of them could have no idea of this horrible curse of betting and gambling. And, sad to say, the daily newspapers were the greatest factor in propagating the evil. He was perfectly astonished that very respectable papers —and he did not think in the whole newspaper world the press was more dignified and loftier in tone than in this country—but he was astonished that respectable newspapers, which taught morality in their leading articles, could fill their other columns with news calculated to destroy young men. He was glad to see that the Leeds Mercury and one or two other papers admitted no sporting news to their columns. He believed that in time the Government would prohibit the publication of such news, and it was high time that the evil should be grappled with. (Applause.)

UNMANUFACTURED HOUSES.

The Apostle Paul speaks of a "house not made with hands." He is alluding to the final home of the spirit, the home "eternal in the heavens." But the phrase is suggestive. It implies that there are two classes of houses, one made with hands and one unmanufactured. In other things besides that high thing of which the grand apostle was speaking we may find that distinction.

For instance, in the department of books, the important matter is not the external volumes, but the conveyed thoughts; not this book in my hand, but Milton's great poem, which it conveys to me in print. We may go through all literature and find that distinction prevailing. Books of talent are made with hands; books of genius are unmanufactured. All cyclopædias, dictionaries, compilations, plainly require simply judgment and industry. Perhaps the less genius the compiler of such a book has, the better for him. Works of genius are such as no amount of learning, of good judgment, and of indomitable perseverance, through any length of time, could possibly accomplish. Hence there is a propriety in calling the figures which works of genius show us the "creations" of Homer, the "creations" of Shakespeare, the "creations" of Milton, and of Bulwer and Dickens and others. They do in some sense resemble the creations of God. I think this distinction will appear by the comparison of Milton's "Paradise Lost" with Pollock's "Course of Time;" or of Tennyson's "Locksley Hall" with Tupper's "Proverbial Philosophy."

There is one book which amongst books stands alone forever. Every sound mind familiar with human literature must feel that not all the judgment of all the men of whom we have ever heard, industriously employed through all the centuries which have made the historic era, could possibly, without supernatural aid, have formed the book called the Bible. It were easier for any man or set of men to produce all the personages represented in all other literature than to produce the ideal of Jesus of Nazareth. To leave everything else out of consideration, the conception and representation of that one Man evidently transcends all known possibilities of human genius.

The same distinction may be observed in human homes. There are homes made with hands. The hands have taken stone and wood and iron and glass, and have wrought them into pleasure domes or simple homes, as suited the designer. They are made with hands. Hands perish; what they make will perish also. But a man may have a home "not made with hands," and therefore imperishable, wrought from imperishable materials into an imperishable structure.

The house you occupy to-day, the house "not made with hands," is your character. And that is the house you must always inhabit.—Golden Rule.

A LITERARY TASTE.

To a young man from home, friendless and forlorn, in a great city, the hours of peril are those between sunset and bedtime; for the moon and stars see more evil in an hour than the sun in his whole day's circuit. The poet's visions of evenings are all composed of tender and soothing images. It brings the wanderer to his home, the child to its mother's arms, the ox to his stall, and the weary laborer to his rest; but to the gentle-hearted youth who is thrown upon the rocks of a pitiless city, and stands "homeless amid a thousand homes," the approach of evening brings with it an aching sense of loneliness and desolation, which comes down on the spirit like darkness upon the earth. In this mood, his best impulses become a snare to him, and he is led astray because he is social, affectionate, sympathetic and warm hearted.

If there be a young man thus circumstanced, let me say to him that books are the friend of the friendless, and that a library is the home of the homeless. A taste for reading will always carry you to converse with men who will intrust you by their wisdom, soothe you when fretted, refresh you when weary, counsel you when perplexed, and sympathize with you at all times.—Geo. S. Hilliard.

A BOY WHO COULD DO SOMETHING.

"Well, Aunt Margaret, it's come at last."

"What, my boy?"

"I must be off to the Pacific Coast. The doctor says I will do well enough there, but that I had better not brave an Eastern winter."

"And how can I do without you, Walter?"

"Very easily, I fancy. I have been a burden on you all these years, and it is time I was looking out for myself."

"I wish you could have studied for a while longer," said his aunt with a sigh. "If you could have remained here with me, you could have done so."

"Yes, I should have liked it, but what must be must be."

"But you are better educated now at seventeen than most boys of twenty," she said, looking with pride at the handsome, manly boy.

"You think so," he said. "Well, I must go and try what my training has done for me."

It was a great trial to his aunt, to whom Walter had been as a son, that he should be obliged to go so far away from her in quest of the rugged health which had lately been deserting him.

"I'd go with you myself, my dear," she said, in wishing him good-by, "if it were not for all these at home. Here is enough money to help you over a little time after you get there; and if you need more, let me know, and we'll see about it somehow."

"If I amount to anything I ought to be profitably at work long before it is gone, and making ready to return it to you."

Full of hope and courage, he had no doubt of being able to do so. A few weeks of the delightful air greatly benefited his health, and he began to seek for work in the land which seemed to smile upon him with every promise of health and well-doing.

But he soon found that legions of men, old, middle-aged and young, were keenly, cravingly engaged in the same quest. So many had come to the golden land wholly or in part dependent upon their own efforts for a livelihood that there seemed twenty applicants for every place.

He tried the things he would like, then the things he would not have chosen. Dismay, growing deeper and deeper, took the place of the hope and courage. His means were rapidly melting away, and still he walked and inquired all to no purpose.

At last he went to the landlord of the large boarding-house at which he had been staying.

"I have been looking for work," he said, "and can not find any."

"I am sorry for you," said the good-natured proprietor, "but there are plenty more in just your fix."

"That doesn't make it any easier for me," said Walter. "Now, if I went back among my friends I could get something to do, but my health probably depends on my staying here. My money is all gone. Give me something to do about your house until I find other work; something which will pay my board."

"My dear young fellow, I can't," said Mr. Graves. "It is a dull season. I am running things as low as I can. I have been reducing my help."

Walter said no more, but again strove to find employment, still without success. A week later he went again to Mr. Graves.

"I can find nothing. I want to stay here—indeed, I have no means of getting away if I wanted to. You must give me something to do. I will do anything. There must be some way in which I could be worth to you what I eat."

Mr. Graves looked very doubtfully at the boy.

"Why," he said, laughing, "if you were not such a polite, scholarly young fellow, I suppose I might contrive ——"

"Never mind the polite and scholarly," said Walter, eagerly. "What is there about the place to be done?"

Mr. Graves hesitated.

"It's all nonsense to tell you," he said, "but the Mexican that's been hauling the vegetables in from my ranch has been taken sick, and—but of course——"

"I'll do it," said Walter. "When shall I begin?"

"You don't mean it?"

"Try me, and see if I don't."

"Well, then, you must be round in the alleyway to-morrow morning."

Walter went to his room and thought it over. It was a solving of the vexed question of being able to breathe this life-giving air.

But who can blame him that the longer he thought of it the harder it seemed to do?

"What'll all those fellows think of me," he said to himself as he glanced out of the window. Below lay a lawn decorated with palm, magnolias and many other growths strange and beautiful to his eyes. He had taken them all in with delight, yet now he viewed the loveliness about him almost with distaste, feeling half inclined to give up the struggle, and try to get back to where friendly faces would beam upon his efforts, and kindly hands be stretched out in aid. But this could not be.

In the pleasure ground were a number of young fellows of his own age, with whom he had been on terms of agreeable intimacy, sharing their rambles and frolics. Ladies there were, too, and young girls who had smiled pleasantly upon him.

What would they all think of this he was about to do? Could he keep it secret from them?

"But I won't try to do that," he said, flushing with manly pride. "Aunt Margaret used to say there was no shame in doing anything that was honest. I'm just the same fellow that I was when I was idling around here. I ought to feel prouder of earning my bread than of being good for nothing—and I will be!"

Still it was with a very shrinking feeling that Walter the next morning drove the vegetable cart around from the alley and out upon the main road in front of the big house. His cheeks burned at the thought of the eyes which rested on him either in curiosity or scorn.

"He must be doing it for a wager," said one of the company upon the broad piazza.

"Hello!" cried Hugh Peters, a boy who had been very friendly with Walter. "Have you turned huckster?"

"Exactly that," replied Walter.

"But honest, now," said Hugh, coming nearer, 'are you doing this for a bet?"

"No," said Walter, "I am doing it to pay my board."

Hugh gave a long whistle, and turned away.

Walter went on, wondering within himself if he did not more than half wish he had not been so brave.

"No, I don't!" he said firmly. And as his cart moved slowly along he settled with himself the question whether he would allow himself to be ruled by a feeling of false shame.

"I have fully decided that it is the right thing for me to do, and shall I be ashamed of doing what is right?"

The young people seemed variously affected by Walter's doings. Some of them, to their honor be it said, made no difference in their treatment of him. Others, with Hugh, showed that he had fallen from their good graces in becoming one of the workers instead of remaining an idler in the great world.

"Who is that young fellow?" asked an elderly gentleman, sitting on the hotel piazza, one morning.

"Oh, I don't know much about him," was the answer, "except that he seems to be at work which is scarcely good enough for him. He appears to be well mannered and well educated."

"Why does he drive a vegetable cart, I wonder?" continued the old gentleman.

Mr. Graves chanced to be near, and answered the question:

"Well, sir, it's because he prefers doing it to running in debt for his board. I offered to trust him, but he wouldn't hear to it. He would have something to do, and that was the only thing I could give him."

"H'm," said the old gentleman. "I like a fellow that will do something."

"Walter Blake's got a situation in the Ocean Side Bank," was said in the boarding-house not long afterwards.

"How did he get it?" asked Hugh Peters, in great surprise, and with rather a blank face. "I didn't know he had any friends that could get him such a place as that."

"I don't know that he has. That old gentleman over there is the bank president, and he gave it to him without any asking, so I am told."

"Queer enough," said Hugh. "Why, my uncle's been pulling strings for ever so long to try to get me in there."

"Yes, he deserved it, and no mistake," said Mr. Graves in speaking of Walter. "He's one of the plucky fellows that's bound to win sooner or later. I wish, though," he added, half laughing, "that young Peters here could get a place, too, for he's owing me six month's board."

This is a true story of a real boy.—Christian Standard.

TEMPERANCE.

THE LIQUOR ORGANS AND THE SUPREME COURT.

Evidently the underpinning on which the liquor traffic rests is growing very shaky. The liquor press is not slow to recognize the logic of Justice Field's recent decision that "there is no inherent right of a citizen to sell intoxicating liquors by retail." The Northwestern Brewers' Gazette announced the decision under these significant headlines:

"No Right to Sell—Retailers Such by Sufferance—The Supreme Court of the United States Declares that Sales of Intoxicating Liquors by the Glass may be absolutely Prohibited."

Mida's Criterion, the leading wholesale liquor paper of Chicago, says:

"Justice Field, speaking for the whole Court, sweeps away the entire structure of the personal liberty party, and his argument sounds like a New York Voice editorial. We have always imagined, and it has been held by lawyers everywhere, that the right to vend liquors was a common law right, inherited from the body of English law, and that it required a special statute to restrict such right; but here we have Justice Field solemnly declaring that there is no inherent right to sell intoxicating liquors by retail, and it is not even a privilege of a citizen of the United States or of any State."

The Washington Sentinel, edited by Louis Schade, the National Brewers' Attorney at Washington, waxes ill-natured and abusive. It says:

"This decision shows that our highest court is no longer governed by constitutional obligations, but has become the hot-bed of the craziest puritanical fanaticism. . . . With such a Supreme Court behind it National Prohibition is only a question of time, and we no longer look upon the Prohibitionists as visionists when they cry, 'On to Washington! Let us have National Prohibition!'"

We can afford to be serene. If this is "death," which so many papers say has overtaken the Prohibition cause, we pray that it may be permitted to die regularly every day until the millennium is ushered in.—The Voice.

There are 206,000 saloons in our country, each doing, on an average, $7,000 worth of business. In round numbers, the saloons handle one and a half billion dollars per year of the people's money. That money is infinitely worse than wasted. The men and women who consume that liquor lose indirectly in time, health, and life more than they lose directly in spending the money. Think of it. Three billions lost to this country every year by reason of this ever-to-be-damned business! Is there any other monopoly equal in its impoverishing ability to this one? What signifies the railway, the banking, the land monopoly, to this one, that not only robs the people of their money, but despoils them of decency, ruins them physically and morally, and cuts short their lives from thirty to fifty per cent. We call a man a crank who grows in earnest about this horrible monster, supported by the state and cherished by the land we love. The man who can intelligently contemplate this business and not be moved to the very inner chambers of his soul, needs the torch of humanity lit in his bosom, and it should be kept burning until he is "purified as by fire."—The Progressive Age.

Our Republican friends are shedding great tears, as it were, over the defeat of Dr. Edwards, and, as usual, charge it all to the Prohibitionists, who, ungrateful wretches, would not turn in and help the g. o. p. out of a hole. We are sorry Mr. Raab was elected, and so are a good many Prohibitionists and Democrats who scratched their respective tickets, but all they could do did not overcome the malign influence of the head of the ticket. The Joliet News distinctly charges that Amberg personally made the rounds of the saloons of that place peddling Republican tickets on which the name of Raab was substituted for that of Dr. Edwards. Nor was it in Joliet alone that this course was pursued. This treachery and the whiskey influence in the Republican party defeated Dr. Edwards. The party cannot expect that the nomination of a few good men will carry through so much general rottenness.—The Patrol.

The editor of the Christian Union grows excited over the free sale, in our country, of acids for removing ink-stains, because they are used by evil men for dishonest purposes. It says: "A little bit of the thou-shalt-not policy of Russia might make a useful ingredient in the devil-take-the-hindmost policy of our democracy. Under a paternal form of government, the sale of such a mixture as this would probably be prohibited." This is the same editor who speaks and votes in favor of licensing the liquor traffic. Prohibit the sale of the diabolical ink-eradicator! but let the innocent traffic in character eradicators, and God's image-destroyers, and soul-cursers, go on! That is the moral law of the Christian Union.—Christian Nation.

Fifty-four railroads in the United States and Canada, as the most effective way of securing safety to the public and to prevent excessive damages for injuries through accidents, enforce the abstinence of their employes while on duty, and fifteen require abstinence without restriction as to time of duty. Thirteen companies insist upon abstinence as essential to promotion, and one requires the signing of the abstinence pledge before engaging an employe.

Dr. Kate Bushnell, who laid the foundation of the Anchorage Mission in Chicago, has been appointed by the officers of the World's W. C. T. U. to make a trip around the world in the interest of the department of her chosen work. She goes to Germany in June to study for some months, then to England and from there will start on her trip.

COMMENTS BY E. E. FLAGG.

1. The witness of the Scriptures.—Vs. 44–46. Christ never failed to emphasize the dignity and importance of the Old Testament Scriptures. He was no longer with them in the same sense as of old, yet he could add no more to the words he had so often said. He could only "open their understandings" that they might see how exactly every part of prophecy was fulfilled in his death, his sufferings and his resurrection. A great many people read the Bible with understandings that have never been opened to received its true meaning, and therefore they do not get the profit, the guidance or the encouragement from it which it is designed to give. Luke condenses his description of the events succeeding the resurrection, and omits much interesting matter which they record. But in the first chapter of Acts he makes amends for this brevity by a more complete account of the closing scene on Olivet when our Lord was taken up into heaven in full view of his wondering disciples, no more to be seen in visible form on earth. Forty days he went in and out among them—the same and yet not the same as before his crucifixion. Their question, "Lord, wilt thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel?" shows that they were still clinging to the old dream of temporal dominion; and had grown so familiar with his presence as never to think of the possibility that he would again leave them. They must have felt as Peter did on the Mount of Transfiguration, that those forty days were a heaven on earth, and they could desire no higher bliss than to have them continue forever. Yet in that case how could Jesus have entered on his mediatorial work? How could he prepare a place for them and be in heaven to welcome them unless he went before? Perhaps these questions never occurred to the disciples; but we are sure that from the time the Comforter was sent to them on the day of Pentecost, until the hour of their death they must have felt that it was better to have Christ in heaven than on earth, dear and sweet as his presence must have been. Luke tells us the burden of their conversation during those forty days—"the things pertaining to the kingdom of God." This was the only theme weighty enough for the risen Christ to talk about, or to engage the attention of the disciples at this momentous time. All the political changes that were then agitating the governments of the world would have seemed frivolous and irrelevant to introduce as subjects of conversation. A Christian may be interested in business or politics, but his chief interest will be in "the things of the kingdom," and these worldly matters will seem important to him only as they have an intimate bearing on the Redeemer's cause. Christ will be the center of all his life interests. Thus all that he says and does will have a meaning, and neither his acts nor his words be idle or unfruitful.

2. The mission of the disciples. Vs. 47–49. The disciples were now ordained to a more blessed ministry than was ever given to man before. They were to preach a free and full salvation in Christ's name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem where the great act of atoning grace was consummated on Calvary. They were to testify to bond and free, Jew and Greek "that these things are so," for they themselves had been eye-witnesses of his life, death and resurrection. But even this alone was not enough to fit them for so great a work. They needed something beside. To "be endued with power from on high." Surely if the disciples needed it before they could be successful preachers, much more must it be needed by every minister and Christian worker of to-day. While it was something they were to quietly wait for, it was also something they were to confidently and earnestly expect. It was "power from on high." Like the sacred fire which descended on the offerings of old, it was not to be kindled at any earthly shrine. No amount of study, or literary or oratorical eloquence can take the place of true spiritual power. The former may cause an audience to admire the preacher, but without the latter he can never make them see and admire Christ.

3. The ascension. Vs. 50–53. The last words of our Lord as he ascended to heaven were words of blessing that must have had a wider application than the little throng on which it was originally pronounced. The closing sentence of the New Testament is a benediction, and that benediction is for all believers to the end of time. It is our privilege to so live that we can have Christ's blessing continually in our hearts. What matter then if men curse and revile us for our faithful testimony to the truth. That blessing will fill us as it did the disciples, with a spirit of continual joy and praise.

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

—B. Fay Mills, the evangelist, is expected to hold a series of meetings during the holidays at Elgin, Ill.

—The revival meetings that have been held in the Pacific Congregational church in Chicago since Nov. 11, have resulted so far in forty-eigh tconversions, of whom about a fourth are adults, the remainder being young people and children of the Sabbath-school. Rev. Edward Cowperthwaite, an evangelist of the Disciple church, has assisted the pastor.

—The Presbyterian Theological Seminary of San Francisco, has recently received gifts amounting to $350,000. Two hundred and fifty thousand dollars are the gift of one man, Mr. Alexander Montgomery of San Francisco.

—The Lutheran Observer gives the following general summary of Lutherans in the world: Africa 42,000; America, North and South, 2,006,590; Asia, 186,000; Australia,, and Polynesia, 70,000; Europe, 45,133,500 —total, 47,439,090.

—The Primitive Methodists of South Australia, who recently celebrated their jubilee, report 146 churches and preaching places, with 29 ministers, 200 local preachers, 3,000 members, 97 Sunday-schools, and 6,088 scholars.

—At Barneveld, Wisconsin, as the result of the Gospel tent meetings held in the fall under the lead of Messrs. Willan and Wolfe, about seventy-five conversions are reported. Forty have united with the church.

—While the whole civilized world is paying tribute to Stanley and his fellow-explorers, we should not forget that other class of heroes who not only brave the dangers of Central Africa for a season but take up their abode among the natives and for Christ's sake endure hardships and privations for a life-time. Such a hero is Rev. Henry Richards, of Banza Mateke, Congo, who is spending a short time in this country and has spoken in several of our churches. Mr. Richard's devotion to his people is so complete that he insists on calling himself an African, though a born Englishman. He is a friend of the great explorer, and in his recent book Mr. Stanley speaks of his remarkable success: "A few years' mission work has produced a great change. Nearly all the native population have become professed Christians, and attend divine service punctually with all the fervor of revivalists. Young men whom I have known as famous gin-drinkers had become sober, decent men and most mannerly in behavior."

—The Christian Conservator of Dayton contrasts strikingly the results of the Pacific Garden Mission of this city with the work of some of our denominations: "Last April we heard Bro. Clark lecture against secret societies at the convention in Chicago. Bro. Clark is in charge of the Pacific Gardens' Mission in Chicago. His work has been greatly blessed and honored of God. When in Chicago recently we got the statistics of his work. During the last year the Pacific Gardens' Missions secured more conversions than the whole of Rock River M. E. Conference. One anti-secrecy preacher in Chicago beat the entire Rock River Conference of the great lodge-loaded M. E. ministry of that church. There are some very good men in the Rock River ministry. We found a good one at Coleta, Illinois. Yet Clark excelled them all."

—There seems to be a decline of orthodoxy among the Jews in this country. Those in favor of changing their forms of religious worship to correspond more nearly with the altered condition of Jews under the liberal American laws are rapidly increasing in number and influence. A prominent Rabbi refers to the movement in several cities to build houses of worship on a grander scale than has ever heretofore been attempted. In New York, a synagogue is soon to be erected by the Temple Beth-el, at Fifth avenue and 77th street, which will cost more than $500,000, and is designed to be the handsomest building of its kind in America. Schoolrooms, large enough to accommodate 500 children, will be arranged in an adjoining building. The Keneseth Israel congregation of Philadelphia, and the Anshe Maariv congregation in Chicago, intend to invest large sums in new synagogues. In addition to these, handsome synagogues are now building, or soon will be, in Dayton, O., Chattanooga, Tenn., Brunswick, Ga., and Providence, R. I. All these belong to the reform wing of the Jews, and the Rabbi who mentioned them challenged the orthodox to point to a single house of worship recently erected by them.—The Examiner.

—The Central West Congregational Association of Illinois, at its recent meeting adopted the following strong resolution regarding intemperance: "In view of the increasing evils of the liquor traffic, and believing the final settlement of the issue raised by the saloon is in the political arena, we therefore pledge our influence and votes only to such parties and candidates as stand committed to the extirpation of this terrible traffic." This is the most emphatic declaration we have seen by a Congregational body. It is almost as partisan as the W. C. T. U., according to the Republican party organs.

—The question: "Shall women be admitted into the General Conference as lay delegates," has been submitted to the congregations of all the Methodist churches in the United States, and the Philadelphia Methodist says that enough of the returns have been received to show that the women have carried the day, and so far as the popular will goes they are entitled to seats in the General Conference as lay delegates.

—The missionaries connected with the Presbyterian churches in the United States, the United Presbyterian church of Scotland, the Irish and the Canadian Presbyterian churches, have agreed upon a plan of union to form the Presbyterian church of China. The representatives of the English Presbyterian and the Reformed (Dutch) church of America are expected also to accede to the union. The statistics of Missionary Presbyterianism in China show 589 missionaries; wives of missionaries, 390; single women, 316; ordained native ministers, 209; unordained helpers, 1,260; female helpers, 180; hospitals, 61; dispensaries, 43; patients in 1889, 348,439; organized churches, 520; communicants, 37,287; pupils in schools, 16,816; contributions by native Christians, $36,884.64.

EDUCATIONAL NOTES.

William Dudley Field was elected president of Swathmore (Pa.) College Monday.

During the year of 1889 the American colleges received contributions amounting to $4,000,000. It is stated that sixteen of these colleges are now without any legal executive head.

The trustees of Rutgers College have elected Prof. Austin Scott of the faculty to be president of the institution, to take the place vacated by Pres. Gates, who lately went to Amherst.

Pres. Irons of Muskingum College, New Concord, O., is improving in health. He was given a long leave of absence to promote his recovery, and his absence is much regretted by the institution.

The will of the late General Clinton B. Fisk has been filed. It bequeaths the entire estate to his wife, with the exception of $25,000 of the bonds of the St. Louis and San Francisco railroad, which are bequeathed to the Fiske University at Nashville, Tenn.

The will of Mrs. Cecilia L. Williston of Northampton, contains these public bequests: Mount Holyoke College, $5,000; American Missionary Association, $2,000; American Board of Missions, the Woman's Board and the New West Commission, $1,000 each; South Street Home, $500.

One of the three daughters of John D. Rockefeller, while a student at Vassar, had a handsome allowance in the way of money from home. Instead of spending this on rich gowns and apartments she paid for two years the tuition and expenses of a girl from the country who was not able to pay them herself.

A series of Gospel meetings has been in progress at Earlham College, Richmond, Ind., resulting in great good. They have been under the leadership of Alfred C. Hathaway. The meeting on Sabbath morning, Nov. 16, says the Christian Worker, was a time of especial blessing. Under the ministry of Pres. Mills many were led to see the nobility of a Christian life as never before, and subsequently identified themselves with the work by consecration to the Master.

In one of the public school buildings of Philadelphia lager beer was introduced at a flag raising some weeks ago. At a late meeting of the Board of Education this act was characterized as "a lamentable and disgraceful occurrence," and the Board voted unanimously that, "Neither at the transfer of new school buildings to the Board of Public Education nor at their opening or dedication, or in any of the school buildings in the city of Philadelphia, at any time, shall any malt or alcoholic liquors be introduced or used as a beverage upon the premises."

Among the Japanese graduates of Rutgers College are the following: Tomita Tetsunosuke, nominated by the mikado to be a member of the Japanese house of peers, on account of meritorious services to the state, who has been Japanese consul at San Francisco and New York, and president of the largest bank in Japan; Ko Zo Soogiwoora, an officer in the departments of interior, education and foreign affairs, and director of the Imperial University at Tokyo; Iwoske Nagai, vice-minister of foreign affairs, the mikado's minister plenipotentiary to the United States, 1874–82, chief clerk of the finance department, commissioner of internal revenue and assistant minister of finance; Ichizo Hattori, vice-president of Tokyo University, attache superior of the department of agriculture and commerce, Japanese commissioner to the New Orleans Exposition

IN BRIEF.

A peerless curled grain black walnut tree stood on the side of Big Black Mountain, in Harlan county, Kentucky. Its like was not known anywhere. It was from five to six feet through at the base. A sharp New York dealer paid an ignorant mountaineer $50 for it, and then paid $300 to get it moved to a railroad. But after that his profit begins. He expects to make about $5,000.

The Pittsburg, Fort Wayne and Chicago Railway Company and the Pennsylvania Company have filed a bill to keep hackmen away from in front of the Union Passenger Station on Canal street, in this city. According to the bill the number of passengers coming to and departing from the station averages about 20,000 a day, the amount of baggage handled amounts to 3,000 pieces, and the United States mail matter handled amounts to 150 tons, and about 200 trains come and leave each day.

R. T. Meadows, of Bledsoe, Tenn., having sold his farm and stock, was seated by the fire talking to his wife about their contemplated trip to Texas, whither they were going to make their future home. Meadows pulled out his money, which was in large bills, and proceeded to count the amount. When he had laid down his last bill on the hearth some one opened the doors, and a gust of wind carried his all into the fire. Before Meadows could rescue any of his currency it was in ashes. He had converted all his possessions into cash, and in a twinkle all was lost.

It transpires that the enormous aggregated monopoly of the Goulds, Rockefellers and Vanderbilts now owns every independent railroad west of Chicago, and excepting the Pennsylvania and Lackawanna, nearly every considerable road east of it. The recent large purchases of the Rockefellers and Gould have increased the grasp of this octopus so that it now holds the Pacific Mail steamship company, the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe, the Southern Pacific, the Northern Pacific, and the Union Pacific. The enterprise is one of threatening proportions. There seems now to be simply no limit to the extension of the railroad combination, and Jay Gould's cherished ideal of one company controlling every road in the country is nearer its realization than ever before.

A boy and a dog bound together lie in the Charity Hospital at Blackwell Island, New York. One of the boy's legs lacks bone above the ankle. Into this part of the leg a part of the dog's foreleg has been ingrafted. If the dog die another will be supplied. The dog is a Spaniel weighing about twenty pounds. Bandages of plaster of paris fasten him to the boy. The dog's vocal chords are cut. When union between the boy's bone and that of the dog has commenced the dog's leg will be severed from connection with the boy's by cutting skin, arteries, and muscles, which now bind the dog to the boy. The skin will then be severed over the dog's stump and all of the rest of the dog's leg will be cut from the boy's leg except the ingrafted piece of bone. The surgeon conducting the experiment is Dr. A. M. Phelps, professor of orthopedic surgery in the University of New York.

About a mile from Acoma is La Mesa Encantada (the enchanted Hill), with perpendicular walls rising 400 feet high from the plain, writes Clarence Pullen in Harper's Weekly. There is a wierd tradition of this lofty cliff related by James W. Steele, who states that on this mesa was anciently the home of the people of Acoma. One day in harvest time the whole population of the town—men, women and children—with the exception of three ailing women, were in the valley below, working together, according to their custom on such occasions. A cloudburst, as the sudden rain floods of the country are called, occurred up the valley, and a great wave swept down, undermining the sand upon which rested the narrow staircase of notched rock, by which alone the top of the mesa could be reached. When the people returned they found that where the stairs had been the whole side of the mesa had fallen in a heap in the valley below, leaving the summit absolutely inaccessible. The three women could be seen above wandering around the edges, waving their arms and shouting, but no help could reach them. The skeletons of these women lie somewhere on the summit, where still are the walls of the old city; but no one has ascended the walls of the Mesa Encantada since the day of the disastrous flood.

Scrofula, salt rheum, and all diseases of the blood, dyspepsia, headache, kidney and liver complaints, and catarrh, are cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla, the great blood purifier. Try it.

A gray beard on a man under 50 makes him look older than he is. The best dye to color brown or black is Buckingham's Dye for the Whiskers.

The correctness of the maxim "nothing succeeds like success" is well exemplified in Ayer's Sarsaparilla. The most successful combination of alteratives and tonics, it always succeeds in curing diseases of the blood, and hence its wonderful popularity.

Deserving Confidence.

There is no article which so richly deserves the entire confidence of the community as BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES. Those suffering from Asthmatic and Bronchial Diseases, Coughs and Colds, should try them. They are universally considered superior to all other articles used for similar purposes. The late Rev. Henry Ward Beecher said of them: "I have never changed my mind respecting them from the first, except I think yet better of that which I began by thinking well of. I have also commended them to friends, and they have proved extremely serviceable."

HOME-MADE REMEDIES.

I have never seen them fail to cure headache, earache, sores, nightmare, colic, sore breast nipples, eyes weak, and dyspepsia. No drugs to buy. Nothing taken inwardly, except for the latter, which is also very simple. Receipts of all given for $1.00. MRS. A. CALDWELL,
Yorkville, S. C.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. J. Day Brownlee. In reply to a Masonic Oration by Rev. Dr. Mayer, Wellsville, Ohio. 5 cents each.

Dyspepsia

Makes the lives of many people miserable, causing distress after eating, sour stomach, sick headache, heartburn, loss of appetite, a faint, "all gone" feeling, bad taste, coated tongue, and irregularity of the bowels. Dyspepsia does not get well of itself. It requires careful attention, and a remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla, which acts gently, yet efficiently. It tones the stomach, regulates the digestion, creates a good appetite, banishes headache, and refreshes the mind.

Distress After Eating

Sick Headache

"I have been troubled with dyspepsia. I had but little appetite, and what I did eat distressed me, or did me little good. After eating I would have a faint or tired all-gone feeling, as though I had not eaten anything. My trouble was aggravated by my business, painting. Last spring I took Hood's Sarsaparilla, which did me an immense amount of good. It gave me an appetite, and my food relished and satisfied the craving I had previously experienced." GEORGE A. PAGE, Watertown, Mass.

General Washington Opposed to SECRET SOCIETIES. This is a re-publication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies." communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life—undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason. 10cts each.

HOME AND HEALTH.

A MILLIONAIRE'S MODEL WIFE.

Mrs. John D. Rockefeller—the wife of the great Standard oil king, whose fortune is estimated at over one hundred million dollars, and who is adding to it so rapidly that if he lives, in a few years he will be the wealthiest man on this continent—is a modest, quiet, unassuming woman, devoted to her household, her family and her home, and who never figures in the society newspapers, or in the great social events of New York. It is because she wills it so. She has no taste or inclination for fast life. Like her husband, she is a member of the Fifth Avenue Baptist Church. The Rockefellers live on West Fifty-fourth street, in New York City, opposite St. Luke's Hospital; and the inmates of that place where so much pain, misery and sorrow is daily seen, know Mrs. Rockefeller better than the habitues of Fifth Avenue. Two or three times a week she visits the hospital, carries flowers and delicacies there for the poor and sick, and in other ways tries to bring sunshine into the lives of the poor unfortunates. She gives away a great deal of money and is always trying to do good. Her home is not very pretentious. Mrs. Rockefeller's two daughters employ the services of but one maid. These daughters, Alta and Edith, have been brought up in the good old-fashioned way, and have been taught to wait upon themselves. There are no powdered flunkies at the door; a white-capped maid takes the visitor's card, and Mrs. Rockefeller, if she cares to see the caller, very soon appears in her reception-room. She is her own housekeeper and keeps a set of books in which every cent expended is accounted for. It is said she can turn back ten years and tell the exact amount of money spent in any week of the year. Her eldest daughter is now the wife of Rev. Charles Strong, son of the President of the Utica Theological Seminary. The three daughters were educated at Vassar, and the oldest one, instead of spending her allowance for luxuriously furnished rooms and rich gowns, paid for two years the college bill of a pretty girl from the country, who was working her way through school. It is a model American home; there are prayers in the morning and in the evening, and sometimes father, mother and children gather round the organ in the back parlor and together sing a hymn or two. Mrs. Rockefeller is perhaps forty-five years of age.—Ladies' Home Journal.

As to hair-dressing, the woman who has never "frizzled" is to be congratulatulated. The writer has among her acquaintances two women who are naturally extremely prepossessing in appearance. One had very beautiful blonde hair, which was parted in the middle, waved naturally, and was fastened in a knot behind. In an evil moment some one persuaded her to "bang" it. It was then frizzed, and her entire appearance was changed; from a fair counterpart of Clytie, she became an ordinary looking woman, with a commonplace mass of frizzes to which the iron had given a tinge of dull red. The other was past middle age, and while her features were less regular than the other's, she had a very fine and intellectual face. She wore gowns of soft, old-fashioned silk, ruffles of thread lace, and dressed her glossy brown hair in a fashion of other days, which accorded her pretty face with her picturesque attire. Suddenly she changed it, and discarded her pretty, old-fashioned comb. Her features, missing their becoming setting, lost even the charm of expression, while the imperfections of the features were brought into bold relief.

Fashions have their uses, on occasions, but there never was one that could be, with profit or convenience, universally adopted.—M. H. K. in Inter Ocean.

Kerosene vapor is a palpable irritant of the throat and air passages, and may well have had something to do with the alleged fact that in a recent epidemic of diphtheria, in Hartford, Conn., the only fatal cases occurred in families who used kerosene lamps, while the families who used gas or candles for light in sick rooms escaped a fatal termination.—Ex.

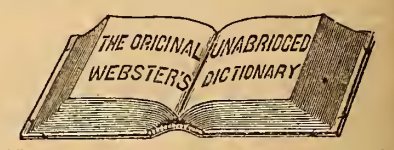
REMARKABLE OFFER!



Nearly everyone is familiar with the name, but it has been estimated that only one in every two hundred and eighty persons in the United States is fortunate enough to have access to the valuable information contained within the covers of the grandest work ever written by mortal man,

Webster's

UNABRIDGED DICTIONARY.

That this is an unfortunate state of affairs will be admitted by all, and it is due to the fact that no one save the rich could afford them.

The Dictionary is a necessity in every home, school and business house. It fills a vacancy and furnishes knowledge which no one hundred volumes of the choicest books could supply, and all young or old, educated or ignorant, rich or poor should have it within reach and refer to its contents every day in the year.

The Loomis reprint contains all the matter as compiled and arranged by our esteemed and honored author and statesman

NOAH WEBSTER.

About forty years of his life was devoted to this great work, and when we consider the fact that this book contains about 100,000 words, we will appreciate that these years must have been well spent.

Some idea of the magnitude of this book may be gained from the fact that it contains over 440 cubic inches of paper and has about 300,000 square inches of printed surface.

In addition to the 100,000 words it contains a portrait of the author, together with his biography and a valuable table of 12,000 synonymous words.

By special arrangement with the publishers, we are permitted to furnish this valuable volume: 1st. To any subscriber to our paper; 2nd. To any renewal subscription; and 3rd. To any person who has paid a full year's subscription within the past six months, on receipt of $1.50 for the paper one year, and two dollars and seventy-five cents to cover express charges, packing, etc., of the Dictionary.

FARM NOTES.

QUALITY OF POULTRY FOOD.

All kinds of food, if sound, have certain constituent properties, hut they differ in nutritive value, which varies with their chemical composition. The hest and purest quality of food is essential, not only for the production of eggs, but to give flavor, delicacy and sweetness to the flesh. A hen should not necessarily he in poor flesh to he a good layer. On the contrary, she should he in prime condition and in good flesh, hut not too fat. The production of eggs mainly depends upon the quality and proper quantity of food and upon the laying qualities of the breed. The hest layers will not yield a large supply of eggs unless they have the proper kinds of food for the material. Oats and barley, which are rich in proteine compounds, are best to develop muscular tissue and growth in young fowls; corn, which is especially rich in oils, is hest adapted for heating and fattening; wheat and buckwheat, being rich in gluten and alhumen, are the best adapted for egg production; rye, though a wholesome grain, is not relished very well hy either young or old fowls, and if used at all, it should he ground and mixed with corn meal. Bran and shorts are largely used hy poultrymen; shorts alone are too sticky, but when mixed with hran or corn meal and scalded with boiling water or milk, it makes an excellent morning mess the year through. Let corn predominate, generally speaking. It is the cheapest grain.—Poultry World.

A CHEAP ICE HOUSE.

Many a farmer lacks the comfort of a full supply of ice because he imagines the building of an ice-house to be a formidable undertaking. It is not. Nothing can he simpler. Drain at the hottom, to prevent the accumulation of water, which will melt the ice; ventilate at the top, to secure the evaporation which promotes coolness, and protection from rain and heated air, are all the requisites; and any shanty which will secure these is as good as a hetter one would he. First, insure the drainage by any convenient means; then put up any sort of a structure tight enough to hold sawdust, or chaff, or cut straw, or fine charcoal, and strong enough to support a roof, and you have it. Leave the gable ends hoth open, to secure ventilation, and let the roof extend over far enough to keep out the rain. Two feet of any of the non-conducting substances above meutioned between the ice and the wall will he ample protection at the sides, and three on top will he hlanket enough.—Farm Journal.

LIQUID MANURE.

Every garden ought to have its leach-barrel for the manufacture of liquid manure. Manure in the soil is good, hut the application of it in a liquid form produces more satisfactory results. It is more immediate in its results, and none of it is wasted, as a good deal of that which is worked into the soil must he.

It is an easy matter to fit up a leach. Take any old harrel and set it on a sloping platform. This platform should be about a foot high—high enough to allow slipping a pail under it to catch the liquid in. This platform should be larger than the hottom of the harrel, with cleats nailed on the sides to prevent the liquid from running off. The front of it ought to he sloped, like an obtuse-angled letter V, with cleats fastened to it, but not coming quite together at the point. These conduct the manure to the opening left at the point where it falls into the pail placed for its reception. The hottom of the harrel should he filled with stones, brick or pottery, to keep the manure from packing down solidly and clogging up the holes which should be made for the escape of the liquid. On top of this drainage fill in manure from the cow stahles, and pound it down well. Add water slowly at first to allow it to get thoroughly soaked through hefore leaching begins. When you notice that it hegins to trickle out at the bottom of the barrel add it in greater quantities.

That which first runs off will be very strong. It will he about the color of thick coffee. Dilute it until it has an amber look. This will he quite strong enough for safety Too strong a liquid manure is worse than none at all. When you use it apply c.ose to the roots of the plants. It is too precious to be wasted hy putting it where there are no roots to make use of it. Twice a week is often enough to apply it. This is the hest of all fertilizers for pot plants.—Vick's Magazine.

Stomach Troubles,

Such as indigestion and loss of appetite, are extremely common. The functions of the stomach being weakened, the blood soon becomes impure, the system loses vigor, and you fall an easy prey to any prevailing epidemic. What you need to restore tone to the digestive organs is Ayer's Sarsaparilla, the best and most economical of all blood-purifiers.

"For several years I was troubled with indigestion, accompanied with pains in my side. My appetite was poor, and my health was gradually failing. Medicine recommended to me by my friends, did not have the desired effect. Finally I was advised to use Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and have done so, with the most beneficial results. My appetite is now good, I am free from pain, and feel once more in good health." —T. Louey, 32 Fairmount st., Cambridgeport, Mass.

"About a year ago, I found myself in failing health. I suffered indescribably from stomach trouble, blood disorder, and various weaknesses, and almost despaired of relief. Thinking Ayer's Sarsaparilla might possibly benefit me, I began taking it, and am pleased to state that a few bottles wrought an entire change in my condition. My health has been restored by its use, and I feel stronger and more vigorous than I have for many years." —Mary A. Garland, 1407 Michigan ave., Chicago, Ill.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla —FOR— Dyspepsia.

"During the summer and fall of 1887 I suffered very seriously from dyspepsia. Knowing the high standard of Ayer's medicines, I decided to try what Ayer's Sarsaparilla could do for me. It has helped me wonderfully. I regard the Sarsaparilla as invaluable in such cases."—James R. Williams, Delana, Ill.

"About a year ago I was greatly afflicted with indigestion, and suffered from headache and terrible pains in my stomach. I consulted a physician, who prescribed various remedies, but all to no purpose. I became worse instead of better, and was compelled to give up work. A friend finally advised me to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I purchased a bottle, took it according to directions, and soon had the satisfaction of knowing that my health was improving. After taking two bottles of this medicine, I was able to resume work. My appetite returned, my food digested well, I was free from headache, and to-day I am as well as ever." —P. Dubé, Holyoke, Mass.

To clean tombstones.	To renew oil-cloth.	To renovate paint.	To brighten metals.
To polish knives.	To scrub floors.	To wash out sinks.	To scour bath-tubs.
To clean dishes.	To whiten marble.	To remove rust.	To scour kettles.

EVERYBODY USES IT.

Dentists to clean false teeth,	Engineers to clean parts of machines.	Housemaids to scrub marble floors.
Surgeons to polish their instruments.	Ministers to renovate old chapels.	Chemists to remove some stains.
Confectioners to scour their pans.	Sextons to clean the tombstones.	Carvers to sharpen their knives.
Mechanics to brighten their tools.	Hostlers on brasses and white horses.	Shrewd ones to scour old straw hats
Cooks to clean the kitchen sink.	Artists to clean their palattes.	Soldiers to brighten their arms.
Painters to clean off surfaces.	Wheelman to clean bicycles.	Renovators to clean carpets.

EVERY ONE FINDS A NEW USE.

Old Nursery Favorites.

There was Tom, the Son of the Piper,
Jack Sprat, and Merry King Cole,
And the Three Wise Men of Gotham,
Who went to sea in a bowl;
The woman who rode on a broomstick,
And swept the cohwehhed sky,
And the boy who sat in the corner,
Eating his Christmas pie.

These were some of the old favorites but they have been supplanted by the "Pansy" and the "Chatterhox" stories, "Little Lord Fountleroy," and "Five Little Peppers." The Old-fashioned pills and physics have heen superseded, and wisely, too, by Pierce's Purgative Pellets, a mild, harmless and effective cathartic. They are pleasant to take—so gentle in their action that the most delicate child can take them, yet so effective that they will cure the most ohstinate cases of constipation, stomach, liver and howel troubles. They should be in every nursery. As a gentle laxative, only one for a dose.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

WASHINGTON.

The coinage of gold and silver in the United States during the last fiscal year was nearly one-fifth of the total of about $305,000,000 supposed to be the entire annual coinage of the civilized world. Our country thus occupies a leading place in the financial scale of nations.

It was stated by Congressman Sweney at Washington Friday that the Democratic Senators had sent instructions to Ocala, Fla., to have anti-election bill resolutions passed by that convention.

Orders were given by the Secretary of of the Interior Monday morning that the Sioux Indians be supplied with increased rations.

The inquiry of the census office into mortgage indebtedness is nearly completed. The report will be very interesting and valuable. Out of nearly 2,800 counties only ten remain at the present time incomplete, the mortgages for ten years having been abstracted from the records. A total of something over $850,000,000 in mortgages has been found, the largest number in the Western States. Relatively speaking the Southern States were found to be much freer from these incumbrances than the Northern.

Representative Owen, of Indiana, Wednesday introduced a bill in Congress to excluded immigrants who are hostile to the principles of the Constitution or who are insane or dependent for support. It also provides that no person shall encourage immigration by advertisements or promises of employment.

CHICAGO.

President Harrison may now proclaim the World's Columbian Exposition to the nations of the earth. The Chicago council has unanimously passed the ordinance providing for the issue of $5,000,000 bonds of the city of Chicago for the purposes of the World's Fair. The local directory now has the $10,000,000 required by the act of Congress to be raised "for the purpose of the Exposition," and the President, through the Department of State, may "invite foreign nations to take part in said Exposition and appoint representatives thereto."

The American Railway Traffic Association at Chicago, capital stock $10,000,000, to establish and maintain a uniform system of passenger and freight rates for and by railway companies doing business in the United States, filed articles of incorporation with the Secretary of State, of Illinois, Tuesday.

John M. Eagan, president of the Chicago, St. Paul and Kansas City Road, J. M. Johnson, general freight agent of the Rock Island Road, Thomas Miller, general freight agent of the Burlington road, and James H. Long, manager of the freight department of the Illinois Steel Company, were indicted Friday by the Federal Grand Jury for violating the Interstate Commerce Act. The penalty is imprisonment and fine.

THE INDIAN TROUBLE.

Snow and cold weather have stopped the ghost dances on Cherry Creek by hostiles belonging to Hump's and Big Foot's camps. The presence in the vicinity of Frisco, Oklahoma, of thousands of yelling Indians has caused a panic among the people, and a guard is kept by day and night. Some of the Indians are on their way to join the hostiles in the Bad Lands.

The Inter Ocean says the following may be relied upon as a correct summary of a most dangerous situation. The hostile number from 1,000 to 1,200 warriors, as well armed and supplied with horses as the troops. They are in the Bad Lands, where they have picked out a place of safety for the few women and children, and a battle-ground that cannot be approached by cavalry or cannon. They have destroyed the settlements in the valleys of the Porcupine and White Clay Creeks, and along the White River. They have run off the goverument herders, burned the ranche and captured the herd. They have stolen all the horses near them and have been killing the cattle at the rate of over 100 per day, and preserving the meat by jerking it. They have sent word that they will fight and will not return to the agency until the soldiers leave, when they will come in and capture the agency. The warriors are recruited from the Pine Ridge, Rosebud and Cheyenne agencies.

Advices from the Indian country in in the Northwest were received at army headquarters Sunday night which stated that everything was reported quiet and that there had been no dancing since Wednesday last. At Fort Gates the thermometer registered 10 degrees below zero Sunday. Full rations have been ordered for the Indians. There are nearly 6,000 soldiers now in the Northwest Indian country where the excitement exists. General Brooke has under his command at Pine Ridge Agency nearly 1,500 troops and about 700 horses.

COUNTRY.

Manitoba's quarantine against American hogs has been raised, for the reason that there is a large quantity of damaged grain in the province and few swine to consume it.

An anti-lottery association has been organized at Dayton, O., the object of which is to secure the enforcement of the laws against lottery gambling. Sufficient money has been contributed by citizens to carry out its objects and private detectives have been employed to secure testimony and help prosecute cases.

The report of the State Board of Agriculture issued Friday, shows that the area planted to corn in Illinois during the past season was 6,150,000 acres, which yielded an average of twenty-six bushels per acre, or a total yield of 160,000,000 bushels, against 248,000,000 bushels in 1889.

Three shocks of earthquake were felt at Lockwood, Mo., between 2 and 3 o'clock Friday morning. The last shock was a violent one.

Tuesday, at Ocala, Fla., the National Farmer's Alliance and Industrial Union met in convention. The President suggested a national organization to look after agricultural legislation in the State Assemblies as well as in Congress.

Los Angeles, Cal., has voted by 582 majority in favor of closing the saloons on the Sabbath day.

The National Farmers' Alliance opened its annual session at Ocala, Fla., on the first Tuesday in December. The meeting was accompanied by an exposition, at which the resources of Florida and specimens of all the natural curiosities of the State were displayed for the instruction of visitors. This exposition will remain open during sixty days.

The report of Canada's trade shows that its exports to the United States for the fiscal year were $40,522,810, and its imports from the same country $52,291,973.

FOREIGN.

The late snow storm in England is the severest since the Crimean war. Sheep are dying by thousands, it being impossible to give them food and shelter.

Dispatches from India say that while a battalion of the Goorkha regiment was on the march in the Chin hills several of the men were stricken with cholera. The troops went into camp at Guatheit, where thirty men out of a total of sixty attacked, succumbed to the disease. The battalion subsequently broke camp and proceeded to Rangoon. During the march many more soldiers were attacked by cholera.

The German Emperor William in his recent speech on school reform especially emphasizes the fact of time lost in the higher public schools in cramming youths with Latin and Greek instead of the German laguage and German history, especially the growth of German institutions and the idea of national unity.

The bull fights Sunday afternoon at Juarez, Mexico, were viewed by an immense crowd. They were brutal and fierce in every respect. While the soldiers were absent from the post attending the fight the convict soldiers revolted at the barracks, killing the sergeant of the guards, a corporal and a private. The murderers, eighteen in number, then broke from the barracks and escaped to the mountains. They were followed by the soldiers and three were overtaken and shot to death, and four captured and returned to the post.

The face of the sturdy Scotchman who conquered American prejudice and raised the Presbyterian College of New Jersey to the front rank among our institutions of learning, is not more kindly, firm and shrewd than his management of the college secret orders, as explained in his farewell address, from which we quote this week. There is much history back of that speech, which we are confident would be instructive and valuable to all American colleges. The suppression of the fraternities in Princeton was not accomplished in a single day nor by a single man. It would be an interesting story, and we hope may some day be written.

There are numerous brief opinions on this subject which we wish to clear up before the end of the year, and if nothing prevents, they will have some place in our next.

Corporations that demand Sabbath-breaking as one part of their contract with employes must expect little care from the latter respecting the rest of the moral law. Last Sabbath day a convention of delegates from the conductors and trainmen of the Wabash railway met at Decatur, Ill., to devise a scheme to secure more wages. Many conductors do not wait to make a demand for such increase, but simply take it without more ado. A private police officer tells us that he has in one short trip in this State, seen the conductors take about $20 into their exchequer.

As an interesting incident connected with the late Jewish conference in this city, meetings are being held in London to protest with the Czar against the official treatment of the Jews in Russia. A few years since they were the victims of public rage manifested in mobs, and multitudes of them left the country. Now their trials seem to proceed from the government itself. A prominent St. Petersburg paper, speaking in a semi-official tone, objects that this London effort will not advance the cause of the Jews one step. "It is not religious intolerance that prompts the measures relative to the Jews in Russia, where their synagogues stand proudly by the side of Christian churches; it is the absolute necessity for saving the rural populace from being drained of their resources by the Jews who have already ruined the peasants in Galicia, Roumania and Pomerania. Russia will save the Jews themselves from popular retribution. She does not assume a false liberalism, but acts openly in protecting the prosperity of the nation. If the whole of Europe should attempt to force a distasteful policy upon Russia, she is in a position successfully to defend her independence."

JAMES McCOSH, D. D., LL. D.

We hope our good friends who would have church and state farther apart than the heavens and the earth, will not object to the movement which gained Secretary of War Proctor's approval the other day. It was a meeting, called by the United Christian Commission, to discuss ways and means for the moral improvement of the army. The volunteer evangelists of 1861–5 are practically unknown in the regular army, and any one who frequents the enlistment offices will not be impressed with either the moral or intellectual powers of the recruits. It is a mission of some urgency, therefore, that Mr. Proctor approves. He says that Cromwell's Ironsides are a perpetual argument in favor of morality and religion among troops. The higher the moral qualities the better the soldier. The Secretary hopes that these private influences may be so successfully exercised in the American army that it will not suffer in comparison with the victors of Naseby, Dunbar and Marston Moor.

The circuit court at Pine Bluff, Arkansas, heard last Thursday a very remarkable speech from the bench. Judge Elliott, in pronouncing the death sentence, fixed the date of execution on a Thursday. The departure from an old custom caused some surprise, to which he replied by saying that he never had and never would sentence a man to be executed on a Friday, because on that day Jesus Christ was crucified, and he would not insult the memory of the founder of Christianity by sentencing a murderer to be hanged on the day upon which the Son of God sacrificed his life for humanity's sake. The reason is a manifestation of devotion quite unusual in our courts, and for its spirit as commendable as rare. But a wiser reason for the change might have been given. Executions for capital crimes are in a sense indications of the law of God and so cannot dishonor Christ; but the popular superstition about the unluckiness of Friday might very justly be rebuked by ignoring the day in capital sentences.

Chicago at least is to have one secret society the less. Two years ago certain Democrats formed a society called the Wah-nah-tons in imitation of the New York Tammany. It was to control by means of oath-bound secrecy the nomination of mayor, congressmen, etc. "All manner of oaths," says one our dailies, "were taken by the initiated, binding them under fearful and wonderful obligations not to prove false to or reveal the secrets of the order." But the finances of the order were either mismanaged or were too great a temptation, as in many like instances. The society has not been able to overcome this obstruction to its success, and is therefore announced as moribund. Other political secret orders are the only parties who can provide mourners.

In the late election in nine States the Prohibition party loses in the aggregate 16,177 votes. But in twenty-two States it makes a gain of 46,-776 votes. Michigan leads with a gain of 14,-058, about 75 per cent. California comes next with an increase of 6,239, a gain of more than 100 per cent. Indiana with her new Australian ballot law makes a 25 per cent gain. Tennessee also nearly doubles her Fisk vote.

Rev. Dr. Parker, the great Congregationalist preacher of London, in a recent sermon said: "It is high time that intoxicating wine was banished from the sacramental service. It has done incalculable mischief in every section of the church. It has driven men to long-abandoned habits of intemperance. This is not a subject which should be debated as if there were some reasons on both sides. There is no reason on the side of using intoxicating wines at the Lord's table."

ODD-FELLOWSHIP AS AN AID SOCIETY.

BY G. J. FRITSCHEL, ERLANGEN, BAVARIA.

One of the current misrepresentations by which some men try to snare members of Christian churches is that the lodge has nothing to do with religion, but is a mutual aid society with the appendix of peculiar educative gatherings in an ancient and most solemn style. This falsehood must have brought more members into the orders than was intended; and the quality was not that kind which was desired. Too many came in for the purpose of finding pecuniary benefit.

This is lamented in the initiatory degree of Odd-fellowship: "If you have become initiated into this institution from the influence of a too common error, namely, that Odd-fellowship is a mere beneficial society, having for its single purpose the relief of its members. . . . be at once undeceived." (O. F. Ill., p. 64.) Yes, when the order was founded this was the case; but it is no longer so. Says Grosh: "The order as founded by Bro. Wildey was simply a humane institution; its main objects were to relieve brethren; bury the dead. But gradually there were infused into its lectures and charges much moral and (unsectarian) religious instructions; and at each revision these principles were increased and deepened and strengthened, until its beneficial and relief measures from being ends, have become means to a higher and greater end."

Then he goes on quoting the ritual, thereby testifying the literal correctness of the exposition: "To improve and elevate the character of man; to imbue him with proper conceptions of his capability for good; to enlighten his mind, etc., etc." (Manual, p. 34.)

And again: "It is unfortunate for our order and for not a few of its members, that too much prominence has been generally given to its feature of pecuniary benefits in seasons of sickness and death. . . . This, though a laudable and useful trait in our operations, is hardly a tithe of our aims and objects."

Then he directs our attention to the main objects: "By this undue prominence of the pecuniary relief afforded, even our own members have had their attention and efforts greatly withdrawn from the moral and social influences which the order is so eminently calculated to promote." (Grosh's Manual, p. 76.)

These declarations are well-known and have only been adduced for the sake of completeness. We have recently found a number of authors fully corroborating these statements. A writer signing his name J. C. (it seems to be customary with such writers to write anonymously), whose essay has been approved by the Grand Lodge of Switzerland, says: "The order is not a society for assurance or speculation for the benefit of its members. The mutual aid and assistance is only of secondary importance, and the principle aim consists moreover in educating the spiritual and moral faculties of man." (Der Orden der O. F. 1887, p. 21.)

Oscar Inadorf in his Betrachtung uber der Wert des I. O. O. F., Leipzig, 1886, corroborates this: "You will see that we are not merely a society for relief, but that the system for relief is merely a single consequence of our higher principles and tendencies." (p. 2.) "We have not united ourselves to cultivate childish secrecy, to cultivate superficial social acquaintance, or to advance merely humane assistance." (p. 22.)

Let us hear some more testimonials. Another witness desires to be heard. Here is a lodge—Holbein Lodge in Augsburg. In a pamphlet, "The Order of O. F., its historical development, government and principles," by Bro. Aug. Weiss, (2d ed., Holbein Lodge, publisher, 1889,) we find the following: "When the order was founded its main object was to render material aid; its work was to visit the sick, to bury the dead, to assist the widows and orphans. By and by this materialistic principle was set back; instead of being the aim and end of the order itself, it became the medium for the end, viz., to ennoble the character of man, to overcome the evil inclinations, to do the good. The order was intended to be a circle of good men, doing their duty, who clasp their brotherly hand in the conviction that they strive for the same end, and who faithfully stand by each other in all conditions of life." (p. 8.)

As the object of the Grand Lodge meeting, 1876, the following is mentioned: "Means and ways had to be found to prevent that the order be degraded to the line of a mere sick or aid society;" and this was done by adopting a promise that in no case a member would sue the order, but submit to the decision of the Grand Lodge. (p. 15.)

Well, what is the object of Odd-fellowship? We know what the object of Freemasonry is—namely, deism. And Odd-fellowship strives at nothing less. The ceremonies may be less objectionable, the means may differ, but the end is the same. In the preface to the Odd-fellow's Song-Book, compiled and published "by the authority of the G(rand) L(odge) D(eutscher) R(eichs)" by Gerstel & Schick (Leipzig, Leibing, 1889,) this is fully conceded: "Some parts, of course, adapted to the interests of our order have been borrowed from the older hymn-books of the venerable sister of our order, Freemasonry. It is true the ways are different, but the glorious aim is the same. Petit-Senn says somewhere very correctly: 'Every religious cult—does lodge-life not assist true religiousity?—is a radius of the circle in which God is the centre'—in other words: 'We do all believe in one God!'" This last word, as will be remembered, was the motto of the German deists, or rationalists. In its full form it reads,

> We do believe all in one God!
> Christian, Jew, Turk and Hottentot!

Some one might object that these (translated) quotations are from German Odd-fellows, for which Odd-fellows in the United States cannot be responsible. But they say nothing more than is said and can be shown to be true of Odd-fellowship in the United States. The Grand Lodge of Germany is dependent from the Sovereign Grand Lodge, and is a part of Odd-fellowship with its world-wide religion. Perhaps we will show what is said of the religious part of Odd-fellowship in another article. It will be nothing new, but it will be a stone or more in the pile of testimonials from the writings of members of the lodge.

SECRECY VS. CHRISTIANITY.

BY REV. A. S. COPLEY.

It is a surprise that not more is being done and said against the evils of secrecy in lodges and societies; for it is a monster evil. Secret orders are opposed to Christianity in their nature. The Gospel is to be revealed to all men without respect or color, station or nationality. "This (viz., Jesus) is the true light that lighteth every man that cometh into the world." The Gospel is an open revelation, and is not ashamed of its own inwardness, nor is there any effort or necessity to conceal it from the scrutiny of men. The lodge, however, hides, or claims to hide, its internal workings from all but its constituents. This is its chief idea. Without it there would be no lodge. This, the prevailing element in the nature of all lodges, is diametrically opposed to the frankness of religion. It leads to suspicion. If the lodge brings blessings to men, why keep it closed? Why conceal what is and can only be good? Why not rather draw the curtain that men may see for themselves and lay hold upon its benefits? We are compelled to ask whether something objectionable, or unworthy of manhood, is not indulged; whether its real inwardness is not less elevating than its advocates say. Such must be the probability. The greatest pleasure of Christianity is to reveal itself; the greatest boast of secrecy is to conceal itself. Why, we ask again, veil with darkness an institution whose "laws are reason and equity; cardinal doctrines inspire purity of thought and life, and love of truth, and loyalty to the government under which we live;" and whose "intention is peace on earth, good-will toward men" (K. of P.)? We cannot avoid mistrusting.

Besides, persons uniting must pledge their fidelity to the institution by oaths, in some by shocking oaths. The secrets must be kept. Even in some of the apparently less harmful orders there stands the imperative command to protect their principles unto death.

The Christian religion is large-hearted, seeking to bless the whole world by bearing the message of divine love to "every creature," "not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to the knowledge of the truth." But the lodge system is selfish. Its proffered blessings are confined to its members, and these benefits, which cost the recipient of them more than they are worth, are secured at the price of injustice to non-adherents, in as much as lodge men receive unmerited preference in trade, in politics, in society, and, must we acknowledge it? in church. Says Prof. H. C. King, "Very careful and extensive inquiry, involving the sending out of thousands of blanks, reveals the fact that three-fourths of all public officials in the United States are members of secret orders." Oh! shame on the selfish, clannish spirit of secret societies.

Secrecy is antagonistic to religion in the character of its members. The people of God are Bible readers, men of prayer and faith, "a peculiar people zealous of good works," "separate from sinners," "keeping themselves unspotted from the world." "Come out from among them and be ye separate, and touch not the unclean thing, and I will receive you." Every individual who gives his hand to any secret order defies these Scriptures, for the organizers and leading men in almost all lodges are ungodly men. Many of them are vicious, infidelic, debauched. And shall followers of Christ company with them and call them brethren? "Yes, but they observe religious forms in their meetings," you say. So much the more wicked for that very fact.

Unrighteous men pretending to worship, scorners reading indifferently the sacred Word, and believers joining in the sham-devotion, or at least assenting thereto. Brethren, how can these things be? How can you, who are the friends of Christ and whose lives are hid with Christ in God, give your hand and heart to a cause whose constituents are unbelievers, idolaters, and sometimes adulterers; a system which ignores the Christ who "redeemed you and washed you in his own precious blood?"

Secrecy is opposed to the church in its workings. The purpose of the Gospel is to liberate the will of man from the fetters of sin, but the lodge puts cable wires on every will and conscience that comes within its pales. Let me quote Rev. Halleck Floyd:

> "Never was there a more perfect system of human slavery. A man's conscience is not his own. He has made common cause of it with men of the world. Christians, Christian ministers, and men of the world bow down together to worship and rise up to play."

Says Pearson, Sovereign Grand Inspector General, "If we would be Masons, we must yield private judgment." Morris declares, "This surrender of free-will to Masonic authority is absolute and perpetual."

The mission of Jesus into the world was to bring peace to hearts, homes, and nations. But the lodge system brings war. Many a tender wifely tie has been sundered by her husband absenting himself from his family only to associate with bad men, and, despite all her love and implicit trust in him, never intimating what they have or do. If the lodge is such an attractive place, why not share its benefits and pleasures with the faithful, innocent wife, at least to tell her thereof that they may rejoice together? Ah! the lodge forbids it, and its wishes put their feet upon those of the better-half, and she must be silent.

We wonder why the women are more easily brought to Christ than the men. Is not this gigantic but disguised evil in the way of men? When secrecy has once coiled itself around the human will and thrust its venomous fangs into the conscience, how hardly shall the soul be saved!

Again let Floyd speak of secret temperance organizations:

> "Secret temperance orders, having of all, perhaps, the most worthy object in view, have done much to hold this much-needed reform in check. They have divided the temperance ranks; they have put their light under a bushel and not on a candlestick; and they have excited distrust by working and planning in the darkness of the lodge-room, Every temperance revival has been brought about by open and public work. These temperance orders have been quick to seize upon every opportunity to obtain influence and power. Their efforts have been directed toward building up an order rather than toward promoting the general interests of the temperance cause."

Now, in the light of these unyielding facts, that the secret order system is opposed to the Christian church in its origin, in its purposes, in its nature, in the character of its adherents, and in its operations and results, is it not our imperative duty to count it one of the huge enemies of truth and righteousness, and as ministers of a holy Gospel, fight it in public and private, with voice and pen, in the pulpit and out of it, at home and abroad? Fight it till the increasing soul-destroying, church-robbing monster lies slain at the feet of our blessed Christ.

THE BIBLE IN CHICAGO SCHOOLS.

The petition for the restoration of the Bible to the schools of this city was presented to the Board of Education last Wednesday by the Woman's Educational Union. The petition was signed by 16,000 names. On presenting it Mrs. E. A. Cook, president of the Union, in behalf of the petitioners, thus addressed the Board:

MR. PRESIDENT AND MEMBERS OF THE BOARD OF EDUCATION:—It is our privilege to present to you this evening, in behalf of the Chicago Woman's Educational Union, a petition for the reading of the Bible in the public schools. . . . In public meetings in all parts of our great city voices have been raised for this cause, and some gifted ones have demonstrated that from an historical point of view, from a logical point of view, from a legislative, executive and judicial point of view, from a social and moral point of view; in short, from a patriotic point of view, that the Bible must be a respected book in the public school-room.

The National Educational Association, which, I am told, is the largest body of the kind in the world, when in session in Chicago in 1887, just a century after our famous ordinance was passed, spread upon its records that "in the judgment of this Association the Bible should be recognized as the text-book of ethics, and that the Word of God, which made free schools, should hold an honored place in them."

Horace Mann states that, "All intelligent thinkers upon the subject, now utterly discard and repudiate the idea that reading and writing, with a knowledge of accounts, constitute education. "The lowest claim any intelligent man now prefers in its behalf is that its domain extends over the threefold nature of man; over his body, training it by the systematic and intelligent observance of those benign laws, which secure health, impart strength and prolong life; over his intellect, invigorating the mind, replenishing it with knowledge, and cultivating all those tastes which are allied to virtue; and over his moral and religious susceptibilities also, dethroning selfishness, enthroning conscience, leading the affections outwardly in good will toward man, and upward in gratitude and reverence to God."

In regard to the practical fulfillment of our request in this petition, the petitioners, we believe, whatever their personal preferences may be, will regard you as faithful to the trust imposed upon you, if you give the Bible the place in our schools which a reasonable construction of our fundamental law requires.

"One thing is certain," says Judge Hagans "that a bad man is a dangerous man; and that the quantum of morality needed to make a man a good citizen is small, and easily comprehended by the meanest intellect."

It is contained in the two great commandments: "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength, and with all thy mind; and thy neighbor as thyself."....

A choice book of Scripture selections, carefully prepared and revised, and approved by the late Archbishop Lynch of Toronto, and many other eminent persons in Chicago and elsewhere, might be used, if you think best, by teachers as a guide in preparing selections for their morning readings.

Many of us think that teachers who are competent to instruct the pupils of our public schools, are competent to select passages of Scripture, which, read without note or comment, would be helpful in the preparation of children for good citizenship.

Surely our children should not study the books now placed in their hands, while the Bible is excluded,—the Bible, which was the first book to be printed after types were invented; the oldest record of past time, a book which since its first publication in Latin has been printed and is now circulated in more than two hundred languages; a volume recognized by every civil government as sacred, and without which this nation would never have had an existence.

"Hold fast to the Bible, as the sheet anchor of your liberties," wrote that great soldier and statesman, Gen. Grant.

And we ask that you restore to our free schools their only safe foundation, by giving the Bible its proper place in them at your earliest convenience.

The question is not what will satisfy all parties. Nothing will do this; but remove injustice, and all reasonable cause of complaint will cease. Injustice is always weakness, and fundamental injustice must end in destruction.

On the celibacy of the clergy the testimony of the catacombs is interesting. On the tomb of "the Bishop Leo," we read, "My wife Laurentia made me this tomb." Again, "Victor, in peace, son of Bishop Victor;" "The place of Basil, the presbyter, and his wife, Felicitas;" "Gaudentius, the presbyter; for himself and his wife, Severa, a chaste and most holy woman;" "Once the happy daughter of the presbyter, Gabinus, here lies Susanna, joined to her father, in peace." It is worth while quoting here a canon of a Church Council (the "Quinisextan") as late as A. D. 706: "If any presbyter or deacon put away his wife, under pretense of piety, let him be excommunicated." (Maitland, p. 267.)—Exchange.

Said Rev. A. T. Pierson in a public address, speaking of certain Roman Catholic countries: "People call them Christian countries, but if any man or woman in any Roman Catholic country finds Jesus Christ they have to dig through an immense mass of debris. I'm tired of apologies for Roman Catholicism."

COLLEGE HAZING AND SECRETISM.

HOW DR. M'COSH DEALT WITH THESE EVILS.

[From the farewell address of Dr. James McCosh, President of Princeton College, June 20, 1888.]

While this improvement of education was going on we had to contend against degrading college customs, some of which had come down from colonial times and were copied from the schools of England. There were rakes secretly issued by the members of one class against the members of another. We had horn-sprees and foolish bonfires kindled in the campus, and the embers often endangering the whole college buildings. Worst of all, we had the hazing and the smoking of students. I resolved to put down these, when I found that they had the serpent's power of prolonged life, and that it was difficult to kill them. I tried first of all to make the classes condemn them, and often succeeded. But at times we had to exercise discipline on the offenders, who were commonly supported by a considerable body of students. I would not be giving a true picture of the times unless I mentioned one or two cases.

At that time morning prayers were held at seven, and the students came out rubbing their eyes, with their great-coats thrown loosely over their shoulders and buttoning their clothes. One morning I saw a student with his head all "shaven and shorn." I called up a tutor and asked him whether the student had had fever. "No," said he; "did you not hear that he had been hazed?" I told him that I had not, but added that the whole college would hear of it before we had done with it. Knowing that if I called the hazed student to my house it would only be to expose him to farther indignity, I asked a professor to give me the use of his study and invited the student to meet me there. When I asked how he felt on being hazed, he replied, "Very indignant." I said I was glad to hear it. He told me that a company of students disguised had come into his room late at night; that they gagged his mouth lest he should cry and his ears lest he should identify them; that they had shaved his head, then put him under the pump, and left him tied on the campus. I asked if he had any friends. He answered, "Few, sir; I am a poor Irish boy, but one man has helped me;" naming Chancellor Green. "My dear fellow, you have a noble friend." I wrote a letter to the chancellor and ordered the student to set off with it before dawn, and tell what had been done to him. Next morning, a little after eight, I saw the noble form of the chancellor pass my window and enter my study. Hitherto he had been very cold toward me—I believe he did not see the propriety of bringing over a Scotchman to be the head of an American college. He asked me somewhat sternly, "Are you in earnest?" I answered that I was never more in earnest in my life. "But," said he, "I have often found when I tried to uphold the college in putting down evils there was a weak yielding." I told him that he might find that this was not just my character. He asked me what I meant to do. I answered that I was a stranger, newly come to this country; that I had asked for a conference with him—an alumnus, a trustee, and as the head of the law in New Jersey—to ask his advice. "Can you not," said he, "summon the perpetrators before the faculty?" "Yes," I replied, "but I have little evidence to proceed on. The student thinks he knows two of those who gagged him, but is not sure; and students capable of such deeds reckon it no crime to lie to the faculty." "What then are we to do?" I replied that I wished him to say. But he again asked, "Are you in earnest?" I said "he might try me." He then proposed that we should start a criminal process, and said he would engage the attorney-general as prosecutor, and would see that the jury was not packed. I said, "I accept your terms," and added, "You may now go home, Chancellor, the case is settled." He asked, "What do you mean?" looking at me with amazement. I simply mentioned that I had been dealing with students for sixteen years, and knew that the case was settled. I felt that the time was come when I should be as cold to him as he had been to me. I thanked him for coming to me when I meant to go to him, and bade him good morning. I asked a professor to send for one of the students supposed to have been guilty, and to tell him that the great chancellor had been here, that he was that day to engage the attorney-general as prosecutor, and that if the guilty parties did not send me an apology in forty-eight hours they would all be in prison. In a few hours I received a humble letter, signed by by about a dozen students, confessing that they were guilty, expressing their sorrow, and promising that they would never commit a like offence. I sent a message to the professors, asking them to be in their place next morning at prayers; and the students were prepared for something to come when they saw them all assembled. I took out the paper sent me, and read it till I came to the signatures, when I put it in my pocket, saying, "I accept the apology and the promise, and neither the faculty nor any other shall ever know the names. Let us read the passage on repentance, 2 Cor. 7." I never saw the college more moved.

For some years hazing was considerably subdued. But it continued in other colleges which have not had the courage to grapple with it, and has reappeared in this college once and again and has led to some very painful scenes. It has for the present disappeared, I trust finally.....

When I became connected with Princeton, the secret Greek-letter fraternities had considerable power in the college. The trustees years before had passed a law requiring every entering student to come under a solemn obligation to have no connection whatever with any secret society. I felt from the beginning that the college was in this respect in a very unhappy position, the student signing a pledge which a number of them knowingly violated. On inquiry I discovered that while some of the societies did mean to foster pleasant social feelings and to create a taste for oratory, yet that their influence was upon the whole for evil. I soon found that the societies sought to get the college honors to their members and to support those who were under college discipline. I felt that as the head of the college I must put an end to this state of things. I was powerfully aided or rather led in carrying this out by the late Dr. Atwater, who had more credit than I in suppressing the secret societies. One courageous student set himself vigorously to oppose the attempt to get the college honors to members of the fraternities. The difficulty was to get evidence. But certain lodges got photographs taken of their members. These fell into our hands. The offenders stood clearly before us. I summoned them before the faculty. They did not deny the charge and we sent them home. In a short time each sent in a paper in which he promised to give up while in college all connection with secret societies. I retained these papers for a time to secure that the promise should be kept, but I have shown them to no one. The faculty restored the students, who, I believe, kept their word. Now the great body of the students would earnestly oppose the re-introduction of these fraternities into our college. Most of the professors in the American colleges profess to lament the existence of such societies, but have not the courage to suppress them. I am sorry to find that of late some eminent men belonging to other colleges have been defending these secret organizations.

One of the greatest evils arising from the Greek-letter societies is that they tended to lessen the numbers and usefulness of our two noble societies, the Whig and the Cliosophic. These form an essential part of our educational system. They have done as much good as any other department of our college teaching. They have helped mightily to prepare our young men for the pulpit, the bar, and the Senate.

In 1881, Dr. McCosh wrote to Pres. White of Purdue University, as follows:

"The authorities of the college here, Board of Trustees and Faculty, are unanimous in holding that these (secret) societies are most injurious to the discipline and morals of the college. By our suppression of them we have been saved from evils which before existed in the college."

During the same year the faculty of Princeton College approved a paper in which it is stated that "the college has prohibited secret societies because it has found them of evil tendency and influence."

—In Paris, a few months ago, there was formed a "national league against atheism." Every member of the league must engage to oppose with tongue and pen, and by every legitimate means, all forms of atheism. The league is open to any person of either sex, of any religion, and of any philosophical opinion who affirms the existence of God.

NEW ENGLAND LETTER.

The municipal election in Boston—Couldn't enjoy religion. —The influence of Harvard—The artistic sense in Americans—The North American Review—The effect of lodge terrorism on a community.

Another high-license bill has been defeated in the Vermont Legislature, and the homes of the Green Mountain State saved from that most monstrous curse of civilization—the legalized saloon. No one can doubt, unless they willfully blind their eyes to the fact, that the prohibition cause is gaining steadily in spite of all "set-backs." It is true that a no-license law enforced by high-license officials has failed in many places to be a gratifying success, and the people in their disgust have turned about and voted in the saloon again, instead of voting out to stay out these same corrupt officials who have been thus false to their trust. Such childish action is on a par with the conduct of a boy who, after pinching his fingers in the crack, turns around and beats the door. Boston is now surrounded by an unbroken cordon of no-license towns, which has the effect of adding to her population all that floating scum of whose very existence the saloon seems to be an integral part. Of course they are out in force on every voting day, and this may partly account for the late overturn in municipal politics which has elected a Democratic mayor, and what is more, a Democratic city council. But this does not explain why Worcester has reversed her splendid no-license record by about one thousand votes. On the whole the law has been well enforced, and the result in better trade, happier homes and more reliable workmen has been testified to by all the prominent business men of that city.

The election in Boston did not affect the School Board, thanks to the brave and patriotic action of the women, but of course the enemies of the public school system are happy over the election of Matthews, a man whose affinities and sympathies are all on their side; and as for the saloonmen, it is needless to say that they are happy whichever of the two great political parties win. The bars were closed according to law yesterday, but a hundred cases of drunkenness in the courts the day before, showed up the beauties of that system which Boston has once more endorsed by a majority of over 15,000. Ex-President White, of Cornell University, in the last number of the Forum says that the only European city which reminded him so forcibly of the condition of American cities that he was at once seized with a spasm of home sicknesss was—Constantinople. There he found "as the result of Turkish despotism the same hap-hazard, careless, dirty, corrupt system which we in America know so well as the result of mob despotism." It is not pleasant to think that this vivid picture of Boston under the late O'Brien administration may be again repeated. The wonder is that with the corrupt methods now in use in politics and which every candidate is expected to employ, or at least endorse, any decent man can be found to accept a nomination. Apropos to which the Weekly Times tells a good story of a certain minister, who, after spending a few years in New Hampshire where he had been stationed, begged the bishop of his conference to transfer him to Vermont, giving as a reason that "he could not stay in New Hampshire through another campaign and enjoy religion." Partisan politics seem to show the same general features everywhere without respect to localities, and whether this good clergyman found things different across the line, or only "changed the place but kept the pain," we are not informed.

Harvard is both religiously and politically unorthodox. It inclines to Unitarianism, Mugwumpery and Free Trade. The young men who are now the Democratic standard bearers in Massachusetts are generally graduates of that institution; and possibly Elijah A. Morse is right in ascribing to the influence of Harvard much of the present Democratic re-action. This gives interest to the fact that she has just called to fill her chair of political economy, a protectionist—Prof. E. J. James.

The Vermont Legislature besides killing the high-license bill, has also earned the thanks of all lovers of rural beauty by killing another which provided for the systematic destruction of all roadside bushes and weeds. Even in cultured Massachusetts, I have known the municipal authorities to be guilty of perpetrating such a piece of barbarism. A New England country road whether in June or September is a thing of beauty, and the idea of driving the plowshare of destruction over it by these would-be improvers; of rooting up all that lovely, fairy undergrowth of fern and sumach, and blackberry vines, and asters and goldon rod and the copses of birch and hazel that is enough to give any one with the least eye for the picturesque, or the smallest sympathy with nature, the shivers. Americans may not be naturally lacking in the artistic sense, but they often show a want of cultivation which perhaps is not to be wondered at, considering that our government has done nothing to foster the love of art, but everything to repress it. Think of a duty of $16,500 on the Angelus!—that bit of canvas which has been to so many, who had never in all their lives before seen one of the world's great paintings, like a revelation of the undreamed of beauty.

> "When the wind blows and sun dazzles, > Thrill in leafy tremblement,"

The North American Review, I see, has cabled to Mr. Parnell an offer of a hundred guineas for a short article upon any subject he chooses to select. The offer, made at this particular time, when the great Irish leader has become the hero of a domestic scandal, by which he has forfeited the sympathy and support of Gladstone, and even of the best men in his own party, looks as if the editor of the Review accepted the infamous doctrine of which we heard altogether too much at one time, that "public life and private morals have no necessary connection." If this magazine wishes to continue a leading exponent of public opinion, and as such find a place on the center-tables of Christian homes, it must cease to welcome to its columns men notorious for their latitude of thought and practice.

An allusion in the American to the saying of Thackeray in his Irish sketches, that during his Irish tour, "with the sole exception of Father Matthew, he did not meet a single priest who looked him straight in the face," reminds me that I have heard identically the same statement made in reference to members of the lodge. A Jesuitical training is fatal to a frank, manly attitude and bearing. Men trained to deceive and circumvent will show it in their faces. Furthermore, there is another aspect of the case I do not remember ever to have seen considered. It is the moral effect which the lodge embargo on freedom of speech and of the press, must have on a community generally. Buckle, in his History of Civilization in England, well says that the worst evil incident to times of persecution, is that "fraud becomes a necessity of life; insincerity is made a daily custom, the whole tone of public feeling is vitiated, and the gross amount of vice and error fearfully increased." The fact that a man cannot express his honest convictions without incurring the enmity of the craft, deranging his business, and cutting him off from all hope of political preferment, must act in the same way. To be terrorized is always to be demoralized. This is what Masonry does and will continue to do until its power is broken.

May our New England meeting, of which my next letter will (D. V.) contain a full report, score another victory of Christ against anti-Christ.

ELIZABETH E. FLAGG.

—Joseph Cook has been lecturing on the Pacific Coast, and is now journeying eastward. The Pacific of San Francisco of the 26th ult., mentions his addresses in that city and vicinity where he was engaged for some two weeks. "He has," says the editor, Dr. Kimball, "been profoundly impressive. For, abate what he will in criticism of person, matter and manner, he is one of the grandest figures upon the platform in the times in which we live. Nobody can listen to him without interest, because one cannot help being instructed, lifted and inspired by him." On Thursday evening of last week Mr. Cook spoke in Salt Lake City. He of course took up the manifesto of President Woodruff, and subjected it to a powerful analysis. He argued that it was a deception and a snare; that the Mormons are yet bound by their revelations in favor of polygamy, of which there has been no revocation or setting aside in any particular.

We should esteem it a special favor if our readers would kindly name the Cynosure when answering any advertisement found in our columns.

REFORM NEWS.

METHODISTS GETTING READY TO LEAD IN THE REFORM.

OUR WESTERN AGENT SENDS GOOD NEWS. REMEMBER IT.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—During my late visit to the churches of southwestern Iowa I visited Tarkio in Missouri. I gave a short address on the lodge to the students of Tarkio College, and especially emphasized the heathen and deistical character of the lodge worship.

I also visited Coin, Blanchard, and College Springs, speaking as the way opened and taking subscriptions to the N. C. A. and to the Cynosure.

While at Tarkio I had a long conversation with the pastor of the M. E. church, who has been a Royal Arch Mason. He is heartily disgusted with the whole thing, and did not hesitate to express his disapprobation of the secret society system. At Blanchard, also, I had a conversation with the M. E. pastor who had been a Master Mason; but like his brother at Tarkio, has turned from those lying vanities, and is now satisfied with the fellowship of the church of Christ. While at College Springs I called on Bro. Milner of the M. E. church. He said that the presiding elder of his district told him that scarcely any of the young M. E. ministers of that part of the State join the lodge now.

I mention these things to show that while Bro. Ronayne is right in calling attention to the wicked oaths and horrid penalties of Freemasonry, he is wrong in assuming that when the heathen and infidel character of the lodge religion is exposed, men will rush the faster into the lodge.

Fifteen or eighteen years ago, a very large per cent of the ministers of the great M. E. church were Freemasons. In some conferences nearly all were Masons. Dr. Coleman of the Wisconsin conference said, several years ago, that four-fifths of the Masons of his conference had withdrawn from the lodge and had ceased to have anything to do with it. Some of them frankly confessed that they found Masonry to be wicked, and that they could not be Christians and remain Masons.

Rev. Hendricks of the Iowa conference, said that twelve or fifteen years ago, nearly all of the ministers of the Iowa and Des Moines conferences were Freemasons. But now nine-tenths of them had withdrawn from the lodge and ceased to have anything to do with Masonry, and that but a small per cent of the young ministers were joining. He said that only one of the five presiding elders of his conference was a Mason now.

There is a class of men who, perhaps, will go into the lodge more readily if they know it is a system of heathen infidelity; but while this is true, it is, doubtless, also true that there is a class of men who, when they are shown that the oaths of Masonry bind to the concealment of crime and the protection of criminals, will run more greedily into the lodge, because they desire the advantages in wrong doing that such "disloyal oaths" afford. But it is not the heathen, infidel, crime-loving portion of the community that we expect to influence by showing the heathen character of the ceremonies, the deistical character of its ritual of worship, and the facilities afforded by its covenants for concealing crime and escaping punishment. But we do expect to influence the of the evangelical churches, and ALL honest, law-abiding citizens.

When this is accomplished, the lodges, freed from moral restraint, will be guilty of such multiplied and gross excesses, that an outraged people will refuse longer to tolerate their existence. We can, by the authority and power of our Lord Jesus Christ, free the churches from the grasp of the lodge. There is an army of silent workers, who have withdrawn from the lodge and who secretly exert an influence against it.

The pastor of the M. E. church, at State Center, Iowa, who never was a Mason, asked one of his presiding elders who was a Mason, whether he had better join the lodge. The elder frankly advised him to keep out. Afterwards he consulted another Masonic elder about becoming a Mason. The elder told him when he joined the Masons, and how many degrees he took; but added that he had not been to the lodge for years and did not mean to have anything more to do with it.

So the young minister concluded not to wear the cast-off shoes of the elder.

While at State Center I preached for the pastor who sought and profited by the fatherly counsel of these Masonic elders. I freely conversed with him, and gave him some literature, and when parting with him he bade me God speed in my work.

I have just arranged to send Joseph Cook's speech and the Cynosure for a year to one academy and two of the colleges of Iowa. And I just have received a donation to help send the Cynosure to the colored pastors in the South. So let us push the battle all along the line, trusting in Christ for the victory. Yours in the faith of the Gospel, C. F. HAWLEY.

AN ANTE-BELLUM SCHOOL.

A visit to Lexington, Ky., has to me a little vein of romance in it; for in the spring of 1832 I came here over the hills from Cincinnati in a stage coach. I found Rev. Geo. Whipple, who served so long as the secretary of the A. M. A., teaching here in Major Todd's Young Ladies' Seminary. Mr. Todd was the father of Miss M. Todd who married President Lincoln; and at the boarding hall I was introduced to a law student, Mr. Edwards, son of Gov. Edwards of Illinois, who afterwards became the law partner and brother-in-law of Mr. Lincoln. I was engaged to teach a school seven or eight miles out towards Nicholasville, by four planters—three of them were named Bryan and the other was a Mr. Farrar. The school-house was built of logs, with sliding windows, in a woodland pasture, on a corner of Wm. Bryan's plantation. There I taught four quarters with the hearty approval of my employers, and returned in the spring of 1833 to Cincinnati.

One morning I took the cars to visit the scene of my youthful experience, and soon reached the residence of Mr. Joseph Bryan, son of the Joseph Bryan whom I knew. I was kindly received and taken over the plantations which I had traversed so many years ago. I found many changes. The railroad runs through the plantations, and the woodland pastures have almost disappeared. Joseph Bryan's residence has been rebuilt and enlarged, and the little log school-house is gone. Daniel Bryan, who was one of my scholars, told me that it was removed not many years after I was there, and a brick school-house built on the public road in a more central location. The former residences of Samuel Bryan and Wm. Bryan, however, appear very natural; also the ground on which the old school-house stood, notwithstanding the railroad embankment which is not more than forty rods away.

One incident of that early time, if you will pardon me, I will relate. There was a lyceum or debating club at Nicholasville, which I was invited to attend. One question proposed and fully discussed was, "Is slavery beneficial, financially, to the commonwealth of Kentucky?" I took part in the debate and argued for the negative. Taking the census of slaves in the State and their average valuation, I stated that this immense sum ought not to be sunk in owning laborers, but to be kept in hand for improvements and enlargement of productive industry, and the laborers simply paid for the work performed. My argument was well received, and I thought many were convinced at that time that it was founded on the rock of truth, as has been abundantly demonstrated since.

On Sabbath, the 23d, I preached in Lexington in the M. E. church, Rev. Mr. Locke, pastor, and gave away a few tracts. The next day I visited the Lexington Normal in their new and elegant buildings, and spoke briefly to the students. Prof. Foster presides over the higher classes, which meet in the new building, and also over the primary classes that meet in the original academy. Dining with Prof. and Mrs. Foster, I met most of the faithful missionary teachers who are doing such a noble and patient work in this institution.

At the Kentucky University I called on Dr. Graham and Prof. McGarvey of the Bible College (theological) department. I examined the libraries and found none of our reform volumes, and gave anti-secrecy tracts to the librarian to distribute. On the morning of the 28th I took the train for Georgetown. Pres. Dudley was not at home, but I looked in the library and found on the shelves most of the books which we formerly donated the college, in good order. The attendance here is increasing, there being 250 students now, nearly double the number of two years ago.

The next day I visited an institution on the south side of Lexington, called the State College, which is sustained to some extent by the U. S. government. They have a weather station and observatory, and the students are mostly U. S. cadets, a part of the time under military drill. The president was absent, but Prof. White, the general manager, said they had no library yet, but were making arrangements for one. They have no secret college societies, so I gave Prof. White a supply of tracts for distribution and retired.

On the 30th I preached in the M. E. church on N. Upper street, Rev. Mr. Smith, pastor, and distributed a few tracts which were well received. On Tuesday I visited Millersburg. When I arrived there I was surprised to learn that the college was in a measure broken up, or, at least, was in litigation. The M. E. Conference had attempted to move it to Winchester, and Pres. Batson had taken the library and other movables to that place. The older residents at Millersburg were much aggrieved to this action as they had done so much for the college. And so they referred the matter to the courts of law. Prof. Wales and Rev. Mr. Redd were endeavoring to hold the fort by teaching, not in the college, but in private rooms. They have quite a number of students. Distributing a few tracts, I returned and made preparations to go to Berea, which I reached on the 4th inst. Yours truly, S. F. PORTER.

CORRESPONDENCE.

LODGE WORK ON THE PACIFIC COAST.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal.

DEAR EDITOR:—I wish that some one who has studied the subject thoroughly, would give us his views in the Cynosure of the rise and development of English deism in the eighteenth century and its relation to Freemasonry. I think that the meeting of the drunken infidel Masons in Apple-tree Tavern had more to do with the development of infidelity in England than even most of Anti-masons imagine. To me it is very evident that Unitarianism and Theosophy have not simply grown up with, but out of secret societies in this country. Secret societies are the hot-beds and the nurseries of infidelity and absolute devil-worship.

As in the case of Masonry and Odd-fellowship, the first thing that the devil inspires his tools to do is to organize a secret society under the guise of benevolence or for convivial and hilarious purposes, and then he suggests to them the advisability of engrafting upon this parent stock some of the heathen mysteries. The next step is to send out his emissaries and recruiting sergeants to find recruits from among the members and ministers of orthodox Christian churches, and the most spiritual and aggressive of these are his chosen sphere of operations. The next thing is to employ as many as possible of these new recruits, especially active temperance and evangelistic workers, as drill-sergeants, and to induce them to open secret drill-halls, where the young can be trained for his service in Masonic and Odd-fellows' lodges. In this way the altars of Baal are set up side by side with the altars of God, and Hiram Abiff supersedes Jesus Christ.

Even now and here, all sorts of Knight Templar shows and Odd-fellow parades find a hearty welcome and a strong endorsement in Methodist churches and by Methodist ministers, while every opposer of lodge religion is completely muzzled. The pastor of one of these churches in this city, in preaching the funeral of an Odd-fellow, took occasion to say:

"Three years ago I became acquainted with this brother in the lodge, of which he and I were members. When I spoke to him about attending church services, he said, 'The church is a dull place to me; the lodge is my church.' This brother was converted two years ago, and although his views and feelings were entirely changed in regard to the sufficiency of the order as a means of salvation, he never severed his connection with the lodge."

This preacher then eulogized Odd-fellowship as a great and grand benevolent organization, and as every way deserving the patronage of the very highest type of Christians. But suppose that some one should arise in one of the prayer meetings of this same church and quote the text, "Have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them;" or, "Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers," and to make the application, what would occur—he would be invited to sit down and hold his peace. A sensational ritualistic, Rome-ward bound Episcopal preacher here preached a week or two ago on Sunday night, on the motto of the Knights of Pythias' "Friendship, charity, benevolence."

I have a proposal to make. It is this, that the Freemasons should take the name Satanicus and the Odd-fellows that of Foolicum. In Russia, some years ago, the former was organized, the candidates being sworn under a death penalty to the renunciation of the doctrine of the Trinity and baptized in the name of the devil. Inasmuch as Masonry rejects the Son of God, it rejects God also, and as it swears the candidate under a death penalty into the service of Baal and to the worship of Baal, the proper designation of it would be "The Satanicus." And as Odd-fellowship was originally and is still a system of buffoonery, and as many fellows are odd who are far from being fools, "Foolicum" would be a more specific and appropriate name than the one which they now bear. This was the name given to a secret society organized some years ago in a United Presbyterian college.

This city has had, from among the few wise and noble who are called to the ministry,—that is who are called of God—two such distinguished ecclesiastics or heresiarchs (I hardly feel like saying which) to fill important pulpits. I refer to Rev. Dr. Barrows and Rev. Dr. Harcourt. The former inaugurated his pastorate by introducing some of his new theology. He eliminated hell from the church creed (not from the Bible nor the universe) and inserted the second probation. He was thrown out of a buggy under peculiar circumstances and left the city rather suddenly, and there has been a bad report about him ever since. But then he was a Knight Templar, and his new theology made some of his audience feel so comfortable that they greatly desire his return, which I understand is to take place. It is due the Congregational ministers here to say, that all, or nearly all of them are free from the marks of the beast, and that they do not endorse this new and downward departure in theology.

The city is deprived altogether of the wisdom, eloquence and improved theology of the Rev. Dr. Harcourt, and Howard Street M. E. church will not soon again hear such sublime (or sublimated) theology as it has been accustomed to under the ministry of its former pastor. To illustrate the case I will relate an incident. When Bro. Gladwin was here, I took him one night to Dr. H.'s prayer meeting. Dr. H. said to the audience: "I am fully persuaded that for long ages, man was nothing but a mere animal, until the inspiration of the Almighty came upon him and gave him understanding." He then talked "no personal devil," and some other Universalist doctrines. Bro. G. arose, gave an account of his conversion, sanctification and his work in the National Christian Commission, the Y. M. C. A., the Methodist itineracy and in India. He then remarked that American Methodism had a good many side-shows which India Methodism did not have, and he hoped never would; that he had never heard of a "Crazy Social" in a Methodist church in India, nor of a good many other crazy things which he had seen and heard of here. He did not think there was a Methodist preacher in India, who, if he were to turn Universalist, would continue to occupy a Methodist pulpit and preach Universalism while he looked to a Methodist congregation for a support. He had a brother-in-law in India who was a Methodist preacher, and turned Universalist; but he had enough self-respect to get out of the Methodist church and go where he belonged. They had a great many monkey-worshipers in India, but that THEY didn't call them Christians.

But, perhaps, the strangest thing connected with this item of Methodist history is, that the resident bishop here not only stood up in defence of Harcourt in the church which he served here, but has secured his transfer to Baltimore, and promised him one of the best charges in the connection,—and that six months in advance of the time of the conference session. But the claims of Christ are, it would seem, small in comparison with those of Hiram Abiff, for these gentlemen are united by the "Mystic Tie," which is stronger than that of Christianity. A Methodist preacher may disparage the claims of the Bible, but not those of Masonry. If this is not a down-grade movement than I am greatly deceived. And there are not wanting other cases where Episcopal favor is hard, if not impossible, to account for, except on the influence of lodgery, either external or internal, on the councils of the church. There is a notable case of this kind in Arizona and one in Washington, located at Olympia, worse even than the one which I have described.

In singular and beautiful contrast with these two cases, stands that of Rev. J. C. Smith, pastor of St. John's Presbyterian church, this city. He offered and urged the acceptance of his resignation to the San Francisco presbytery at its last meeting. There was some dissatisfaction on the part of some of the members of the church, and one of the elders stated to the presbytery, that the ground of it was that Dr. Smith preached too much of Christ. Dr. Smith is a man of commanding personal appearance, broad culture, deep spirituality, genial and benevolent disposition, and is regarded by his brethren as a prince in Israel. When such men as he is are at a discount in so-called Christian churches, and such as Barrows and Harcourt in demand, it seems to me that some of these temples need a scourge of small cords. But Christ's "fan is in his hand, and he will thoroughly purge his floor, and gather the wheat into his garner." Just think of it, a preacher not acceptable who preaches Christ; but one who does not believe there is any hell, in demand. Why, even the devils acknowledge the existence and dread the punishment of a hell. The devils who possessed the Gadarene demoniac were more orthodox in their theology than some of these Knight Templar priests, and nobility under one prince of the power of the air.

Even the Y. M. C. A. of this city is in the "grip of the lion's paw," for the secretary, when I interviewed him with reference to adding the Cynosure to the list of papers on file in the reading-room, said that he was a Mason and so were some of the directors, and that he could not accept the Cynosure. I replied: "Masonry won't bear the light, then; if so, then it ought to go down under it." He replied: "Why, what is the matter with Masonry?" I replied: "It is another religion, and, of course, not Christian?" This he denied; but I told him I could prove it from every book which the order had ever produced. Who closed the door nearly everywhere against the literature and the advocates of anti-secrecy? Was it the Lord or the devil? Surely, it was not the Lord, else his kingdom would be divided against itself. Who is to open the pulpits and platforms and newspapers of Christendom to anti-secretists? Is it not Christ? Pray for me, you who pray against the lodge, that God may open the way for a hearing in Christian churches for the cause of Christ as opposed to the claims of Baal! M. H. NICHOLS.

DR. SAMUEL SIMPSON, OF GARFIELD, WASHINGTON.

WESTON, Oreg.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—I have just received the sad intelligence that our much beloved brother, Dr. Simpson of Garfield, Washington, was very low from the effects of a congestive chill. He is advanced in age and naturally quite feeble physically; he has not the constitution to survive a very severe attack. But I do most sincerely pray God to spare this dear old veteran of the Cross, for it seems as though we cannot spare him. There is no anti-secretist among the ranks of the Missionary Baptists of this Coast who would be so greatly missed as he.

This most earnest and devout Christian man has done more than all others combined, with whom I am acquainted, in scattering anti-secret literature in Oregon and Washington.

He has been one of our most indefatigable workers in the advocacy of the whole Gospel truth. He has in every sense of the word been a standard bearer, and has unflinchingly and without the fear of men or demons stood boldly on the watch towers and cried aloud, sparing not in lifting up his voice "like a trumpet to show the Lord's people their transgression and the house of Jacob their sins" concerning Baal worship.

He has, I think, been a constant subscriber for the Cynosure for the last twenty years; and while he patronizes very many religious and secular periodicals he prizes none so highly as the Christian Cynosure.

Will you, brethren at the office rooms, together with the president of the N. C. A., Rev J. L. Barlow, who was favored with a visit by this brother a few years ago, join with me in praying God to spare the Dr. to us of this Northwest Coast for many years yet? I desire to be submissive to the Lord's will, and I do hope it may be the will of our Heavenly Father to raise up this man of God to us. Yours in true sorrow,

W. H. PRUETT.

PITH AND POINT.

Ministers here who wear the lamb-skin apron at funerals and extra occasions of the lodge, seem to be very popular. The two Lutherans, one at Lockport and the one in Constantine, both are Freemasons. They are young, smart and well educated for the ministry, and seem to prosper finely, holding many festivals, fairs, etc., with a lively time and make the money. Oh! how long will the "deceiver" be allowed to go up to the house of the Lord and keep deceiving his people? Shall we be discouraged? No, I trust not.—P. P. BATES, Constantine, Mich.

THE CYNOSURE FOR THE SOUTHERN COLORED MINISTERS.

Your plan to put the Cynosure into so many homes in this State is one which I have hoped to see put in operation ever since Bro. Woodsmall's days. I am glad that I am now in position where I can help circulate the grand old Cynosure, and propagate, by my influence and in print, the wholesome principles it teaches. If you can spare them let me have a lot of tracts of Moody, Pentecost and Cook for my students.—PROF. JOSEPH A. BOOKER, Little Rock, Ark.

IS NOT THE CYNOSURE NEEDED IN THE SOUTH?

Continue the paper, as I feel that I could not well do without it. I look for it every week as I would look for a friend coming to see me with good news to cheer my sad heart. With many thanks to the friends who have done so much for me by giving me this valuable paper for the past year.—(Rev.) J. B. LIVINGSTON, New Iberia, La.

HELP THE SOUTHERN BRETHREN.

I am thankful to say that the Cynosure has been of great help to me, and I heartily thank the dear friends who have sent the paper to me. I hope it will be continued. I have great battles to fight by myself and the Lord Jesus, and your paper has made me able to oppose all of the secret orders. They told me if I did not stop I would make enemies, and it would be hard for me. I have no one here to help, for almost every one is a member of some lodge. They are afraid to say a word against the lodges, but I stand out against them boldly.—H. JACKSON, Augusta, Ga.

GOOD WORDS.

I wish the cause all success.—REV. J. M. FARIS, New Concord, O.

I am trying to work up a club. It is up-hill work in our lodge-ridden place.—J. P. MCWILLIAMS, Greenfield, O.

I am very well pleased with the Christian Cynosure. It is a very interesting paper.—REV. J. F. BRIGHT, Cartersville, Ga.

Had I time I could seed Washington down with Cynosure subscribers. I find colored friends pay as promptly as a usual thing as white.—W. B. STODDARD.

We never intend to be without the Cynosure while it continues to be as now, the advocate of truth and right. We are feeble and cannot get out to get subscribers, but give our prayers and good wishes for the success of the cause.—JOHN STRATTON, Lake Park, Ia.

LITERATURE.

MORAL MUSCLE: and how to use it. A brotherly chat with young men. By Frederick A. Atkins. Pp. 82. Price, 50 cts. Fleming H. Revell, Chicago and New York.

The author of this vigorous and wholesome volume is editor of the Young Man, and his work is very happily introduced by Rev. Thain Davidson of London, whose commendation would, if possible, place a copy in the hand of every young man. The title, whether we regard it as enigmatic, or paradoxical, or ambiguous, yet suggests forcibly the central idea of the writer—Christian manliness, the manliness of Jesus Christ, the vigor and power of self-restraint induced by the indwelling grace of God. The beauty and power of a pure life, of a true Christian knight-hood, such as Paul ever reminds of, is made so attractive, and the steps to its attainment so robbed of difficulty, if taken patiently and with singleness of purpose, that this volume must prove a blessing to thousands who are cast amid the gyrations of folly and vice in a great city. The author, however, either needs to probe deeper among the temptations that beset young men, or needs himself more moral courage, for the evil companionships of the lodge and club room, especially the unequal yoking in the secret worships of the former, are unmentioned by him. Few city temptations are more alluring, deceptive, popular and ruinous to the soul and bodies of men.

HILDA, or the Golden Age. By Emma Leslie. Pp. 80. Price, 50 cts. London Religious Tract Society. For sale by F. H. Revell, Chicago and New York.

This beautiful little gift book gives a graphic picture of life in ancient Rome during the first century after Christ, about the time Paul was supposed to be a prisoner in that city, yet preaching to multitudes, among whom were converts to Christianity from the very palace of the Cæsar. The story is of a captive British girl sold as a slave in Rome with her brother. Both heard and believed the Gospel, and were by a good providence returned to their native isle, where they might become missionaries among the half-savage natives.

JACK THE CONQUEROR, or overcoming difficulties. Pp. 159. Price, 50 cents. Pacific Press Publishing Co., Oakland, Cal.

This is a healthful, cheerful English story, telling of the difficulties about the path of a poor boy, and how one by one he overcame them, until he became an illustrious and useful man. The book is tastefully illustrated and contains excellent lessons for boys who would rise into a useful life, as well as for older people, who may do a great work for God by a little help given in Christ's name and with good sense.

WEBSTER'S INTERNATIONAL DICTIONARY.—This new book is the authentic "Unabridged," thoroughly revised and enlarged under the supervision of Noah Porter, D. D., LL.D., of Yale University. Editorial work on the revision has been in active progress for over ten years, and more than a hundred paid literary workers have been engaged upon it. The publishers have expended in the last ten years over $300,000 in the preparation of this new book before issuing the first copy, and the improvements of the various editions since that of 1847 have cost over three-fourths of a million of dollars for editing, illustrating, typesetting and electrotyping alone. It has been the aim of the publishers to make this new Dictionary the best book of its kind in the English language. Their long experience and unusual facilities are greatly in their favor. It unlocks mysteries, resolves doubts, and decides disputes. The possession of it and the habit of consulting it will tend to promote knowledge, literary taste, and social refinement. For every family, the members of which have mastered the art of reading, the purchase of Webster's International Dictionary will prove a profitable investment, and the more they advance in knowledge and cultivation the more they will appreciate its aid and worth.

The current number of Our Day introduces its readers to the Universal Peace Congress held during the past summer in London, by the aid of Rev. Dr. R. B. Howard, secretary of the American Peace Society. Dr. Howard presents in brief form the work of this great meeting which reaffirmed its testimony against war from the midst of the armies of Europe. The address of Chauncey M. Depew at the unveiling of the Greeley statue in New York is also preserved in this number. "Our attitude toward Jesuitism," by Pres. C. E. Ameron of the French Protestant College of Springfield, Mass., is a practical review of the struggle forced upon Americans for the preservation of their cherished institutions from the rapacity of the Jesuits. Dr. Storrs' address at the American Board meeting in St. Paul, and Joseph Cook's Monday lecture on Unitarianism in Japan and Boston ably complete the main articles of the number.

The American Agriculturist for December gives us many practical notes and illustrations on winter work. The winter harvest from the ice-field is naturally first. Butter cows and butter-making can be best studied in these leisure days. The number is packed full of useful matter for farmers and their wives—a most attractive farm magazine.

The current number of the Converted Catholic closes the seventh volume. The magazine maintains a strong battle for the truths which are subverted or hidden by Romanism, and deserves a strong patronage among patriotic Americans whose eyes are open to the dangers of Jesuitism.

The American Law Register in its last number continues the exhaustive review of the law governing an "Original Package." The national interest in this discussion will make these numbers valuable for preservation.

LODGE NOTES.

John C. Smith who, has twice served as Grand Master of Illinois Masons, has got no further in Odd-fellowship than "Grand Scribe" of the Patriarchs.

The deficit for the Pythian conclave at Milwaukee last summer has not yet been made good, and those who have bills threaten to sue on Dec. 1 if measures are not taken to secure their payment.

Ten car loads of the Patriotic Sons of America lately went out of Chicago on the Sabbath to participate in some meeting at Glenwood. With all its patriotic avowals this order is like all the rest, careless of the Sabbath, and so really indifferent to the real welfare of the nation.

Rev. Wm. Pettit, a Methodist minister of Indiana, whose case we have previously noted, has been found guilty of the murder of his wife and sentenced to the penitentiary for life. He is prominent in Masonic circles and was Grand Prelate of the Grand Commandery of Knight Templar Masons at the time of his arrest.

According to the official report given at the last meeting of Illinois Odd-fellows the number of members of that order in the world appears to be 1,402,630, of whom 694,157 belong to the Independent Order and 708,473 to the Manchester Unity. The latter is an English body with similar principles but entirely distinct as an organization.

The National Assembly of the Farmers' Mutual Benefit Association at Springfield, Ill., adopted a resolution favoring the confederation of the F. M. B. A., the Patrons of Husbandry, the Farmers' Alliance and the Knights of Labor, for the mutual advantage of these organizations. Indianapolis is selected as the next place of meeting.

It is estimated that the Legislature of Michigan will make an appropriation of $50,000 toward the fund for defraying the expenses of the National Encampment G. A. R. to be held at Detroit in August, 1891. The city of Detroit will be asked to donate $25,000, and $25,000 will be raised by subscription. What good will come to the State for this $100,000?

At Minneapolis, Judge Hicks has rendered a decision wiping out the secret order of the Knights of Aurora and sustaining the charges of fraud, insolvency, and unlawful practices made in connection with its management. The society is strongest in Minnesota. Iowa, Illinois, Missouri, Nebraska and Kansas. Will it be the turn of the Modern Woodmen next?

The first meeting of the Chinese Masonic fraternity ever held in Chicago took place lately on Clark street. Several laundrymen were initiated, and a sort of jubilee followed. Not much could be observed from the outside, but a Chinaman with red wings guarded the portals of the lodge-room. Large quantities of roast chicken were carried into the room, and none came out.

In accordance with the instructions of the United Labor Council of the Port of London, England, the union seamen and firemen on the vessels of three great shipping companies went out on a strike Dec. 5, their grievance being the employment of non-union men by the companies. In consequence of recent brutal attacks on "Black-legs" a large force of police has been stationed along the wharves to protect the non-union men.

A movement has been started by local assembly No. 6,111, Knights of Labor, at Pittsburg, Pa., composed of green-glass workers, which threatens to end in a secession from the Knights of Labor ranks. The movement originated in the alleged improper conduct of Louis Arrington, master workman of the Green-Glass Workers' national assembly. Dissatisfaction against Mr. Powderly has also been breeding in the Pittsburg assembly for three years.

A memorial window has been placed in the Methodist Episcopal church at Amsden, Ohio, by the Grand Army Post of that village. The central portion is five feet in diameter, being a representation of the United States flag. On each side are panels giving the badges of the Sons of Veterans and Woman's Relief Corps. Above and below are the G. A. R. and army corps badges. We wonder if there is any corner left for the Prince of Peace in the church, or for the Lord who said "In secret have I said nothing."

For the last three months of 1890 the Christian Cynosure has given especial attention to the college secret societies for the benefit of the hundreds of colleges to whose reading-rooms it is sent. This interesting discussion, in which have appeared the opinions of some of the very ablest American educators, will be incidentally continued next year.

But with the first of the year will begin to be published the results of a wider investigation than has yet been made into the identity of

MODERN AND ANCIENT SECRETISM.

The ancient secret societies were the MYSTERIES practiced in Chaldea, Egypt, Phœnicia, Greece, Rome, etc. These were the pagan religious systems of the ancient world.

WERE THEY RELATED TO THE LODGES OF TO-DAY?

This question we shall endeavor to answer. We believe that new evidence of the most intimate relation has been lately found, and that the presentation of this evidence to be made in the "Cynosure" will amaze Christendom the moment it is realized.

THE WHITE CROSS LEAGUE

and Social Purity movement is come none too soon, as will appear in the course of this investigation.

In connection with this most important topic the Cynosure will give particular attention to the

publishing them in full so far as they can be obtained, and showing their absolute incompatibility to good citizenship as well as to Christianity.

The peculiar features which have made the Cynosure so valuable in the past will be continued. Current events and the interference of the lodge in them will have especial attention. Able correspondence will be continued from New England, Washington, the Southern Mississippi district, and the Pacific Coast. The portraits and sketches of notable persons who have been identified with Christian reforms will be continued, and will be, as in the past, a very popular feature of the paper. The Sabbath-school lesson notes by Miss E. E. Flagg will be continued. For all who wish to wisely improve every opportunity against the lodge they are the best. The Home and Temperance and other departments will continue to be filled with excellent reading for the fireside.

BE SURE

that the Cynosure comes to your home during 1891.

You can nowhere else read fully the writings and sayings of such men as Joseph Cook, D. L. Moody, George F. Pentecost, D.D., E. P. Goodwin, D.D., Pres. J. Blanchard, Pres. H. H. George, and a host of men as good if not as great, on the subject of secret societies.

Nowhere else can you read of the progress of this reform week by week; and as the secret societies are now beginning openly to nominate and elect men to Congress and State offices, as they number hundreds of orders and millions of members, the issues they raise are of importance to every American.

Since the lodges are so aggressive every citizen should understand their nature and history and something of the men who invented and who manage them. You need the Cynosure, therefore, to keep abreast of the times as a well-informed American.

You ought also to help on this movement against the secret lodges. How better begin than by subscribing for the Cynosure? And $1.50 is but little to give in aid of so good a cause.

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, DECEMBER 18, 1890.

THE FARMERS' ALLIANCE.

This new secret political party, lately sprung up and seemingly delirious with success, hails from the South. But it has taken the once strong Republican State of Kansas; secured the Legislature, and elected five out of its seven members of Congress. And besides its National Economist at Washington, it has volunteer organs in several States. What have the Cynosure readers to hope or fear from it?

Its success is no proof of soundness. In 1853 the Know Nothing party arose, and in one year swept several Northern States. It changed its name to "American;" nominated one presidential candidate, and died. Nobody holds its one principle now, or respects its memory. Mr. Seward, quoted by his son, said: "A secret political party is hostile to every American principle." Gen. Grant said the same in his autobiography.

The objections to this new party are:

1. It calls itself an "order"; which word means, "men so closely linked together that they form a separate class in the community" (Webster). For an "order" to aspire to govern, is fraud and usurpation.

2. In its National Economist, Nov. 22d ult., we read: "The grange did a grand work." "The Greenbackers sowed seeds which are now bearing fruit." "The Knights of Labor, like other great reformatory movements, succeeded in planting good seed." "These three classes of reformers [Grange, Greenbackers, and Knights], can bring to bear all the energy, endurance, and courage of the three to attain the objects sought by each." "The time is ripe," and "The Farmers' Alliance is, we believe, the proper medium through which the union should be accomplished."

Let us see. The grange members were farmers, the Greenbackers were citizens at large, and the Knights are mostly mechanics. They are asked to unite in a secret "order" called the Farmers' Alliance and Industrial Union." Three-fourths of the arguments for the formation of the new party are drawn from the low prices of farm produce. The party is already made up of farmers, bankers and mechanics, and appeals to the campaign of 1892 already show that the managers expect the party to consist of American citizens at that time, and that the very name "Farmers' Alliance" is buncombe and sham. There can be no permanence in such a party. Besides, a political party whose meetings are secret ought to be dispersed by the police. President C. A. Blanchard, in 1884, said to the great Prohibition Convention at Pittsburg, "We hold that men, under special secret obligations to one part of the community, are unfit to govern the whole."

3. The organ of this new party tells us that it is to be made up of members of three secret parties: (1) The grange, which conferred degrees on women, named after heathen goddesses, whose morals were pagan; (2) the Greenbackers who scouted gold and silver and believed in fiat paper money as legal tender for debts; and (3) Knights of Labor, led by a devotee of Rome; all sailing under the farmers' flag. We appeal to every farmer who reads the Cynosure, whether that is an honest party?

The increase of machinery has multiplied grain crops. One farmer with a couple of good hands, with gang-plows, cultivators, and planters, can raise a thousand acres of corn as easy as the same force could raise three or four acres sixty years ago. It will take time for human labor to adjust itself to the new conditions. But there will always be work enough for human brains to plan and human hands to execute; and the farmer will always be the most independent of men. Universal education will put him in a condition to right his wrongs without the meanness of pledged secrecy as to the methods.

But we have read page after page of the Economist without learning whether its party regards the saloon as bad economy or good. And the statesman or party voting to license liquor selling and promising us a political millennium without respect to God or goodness, but by tariff adjustment, sub-treasury, and just taxation, is either very weak or very wicked, and wholly unfit to be trusted by honest men.

A GREAT BUILDING AND ITS WORK.

The Chicago Theological (Congregational) Seminary formally entered its new building Dec. 9. It was a great and joyous occasion. The building has cost about $150,000, and is perhaps the most complete and finely appointed building of its kind in the world. Prof. F. W. Fisk bade the great crowd welcome to their joys. Prof. Ridgaway of the Methodist Theological Seminary at Evanston, Dr. Herrick Johnson of McCormick Seminary, and others spoke. We should have been glad to have heard from the Scandinavians. Many were there, including Rev. Mr. Bjork, Capt. Oman and others.

"The northern hive," in the days of Hengist and Horsa, poured down swarms from Northern Europe, and mingled their blood and bravery with the Saxons, Scots and Picts, and formed the English people "whose morning drum-beat, commencing with the dawn and keeping company with the hours," now, as in Webster's day, "circles the earth with the martial airs of England."

Lutheranism, we are told by Rebold, destroyed all but two or three of the Builders' lodges on the continent of Europe. But Jesuitism, a lodge formed in an underground chapel at midnight, under the Convent of the Martyrs in Paris, met and stopped the reformation in South Europe. But the northern nations, protected by their hard soil and hard sense, kept out the secret lodges from Scandinavia till Bernadotte quit Napoleon and joined policy with England, whose government joined the Masons to protect itself. The kings of Sweden and Denmark, and almost every government officer belonged to the lodge; and the Lutheran State church bishops followed their kings into the degradation and Baalism of secret lodges.

A revival, called by the Swedes "A wind of the Holy Spirit," sixty or seventy years ago, began among the Scandinavian peasants and swept over the whole North. Three hundred thousands of those people have come into the United States. Their leading organ, Missions-Wannen, issues eighteen thousand numbers weekly; and their churches exclude Freemasons. The Swedish Lutherans are a charming people, who have taught the Bible to the masses more thoroughly than any other national church.

The Scandinavians have sent in some sixty or seventy of their young men to the Theological Seminary, as they are substantially one with the Congregationalists, and truer even than they are to the principles and cause of Christ.

Revolutions ever go south. None go north; and the Chicago Seminary, if the faculty are as wise as they are learned and good, will keep step with their Scandinavian allies in teaching the churches to cast out the lodge Achan, and blending in religion as the Saxons did in the State, with these "Northern Lights," they will circle the earth with the songs of Moses and the Lamb, as the English fusion has done with its "morning drum-beat."

THE ROCK RIVER CONGREGATIONAL CLUB met at St. Charles, Ill., on Monday, Dec. 9th. The attendance was smaller than usual but the presence of God was apparent. Mrs. Green of DeKalb read a most excellent paper on consecration, and Dr. Hunter of Sycamore spoke forcibly on Sabbath schools. Pastor Smith presided admirably. The senior editor of the Cynosure observed that he was in favor of a memorial proposed to be erected at Delft Haven, provided that it should present to the world the principles of the Pilgrims. The Plymouth Rock monument was taken possession of by the Masons, but their corner-stone was taken up and a new one laid. Rev. Mr. Ball and Bro. O. Davidson were appointed a committee to receive and forward contributions for the proposed monument. The Pilgrims were opposed to Christmass and all the other Romish masses. B. Fay Mills aids Rev. Mr. Ball at Elgin to begin Dec. 28th inst. Other revival labors are begun.

—Our California friend, John Brown of Madera, is again in Chicago arranging for a second colony into that section of the great Pacific State. His first has proved successful. He may be addressed at room 63, No. 175 Dearborn St.

SPECIAL NEED FOR SPECIAL WORK.

Every department of our work is needy. For agents, tract, reading-room and other funds the N. C. A. treasurer would gladly receive and wisely expend under the direction a hundred dollars for every working day. That would be a small enlargement only, on what the Association must raise to get on with most rigid economy. There never was a better year to make the N. C. A.

A NEW YEAR'S GIFT.

Bro. Nichols' letters from California are moving some to aid him. That is good. Money is safely invested in him, we believe. Then here writes Bro. L. J. Jordan, who has been proved as a lecturer among the colored churches. If we can raise him a special fund of $50 in a week, he will do two months' work in Arkansas for the N. C. A. Can you, friendly reader, make a better investment for the New Year?

Then an equally important—perhaps the most important—object that asks for our gifts is the fund for Southern ministers. There are hundreds of them to whom the paper would be a most welcome New Year's gift. In addition to our present small fund we ask you, readers and friends, to give us before January 1st the price of copies of the paper. This request is surely a moderate one. Make a response that shall shame our timidity?

—The California agent wrote on the 6th inst. that he intended, if the Lord opened the way, to go north from San Francisco into Lake county and try a new field.

—The Chicago office of the Christian Instructor is Room 403, Owings building, opposite the postoffice. Rev. J. A. Collins, the Chicago editor, has opened a United Presbyterian mission in a hall on Polk street near Oakley Ave. Services are held there on Sabbath mornings, followed by Sabbath-school.

—The New England convention will be sitting as this number reaches many of our friends. Let them, as they see this note, stop for a moment to raise a silent prayer to God for his blessing on the meeting. The Boston Herald of Saturday has an excellent editorial notice of the whole plan of the meeting.

—If the readers of this paper have friends or acquaintances who are enamored with the promises of aid extended by the Odd-fellow order, let them read the article which comes to us this week from our excellent German contributor. Such evidence as he accumulates of real the character of the order as the repository and exponent of false religion is not easily disproved.

—The officers of Grove City College, Pennsylvania, have lately had a difficulty with a students' secret society and have been compelled for the good of the institution to banish it. The members seem to have appealed to the law and the faculty is preparing to answer the summons. The precedents at Princeton and Wheaton Colleges and Purdue University are all in their favor.

—A Christian sister who is earnestly praying for our reform, on reading Bro. Nichols' former letter immediately sent a dollar for his support. Let five hundred brethren and sisters who read his able letter in this number each do as much and give our faithful and self-denying California agent a little fund to keep his balance-wheel turning until funds come in from his immediate work.

—A Philadelphia correspondent writing to us of the Sabbath Union meeting, says that "John N. Stearns of the National Temperance Society, New York, a bitter Freemason, had considerable to say in this meeting." It is amazing how such a man, who by his Masonry is endeavoring to break down the Sabbath and Christian institutions, should appear in such a meeting, and obtrude his opinions concerning the management of the Sabbath cause.

—Archbishop Elder of Cincinnati, says the New York Witness, has issued an official paper on the subject of secret societies and of the duties of pastors in relation to them. He reminds those whose duty it is to hear confessions that the Masonic society is expressly condemned and under excommunication. It is then a mortal sin for any Catholic to enter it or continue it. The other secret societies, Odd-fellows, Knights of Pythias, etc., he declares as dangerous to Catholics, and pastors should zealously dissuade those under their care from joining them; but absolution must not be refused, as the penitent is not in mortal sin.

PERSONAL NOTES.

—Prof. L. T. Townsend, one of the editors of Our Day, has been released from the work of his chair, practical theology, in Boston University, until Jan. 1. This is his first respite from his theological labors in twenty-two years. He expects to visit Mexico and South America to study Romanism.

—Rev. Charles R. Hunt, pastor of the Presbyterian church, Colfax, Iowa, and editor of the Evangel of Rest, called on the Cynosure on his return from the meeting of the American Sabbath Union at Philadelphia. His account of the meeting does not differ from that of Bro. Stoddard on another page. The Union resolved to begin the publication of a national paper.

—Rev. Dr. Conrad, long the editor of the Lutheran Observer of Philadelphia, has been relieved of the editorial charge of that paper by reason of age and failing health. He has for nearly a generation ably conducted the paper, and his retirement from the field of religious journalism will be widely regretted. While he lives, however, his name will appear at the head of the Observer's editorial staff. Prof. V. L. Conrad, Ph. D., associate editor, will take editorial control, with Rev. Sylvanus Stall for an associate. Dr. Stall is an able writer and author, and will prove a strong and capable writer for the chief of the Lutheran papers.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10, 1890.

The annual agitation of the question of a high liquor license, which we have had for several years past, was precipitated somewhat earlier than usual this season by reason of the strong recommendation of the high-license bill now before Congress, made by the District Commissioners in their annual report. Since then the question is being discussed everywhere. The W. C. T. U. has come out strong against high license, or in fact any kind of license for dealers in liquor, and it proposes to do its utmost to defeat the bill now under consideration by a Congressional committee. The question came up at this week's meeting of the Pastors' Alliance, but there being a division of opinion it was referred to a committee with instructions to investigate and report upon it at a future meeting This Alliance has already agreed upon a bill which Congress will be asked to pass, amending and regulating the marriage laws in force in this district.

The tobacco crusade of the W. C. T. U. is already bearing fruit. Bills have been introduced in both House and Senate which will, if passed, make it unlawful to sell cigars, cigarettes or tobacco in any shape to persons under sixteen years of age and it will impose a fine of from $2 to $10 upon minors who may be convicted of using tobacco in any shape in any street, avenue, alley or other public place of resort, in the District of Columbia. I am assured by members of the W. C. T. U. that they believe the bill will pass without serious opposition, and a number of Congressmen with whom I have talked on the subject are of the same opinion. Some such law is certainly needed bad enough.

Preparations are already under way in this city for the entertainment of the 500 ministers that will attend the Methodist Ecumenical Conference, which convenes in Washington on the 21st day of October, 1891, and which is to continue in session for two weeks. This will be the second meeting of the kind ever held, the first having met in London in 1881. Three hundred of the delegates will represent churches in the United States and Canada, and the remainder will come from active religious organizations in Great Britain, Australia and New Zealand. The opening sermon is to be delivered by the Rev. William Arthur, who is rated as one of the greatest pulpit orators in England. This conference will be of world-wide interest, for it will embrace not only the discussion of denominational matters, but all subjects bearing on the needs of the Christian world. It is expected also that a vast amount of evangelical work will be accomplished in all sections of this country by the visiting ministers. Bishop Hurst is chairman of the executive committee having the arrangements for the conference in charge, and a financial committee has been appointed to raise a guarantee fund of $15,000 to pay the expenses of the visiting ministers.

THE FLOATING CHAPEL AT HUNTINGTON, WEST VIRGINIA.

Our meetings at Huntington were well attended. The city being almost entirely given over to lodges and saloons, we felt a little anxious as to how our prohibition and Anti-masonic work would be received.

There are many good people living at Huntington. The closest attention was given while we illustrated the philosophy, ceremonies and symbolism of pagan religions, and the interest seemed to deepen as we proceeded to present the same of modern Baal worship in the form of Masonry and Odd-fellowship. At the close of the lecture, Masons, Odd-fellows and Knights of Pythias crowded around asking for information, talking freely of their symbolism. I am more than ever convinced that many who are in the lodge are innocently there, being deceived, and that they will receive the truth if it is presented to them as such, without hastily condemning them for doing what they, not having had the light, believe to be right. The sale of thirty-two "Stories of the Gods" was "evidence of a desire for more light. We are thankful to friends for a liberal supply of Cynosures and other papers which we distributed.

I. R. B. ARNOLD.

P. S. All papers and books for distribution should be sent to us by freight to Portsmouth, Ohio, till Jan. 1.

A STATEMENT.

In the Cynosure of last week [Dec. 4], was published the action of the committee appointed at the April Conference of Churches, to ascertain the views of Congregational ministers on the lodge question. The questions there submitted were correct, but the following facts should be known:

First, the manner of sending out the questions was no part of the committee's plan.

Second, the committee had no thought of assuming any financial responsibility.

Third, Bro. Kelsey of Hart, Mich., sent a letter, with suggestions of a change, which was sent to the Cynosure office with the suggestion that it would be well to correspond with him farther before taking any action with regard to Michigan.

ALEX. THOMSON.

ROMAN CATHOLIC ORDERS ENOUGH.

OTHER SECRET SOCIETIES CONDEMNED.

The following circular on secret societies, says the Western Catholic News, has been issued by Bishop McClosky of the Louisville diocese:

"I avail myself of this occasion to urge upon your reverence the duty of renewed vigilance in shielding those entrusted to your care from the spiritual miseries which accompany their joining secret societies which the church has condemned—attaching to her condemnation censures which mark her sense of the peril there is in them. The Freemasons and Carbonari are societies which no Catholic can join and still continue to be a member of the church. By the very act he severs his relations with it; canceling by the new oath his most solemn engagements to the church of his forefathers.

"And, although the Odd-fellows, Knights of Honor, etc., do not fall under the censures which attach to the two societies mentioned above, still the faithful priest will not only strive to keep the members of his flock from joining them, but he will do his best to reclaim any who, in this matter may, however ignorantly or innocently, have joined their fortunes in bonds of dangerous intimacy with those who, to say the least, are not of the household faith. Surely there are Catholic benevolent societies enough in which may be found all the advantages that are sought for in these secret societies against which I once more earnestly entreat you to guard the faithful under your care."

—Special communion services were held at Oberlin on the 7th inst., when the First Church received nine-eight members, eighty-four on confession; and the Second Church seventy-eight, sixty-one on confession. Most of these admissions are the result of the meetings held by Rev. B. Fay Mills. Nearly a hundred were baptized. The majority of the 176 were students.

THE HOME.

BREATHE SOFT AND LOW.

Breathe soft and low, O whispering wind,
Above the tangled grasses deep,
Where those who loved me long ago
Forgot the world and fell asleep.
No towering shaft, or sculptured urn,
Or mausoleum's empty pride,
Tells to the curious passer-by
Their virtues or the time they died.

I count the old, familiar names,
O'ergrown with moss and lichen gray,
Where tangled brier and creeping vine
Across the crumbling tablets stray.
The summer sky is softly blue;
The birds still sing the sweet old strain;
But something from the summer time
Is gone that will not come again.

So many voices have been hushed,
So many songs have ceased for aye,
So many hands I used to touch
Are folded over hearts of clay.
The noisy world recedes from me;
I cease to hear its praise or blame;
The mossy marble echoes back
No hollow sound of empty fame.

I only know that calm and still
They sleep beyond life's woe and wail,
Beyond the fleet of sailing clouds,
Beyond the shadow of the vale;
I only feel that tired and worn,
I halt upon the highway bare,
And gaze with yearning eyes beyond,
To fields that shine supremely fair.

THE ATHEISM OF TO-DAY.

Scientific atheism is dead; practical atheism is alive. Scientific atheism was bad; practical atheism is worse. Bad it is for man to reject the indisputable evidence of the being and personality of a God. Bad it is for man to find in the hand that rules the seasons and the heavens no guiding hand for him. But worse it is for man to believe there is a God, and live as if there were no God. The man who lives as if God were not, when he believes there is a God, is surely a less worthy type of a man than he who, failing to believe, lives in accordance with the moral verities.

Many men and women of this age are atheists without knowing it. They live as if there were no God. Many of the influences of the time promote practical atheism. The absorptions of the time tend to affect this lamentable result. Merchants are absorbed in their business. Women are absorbed in their homes. Men work as if this life were all. Women live and struggle as if a few years measured all existence. Some scholars labor as if there would be no opportunity in any other world of the omniscient God, outside of this world, for the study of divine plans. Many of the American people are in as much danger of being practical atheists, as the French people of a hundred years ago were in danger of being theoretical atheists.

The methods for the removal of practical atheism are within the reach of all. The first means is the recognition of the intellectual evidences of the being of a God and of his superintending care. This evidence abounds; modern investigations have not disproved Paley's positions. Men naturally believe in the existence of God. It is much harder not to believe than to believe. To these evidences, so abundant, men should direct their attention. If men would but think, they could not be atheists.

Men should not be so absorbed by their work that they have no time to think. Some men break the fourth commandment every day in the week. They labor so hard throughout the six days, that they are too tired to worship on Sunday. Such overwork they should stop. They know they should put an end to it. They are selling their bodies for this life, and their souls for all life. The removal of the strain of intense application would tend to remove practical atheism. If merchants were less commercial they would be more spiritual.

Practical atheism, moreover, would die in a generation, by the formation of right spiritual habits in youth. The law of habit has application to spiritual growth. The law holds true in the duty of daily devotion, as in the duty of mercantile service. Such habits, begun in the first years, and growing with the growth, would anchor the soul to a firm and reverent faith.

Practical atheism would cease, further, by fixing minds and hearts of men more securely on the life of Christ. Christ was the Son of God, and also the son of man. As the true Son of God, he shows us the glory of the Father full of grace and truth. As the son of man, he gives us the power to become sons of God. He is the answer to intellectual skepticism; the inspiration in moral indifference; the ideal of all achievement; the motive power in all service. He is the way, the truth and the life of man unto God.

Not a very few may read these paragraphs, who would shudder at being called atheists. They would affirm their belief in a personal God. But possibly they will, through reflection, discover that they are living as atheists; they are living as if this present life were all of life, and as if there were no personal power beyond the present sphere of existence. Such must confess that the name of atheist is as well-fitted as it is a sad epithet for their state. But such a state of life may be changed, and one may enter into truthful obedience and live to a loving God.—The Advance.

THAT OMNIPOTENT FORCE.

Can man produce a spring by artificial appliance? Can he send throughout nature, by means of furnace fires or steam-pipes, the thrill of life which bids the kingdom of plants to leap into being and beauty? No! Man may make a hot-house, but he cannot cause a spring-time. He may cultivate his little beds of flowers and banks of tropical plants within the narrow confines of steam-heated rooms covered with glazed roofs, and give our winter months a taste of artificial greenery; he may force sweet and beautiful flowers, from which all fragrance has been cultured, to grow in pots and yield untimely blossoms in the very face of winter snows. But what a small thing is that compared with those mighty and mysterious results which are wrought everywhere around us in the spring? Who can fill the mountains with the glory of the greening forests? Who can cover the valley with verdant grasses, and dot them with the bright eyes of countless wild flowers? Who array innumerable orchards with white blossoms of cherry-trees, and pink blossoms of peach and apple? Who can send the currents of vitalizing heat through the hearts of the hills, and push out upon the dog-woods their great white blossoms, sprinkle the meadows with violets and daisies, trail the sweet arbutus along fields and skirts of wood, and fill the air over the sunny slopes with that fragrance of blossoming vines which was so sweet to Solomon in the spring days of Palestine? Who can do this but that Omnipotent force in nature whom men call God? Yes; man may make a hot-house, but God alone may make a spring.—Churchman.

WHY ARE YOU NOT A CHRISTIAN?

Is it because you are afraid of ridicule, and of what others may say of you?

"Whosoever shall be ashamed of me and of my words, of him shall the Son of man be ashamed."

Is it because of the inconsistencies of professing Christians?

"Every one of us shall give an account of himself to God."

Is it because you are not willing to give up all to Christ?

"What shall it profit a man if he shall gain the whole world and lose his own soul?"

Is it because you are afraid that you will not be accepted?

"Him that cometh to me I will in no wise cast out."

Is it because you are too great a sinner?

"The blood of Jesus Christ cleanseth from all sin."

Is it because you are afraid you will not hold out?

"He which hath begun a good work in you will perform it until the day of Jesus Christ."

Is it because you are thinking that you will do as well as you can, and that God ought to be satisfied with that?

"Whosoever shall keep the whole law, and yet offend in one point, is guilty of all."

Is it because you are postponing the matter without any definite reason?

"Boast not thyself of to-morrow, for thou knowest not what a day may bring forth."—Friendly Greetings.

Lieutenant Totten, military instructor to the Yale Scientific School, New Haven, Ct., has been giving lectures relating to the signs of the times, which have attracted special attention among the religious people and Bible students. He holds that the prophetic Scriptures indicate that the Christian dispensation will end before the present century. He thinks we are near to an "era of infernalness," such as the world never saw.

Commenting on his lectures, the Hartford Courant, Feb. 11, 1890, says: "The belief that the present epoch or "dispensation" is swiftly drawing to a close—that we are even on the threshold of some strange and momentous crisis in human affairs—is by no means confined to the followers of Edward Irving and William Miller. It is widely diffused among students of the Hebrew and Christian prophetic books in both hemispheres, and not infrequently finds guarded utterance in the pulpits of the most sober-minded and unsensational religious bodies."

The incoming tide of crime and infidelity is truly alarming. The flood-gates of wickedness seem to be wide open to accommodate the devil's Niagara of iniquity.—Independent.

PRAYER, A BALL, A DOLL, AND A MAN.

One day in Chautauqua, N. Y., Prof. Drummond, of Scotland, told us this true story about a ball and a doll and a man:

A great steamer had started from Liverpool to New York. Among the passengers was a little boy and his sister. One day the boy lost his ball overboard; he rushed to the captain, begging him to stop the ship and get it. The captain laughed, and told him it would never do to stop a steamship for the sake of a ball. The boy argued a little and grumbled a good deal, and told his sister that he believed the reason the captain did not stop his ship, was because he could not; he believed it was wound up some way, so it would have to keep going until it run down, or else he would never have left a great, splendid rubber ball like that in the ocean.

Two days afterwards the little girl's dollie fell overboard. She ran crying to the captain, to beg him to stop the steamer.

"That won't do any good," her brother shouted after her; "he can't stop it. Don't you know about my ball?"

But the little girl made her pitiful prayer to the captain, who ran to the engine-room, peeped down, and saw the dollie within reach.

"Wait a minute," he said to the little girl, and the ship went steadily on its way; but in a few minutes the captain came back with the dollie safe in his arms, all dripping with salt water, but safe.

Only the next day there went a cry over the deck of that steamer "Man overboard!" Instantly a bell rang in the engine-room, short, sharp orders were given and obeyed, and the great ship stood still in mid-ocean while the life-boat was launched and slipped out after the drowning man. Then there was one very much astonished boy on board.

As soon as the steamer reached New York, or as soon as possible, the boy received a handsome new ball from the captain, with a note expressing his regret that he could not accommodate his passenger, and stop the ship to get the one left in the ocean.

I wonder if you could think why Prof. Drummond told this story?

"To please the children," one little girl said when I asked her, which was a good answer; but he had even a better reason than that; and he pleased the grown people, too. He told it to illustrate different ways in which God answers our prayers. The captain thought it not best to stop his great ship for the sake of a ball, yet the boy received from him in due time a newer and better one than he had lost. It was not necessary to stop the ship in order to answer the little girl's prayer; she begged him to do it, but that was because she did not understand his power to save the dollie without that; the thing she prayed for she received, though not in the way she asked. Yet the moment came, when because a human life was in peril, even the great engine had to be silenced, and the course of the steamer changed, and the captain had power to do it.

I wonder how many children who read this will understand how it applies to prayer? Please each sit down next Sunday in some quiet corner, and think out the "How?"—The Pansy.

GROUPING OF BEASTS AND BIRDS.

It is a very curious fact that the English language has a separate word to designate nearly every kind of beast or bird in groups. To be sure, some of these distinctive terms are used by few except sportsmen or naturalists, but the majority of them are more or less familiar in common speech, especially where groups of the different animals are found. We suppose that the use of each one of these different words was originally founded on some reason, etymological, zoological, or ornithological, but it would take much research to ascertain these reasons, and this we have not time to give the subject. But we offer a table which shows in brief space the most of the different terms given to various classes of animals; perhaps some of our readers can add to it:

A covey of patridges,
A nide of pheasants,
A wisp of snipe,
A bevy of quail,
A flight of doves or swallows,
A muster of peacocks,
A siege of herons,
A building of rooks,
A brood of grouse,
A plump of wild fowl,
A stand of plovers,
A watch of nightingales,
A clattering of choughs,
A flock of geese,
A cast of hawks,
A trip of dottrill,
A swarm of bees,
A school of whales,
A shoal of herrings,
A herd of swine,
A skulk of foxes,
A pack of wolves,
A drove of oxen,
A sounder of hogs,
A troop of monkeys,
A pride of lions,
A sleuth of bears.

Also at the risk of repeating some of the above oddities of language, we quote the following newspaper paragraph, which further illustrates the subject: "A number of sheep together is called a flock. But a flock of pretty girls is called a bevy, and a bevy of wolves is a pack, a pack of thieves a gang, a gang of angels a host, a host of porpoises a shoal, a shoal of buffalos a herd, a herd of children a troop, a troop of beauties a galaxy, a galaxy of ruffians a horde, a horde of mules a drove, a drove of rowdies a mob, a mob of whales a school, a school of worshipers a congregation, a congregation of engineers a corps, a corps of robbers a band, a band of locusts a swarm, and swarm of people a crowd."—Inter Ocean.

A PRACTICAL JOKE.

Most squirrels keep two or more stores of food. Wood, the British naturalist, tells of a friend who found one of these reserve stores which a squirrel had provided for an exigency, and the friend, in a moment of thoughtlessness, determined to play a joke on the squirrel. He accordingly replaced the nuts by small, round stones, and carefully concealed all evidences of his visit. One cold day in winter, he passed the spot, and found that the squirrel had called there a short time previously. This he knew by the fact that ten inches of snow had been scratched from the top of the hole, outside of which the stones had been cast by the disappointed animal. This struck the joker with remorse. He said: "I never felt the folly of practical joking so much in my life. Fancy the poor little fellow, nipped with cold, and scanty food, but foreseeing a long winter, resolved to economize his little hoard as long as possible. Fancy him at last determined to break this—perhaps his last—magazine, and cheerily brushing away the snow, fully confident that a good meal awaited him as a reward of his cold job, and after all, finding nothing but stones. I I never felt more mean and ashamed in my life, and really would have given a guinea to have known that injured squirrel's address. He should have had as fine a lot of nuts as would have put him beyond the reach of poverty had he lived to be as old as Methuselah."—Globe Democrat.

If you want to be miserable, think only about yourself—about what you want, what you like, what respect people ought to pay you, and what others think about you.

TEMPERANCE.

THE MODERN SODOM.

[Special Correspondence of the Quest.]

"A more quiet election was never known in Omaha."—Omaha Bee, Nov. 5.

That modern Ananias, Edward Rosewater, headed his editorials with this mammoth lie the morning after election.

If you are desirous of knowing what constituted a "quiet election" in Omaha read the incidents below, which may serve to "point a moral" as well as to "adorn a tale."

Things are always done in this enterprising city of Omaha with executive sanction, hence

MAYOR CUSHING'S MANIFESTO:

"If the rural districts think that they can dictate to the cities this fall, I, for one, am in favor of showing them how sadly mistaken they are. All is fair in war. Let us consider this war and defeat prohibition. If not in one way then in another."—Mayor Cushing, of Omaha, in an open letter to his constituency in the Omaha Bee.

This manifesto from the executive of this great city, together with the incendiary articles which appeared daily in the columns of the Bee and World-Herald, served to intensify the spirit of anarchy and lawlessness which, born in the saloon, nurtured in the saloon, and grown to the stature and malignity of a red-handed assassin of Republican institutions, stalked forth on election day to drive peaceable citizens from the polls, egg and stone women and children, and contribute generally to the success of the murder mills in this exceptionly "quiet election."

These features of the election are not known to the newspaper reading public, for the reason that they were suppressed by the Associated Press.

Many of the citizens of Nebraska are not conversant with the terrible condition of affairs which existed in Omaha on the 4th of November.

It was simply impossible for a man to stay at any polling-place except at the risk of his life, if it were known that he was working in the interests of the amendment. Some of the workers were arrested for no greater crime than distributing prohibition tickets. Eggs of ancient origin, stones, brickbats, etc., were used freely by the anti-prohibitionists, and general hell-raising was the order of the day.

There is no possible excuse for these outrages.

The opponents of prohibition controlled every detail of the election by reason of their previous arrangements, and would not allow a friend of the amendment on any election board in the city. This would have been bad enough, but the rum-crazed mob would not be satisfied with anything less than personal violence.

INCIDENTS OF THE DAY.

Rev. Q. H. Shinn, a venerable clergyman and pastor of the Universalist church, went quietly to the polls in the second precinct of the third ward to distribute tickets in the interest of the amendment.

For this offence he was assaulted by the angry mob, repeatedly struck, and finally driven from the polls. Mr. Shinn was confined to his bed for some time by his injuries.

Charles Coe, treasurer of the whisky "Business Men's and Bankers' Association," was prominent in the assault. Mr. Shinn appealed to the police for protection and was refused.

EGGS AND STONES AS ARGUMENTS.

W. B. Prugh and Charles P. Elton were assaulted with back-number eggs and cobble stones in the first district of the third ward, Fifteenth and William streets.

Prugh is a plucky young man, with a backbone like a telegraph pole, and stood his ground until knocked down by a stone which cut his head severely.

They then withdrew for repairs and returned later with an escort of police. The assault was renewed by the mob, and Prugh and Elton were ordered to leave by the police, who declared themselves powerless to protect them.

Mr. Prugh was severely injured, but of course had no redress. "Prohibition must be defeated; if not in one way, then in another."

A little variety was introduced into the battle in the third district of the second ward.

J. A. Bradley, Koze and Johnson were assaulted for having prohibition tickets and finally driven from the polls by the gang, who followed them for several blocks, caressing them with old tin cans, bricks, stones and eggs.

Koze was kicked several times by a saloonkeeper named Mueller, who runs a dive on the corner of Twentieth and Vinton streets.

Bradley was struck on the head and knocked down by a dog weighing over 100 pounds, which was hurled at him by the toughs who contributed to the "quiet election" in this precinct.

R. H. Oliver was assaulted at Sixteenth and Dodge streets, his tickets taken away from him and destroyed.

A gang of drunken toughs seized Mr. Oliver and poured whisky over his face and down his neck. An officer was standing near by, but made no attempt to prevent the outrage.

A VETERAN ASSAULTED.

G. W. Clark, a veteran Prohibitionist, who has been a resident of Omaha for years, conceived the idea that he had a right to go to the polls and attempt to distribute tickets in the second district of the fifth ward.

Mr. Clark speedily discovered that "personal liberty" was reserved for the drunken horde of half-baked citizenship, naturalized just before election. His tickets were taken from him and destroyed by Mayor Cushing's conservators of law and order, and he was then waited upon by a self-constituted committee and ordered to leave the polls, and said that his gray hairs alone saved him from serious injury.

Mr. Clark was escorted to the police station, where Chief Seavey informed him that he "could not protect Prohibitionists; that the city was in the hands of a mob," and that Prohibitionists had better stay away from the polls in the interests of quiet and order.

WAR ON WOMEN.

Three ladies from the W. C. T. U. went to the third precinct of the ninth ward to distribute tickets.

They were assaulted, their tickets destroyed, and were finally driven from the polls by the drunken gang, who used the vilest of obscene language in their presence.

The police who were present refused to protect them in any way. This disgraceful scene was multiplied during the day at many other polling places. J. J. Welshans, an old gentleman seventy-six years of age, who attempted to protect these ladies, was arrested and taken to the station by the police.

The ladies were beaten by the infuriated mob, and were compelled to flee for their safety.

Rev. Clark, pastor of Calvary Baptist church, was assaulted, egged, and forced to fly for his life.

The police would give no protection to him.

Lawyer E. E. Thomas, Rev. P. S. Merrill, W. B. Green, Prof. Martin Osterholm, Anthony Johnson, a prominent real estate dealer, William Beckham and many others were also treated to raw omelets on the shell.

Three wagon loads of children going up Sixteenth street were egged by the rioters, and the drivers were forced to whip up their horses to escape the mob. These children were committing the grave offence of singing prohibition songs, and the police could not protect them.

Chief Galligan of the fire department was on a tremendous drunk, and led the rioters in the sixth ward.

The Quest might be filled with incidents similar to those described above.

Names and locations have been given by your correspondent in order that the home-loving people of the nation may verify these stories of outrage and crime which the Associated Press dared not send over its wires.

The colossal climax of villainy was reached in the deliberate and well-laid plans of Republican and Democratic politicians to defeat prohibition, culminating in the scenes depicted above.

These incidents are given in mere outline, and the English language lacks adjectives forcible enough to convey an adequate description of the crazed and infuriated mob which took possession of the ballot in Omaha on November 5. Yet Editor Rosewater says it was a "quiet election."

This damnable record of conspiracy and fraud should be so graven on the conscience of honest American citizenship that the men and the political parties which made such things possible should meet swift and sure retribution at the ballot-box.

THE AMERICAN SABBATH UNION.

THE ANNUAL MEETING AT PHILADELPHIA.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 10, 1890.

The third annual meeting of the American Sabbath Union convened in this city has just concluded its sessions. The attendance was not what would have been expected. Less than seventy delegates voted. The business meeting was anything but harmonious. A constitution was adopted and an incorporation under the State laws of New York secured. Col. Elliott F. Shepard of the New York Mail and Express was re-elected president. Little change was made as to other officers. It was evident from the beginning that the president and the secretary of publications were not agreed, and consequently could not walk and work together. Which must go depended upon the strength of their following. Knowing little of the occasion of their differences, I could not, should I desire, give a just judgment as to who was in the right. The strength of each side was shown in the adoption of article five of the constitution. This article provides that the secretaries and treasurer shall be elected by the board of managers. This board of managers, twenty-one in number, are to be elected by the Union. This article was strenuously opposed by Dr. Wilbur F. Crafts and the Western delegates, largely on the ground that it was not democratic. The Union should elect their secretaries and treasurer directly, they contended; this the West would have a fair chance with the East. The managers of the year past had secured the incorporation of the Union under the State laws of New York and now asked the Union to ratify their action; whereas, they should first have received authority from the Union to incorporate, it was argued. If the secretaries and treasurer were appointed by managers, a majority of whom must live in New York, they would naturally favor those in the East, and the wish of those in the Union in the West would be disregarded. The other side, led by Col. Shepard, contended that the board of managers would be more competent to judge who were the best men to fill these offices, than those who should subscribe to the constitution and pay one dollar. They would know what work was done and what men could do it the most efficiently. If the Union did not like the selection of these officers, they could elect new managers, who would elect the men they desired.

As I listened to this discussion several beliefs which I have were confirmed: 1st, Ministers without the melting subduing power of Christ in the heart are like other men. While the Spirit of Christ was invoked in prayer it was largely wanting in the discussion. 2d, I believe that every dog that is good for anything must have a good head, every society its leader, every State its governor, every United States its President. If the American Sabbath Union or any other union in this country ever amounts to anything it must have a headquarters, and a head at those quarters understanding the situation and able to direct. The question in this case seemed to be, who shall direct and who shall be directed. Those who pay the most to sustain any cause are supposed to be the most interested in it. As the treasurer's report showed the president of this Union had paid during the past year more than twice as much as all the churches in the United States, one would naturally suppose, other things being equal, the headquarters should be somewhere near his bank. The incorporation of the Union by the managers may have been hasty. But it seemed to me that there was greater occasion of gratitude to God that there were those who were willing to go ahead and do something, rather than finding fault with what was done. It was stated there were those waiting to contribute to its funds as soon as their corporation was completed. Shall they be allowed to die while the Union is discussing who shall be the greatest in its kingdom? If the Western delegates want to control the running machinery of the Union let them lay down seven thousand dollars beside Col. Shepard's this year, and they will have no trouble in getting their wish. The N. C. A. does a national work, but its Board of Directors all live in or near Chicago. My advice to Western friends would be, If you do not like the way they do in New York, start a union of your own and do better. You can not control such unions with the masses, for the masses will not see to them as the leaders will.

The discussions of last evening were profoundly interesting and profitable. Governor Beaver and Gen. O. O. Howard were the principal speakers. The Governor spoke with approval of the work of the Union. Time and space forbid mention of many excellent things said.

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

—Thirty-one churches of seven different denominations, invite Rev. B. Fay Mills to Cleveland, and he accepts, to begin a somewhat extended campaign the last week in March.

—Rev. M. A. Kelsey of Hart, has lately given a series of Sabbath evening lectures on Moffatt, Livingstone, Stanley, Missionary Movements in Africa and Madagascar, and the First Great Foreign Missionary.

—The sermon by Rev. A. J. Bailey at the union Thanksgiving service in Ogden, Utah, was published in full in the Daily Commercial of that city—of which one of the managers is a son of Rev. R. B. Howard, D.D., secretary of the American Peace Society, Boston.

—At Nevinville, Iowa, a blessed work of grace has been experienced. Miss E. K. Henry, an evangelist, assisted in the work. More than forty professed conversion, and Nov. 30 nineteen were baptized and twenty-eight were admitted to membership in the Congregational church, all but one on confession.

—A farm of fifteen acres bordering on the grounds of Northfield Seminary, Mass., has been secured as a home-rest for returned missionaries. Additional funds are needed to complete the purchase.

—The session of the commission for the revision of the methodist constitution has ended. A committee consisting of Bishop Merrill and the Rev. Drs. Neeley and Kynett will select the next place of meeting and notify the members some time next June. The probabilities are that Minneapolis or some western city will be chosen. It is expected at the next meeting to complete a rough draft of the constitution. At the final meeting just before the conference of 1892 the finishing touches will be given to the work.

—Rev. C. O. Brown has left Dubuque, Iowa, to accept a call from Tacoma, Wash. His pastorate has covered almost exactly five years, during which the church has had a number of revivals and large accessions, particularly in 1887 when twenty-nine united at one communion and in 1889 when fifty-three united. The attendance at the prayer meeting has averaged much above one hundred, and has reached at times to two hundred. In mission work, also, the church has been active and successful. Mr. Brown is son of Deacon O. M. Brown, of Oberlin.

—The China Inland Mission, met with distrust and even ridicule at first, seems to be meeting with phenomenal success. It has several definite principles:

1. It allows no debt, and consequently guarantees no fixed salary. It asks everything and promises nothing.
2. It insists on the gift of God as the basis of qualification in candidates rather than the acquisitions of men. Comp. I. Cor. 4: 6 (R. V.); Ephes. 4: 7, 11. Hence no uniform educational standard.
3. It holds that there is room in missionary work for all variety of gifts, and hence welcomes artisans and mechanics, and unordained laymen. Comp. I. Chron. 28: 21.
4. It magnifies the great fundamentals of doctrine and not denominational features; hence all disciples welcomed to work on same basis.
5. It emphasizes prayer—definite, constant—for individuals. Every missionary and his work remembered by name in the weekly meeting at London.
6. It makes no direct appeal for money; but leaves to the free will of God's people, especially encouraging no appeal to ungodly people.
7. It lays stress on evangelization, not conversion—teaching that the church is to bear witness among all nations at once and leave all results to God.

Notwithstanding this high standard, this mission has 383 workers in the field, and the money and the men and women are still being freely offered.—Missionary Review.

—In the Minutes of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian church for 1889, page 149, it is stated that 36 per cent as many churches are annually disbanded as new ones organized; that the ratio of disbandments is gradually increasing, and last year was greater than ever before. In the Congregational Year Book, giving the statistics for 1889, it is stated that 241 new churches were organized during the year, and 121 disbanded. For every three churches organized by the Presbyterians one is disbanded; and among the Congregationalists, for every two new churches organized one is disbanded.

EDUCATIONAL NOTES.

—At Lake Forest University near this city a $50,000 building, to be called Lois hall, is to be built by Henry C. Durand. It is named in honor of his mother and is intended to be used by the young women of the college. The plans contemplate a building that will accommodate 100 students.

—The 144th annual catalogue of Princeton College shows the growth this year has been unprecedented. Eight fellows, 93 graduates, 509 academic, 155 scientific, 90 specials, and 37 electrical engineer students are now studying there. Besides these there are 17 candidates for the doctor's degree; 11 of these are residents and 6 are non-residents.

—Harvard University's directory contains 2,251 students, while last year's catalogue gave 2,079 as the total number for the year. The gain thus shown for this year is about the same as the gain made the year before. The senior class for this year is given at 289, the junior at 254, the sophomore at 289, the freshman at 366; students in other departments of the university, 1,053. The list of officers of instruction and government contains 295 names.

—Last Sunday was the saddest day in the history of Buchtel College, Akron, Ohio. A disaster occurred in which the costumes of many young ladies, who were giving an entertainment in the library building, caught fire. Two died in a few hours. Two were at the point of death Sunday, and three others badly burned are in such a condition that complications may set in at any time, causing death. A cessation of exercises at the college for the rest of the term has been ordered.

—Miss Augusta Tavall, a teacher in the Normal School, was the highest paid teacher in the St. Louis schools, and a lady of culture and refinement. Tuesday evening, Dec. 2, she was walking on Grand Avenue about 5 o'clock when she was struck by a wagon occupied by two men and knocked senseless. Her clothing became entangled in the wagon and the brutes whipped up the horse to a gallop. In this way they actually dragged her along the street nine blocks with a crowd running after and shouting to them to stop. She was sent to the City Hospital unconscious and never spoke. She was horribly mangled. Nobody knows who the men in the wagon were. Numerous arrests have been made, but all have been released.

—The colleges of the country are shown by statistics compiled by Dr. Dorchester, to have vastly improved in their religious tone during the past sixty years. "Indifference and, in many cases, blatant antagonism to evangelical religion, was the rule in the educational institutions of America at the beginning of this century. In 1830, out of 2,633 students, in twenty-eight colleges, 603, or 26 per cent, were professing Christians. In 1850, the proportion in thirty colleges was 38 per cent. In 1865, in thirty-five colleges, it was 46 per cent. In 1880, in sixty-five colleges, with 12,063 students, it was 50 per cent. We confidently believe that there will be an even better showing when the statistics can be brought down to 1890."—The Ensign.

—Princeton stands second to none of our American colleges in the part that her graduates have played in the general history of the United States. Her roll of fame is long in proportion to her numbers. She has given her country nine of the fifteen college graduates who sat in the constitutional convention, one President, two Vice-Presidents, four Chief-Justices, five Attorneys-General, and fifteen other Cabinet officers, twenty-eight Governors of States, one hundred and seventy-one Senators and Congressmen, one hundred and thirty six judges, forty-three college presidents, one hundred and seventy-five professors, eighty of whom have been appointed since Dr. McCosh became president. It is a safe assertion, therefore, that in the Middle and Southern States no single educational influence has been as powerful as that of Princeton.—Prof. Slocum.

—The will of Daniel D. Fayerweather, the millionaire leather dealer, gives $2,100,000 to different colleges, and some $95,000 to hospitals. The will was made on Oct. 6, 1880. The testator died on Nov. 15, 1890. The following bequests are made: Yale College, for Sheffield Scientific School, $300,000; Columbia College, $200,000, Cornell University, $200,000; Bowdoin College, Amherst, Williams, Dartmouth, Wesleyan University, Hamilton College, University of Rochester, Lincoln University, University of Virginia, Hampton University, and Maryville College, Tenn., each get $100,000; Union Theological Seminary and Endowment of Cadetships, $50,000; Lafayette College, Marietta College, Adelbert College, Wabash College, Pach College, each have $50,000. The residue of his estate, which was also to have gone to these colleges, pro rata of his bequest, is changed by a codicil so that it is given absolutely to the executors and their heirs and assigns. The widow will contest the will.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

WASHINGTON.

The postmaster-general has issued an order to postmasters to hereafter intercept the transmission in the mails and decline to deliver at their respective offices any circulars in sealed envelopes brought into the United States from Mexico, prepaid at less than the 5-cent rate. This order is especially intended to apply to the circulars of Mexican lotteries, which have heretofore been received in sealed envelopes, the corners of which have been clipped, and the postage of which has been prepaid by Mexican stamps of the denomination of 1 cent.

Senator Dawes reported favorably from the committee on Indian affairs the bill appropriating $60,000 the first year and $70,000, $90,000 and $100,000 the three following years for the elementary and industrial education of children in Alaska.

The bureau of animal industry, with the ultimate object in view of discovering some method of preventing disease in swine, has endeavored to produce artificially a drug which would have the same composition and effect as the bacterial products. These researches have been in the main successful, and the report claims that a substance has been produced which not only resembles the bacterial product of the hog cholera germ in composition, but which has quite the same power of conferring immunity from the disease.

Secretary Windom can do no more until Jan. 1 in the matter of the purchase of silver. One day last week he purchased $6,000,000 and the day after $6,000,000 more. That is a total of $12,000,000, which, under existing law, is all that can be bought until the month of January.

The Nicaragua Canal Company has made its annual report to Secretary Noble, showing that the work is rapidly progressing.

CHICAGO.

Within the last ten days over one thousand men have been laid off at the South Chicago works of the Illinois Steel Company.

The corner-stone of the first station of the South Side alley "L" road was laid Saturday afternoon. The construction of the road has advanced so far that by the time the stations can be built the company will be ready to run trains between Van Buren and 39th streets; and the contractor says he will have the stations all built by next June. As showing how far the work of construction has progressed, the company is about to place an order for 200,000,000 tickets. This order, says Mr. J. M. Ryan of the J. M. W. Jones Printing company, is one of the largest ever placed and would keep three of their large cylinder presses busy three years to fill.

COUNTRY.

Business failures for the week number 374, compared with 312 last week, and 290 in the corresponding week of 1889.

It was reported Friday that Governor-Elect James E. Boyd, of Nebraska, was not a citizen of the United States. He was born in Ireland in 1834, and came to this country with his father in 1849, who filed notice of his intention to become a citizen the same year, but did not take

2. FREE to everybody who sends two new subscribers for a year.

3. To any yearly subscriber who sends $1.65 for subscription and Calendar.

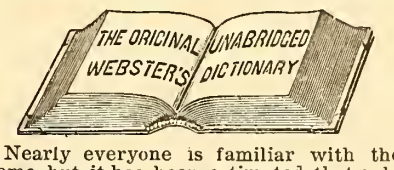
REMARKABLE OFFER!



Nearly everyone is familiar with the name, but it has been estimated that only one in every two hundred and eighty persons in the United States is fortunate enough to have access to the valuable information contained within the covers of the grandest work ever written by mortal man,

Webster's
UNABRIDGED DICTIONARY.

That this is an unfortunate state of affairs will be admitted by all, and it is due to the fact that no one save the rich could afford them.

The Dictionary is a necessity in every home, school and business house. It fills a vacancy and furnishes knowledge which no one hundred volumes of the choicest books could supply, and all young or old, educated or ignorant, rich or poor should have it within reach and refer to its contents every day in the year.

The Loomis reprint contains all the matter as compiled and arranged by our esteemed and honored author and statesman

NOAH WEBSTER.

About forty years of his life was devoted to this great work, and when we consider the fact that this book contains about 100,000 words, we will appreciate that these years must have been well spent.

Some idea of the magnitude of this book may be gained from the fact that it contains over 440 cubic inches of paper and has about 300,000 square inches of printed surface.

In addition to the 100,000 words it contains a portrait of the author, together with his biography and a valuable table of 12,000 synonymous words.

By special arrangement with the publishers, we are permitted to furnish this valuable volume: 1st. To any subscriber to our paper; 2nd. To any renewal subscription; and 3rd. To any person who has paid a full year's subscription within the past six months, on receipt of $1.50 for the paper one year, and two dollars and seventy-five cents to cover express charges, packing, etc., of the Dictionary.

HOME AND HEALTH.

LESS MEDICINE, MORE EXERCISE.

It is remarkable how people welcome any medicine that promises great cures. Even though they may not need it, they take the keenest pleasure in its discovery, and if their imaginations are abnormally active, they easily persuade themselves that a dose or so will do them good. It is an age of medicine, an era of prescriptions, a season of individual experiments. The general craze for cures of ills real and ills imagined supports a dozen drug-stores where one formerly struggled, builds up enormous fortunes for patent-medicine proprietors, and makes millions of invalids out of people who ought to be healthy. There is a great need for a change in the popular mind. The craze for cures should cease to monopolize everything and allay itself with the gospel of prevention. In other words, the people should take less medicine and more exercise, should give up some of their doses and substitute allopathic allowances of fresh air. Already there is a noticeable improvement manifested, especially in our best schools and colleges. Common sense is having a say in the cut and arrangement of clothing. More attention is being paid to out-door sports. The girl who can take a long walk or play tennis or ride for an afternoon is worth a half-dozen of Miss Languish, to whom five squares is exhaustion. Men and women are beginning to see the tremendous importance of physical soundness, and to appreciate its absolute necessity as an element of domestic happiness. The young man of to-day wants a healthy wife, and the young woman wants a healthy husband. Invalidism is becoming less fashionable and less popular than it was, and the woman of to-day is trying to grow pre-eminently vigorous. The more she succeeds, the better men like her and the better she likes herself. Exercise, of course, is not all. There are rules of health, simple but rigid, that must be observed. Wholesome food, regular hours, moderation and perseverance, are essential. Spasmodic efforts will not satisfy the demands of health any more than spasmodic eating will satisfy the stomach. The people are improving in these things, however, and the tendency is, undoubtedly, in the direction of more common sense. It will take some time to counteract the craze for cures, but the work has been begun and its results grow constantly. It is gradually teaching the people that it is better to keep from being sick than to get sick and depend upon cures.—Baltimore American.

CHRISTIANITY AND MILLINERY.

It is a difficult task for me to harmonize Christianity and cruelty; they do not seem consistent. Perhaps the heart and the head do not hold a very close relationship, but I believe they do. I think a little of what is in the heart should be expressed on the head, and yet, a great deal of this appearance of cruelty is thoughtlessness; but, have we a right to be thoughtless? How many beautiful women enter the churches every Sunday, and bow their heads in prayer, to the loving Father of all, while their bonnets testify how slightly they protect or love his little ones. Let your heart speak! A bonnet with a dead bird on it cannot be truly artistic or enjoyable. It tells of innocent little creatures plunged alive into hot water or otherwise cruelly killed—it tells a story too sad to leave one atom of admiration for the bonnet; or much for the wearer.—Cambridge Press.

—Kerosene as a therapeutic agent is highly spoken of by Dr. H. A. Gross in the Medical World. It cures almost all pains, from toothache to gout and rheumatism. It is deodorized in this manner: Take of coal oil, 1 pint; nitric acid, 1 ounce. Mix. Let stand for a week and pour off the supernatant oil. It does not in the least smell like coal oil.

"It is like being rescued from a burning building!" says a man who was cured of a severe case of salt-rhem by Hood's Sarsaparilla. Give this peculiar medicine a trial. Sold by all druggists

SCOTT'S EMULSION

Of Pure Cod Liver Oil with Hypophosphites Of Lime and Soda.

There are emulsions and emulsions, and there is still much skimmed milk which masquerades as cream. Try as they will many manufacturers cannot so disguise their cod liver oil as to make it palatable to sensitive stomachs. Scott's Emulsion of PURE NORWEGIAN COD LIVER OIL, combined with Hypophosphites is almost as palatable as milk. For this reason as well as for the fact of the stimulating qualities of the Hypophosphites, Physicians frequently prescribe it in cases of

FARM NOTES.

THE SUGAR MAPLE.

The sugar maple is one of the finest of the deciduous leaved trees of North America. It is by far the noblest of the American maples, although the silver maple develops occasionally a greater trunk girth, and it is perhaps the noblest of all the maples, although the sycamore maple of Europe in the mountain valleys of the Tyrol is, when at its best, a tree second to none of its class in spread of branches and dignity of port. But the European maple lacks the lightness and brightness of foliage and the gracefulness of inflorescence peculiar to the sugar maple, while it assumes in autumn none of the brilliant colors which our American tree takes on at that season of the year and which make it then the most conspicuous feature of the landscape wherever it abounds.

The elm, to many people, is the characteristic tree of New England, because, perhaps, more than other trees, it was selected by the early settlers to stand sentinel over their homesteads; but the sugar maple is hardly less characteristic of New England, and of all the Northern States, where it is almost everywhere a very common tree, growing on hillsides and in valleys, and of late years so generally planted by the roadside that it is now more often seen than the elm, which is a more fastidious tree than the maple about its nourishment, more easily affected by drought, and a far more inviting prey to noxious insects.

The sugar maple economically is one of the most valuable American trees. The wood it produces is heavy and hard, close-grained, tough and strong. It has a surface which can be highly polished, so that it is an excellent and much esteemed furniture wood, especially those peculiar forms with twisted and contorted grain known as bird's-eye maple. It is from the wood of this tree that American shoe lasts are made in preference to that of any other, and it is used in the manufacture of hundreds of other objects, great and small, from the keel of a boat to a shoe peg. The New Englander who wants to burn better fuel than that afforded by the sugar maple must use hickory. The Indians knew the value of the sap of this tree, and soon taught Europeans how to convert it into sugar. The production of maple sugar was once a far more important industry comparatively than it is now, although the crop is steadily increasing in bulk and in money value.

The sugar maple has one characteristic which very few American trees, except some of the oaks, share with it to the same degree, and one which, when American forests are managed with the view of getting from them all they can be made to produce, will make it one of the trees most generally employed in the operations of scientific silviculture. It has the capacity to germinate and grow to a considerable size under the more or less dense shade of other trees. Young sugar maples form sometimes in the northern counties of this State, in northern Michigan and other parts of the country where this tree is common, the larger part of the undergrowth which has sprung up in the deciduous forests. These self-sown plants, in spite of the shade which, of course, checks their growth, grow with a good deal of vigor and reach a considerable height. The beech in Europe possesses the same power of growing for many years under and among other trees, and it is for this reason that the beech is one of the most valuable subjects in all European deciduous forest operations looking to natural forest succession—the prime motive of modern scientific forestry. The sugar maple is a far more valuable tree in the material which it produces than the European beech, and American foresters, when we have them, will have good cause for congratulating themselves in the possession of a subject so valuable and so easily managed.—Garden and Forest.

—The November returns to the Department of Agriculture of ra'es of yield per acre make the average for corn, 19.9 bushels; potatoes, 57.5 bushels; buckwheat, 14.5 bushels; hay, 1.2 tons; tobacco, 718 pounds. The corn crop makes the smallest yield reported, excepting only that of 1881, which was 18.6 bushels. That of 1887 was 20.1 bushels. It is 83 per cent of the average of the last ten years, a period which included four unusually poor years, and only 73 per cent of last year's crop.

BRONCHITIS

Is an inflammation of the bronchial tubes—the air-passages leading into the lungs. Few other complaints are so prevalent, or call for more prompt and energetic action. As neglect or delay may result seriously, effective remedies should always be at hand. Apply at once a mustard poultice to the upper part of the chest, and, for internal treatment, take frequent doses of

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

C. O. Lepper, Druggist, Fort Wayne, Ind., writes: "My little sister, four years of age, was so ill from bronchitis that we had almost given up hope of her recovery. Our family physician, a skilful man and of large experience, pronounced it useless to give her any more medicine, saying he had done all it was possible to do, and we must prepare for the worst. As a last resort, we determined to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and I can truly say, with most happy results. After taking a few doses she seemed to breathe easier, and, within a week, was out of danger. We continued giving the Pectoral until satisfied she was entirely well. This indisputable evidence of the great merit of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral has given me unbounded confidence in the preparation, and I recommend it to my customers, knowing it cannot disappoint them."

"Ayer's Cherry Pectoral cured me of a bad cough and my partner of bronchitis. I know of numerous cases in which this preparation has proved very beneficial in families of so that the medicine is known among them as 'the consoler of the afflicted.'"—Jaime Rufus Vidal, San Cristobel, San Domingo.

"A short time ago, I was taken with a severe attack of bronchitis. The remedies ordinarily used in such cases failed to give me relief. Almost in despair of ever finding anything to cure me, I bought a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and was helped from the first dose. I had not finished one bottle before the disease left me, and my throat and lungs were as sound as ever."—Geo. B. Hunter, Altoona, Pa.

DR. J. C. AYER & CO., Lowell, Mass.

Sold by all Druggists. Price $1; six bottles, $5.

It was Mr. Emerson who said, "the first wealth is health," and it was a wiser than the modern philosopher who said that "the blood is the life." The system, like the clock, runs down. It needs winding up. The blood gets poor and scores of diseases result. It needs a tonic to enrich it.

A certain wise doctor, after years of patient study, discovered a medicine which purified the blood, gave tone to the system, and made men—tired, nervous, brain-wasting men—feel like new. He called it his "Golden Medical Discovery." It has been sold for years, sold by the million of bottles, and people found such satisfaction in it that Dr. Pierce, who discovered it, now feels warranted in selling it under a positive guarantee of its doing good in all cases.

Perhaps it's the medicine for you. Your's wouldn't be the first case of scrofula or salt-rheum, skin disease, or lung disease, it has cured when nothing else would. The trial's worth making, and costs nothing. Money refunded if it don't do you good.

Advices from Chung King, China, by steamer China, state that the trouble at Ta Chu Hsien arose from the massacre of the Chinese Christians at Loong Tuy Tsin by members of the Loo Huy Sos Society during a celebration in honor of the society's patron deity. The brotherhood consulted their gods as to whether it would be safe to plunder the Christians. The reply being in the affirmative, the brotherhood made a raid on a number of well-to-do Christian families. A few days later they made a fresh attack and massacred over twenty persons. The mission buildings and several others were burned and the corpses thrown into the flames. On the following day the brotherhood proceeded to another market town and made an assault on the Christians there. The latter fled, but one of them was killed.

The continuance of the College secret society discussion was not contemplated after the present number of the Cynosure. But several writers of ability and influence in educational circles have promised contributions which have not yet been received, and others are just coming in. The subject must therefore be continued for a time, but rather incidentally than in regular order. The letters of Presidents Peabody and Moss, and the report of Pres. E. E. White this week are very valuable contributions to college fraternity literature.

The portrait of Dr. Hasselquist is itself an argument against the college orders. In the large institution over which he presides at Rock Island, Ill., no secret society business is allowed. The next contribution will be from the virile pen of Dr. H. H. George, so long and favorably known as president of Geneva College.

CHRISTMAS AND CANOSSA are illustrated on page 11 of this number through the kindness of a friend of the Cynosure, who purchased the rare plate there printed. We ask especial attention of all our readers to the explanatory text and the able argument of Dr. J. B. Dales, an old and esteemed pastor of Philadelphia.

The German Emperor is talking well on the school question. A few days since at the opening of an educational conference he spoke of the importance of teaching their own language to the children of Germany, which was indirectly excellent advice to the Germans of Illinois and Wisconsin who have adopted America as their home. Last Wednesday as the conference closed he said he must not omit reference to religion. He would make it his sacred duty, as the head of the nation, to see that the Christian spirit was cultivated and increased in the schools, in order that the youth of the nation might be fitted for the requirements of modern life. This is better than the first, and we commend it to our secularizing American preachers and infidelizing American courts and school boards who would banish the Word and name of God from our common schools.

Joseph Cook passing through Chicago last week accompanied by his wife, was interviewed by the Inter Ocean. Mr. Cook said that at Salt Lake City he endeavored to gain a complete concensus of the opinion of the most eminent men of Utah outside the Mormon church. These gentlemen unanimously approved Judge Anderson's decision, and believed that the powerful Mormon lobby in Washington had for its express object the passage of a measure admitting Utah as a State. It was agreed that President Harrison's position, taken in his message, that "Those who believed polygamy to be rightful should not have the power to make it lawful," should by all means be maintained. This declaration is received by the Mormons with ill favor notwithstanding their manifesto on polygamy.

Ireland makes just now a pitiful spectacle. The cries of starving peasants are drowned by the yell of fighting mobs in which brothers of yesterday are the bitter combatants. Parnell fights like an insane man; and his opposers of the Home Rule party are only less than crazy. Indeed, the opinion of eminent physicians and of others who have known his history and that of his family, is that he is demented. His present course can only end in ruin to himself and his cause. The English liberal party must be the arbiters of the fate of Home Rule; and no one who remembers how a year or two ago they threw overboard their leader, Sir Charles Dike, for the same crime that brands Parnell, can doubt that they will decide against the adulterer. In one of the rows attending the political canvass in Ireland last week, lime, it is said, was thrown in Parnell's eyes. His opposers say it was only flour and mud thrown by women. They may be right. Lime would have destroyed the sight, but Parnell is not blind and keeps on speaking. Some are so uncharitable as to say that if the Irish were free and unrestrained their island would soon be depopulated.

We noted lately an argument in favor of opening our courts of justice with prayer. Such an acknowledgment of the God of justice, in whose name all witnesses are sworn, would always be appropriate and honorable. Prayer is made daily in Congress. Our great political conventions where momentous issues of the nation are practically decided are always opened with an appeal to the God of nations. We understand that the late David McFall, the beloved Boston pastor, used to be often called on to open court with prayer. The case just reported from Wichita, Kansas, is so peculiar as almost to be considered apart from reverent worship of God. The jury, after over two days' disagreement, had their thoughts called off from their wrangle and their better natures stirred, when the judge called in a pastor of the city who prayed, sang and preached to them. They agreed on the first ballot after these unusual services. We need more Christianity in our courts. It alone will cast out the lodge grips and oaths that too often abide there.

While the army maintained by the United States is pitifully small, if we were seeking recognition as a warlike nation, our military expenses are enormous in comparison. Taking the statistics of some of the weaker governments of Europe we find that Spain has a regular army of 90,000 men, a war footing of 450,000, and the annual cost of the army is $24,802,930. Turkey has a regular army of 355,000 men, a war footing of 610,200 and an annual cost of $19,642,090. Italy has a regular army of 736,592 men, a war footing of 1,718,933, and the annual cost is $42,947,300. Our regular army of 25,800 men is a mere police force, but the annual cost of the army is $40,500,000. Besides the Pension Commissioner is now asking for funds to make up a deficit which, if he gets, will make our bills for old wars amount in two years to the enormous sum of $263,000,000. War is the most expensive business of our times except whisky and tobacco.

In this season of frivolity, gaiety and holiday mirth, when the external attractions of our churches are apt to appeal more strongly to the senses than the truths for which it stands do to the spirit, we are glad to notice such reasonable remonstrances as this from Rev. Dr. A. J. Gordon: "How much we are coming to lean upon mere human agencies! upon art and architectures, upon music, and rhetoric, and social attractions! If we would draw the people to church that we may win them to Christ, the first question with scores of Christians nowadays is, What new turn can be given to the kaleidescope of entertainment? What new stop can we insert in our organ, and what richer and more exquisite strain can we reach by our quartette? What fresh novelty in the way of social attraction can we introduce? or what new corruscation can be let off from the pulpit to dazzle and captivate the people?"

THE POLITICAL DILEMMA IN UTAH.

BY REV. A. JUDSON BAILEY.

The population of Utah Territory could be dropped down in one corner of the present city of Chicago without greatly disturbing its numerical equilibrium. And if one studies the problems which are being discussed in this inter-mountain region, and what the people say on the subjects which are now most interesting in Utah affairs, he would not fear disturbing very much the moral conditions of the miracle City of the Lakes.

The time has long since passed when the inhabitants of any city in the civilized world can dwell securely by themselves. And cities of this western interior are not isolated from the thoughts and plans and ambitions of other cities. Ogden and Salt Lake cities compare themselves with Denver and Kansas City, and discuss the virtues and vices of those cities as examples for their own imitation. And in this measuring themselves by themselves, and comparing themselves among themselves, there is not much more hope of these cities lifting themselves out of the depths of sin, than of a man lifting himself out of a broken cistern into which he had fallen by pulling at his bootstraps.

The more one studies the problem the more clearly will he see that it is not possible for any political party making political capital out of the vices of an opposing party, to lift the community by which it is supported to any high position of moral excellence. And that is one of the conditions in Utah at present. The strong argument in any political campaign is that the Mormons are disloyal, and that therefore the non-Mormon party ought to be kept in power. We need not offer any apologies for the sins of the Mormons. They were accused of voting "dead men and mules," ten years ago. Their opponents have have not tried very hard to avoid a like political crime—only since that party, because of its infancy, had not the "dead men and mules," they have borrowed wisdom (?) from the East, and have swelled the number of their votes by the hopes of the future rather than by the memories of the past.

The liberal party promised a progressive and pure government. They have been progressive, but not pure. Such vices as gambling, intemperance, and prostitution—all of which were on the field in sufficient strength to satisfy the needs of the not very ambitious people of earlier days, —have come in like a flood with the incoming progress and "boom" of business. Whether this has been by the impotence or the invitation of the liberal party, it is not necessary to inquire.

In many respects the Territory has been greatly helped by the success of the liberals over the Mormons. But from a moral standpoint the advantage, if there is any, is not apparent. The Christians are handicapped by the party to which they must give their political aid in their efforts to overthrow the political power of Mormonism. The rallying cry of the liberals is the disloyalty of the Mormons. But the liberal party has a large element of disloyalty. The saloon men and gamblers do not respect the laws which are made for the suppression of these vices. Dr. Noble in his Thanksgiving sermon in Chicago, said that a good place to begin reform is to insist on the enforcement of laws. To some of the people of Utah it seems as essential to the spiritual and moral uplifting of the people to insist on the enforcement of laws against open saloons, gambling houses and brothels, as on those against polygamy. But to say such things may bring against one the charge that he is helping the Mormons. But there are those in Utah who, like the prohibitionists in "the States," are not afraid of a third party for moral reform. If to oppose the saloons means to put the government back into the hands of the Mormons, it is the vices of the people which must be blamed for such a result.

Let not the friends of good morals in the East suppose that the Christians of Utah are indifferent to the evils of Mormonism, if, while protesting against those evils, they protest also against other evils of equal magnitude.

If on grounds of moral reform there should be a division in the liberal party, it remains to be seen whether the Mormons would take advantage of this fact to secure the government for the people's (Mormon) party, or whether they would help to sustain a movement in favor of a pure government on American principles—that is, good government which shall not be Mormon as that has been in the past.

Ogden, Utah.

OUR GOVERNMENT AND THE CONSTITUTION COMPARED WITH THE PRECEPTS OF THE BIBLE.

BY JOSIAH DIVOLL.

I suppose it is a fact that cannot be denied, that Benjamin Franklin proposed to have prayers in the convention that framed the Constitution. It did not carry, but was voted down. What else could we expect of a people who were wishing to frame a constitution agreeing with human slavery and the African slave trade. So the Constitution says, You must not go to Africa to steal their citizens after the year 1808. That you may steal as many as you choose before that time, would be a fair inference. But what does the Bible say on this subject? "He that stealeth a man and selleth him, shall surely be put to death." There is another clause requiring the slave to be returned to his master, though it should take the whole force of the United States government to accomplish it. But the Bible says, "Thou shalt not deliver unto his master the servant which is escaped from his master unto thee." "He shall dwell with thee, even among you, in that place which he shall choose in one of thy gates, where it liketh him best: thou shalt not oppress him."

But let us leave this dark picture and turn to the rum traffic, which in some respects is still worse, as its victims are destroyed in both body and soul. We read in Habakkuk 2: 15, "Woe unto him that giveth his neighbor drink, that puttest thy bottle to him, and makest him drunken also." The sixth Commandment says, "Thou shalt not kill." Now I would ask, are not those who give license to the rumsellers, acting in direct opposition to these precepts? They say to the saloon men, if you give us a revenue and a high license, you may continue your business of making drunkards and killing them off by the thousand. I suppose if we even take anything from our neighbor, and put it to our own use without rendering him an equivalent, we are breaking the eighth Commandment. Does the rumseller, when taking money from drinking men, give them an equivalent? Ah, no! He gives him only that which tends to ruin himself and his family.

Again, I would ask, when the Freemasons decoy our young men into the lodge, and get them to sell their manhood to these secret conclaves, do they get an equivalent? They don't get so much as Esau got when he sold his birth-right for a mess of pottage. According to Ronayne's explanation of Freemasonry, they get nothing better than dead horses.

Now we wish to compare our government with the fourth Commandment. Is not our government keeping thousands of our citizens at work in the Postoffice department on the Sabbath, in direct opposition to this Commandment? As there is now some effort being made to have this law obeyed, I fear we shall hear Uncle Sam saying, "We, the people, and the Constitution of the United States, are the supreme law of this land. Ye engineers and postmasters, away to your work, and see that my mail is distributed every day in the week." It seems to me that our government is the greatest Sabbath-breaker in the United States.

Now what is the cause of all this sin and wickedness in our nation and its government? Is it not because we as a nation have forsaken God and his law, and have put the will of the people and the Constitution in their place?

Now if this be so, what is the remedy? I know of none except we as a nation repent of our sin and return unto God and take his law for our rule and acknowledge his Son in all our national acts, as our President was advised to do in his Thanksgiving proclamation; but it is greatly to be regretted that he did not comply with the advice. (The advice given him is to be seen in the Christian Statesman of Oct. 30th, 1890.) So failing to honor the Son, how can he be said to honor the Father, in his proclamation? The Son says himself, "He that honoreth not the Son, honoreth not the Father." Yet may we not hope and pray that he may be led to see his great mistake, so if he should be spared to issue another proclamation the Son may be honored therein.

Talmage says he expects to live to see a political party whose platform shall contain the Ten Commandments. This is just what Covenanters and National Reformers are laboring for; but we do not see how we can be loyal to Christ as our Prophet, Priest, and King, and at the same time swear allegiance to a constitution and government which is so directly opposed to the precepts of the Bible as shown above. If some good brother who believes in voting under this government will show us where we are wrong, we will be much obliged.

Many other comparisons might be given. The Constitution says there shall be no religious test required; so a Sabbath-breaker or a rumseller as well as a Christian are eligible to office under our government. The Bible says we must choose able men, such as fear God and hate covetousness; and he that ruleth over men must be just, ruling in the fear of God. Almost all our divorce laws are in direct opposition to Christ's teaching, when he says, "What God hath joined together, let not man put asunder." The whole of the second Psalm would be appropriate on this subject. I will quote only a few verses: "Why do the heathen rage, and the people imagine a vain thing?" "Be wise now, therefore, O ye kings: be instructed, ye judges of the earth." "Kiss the Son, lest he be angry, and ye perish from the way, when his wrath is kindled but a little." "Blessed are all they that put their trust in him."

Topsham, Vt.

One more witness to the character of Freemasonry. A few years back a Christian friend of ours, misguided as we then believed, entered Freemasonry. In his lodge were Parsees, Hindus, infidels and Christians; men good and very bad were his honored (?) "brothers"; recently he informed us he had "demitted." He freely admits now that Masonry is not Christian and that the lodge is no place for a true Christian. But this same "brother" when first "entered" sought to convince us of the good and even Christian character of Masonry. We have seen many Christians ruined by the lodge but have never known one Christian made so by the lodge.—India Watchman.

"The Fraternal Union of Anointed High Priests of the State of New York" is a new Masonic organization, "to be composed exclusively of those who have been set apart to the office of high priest in Royal Arch Masonry by anointing." Some of these "high priests" are confessedly men of very indifferent character; some are saloonkeepers. By what power were they "anointed" and "set apart" to an office which pertains by divine right to only one—the man Christ Jesus? —Independent Christian.

AN OLD YEAR'S PRAYER.

The years go by on wings;
Alas! how swiftly do they fly,
So soon the tale of each is told,
So soon the new becomes the old;
And when the year its course has run,
So much of good we meant to do
Doth still, alas! remain undone,
And ills we vowed we would eschew;
So mark the track,
As we look back,
That conscience sorely stings.
Full well we know the reason why,
And thus our hearts are sad.

Lord, as the years still fly,
Do thou so guide us by thy grace
That we may fully do thy will,
And each appointed task fulfill.
Then as each year its course has run,
We shall not mourn as now we do,
The good resolved but yet undone,
The sins we vowed we would eschew;
But led by thee
Our way shall be Blessed, as the years go by,
Until at length we see thy face
And be forever glad.

FRATERNITY EXPERIENCE OF PURDUE UNIVERSITY.

[From report of Pres. E. E. White to the Governor of Indiana.]

We would like to pass over the fraternity experience of Purdue University without a comment, and it must suffice to say that it has not been unlike that of other new institutions. The chapter early organized in the University, without the consent of the Faculty, had only a limited membership, and, though still kept up in Lafayette, it has had no honorable connection with the University since June, 1880, when the last active members here graduated. But this small secret faction, once inside, now outside, has been the cause of nearly all the dissentions and unkind feelings which have divided the students. Its disturbing influence has been seen in every attempt at united effort, from the organization of a base ball club to the elections and exhibitions of the literary societies. But these disturbances have been much less serious here than in the older colleges were the fraternities are tolerated, and where the strifes and quarrels between their factions are chronic and often violent.

The Board is familiar with the annual eruptions of the fraternity agitation which culminated last June. These have generally burst forth with no premonition save the running to and fro of half a dozen students charged with the working up of the demonstration. The spirit which has characterized these little commotions has been a mild form of Gitteauism, and it is not worth while to notice it. Take a dozen impulsive young men, associate them in a secret clique, binding each to believe all that the others hear or imagine, and they will soon work themselves into what President Hitchcock, of Amherst College, called quoad hoc insanity. And this remark points to what is almost a necessary evil in these secret college clubs. I have in my possession the constitutions, by-laws, etc., of eight of the leading Greek-letter fraternities, including the Sigma Chi. There is a striking similarity between them, and especially in the oath or pledge. Each member is bound to place confidence in every other member of the fraternity, and to befriend, on all occasions, and by all honorable means, each and every one who wears its badge. We are telling no secret to fraternity men when we say that this practically means to defend each other, right or wrong, and not a few chapters would vote lying honorable if necessary to protect a "brother" from college discipline. This is almost a necesary consequence of the three sentiments which bind them together —mutual admiration, mutual confidence, and mutual protection. Vealy boys thus united become spooney and snobbish, if not dishonest. This result has been very obvious here for the past three years. When a boy surrenders himself to the influence of the secret clique in the city, the Faculty knows that his demoralization as a student is only a question of time. He will soon defend, if not engage in, dishonorable conduct.

It is cheerfully conceded that there is a marked difference in the morale of different fraternities and of different chapters of the same fraternity. Much depends on the controlling influences of a college, and more, perhaps, on the character of the students who initiate a chapter. "Birds of a feather flock together." It often happens that the most reputable fraternities are disgraced by chapters so dishonorable that the only remedy is utter abolition either by the fraternity itself or by the college authorities. Several instances of such heroic treatment could be cited. There are few colleges with several fraternities that do not have one or more chapters which are sources of serious demoralization. They speedily go from bad to worse when once under evil influences. On the contrary, there are colleges where the high character of the students as a class and the wise control of the Faculty have reduced the evils of secret fraternities to a minimum.

The foregoing testimony will suffice, we trust, to show that the long silence of the Purdue Faculty respecting the unfavorable influence and tendency of secret societies in the classical colleges has not been due to a lack of evidence. No one, in the face of this testimony, can assert that their influence has been generally beneficial and salutary; and it seems unnecessary to draw formally the evident conclusion that the anti-fraternity regulation of Purdue University is based on good reasons in addition to those which grow out of the character of the institution as a college of science and industry. We are more and more satisfied that its enactment was both wise and expedient, and we are confident that this will be happily demonstrated in the future history of the institution. In the older colleges where the secret fraternities have been long and deeply rooted, their removal may be beset with serious difficulties, but prohibition is unquestionably the true policy for all industrial colleges.

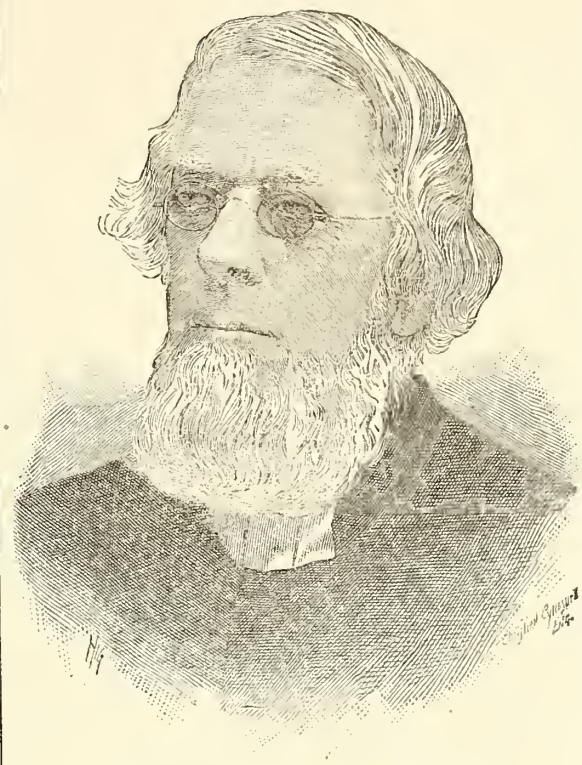
OPINIONS FROM EMINENT COLLEGE PRESIDENTS.

LEMUEL MOSS, D.D., president of Indiana University, Bloomington, Ind., wrote Dec. 1, 1881, to President White of Purdue University as follows:

"I can endorse most heartily the judgments so clearly expressed by President Porter. My decided conviction is that secret societies are out of place in college; that for many reasons they are a hindrance and not a help to the students connected with them, and a burden to the general discipline of the institution. But whether this be so or not, the question of allowing or disallowing secret societies in any college is for the authorities of the college—the trustees and Faculty—to determine. It is purely a question of expediency and practical wisdom. These authorities, constituted as such by positive statutes, with their powers and duties and responsibilities defined, must settle all matters of management within the limits of their authorization without appeal and without revision. Any other doctrine would be disastrous. The conditions scholastic and disciplinary, of entrance and continuance in any college are clearly published and therefore known to all who seek its facilities. If students who strive to evade these very obvious principles should succeed in so doing by appeal to the courts, it would not only be monstrous in itself, but would be mischievous to those who might seem to succeed. It can be no advantage to students that the rightful authority of the college should be lessened, weakened, or brought into doubt. Hence, on every account, I shall rejoice in your triumph."

DR. SELIM H. PEABODY, regent of Illinois Industrial University, Champaign, Ill., wrote to Dr. White:

"I have come to the conclusion that the 'fraternities,' or secret societies, rife in our colleges, are, as a whole, injurious, and should be kept out of new institutions. If the older ones could get them out it would be better for them. These societies are not necessarily bad, nor all bad, but their influence and their effects are everywhere injurious in certain respects, and it is not practicable, from the very nature of the case, to distinguish the good from the bad. . . . . So far as they are convivial, and that means very much, they are mischievous. So far as they come to build expensive club houses, and in other ways add needlessly to the cost of residence at college, they do a very great harm. These things they do just as soon as they get strong enough to do them. But the most important ground of complaint which I have against them, is that they become in secrecy and darkness the nuclei of unceasing efforts to direct and control the government of the institution which harbors them; they seek to mould and wield popular sentiment and to control all organized effort on the part of the students. They form an invisible, irresponsible, and often conscienceless body that will do and sanction acts which their own managers would never undertake if they were obliged to assume openly responsibility therefor."



REV. T. N. HASSELQUIST, D. D.
President of Augustana College and Theological Seminary.

FETISHISM.

It crops out constantly in the superstitious notions which pervade society. To imagine that the moon seen over the right shoulder has a better influence than when seen over the left shoulder is fetishistic; equally so is the fear of the number thirteen at table. The whole series of signs and warnings, breaking of looking-glasses, the flight of a bird into the window, the ticking of the death watch, etc., are pagan in themselves, and belong to the very lowest order of primitive paganism. They are survival of the Dahomey stage, of the rudest savage life and religion. It is perfectly astonishing that they continue among intelligent Christian people. They are harmless when they have evaporated into simple amusement without any remnant of faith in them—like the pulling of the florets of the daisy to discover if he loves you; but there are thousands of our people who actually are frightened by these physical signs, and ascribe power to them which belongs only to the natural forces and to the providence of God. These superstitions are not to be condoned, but to be attacked and condemned as something hostile to the essence of Christian faith, or to be laughed out of court.—New York Independent.

What is called the anniversary of the birthday of Christ was celebrated with all the selfish revelings, drunkenness, gluttony and wantonness which characterized the old Roman Saturnalia, a feast held for a week, about the 25th of December, and which formed the real basis of the present Christmas. Christ's birth was probably in the spring or early months of the year. But a backslidden Christianity thought that the half-converted heathen must have something to take the place of the Saturnalia, and so Christmas, or a day for Christ's birth, was placed in the stead of the heathen feast, or rather, the heathen feast was called Christian. There may be those who love Christmas for Christ's sake, but it may well be questioned whether the old baptized heathen festival has not done much more harm than good. Selfish feasting and gluttony, drunkenness and rioting, cannot be said to honor Christ. The better way to honor the Redeemer of the world is to live every day for him.—Signs of the Times.

EASTERN OREGON LETTER.

EARLY BAPTIST TESTIMONY IN THAT STATE.

WESTON, Oregon, Nov. 28, 1890.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—I had no idea, when I wrote you in June last, that so much time would elapse before addressing you again. But without a repetition of words in explaining the delay, allow me to state that my head, heart and hands have been full of work for the blessed Master. Yet I must redeem my promise in the issue of June 12, in regard to the "position taken on the subject of oath-bound secrecy by one of our early pioneer missionary Baptists of Oregon."

Being one of the historical committee of our Baptist State Convention, I gleaned from the manuscript of our historian the following notes of the proceedings of the First Baptist church of Oregon City, which I know to be authentic.

The Anti-masonic resolution adopted in 1859, read as follows:

"In the early part of 1859, Deacon Newell introduced the following resolution in Oregon City Baptist church:

"That we, as a church, disapprove of the connection of any of our members with secret societies.

"This was referred to a committee, who, in June, recommended to lay the resolution and all former reports on the table, and adopt no rule on the subject; but leave the members who feel aggrieved to proceed in the ordinary disciplinary course. This was tabled by the casting vote of the moderator, Rev. Hezekiah Johnson, and the following resolution substituted:

"Resolved, (1) That we believe the doctrines of Masonry and Odd-fellowship are antagonistic to the doctrines of the Christian religion; and as rivals of the Church of Jesus Christ in disguise of cold, worldly morality, these organizations should be avoided by all true followers of the Lamb.

"Resolved, (2) That those of our members now in connection with these societies are most earnestly and faithfully entreated to come out from them, and no longer be unequally yoked together with unbelievers in them.

"Resolved, (3) That hereafter no one shall be received as a member of either of these orders."

"Then coming on down a period of eight years later, this same Baptist church at a business session passed the following resolution on November, 1867:

"Resolved, That so much of the resolutions and actions of this church in June, 1859, as prevent the reception of persons who are members of the orders of Freemasons or Odd-fellows be, and the same are hereby rescinded; and that each individual be left to his own convictions of duty with reference to these matters."

Then I note the following comment by our historian:

"These resolutions were perhaps as earnestly contested as any that ever came before a Baptist body in Oregon. The house was crowded, for the word had gone abroad of what was on the tapis, and the elite and talent of Oregon City were there. But the resolutions were adopted and as a result, the next month, this action followed: Brethren and sisters being unable to agree with the church . . . . are at your own request, declared to be no longer in fellowship, and dismissed from the body. No other cause of exclusion. Thus the Oregon City church lost two of her active and most efficient members," etc.

Well, I beg leave to differ with our historian. If those two "very efficient and active" members thought more of the "unfruitful works of darkness" than the church of the Lord Jesus Christ, the church was not weakened by their drawing out, but strengthened. It is far better to obey God than man. The Apostle's injunction to the ecclesia of Ephesus was to "have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them." (See Eph. 5: 11.)

This dear pastor, Hezekiah Johnson, was one of the old pioneer missionaries to this northwest coast, who came as a standard-bearer for Jesus, had very correct views in regard to the teachings of holy writ on the subject of oath-bound secrecy and was faithful in shunning not to declare the whole truth. But how soon after the Lord called him home the spirit of the adversary crept in, an so soon as they had the power and dared to, the rescinded the Anti-masonic resolution!

Fraternally yours, W. H. PRUETT.

NEW ENGLAND LETTER.

Report of the annual meeting of the N. E. C. A. at Park St. Church—A grand convention; the best ever held in New England.

On arriving at the N. E. headquarters, 309 Tremont St., a few hours before the time set for our meeting I found a little company of the faithful assembled for prayer and consultation. The fervent petitions that went up for guidance and help seemed to me even at the outset an earnest of the rich blessing which has been poured out on our convention from its first beginning to the closing moment.

The half hour of devotion with which it opened struck the keynote of the meeting. It was a precious season, and rendered still more so by the excellent service of song, led by F. W. Mellen and wife, and Rev. A. A. Hoyt, of the Independent Christian. The president, J. A. Conant, then made a few introductory remarks in his usual happy manner, and introduced Evangelist Wm. F. Davis, whose address was full of sharp, bright hits against the lodge, and an eloquent defence of Jesus Christ as the only Saviour for men. His handling of the "good man argument" was keenly sarcastic, and I wish all those dear W. C. T. U. women, who say "my father, or my brother, or my husband are Masons, therefore Masonry must be a good thing," could have heard his parallel syllogism: General Grant had tobacco cancer. He was an excellent man; therefore tobacco cancer must be an excellent thing David was a man after God's own heart, save in the matter of Uriah, but it does not follow that murder and adultery are good things. We can't see anything in the Bible if we put the square and compass on it, and give it into the charge of a bloated rumseller, but if we come to it to find Christ we shall find what we seek. He defined the Freemason as a man who was free from liberty to tell the truth and from freedom to know the truth.

The next morning after half an hour given to devotion there was a business meeting, at which the committee on permanent organization reported the following names:

For President, J. A. Conant, Willimantic, Conn. Secretary, Elizabeth E. Flagg, Wellesley, Mass. Treasurer, Zephaniah Graves, Harris, Mass. For Vice-Presidents: Maine, Rev. J. S. Rice, North Pownal; New Hampshire, Rev. Isaac Hyatt, Gilford Village; Vermont, Rev. Francis Reed, Starksboro; Massachusetts, S. A. Pratt, Worcester; Connecticut, Phillip Bacon, Weatogue; Rhode Island, A. M. Paull, Providence. For Executive Committee, J. A. Conant, E. E. Flagg, and Zephaniah Graves. EX-OFFICIO members: H. W. Goddard, West Sydney, Maine; Rev. C. L. Baker, Manchester, N. H.; Elder D. DeWolf, Green River, Vt.; L. E. Lincoln, Roslindale, Mass.; C. T. Collins, Windsor, Conn.; Rev. Chas. Warren Ryder, Providence, R. I.

The nominations were unanimously adopted. Pres. J. A. Conant desired that another name should be substituted for his own, but on Rev. J. P. Stoddard putting the question to the vote, it was unanimous in favor of his retention in office, and he finally consented to serve the Association in that capacity another year. It has been a great reason for congratulation as well as of thankfulness to God that one so thoroughly qualified in every respect should be at the helm, and it was the feeling of every member present that his resignation would have been an injury to our Association, hardly to be estimated, especially at the present juncture, when so much depends upon his brave and skillful leadership. Rev. A. A. Hoyt, chairman of the finance committee, then gave his report, after which Rev. J. P. Stoddard was called upon for a general statement of receipts and expenditures. The work has been sustained during the year past by the free-will offerings of friends, as the Lord has put it into their hearts to give. The sums given to the work amounted to $457.19, but necessary expenditures reduced the actual receipts of the agent to $300.19. Surely a very meagre pittance on which to live, even if we throw out of account the numerous calls upon their hospitality which the position held by Bro. and sister Stoddard must necessarily entail upon them. It is hoped, however, that the ensuing year will see at least four times that amount of money raised. He has spoken at seventy-three different meetings, and wherever he has seen an open door to present the anti-secret cause he has pressed in. He expressed the great encouragement given him by the success of the parlor meetings he has lately held in Boston and vicinity. They have been the means of interesting several ladies prominent as Christian workers, and thus the public sentiment is being slowly leavened. He closed with a most impressive testimony to the blessedness of living a life of faith, depending for daily bread, not on any earthly treasury, but on the Heavenly Father alone.

Rev. A. A. Hoyt, chairman of the finance committee, resigned, owing to press of other duties, and Rev. J. P. Stoddard was elected to fill the vacancy, the names of the finance committee for this year standing thus: Rev. J. P. Stoddard, A. M. Paull, and Zephaniah Graves.

The order of exercises was then changed and a discussion of "The Influence of the Lodge on the Social habits of Drinking and Smoking," was was opened by Rev. J. P. Stoddard, who gave some interesting facts from his experience. Mr. Ezra McIntyre, a seceding Mason of thirty-two degrees, was then called forward and gave a most powerful testimony to the grace of God as sufficient to cleanse from all evil habits. He had used tobacco for forty-five years, and was so addicted to it that if he went to bed without his cigar, he was obliged to get up and have a smoke before he could sleep, but since his conversion three years ago, the Lord had taken from him all desire for tobacco; nor had he any desire for the hospitality of secret associations. He had come out from them and was a free man in Christ Jesus. Mrs. Anna E. Stoddard then made a brief address. Why are so many of our young men going down into the slums? Because they are drawn into the secret lodges with every good influence of mother, wife or sister that might have helped them to resist temptation, shut out. A lodge generally means a saloon located close by. Are we as women willing to beard the liquor traffic in its secret den? Bro. Wm. Whittemore then spoke on the importance of getting the good men out of the lodge. Then there will be a corresponding inrush of the evil element which will work its destruction. L. E. Lincoln then gave an address on "Reform and Reformers," which won high praise from all who heard it, but as it will be published in the Cynosure I forbear to quote any of the sparkling nuggets of truth with which it was filled.

The afternoon session, after devotional exercises led by Bro. A. M. Paull, was opened by an address from Rev. L. W. Frink of West Boylston, on "The Grange and Country Churches." He has had the advantage of a hand-to-hand battle with this popular secret order, and his words had the power which only comes of personal knowledge. He was followed by Rev. E. M. Darst, who spoke in the most pointed manner on the sin of robbing God by giving the time and money which should be expended in other directions to a secret lodge. Mr. Darst is a new name to most of the members of our convention, but his singular eloquence and earnestness was acknowledged by all. Rev. Hezekiah Davis then followed, bringing out with great force the truth that every Christian is a temple of the Holy Ghost; that he is "bought with a price," body, soul and spirit, and ought to have faith that God will care for his own, in which case he can have no need of the lodge. Bro. Perry of Thomson, Conn., then followed, giving some of his experience with Masonry in the courts.

A Freemason then arose and denied that Masonry was a beneficial order, but the testimony of two or three in the audience who had had an inside view of the lodge, among them Stillman B. Pratt of the American, proved to the mind of the audience that it was.

The following resolutions were presented by Rev. I. Hyatt, and unanimously adopted.

Whereas, Freemasonry transforms amusement into sin, politics into treason, benevolence into selfishness, brotherly love into conspiracy, and worship into formalism; And

Whereas, the so-called minor secret orders of whatever name, partake more or less of the same nature, and are used as feeders for the higher orders; Therefore,

RESOLVED, that we are opposed to them all, and in a Christian way, will seek to show our fellow-men their true character.

Resolved: That we urge all within them to renounce them, with such confession as the nature of their connection with them may require.

Resolved: That we will earnestly persuade those outside of them, especially the youth, never to unite with them.

Resolved: That it is our conviction that we need to seek earnestly to promote a deep and fervent spirituality as the motive power in our reform work. That an entire consecration to God, and implicit faith in his Word, is the only true basis of actual reform.

A resolution of thanks was also voted to the press, the committee and janitor of Park St. Church, the singers and all who had extended such kind and Christian hospitality to the convention.

It was also voted on motion of S. C. Kimball, that Rev. J. P. Stoddard be formally chosen as home missionary and general agent of the work for the ensuing year.

The evening brought torrents of rain and a fierce northeast gale, yet there was a good-sized audience present in spite of the inclemency of the weather. A prayer service, led by Dr. Jas. M. Gray, opened the closing session. Rev. A. J. Gordon to the great regret of all could not be present, owing to illness. Rev. Dr. Gifford was also unavoidably detained from being present. Dr. Gray bore a very solemn and emphatic testimony against the sin of entering the lodge. The concluding addresses by Rev. Roland D. Grant and F. O. Cunningham were a grand conclusion of the best anti-secret convention ever held in New England. A stenographer was engaged and took full reports of all the addresses, which will appear in the Cynosure in due time.

No other meeting has ever received such courteous treatment from the daily press; the Herald especially has reported all the proceedings fully and fairly. Free lodging and entertainment were found for all who attended from abroad, and the hearty hospitality of the dear Christian brothers and sisters who thus freely opened their hearts and homes to the convention was not the least among its pleasant features. But above all, an excellent spirit pervaded every session. There was not a ripple of discord, but a sense of new consecration, and of a fresh baptism of the Holy Ghost seemed to fill every heart. Much prayer went up to heaven for God's blessing on this annual gathering. Those prayers have been richly answered; and as we standon the threshold of another year in our reform work, well may we praise God for his mercy and say: "He that is mighty hath done for us great things, and blessed be his name forever."

ELIZABETH E. FLAGG.

If faith everywhere resists and everywhere outlives all the denials, all the doubts and all the darkness which oppress mankind, it is that man bears within himself an imperishable consciousness of the enduring bond which connects him with God and God with him.—Guizot.

SECRET SOCIETIES AND COURTS OF JUSTICE.

During the trial of a case in one of the Los Angeles courts, an incident occurred which is worthy of notice, as it is indicative of a sinister influence which too frequently prevents justice being done in our courts. The case is a damage suit, in which a young lady claims $50,000 for alleged seduction. During the trial the plaintiff was asked by her attorney whether her father was a Mason. Before the defense could interpose an objection, she quickly produced from her dress her father's certificate of Masonry, which she displayed to the jury. The defendant's attorneys objected, but of course were too late to prevent the effect of the "exhibit" on the jury.

It is apparent that the question as to whether the father of the plaintiff belonged, or did not belong, to a certain secret society had "nothing to do with the case," any more than would the nationality of the defendant, or the religion of the plaintiff's grandmother, yet it is a well-known fact that this secret society business enters largely into the question of jury trials. The skilled practitioner, who has a client to defend before a jury, will always ascertain whether the accused is a member of any secret organization. An effort is then made to secure one or more jurymen who are members of the order, after which care is taken that the accused prominently displays a badge of the order on his person, where the jury can see it. There are lawyers who boast that they can always save a man from conviction under such circumstances, whatever his crime.

Under such conditions as these, a secret society becomes plainly an obstacle in the path of justice and a danger to the community. Unless a reform is instituted by the members themselves in the direction indicated, these orders will not advance themselves in the eyes of the mass of people. In the particular case under consideration, there is no doubt but the "evidence" contained in the certificate produced by this witness should have been thrown out by the court, and the jury warned against its possible effect.—Los Angeles Times.

NEW ENGLAND'S BEST.

Boston, Dec. 17, 1890.

Dear Cynosure Readers:—You will, I feel confident, be thankful to know that the New England convention of the 16th and 17th insts. is considered by the friends attending "a time of refreshing from the presence of the Lord." It was with deep regrets that we learned too late to change the printed notices that Bros. Gordon and Gifford were not to be present; but the One who not only rules but over-rules more than compensated for the absence of these dear brethren by his own divine presence and power. There was no lack of speakers, and the speaking was excellent from the opening remarks by the president, Bro. Conant, to the close. There was not an instance savoring of denunciation, bitterness or haste, but a calm, cool discussion of vital issues pressing upon us, with occasional reference to the history of secret orders in this and other countries. As the gifted secretary of the New England Christian Association gives you a full report, I will reserve to a later date some incidents of interest that may not have come to her notice; although, as every one knows who reads the New England letters, Miss Flagg is on the alert for facts. I will just say, however, that while all the addresses cannot be procured in full, some of them were reported by a stenographer, and when copied and reviewed by their authors, they will be forwarded to "the Polar Star," where you will doubtless read them with profit and delight. It is proposed to furnish them in pamphlet form if orders given with subscriptions at the convention shall be supplemented by others in sums sufficient to justify an issue of 10,000 copies. If you are interested in the publication of these speeches in pamphlet form, how much will you give to help in the necessary expense of issuing it? The entire expense of speakers, hall, printing, music, reporter, etc., was $55 to a cent, and the offering for this special item of committee expenses was $59.41, leaving a balance of $4.41, which I am advised by the friends to turn over to the tract account. Every one applying from abroad was supplied with lodgings free, and some have since called to express thanks that they had had the privilege of making the acquaintance of some whose spirit, methods and object, they had not heretofore apprehended. The doxology was a fit closing. J. P. Stoddard.

THE COVENANTERS AND THE SABBATH UNION.

Philadelphia, Pa., Dec. 17, '90.

Editor Christian Cynosure:—Last Saturday I lectured in Eastman College, Poughkeepsie, N. Y. They have 500 students, from South America, West Indies, Asia, France, Italy, England, Canada and most of the States and Territories. This was the first National Reform lecture. President C. C. Gaines invited me to return.

Sabbath morning and night I preached in the Fourth U. P. Church of Philadelphia. Sabbath afternoon I preached in Dr. Stevenson's congregation of the Reformed Presbyterian church. The trial and conviction of the five ministers by the Pittsburgh presbytery is all the talk among the Covenanters. Two other ministers are to be tried by that presbytery next January. Rev. Carson of Brooklyn, N. Y., is reported in the papers to have resigned his charge last Sabbath on account of this action. It is to be hoped the counsel of peace will be taken and the church not be divided.

The American Sabbath Union held its second annual meeting in this city last week. It was a signal failure. The addresses were disappointing n moral tone. The attendance was small; and an open rupture occurred between the followers of Dr. Crafts and those of Col. Shepard. It is nown that the relations between these men have been strained for some months. On this account Dr. Crafts resigned his position as field secretary to the American Sabbath Union, and has been lecturing on his own responsibility. A few weeks ago the New York men had the American Sabbath Union incorporated, and they elected Col. Shepard president. Dr. Crafts came to this convention with a new constitution, and proposed to have a new president. He met with a signal defeat. Why must the friends of a good cause be divided? Satan must be at work. His policy is to divide and conquer.

Monday morning a very able paper was read before the Methodist preachers in Wesley Hall by Rev. L. W. Munhall, D.D., editor of the Methodist Review, on the "Higher Criticism." He said there are over 600 theories of interpretation among the higher critics. You can take your choice. They first claimed the Gospels were not written earlier than 150 A. D. Then they admitted the date might be 140 A. D. Presently they said 130 A. D. Shortly they granted 110 A. D. Next 100 A. D. was admitted. Now they grant that John's Gospel might be 97 A. D. We grant this. He calls it "the retreat of the critics." The fatal objection to the work of the critics is, they deal with single books of the Bible. The little child begins with single objects and advances to generals. The scholar begins with generals and uses the particulars as they serve his purpose. These critics deal in particular books. The English theologians deal with the whole Bible. You see men putting up a building. You go to one and ask about its plan. He says, "My business is to make windows. I know nothing about the plan." You go to another. He says, "My business is to make doors. I know nothing about the plan." Well, you say, "I want to know the plan of the house. Who is the architect?" "Oh, the architect is dead." These critics deal with single books, a window or a door. The author of the system of higher criticism is dead. These critics are destroying one another. The Ammonites, the Midianites and Edomites formed an alliance and came against Jehoshaphat. Jehoshaphat gathered his army and went out, but he did not have to fight. The Ammonites and Midianites concluded to destroy the Edomites. And when that was done, the Ammonites and Midianites fell out and destroyed one another. All Jehoshaphat and his men had to do was to stand and see the salvation of God. These higher critics are annihilating one another. By and by not one will be left, and we can go on singing praise to God.

At first the critics said there never was a Moses, that the Pentateuch was written after the captivity. Later they said Moses did live, but never wrote any. After awhile they said, Moses wrote a little. Now they say Moses wrote most of the first five books of the Bible. In a little while they will admit that he wrote the Pentateuch.

I attended the chapel exercises of the Pennsylvania University. They have a fine lot of students. Dr. Drummond, author of "Natural Law in the Spiritual World," held meetings here a few years ago. I have taken steps to secure a hearing for our reform work also. J. M. Foster.

RECENT WHITE LEAGUE OUTRAGES IN LOUISIANA.

Franklin, Ind., Dec. 9, 1890.

Editors Christian Cynosure:—I have just received a letter from Miss J. P. Moore, of Baton Rouge, La. Her work among the colored women of Louisiana corresponds with the work done by Mr. Woodsmall among the men. I copy her letter, believing that you will see best to print it. She says:

"The morning of Nov. 20 I found a notice on my gate with crape, skull and cross-bones. The notice said I was ordered by the 'White League' to close my school and leave the place. Reason given, 'You are teaching the niggers to believe they are the equals of the white people.' The pupils saw it before I did and were greatly alarmed. The next day we heard of the terrible outrage on the colored people about eight miles from town,—six whipped and one shot dead. I could not keep my women. They fled to their homes for safety. My school is closed and it will not be opened here again.

"I wish I knew just the wise thing to do and say. I have thought of dear Bro. Woodsmall a hundred times since this happened. He would speak in my behalf, if he was anywhere in reach. The white people and authorities to whom I showed my abusive notice said they would see that I was protected, etc., and bear down upon the villains through the press, etc. But not one word has been printed in any of the town papers. The reason they are so anxious to bring the white-masked bulldozers to justice is because the laborers have fled from the neighborhood and will not go back. Besides one white man has had his sugar house burned, as he supposed, by the same persons who did the whipping. Miss Button [an associate worker] and I heard the mayor say: 'These bulldozers have over-reached themselves this time. They are really injuring the white man and he will strike back. The black man bears all and says nothing.' I replied, 'It seems to me justice ought to strike back for the helpless black man.' He made no reply to my remark.

"I have known that this caste feeling is perfectly terrible, but now it is burned deep into my very soul. I have suffered so much. Not one white person came near us, except two men to whom I wrote asking them to come as I wanted especially to see them. This has been worse than death or sickness. Mrs. Pound and Miss Button [her two helpers] are with me. I do not know what I shall do, but I do not expect to remain here long."

Miss Moore is quite elderly, nearing sixty, and is one of earth's saintly women. Yours in the work, Mary H. Woodsmall.

THE PATRONS OF INDUSTRY.

Benton Harbor, Mich., Dec. 10, 1890.

Editor Cynosure:—For years I have been unequivocally and conscientiously opposed to secret societies. My acquaintances have known this, yet we get along with each other as well as neighbors usually do. Often have I been importuned to join the grange, many of my acquaintances being members of that order; but not being able to put under foot my convictions and my manhood, I am, as my friends express it, "left out in the cold."

Shortly before the late election, there came among us some strangers, who organized a lodge (or whatever they call it) of the Patrons of Industry. From all of my reading on the subject I believe that the "P. of I." was organized and pushed in strongly Republican districts in this State, and not in Democratic districts; and I believe that it is, or was, a Democratic trick, since every Republican vote diverted from the regular Republican candidates was at least half a vote for the Democrats.

In our school district they hold their weekly meetings in the school-house, a public building erected and maintained with every tax-payer's money, whether he be Christian or infidel, a secret society man or an anti-secretist. They have got nearly every man, woman and child over 13 years of age in the district, to join this secret society. My wife and children have many times been urged to join, especially by the women and children, the inducement held out being that they have such splendid times and that it is so "awfully nice." The secrecy feature seems to have an indescribable fascination for the women and children.

When I tell them that I cannot join them because I am, on principle, opposed to all secret societies, they reply, "Oh, but this is very mild; there is nothing in the secrecy part of it except that it enables us to keep out objectionable characters; it is different from the Masons and Oddfellows." They laugh at me and my family and say that if we want to enjoy the good times and the use of the school-house with them, we had better "come into their secret organization." They tell me that it is merely for literary and social purposes—nothing more.

Had they organized a merely literary society and incorporated into their constitution some feature that would have excluded Catholics or Methodists, without reference to their moral worth or fitness for membership, there is no one so stupid but could see that it was radically wrong. Yet here we have a society, formed in a neighborhood, by the neighbors, for a part of the neighbors, ostensibly for literary and social purposes, on a basis that they could not help knowing, on the start, must exclude from membership certain church members and all anti-secretists, without the least regard to character or qualifications; and I can not regard it as other than an unwise, unjust performance, quite in keeping with the unscrupulous and selfish character of all secretism, and one for engaging in which I feel truly sorry and heartily ashamed of those persons of mature years who are responsible for it.

What a training for our school children! Instead of inculcating into their young minds the doctrine that the very idea, the principle of secretism is un-American and un-Christian, they are doing exactly the reverse—doing all they can to impress upon them that secretism is right and honorable. What an excellent hot-bed of preparation for that great evil, the college secret society!

So far as excluding objectionable characters is concerned, the fact is that our P. of I. have not yet refused to admit any applicant, and there is not a man, woman or child in our school district that they would dare to turn away.

The claim that the secrecy feature amounts to nothing, it being so mild and innocent, arouses, at once, my pity and my indignation. It is like the poor girl, who, having wickedly and foolishly undertaken to accumulate a family, in the wrong order, having an heir before she had a husband, upon being upbraided by her father for her indiscretion, and being told that she was just as bad as a certain other young woman of her acquaintance who had made a similar mistake, argued, "Oh, but daddy, dot vas deferent; dis vas such a leetle baby."

As this "P. of I." is not a local outbreak, merely, but seems to be widespread, I wish that you would publish an expose of the institution, its origin, where started, and by whom, and the former politics of the founders. A. J. KNISELY.

THE COLOR LINE BREAKING DOWN.

JACKSONVILLE, Ill., Dec. 8, 1890.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—Since writing you last I returned home to Decatur, Ill., after several days, stay in Arkansas. I spent Thanksgiving day at Cotton Plant, Ark. Rev. Mr. McMillan arranged for my address. He is an anti-secretist and is doing great good among our people. The people put aside their cotton sacks and all work to attend the meeting at 3 P. M. The white pastor of M. E. church, South, attended. The lodge and liquor were handled as best I could. There is an institution of learning here (Presbyterian) for colored people. I called to see the president, but could not find him in. Many pastors begged that I visit their congregations, to talk on these questions. The great number of secret societies are helping to keep race prejudice as nearly all promises to protect their members when in trouble. They greatly need lectures on these reforms.

AT ST. LOUIS.

On the way home, by invitation, I spoke to the W. C. T. U. convention in St. Louis. The convention was held in the M. E. church, South. This is the first time I ever spoke in one of these churches. It shows that time is bringing matters around all right, and we are not far from the time when all evangelical churches will teach the Fatherhood of God and brotherhood of man.

I am here to preach and lecture on prohibition. Matters seem a little dull. The Farmers' Alliance is trying to capture all small parties, and many prohibitionists are folding their arms and closing their eyes and getting ready for the operation. It is possible that unless the Alliance shall offer some good inducements, we will have enough of the old guard left to keep up the fight for God against the rum power.

☐We should be glad to go South and push the reform work among our own people if we were able. Yours in Jesus, L. G. JORDAN.

DEBATING ANTI-SECRET QUESTIONS.

YORK, Pa., Dec. 2, 1890.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—We, the anti-secret reformers of the United States, cannot do anything better to push our cause than to organize local and county associations everywhere, to give public entertainments, including anti-secret debates, readings, songs, recitations, etc.

I have lately examined a book entitled "The American Debater." It was published in New York, in 1855, by Ivison and Phinney. James N. McElligott, LL. D., is the author. This work gives rules of order, model constitutions, by-laws, Constitution of the United States, etc. The table of contents includes everything a young debater needs to know. There is a list of questions for debate, which contains 582 of the most important that could be devised for young Americans to reflect upon. On page 210 the question is: "Ought secret societies to be tolerated?" The debater is there referred to Robinsons' Proofs of a Conspiracy, Arnold's Philosophical History of Freemasonry, Encyclopaedia Americana (article Jesuits), Stone's Letters on Masonry and Anti-masonry, Lawrie's History of Freemasonry, and Secret Societies of Middle Ages (in Library of Entertaining Knowledge).

The following are some of the most important questions presented: Is Roman Catholicism compatible with free institutions? Ought Freemasonry to be suppressed by law? What were the origin and nature of the Eleusinian mysteries? Will the Know Nothings exert a favorable influence upon the institutions of our country? Ought parochial schools to be encouraged? May an oath, taken under circumstances of stress or deception, be violated without guilt? Do the signs of the times indicate a subversion of our government? Have we anything to fear from the spread of popery? Is our country in more danger from external factions than internal foes? Have false systems of religion caused more misery than false systems of government? Ought Freemasonry to be responsible for the murder of Morgan? Ought a republican government to tolerate all religious denominations? Is liberty one of man's rights? Are American churches the bulwark of liberty? Are not the public, in this country, generally deprived of the official services of our best men, by the reckless abuse of the press during election times? Ought the Catholics to have a separate school fund?

I suggest that all red-hot Americans who read the Cynosure begin to organize American clubs, American debating societies, Christian anti-secret literary associations, etc., to aid in the advancement of the great anti-secret reformation which will overthrow the Jesuitic secret empire of the United States. RED-HOT AMERICAN.

THE WORD THAT CASTS OUT FEAR.

RIPLEY, O.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—I must send you a word of cheer, and confess my appreciation of your work. Before I began to read the paper, I was not as radical as I ought to have been, for a Wesleyan Methodist minister, on the secrecy question. I am confident the present spiritless and graceless condition of many churches among my people, the Afro-Americans, is directly traceable to the secret societies.

Surely, the fires of persecution were never so hot, and the flames mount up so high, as when the Hebrew children "were cast into the fiery furnace" because of their positive refusal to worship the golden image, in the plain of Dura. Had they done so, they would have violated the First Commandment, "Thou shalt have no other gods before me." The lesson is, Dread no mortal foe, nor fear physical injuries or sufferings. How can a minister of the Gospel of Christ reconcile his joining secret societies upon the plea of insuring himself against sufferings, in case of sickness, etc., with the Apostle's response to the lame man as he laid at the Beautiful gate? "Then Peter said, Silver and gold have I none; but such as I have give I thee: In the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth rise up and walk," Acts 3: 6. No secret oath was administered to the Apostle, nor the lame man, whose sufferings were relieved. But what then? Read our Lord's charge to Peter, John 21: 15, 16, 17. This is Christian benevolence vs. lodge selfishness. How can ministers especially read the Word, and forget it so soon, Phil. 4: 19, "But my God shall supply all your need according to his riches in glory by Christ Jesus?" W. A. JACKSON.

PITH AND POINT.

A LODGE BROKEN UP AND A YOUNG MAN SAVED.

I have taken the Cynosure ever since its first number. I think it is one of the best family papers published. I think it is doing good wherever it goes. I will relate one or two instances. Some years ago there was a Freemason lodge in the west part of our town. We used to send the Cynosure to some of its most prominent members. I think it was the means of breaking up the lodge. I understand there is none there now. Again, a young man whose business was selling tomb-stones, stopped with us over night. He told us his father was a Freemason, his mother had taken the Rebecca degree, and he expected to join the Freemasons as soon as he was of age. We gave him our views of secret societies, and told him if he would read the Cynosure we thought he would not join the lodge. So we gave him the Cynosure. The next time we saw him he told us plainly he was not going to join.—JOSIAH DIVOLL.

WANTS LIVE MEN.

I would like to see a picture of the now living active workers in the anti-secret cause arranged something like the "Washington Souvenir." The Blanchards, the Stoddards, H. L. Kellogg, W. I. Phillips, E. A. Cook, S. F. Porter, C. F. Hawley, M. N. Butler, J. N. Norris, H. H. Hinman and others, with some of the great evangelists, whose testimony we have. The testimony of living men who are now at work against the lodge would be noticed if in connection with their pictures. Give us more of their pictures in the Cynosure.—ELIZA OSBORN.

HOW STANDS THE NATIONAL HOLINESS ASSOCIATION.

I write to speak of the National Holiness Association, and its connection with Masonry. I understand the Guide to Holiness to be the organ of the Association. To a question as to holiness and Masonry being in harmony (or something to that effect), the Guide gave an evasive reply, as I understand it, denying neutrality; and as proof of his position advised against joining secret societies. To the questions, "Are not some of the members of the Association also members of the lodge?" "Was not Dr. Palmer a member of the fraternity?" there was no reply. He was requested to reply by letter if an explicit reply would not be suited to the Guide—stamp inclosed. I consider that silence gives consent. What is to be done about it? Is it not the duty of the National Christian Association to investigate and expose this so-called Holiness Association? While that coddles and fellowships Masonry, I fear no real headway can be made against it. Is it possible that members of the Association, who are not lodge men, know what Masonry is? May the Lord bless his work.—J. MARSH, Milton, Fla.

This letter places the Holiness Association in an unpleasant light. Mr. McDonald, who is at its head, has at times given his voice against the lodge; but in the position of such an organization in respect to lodgery, there should be nothing equivocal or concealed. It should be "out and out" for Christ. The Christian Witness of Boston is, we believe, the organ of the Association. The Guide to Holiness of New York is more closely connected with the Methodist denomination.

GOOD WORDS.

I think the Cynosure grows better all the time.—R. E. ROSE.

Praying God's blessing on you in your good work.—G. W. GRIFFITHS.

We can't do without the Cynosure. May God bless the cause it represents.—J. A. TORRENCE.

Your paper I consider the grandest standard-bearer of truth and exposer of error in our day. It is a pleasure for me to patronize it.—A. S. HAMMOND.

LITERATURE.

Poems of the late John M. Clark, M. D.—Dr. Clark, who died a few years since at Carthage, Indiana, was an estimable member of the Society of Friends. He was most sincerely attached to the reform represented by the Cynosure and contributed to it with pen and purse. He was much in love with literary pursuits and was a linguist of much repute. This collection of his poems, published by David Marshall, Carthage, Indiana, will be valued by his many friends. Moral, patriotic and reform themes engage his verse, in which strength and originality are continually manifest.

Ritualism and Dogmatic Theology. This series of essays by Thomas H. Speakman first appeared in the Friends' Intelligencer of Philadelphia and the Friend of Manchester, England. They discuss the causes of declension in the Society of Friends. Of the fourteen causes named by the writer few of them can be called peculiar to that society. They operate to destroy all religious societies founded upon Christian doctrine. The argument and exhortations of the author are valuable to all Christians, while especially referring to the Friends.

The December American Garden is a brilliant and handsome number. The University of California has fine gardens worth a sketch and illustrations. Fruit culture is prominent in the number. Peaches, currents, pawpaws, and the pomelo or grape fruit are topics for articles, while flowers and vegetables are not forgotten. The American Garden is the best of its kind.

In the attractive holiday number of the Cosmopolitan Magazine the word "Christmas" is rigidly excluded from the titles of all the articles.

Vick's Magazine closes the year and the volume bright and strong. All that needs to be said about flowers can be found in its pages.

WEEK OF PRAYER.

JANUARY 4–11, 1891.

INVITATION.

BELOVED IN THE LORD:—Once more it is our privilege to invite you to united prayer. How often has our gracious Lord met us in the years that have gone. How often at the beginning of our supplications has the commandment gone forth. With grateful hearts we will mention his loving kindness, and make the mercies of the past a plea for the future—for never was the need greater. While we rejoice in the increasing recognition of the unity of all in Christ, and praise God for the quickened spirit of missionary zeal and Christian activity, there is much, both in the churches and in the world, which calls for deep humiliation and earnest prayer. On the one hand, sacerdotalism; on the other, lawless rejection of authority and the assertion of the will of man against the will of God, are making havoc of souls. Assaults upon Holy Scripture, violation of the Lord's day, worldliness, immorality, and self-indulgence, are increasing rapidly. Iniquity abounds and the love of many waxes cold.

Yet let us remember that our God reigneth. He sitteth above the water floods. Jesus has judged and overcome the prince of this world. To him, therefore, we will come with confident, expectant prayer. Let us ask in faith, remembering that he is faithful who hath promised; let us ask in hope, remembering that all power has been given to him in heaven and in earth; let us ask in love, remembering the great love wherewith he hath loved us, who willeth not that any should perish, but that in him his people should not only have life but have it more abundantly. In brotherly affection and esteem, we are, in the name of the Evangelical Alliance, yours in the Lord Jesus, W. E. Dodge, president, etc.

For the last three months of 1890 the Christian Cynosure has given especial attention to the college secret societies for the benefit of the hundreds of colleges to whose reading-rooms it is sent. This interesting discussion, in which have appeared the opinions of some of the very ablest American educators, will be incidentally continued next year.

But with the first of the year will begin to be published the results of a wider investigation than has yet been made into the identity of

MODERN AND ANCIENT SECRETISM.

The ancient secret societies were the MYSTERIES practiced in Chaldea, Egypt, Phœnicia, Greece, Rome, etc. These were the pagan religious systems of the ancient world.

WERE THEY RELATED TO THE LODGES OF TO-DAY?

This question we shall endeavor to answer. We believe that new evidence of the most intimate relation has been lately found, and that the presentation of this evidence to be made in the "Cynosure" will amaze Christendom the moment it is realized.

THE WHITE CROSS LEAGUE

and Social Purity movement is come none too soon, as will appear in the course of this investigation.

In connection with this most important topic the Cynosure will give particular attention to the

publishing them in full so far as they can be obtained, and showing their absolute incompatibility to good citizenship as well as to Christianity.

The peculiar features which have made the Cynosure so valuable in the past will be continued. Current events and the interference of the lodge in them will have especial attention. Able correspondence will be continued from New England, Washington, the Southern Mississippi district, and the Pacific Coast. The portraits and sketches of notable persons who have been identified with Christian reforms will be continued, and will be, as in the past, a very popular feature of the paper. The Sabbath-school lesson notes by Miss E. E. Flagg will be continued. For all who wish to wisely improve every opportunity against the lodge they are the best. The Home and Temperance and other departments will continue to be filled with excellent reading for the fireside.

BE SURE

that the Cynosure comes to your home during 1891.

You can nowhere else read fully the writings and sayings of such men as Joseph Cook, D. L. Moody, George F. Pentecost, D.D., E. P. Goodwin, D.D., Pres. J. Blanchard, Pres. H. H. George, and a host of men as good if not as great, on the subject of secret societies.

Nowhere else can you read of the progress of this reform week by week; and as the secret societies are now beginning openly to nominate and elect men to Congress and State offices, as they number hundreds of orders and millions of members, the issues they raise are of importance to every American.

Since the lodges are so aggressive every citizen should understand their nature and history and something of the men who invented and who manage them. You need the Cynosure, therefore, to keep abreast of the times as a well-informed American.

You ought also to help on this movement against the secret lodges. How better begin than by subscribing for the Cynosure? And $1.50 is but little to give in aid of so good a cause.

The Christian Cynosure.

A STRONG CHAIN WITH A WEAK LINK.

MISS WILLARD'S ADDRESS BEFORE THE 17TH CONVENTION OF THE W. C. T. U. ATLANTA, GA.

This is a speech of above one hundred pages, so replete with facts as to remind us of Goldsmith's

> "Still we gazed, and still the wonder grew,
> That one small head could carry all he knew."

We sat down to this pamphlet, which was two and a half hours in the delivery, thinking to skim it, but read it entirely through. It is one long varied melody. It can be had by writing to Miss Anna A. Gordon, Evanston, Ill. And we advise every one to write for it who wishes a panorama of prohibition in the whole United States, seen through a kaleidoscope, giving glimpses of Southern history, woman suffrage, the Bible in schools, politics, war scenes, and statistics, into which are woven the names of living characters, men and women, affecting one as the multitudes seen by the seer in Patmos might if each angel had had his name written on his forehead with a hint of his occupation.

Some two thousand people were said to have attended the convention from abroad besides the citizens of Atlanta; and Miss Willard was re-elected their president, receiving all but four votes. She is temperance editor of Joseph Cook's reform monthly, Our Day; and she assails the liquor traffic without stint. The 1,221 saloons in Washington, including those in the National Capitol run, of course, by consent of the two old parties, and the five thousand two hundred and fifty dram-bars in Chicago licensed by the same parties,—these received no mercy at her hands, though the mass of her hearers were Republicans and Democrats. Her wisdom equals her boldness. The public know that Mrs. Judith Ellen Foster has drawn off a small fraction of the W. C. T. U. and kept them from advocating St. John, Gen. Fisk and the prohibition ticket. Mrs. Foster unblushingly pretended to be "non-partisan," while openly advocating the Republican party as the true prohibition party and opposing the Prohibitionists. She made a journey to Buffalo to gather unsavory facts against Grover Cleveland and the Democrats. The Republican party rewarded her by giving an office to her husband. The only reference to Mrs. Foster's shameless pretensions and violent attacks made by Miss Willard was to say that the "partisan non-partisans" were excusable, like a Democratic tariff which was "for revenue only,"—alluding to Mr. Foster's office which his wife obtained for him. The wit of this reply equaled its wisdom.

But there is another side to this speech and to its author. She is not so gentle toward the Cynosure, which has criticised her as Paul did Peter. Nor has she profited by our criticisms as did Peter, the chief of the Apostles, who not only ceased sinful cringing to popular sentiment, but spoke of his "beloved brother Paul." On the contrary, Miss Willard thinks her criticizers may be troubled with a "cross-grained heredity." And she reminds them of Coleridge's "best law of criticism," viz., "Always look for the excellencies: the blemishes will work their own discovery." And having thus instructed her critics, she shows how little she has profited by their faithfulness by justifying her sororizing with "Catholics, Knights of Labor, and Good Templars."

But now if the secret lodge system, with whose fringe orders she is dallying while she reverently seals her lips toward their parents, Masons and Odd-fellows; if this dark system governs "darkest Africa," where Stanley finds at the entrance of a palisade "a male child literally hacked to pieces, and, a little farther on, a woman speared," and where our brethren Cole and Hinman and other missionaries tell us the whole continent is governed by secret lodges; if this dark system, modified but not changed by Christianity, to-day silences Miss Willard and the American pulpit and controls political parties; and, above and beyond all, if this system of Christless lodges has cursed Palestine into barrenness, scattered the Jews and keeps them scattered; and if Christ forbade and Paul excommunicated these Gentile religions as worship of devils; and if the lodge uses and shields liquor as in Archbishop Feehan's late Chicago banquet; and if the papacy is the mother-harlot of the world, sentenced to a sudden and fearful fall; and if Jesuitism, the head secret society of the world, is also the head of the papacy,—then Miss Willard may advise her order of White Ribboners to "look for the excellencies" in distillers, brewers and saloon-keepers as rationally as to "look for excellencies" in secret orders. Aye, and much more so. For Christ made wine of some sort, but "in secret he said nothing." And he said, "If any man will serve me, let him follow me;"—do as I do.

Christ put no badges on his disciples, nor did he put any name on them but that which is above every name, "Christian!" But our respected sister, by creating and naming an order, is not following Christ, but is "leaning to her own understanding," which she is forbidden to do. She is not even following her file-leader, Mr. Joseph Cook, who has published that the Vermont law forbidding Freemason oaths should be enacted by all the States, and that men taking such oaths should be excommunicated by all the churches; while Miss Willard attends no church conferences against lodgery such as Mr. Cook addressed, though held in a Methodist church. The difference between Mr. Cook and Miss Willard is in theological training: he by Baptists and she by Methodists. But the Inskip or holiness Methodists are all swinging off from the lodge.

But, one says, she is "opposed to secret societies;" as she said in her Nashville speech, "I have always been opposed to secret socities, and never more so than to-day." And in another speech she said, "My whole record is against secretism." But she belongs to a college secret society which she says is not a secret society. Masons, Odd-fellows and the whole tribe of "orders" declare they are not secret societies because their professed objects are known, though the first step in Masonry swears a man to have his throat cut if he tells what is done in the lodge. So the mass of pious slaveholders declared and, what is worse, believed that they were opposed to slavery. But they had some reason to back their assertion. For the Presbyterian General Assembly, in 1818, put on their record that "Slavery is an atrocious violation of the most precious rights of human nature, utterly inconsistent with the law of God and the Gospel of Jesus Christ." Yet they knew that Presbyterians, Methodist, Baptists and Episcopalians were selling their own children as slaves! But slavery was but the child of idolatry, while the secret lodge IS idolatry. The whole Word of God is ablaze against idolatry, but says little directly against slave-holding. Nor was it necessary. Abolish paganism to-day and where is slavery?

But Powderly kneels to a priesthood which supplants Christ and, as a rule, drinks liquor, and whose Archbishop Feehan lately held a banquet with various kinds of liquors in Chicago close by the W. C. T. U. headquarters; and Miss Willard now bids us in the name of Coleridge, look at the excellencies of "Catholics, Knights of Labor, Good Templars" and the rest!

We respectfully, once more, beseech this gifted and eminent sister that she cease to "help the ungodly and love them that hate the Lord," 2 Chron. 19: 2. Remember the end of the good Jehoshaphat, and the curse that fell on his house. If we court the votes of papists and Knights, what do we more than Republicans and Democrats who court liquor votes and cry "TEMPERANCE"?!

A MEETING OF THE N. C. A. BOARD was called at this office Monday morning, but lacking a quorum adjourned for a week. Bro. C. F. Hawley was present and was advised to visit New York State immediately to lecture in fulfillment of contract entered into some time since by the Association. The finances and lecture work and general management of the Association were discussed.

THE FAILURE OF THE BANKING HOUSE OF S. A. KEAN & Co. last week was a grave consideration for the N. C. A. directors, inasmuch as the ready funds of the Association were on deposit there, and several hundred dollars are locked up which are pressingly needed to pay current expenses. Our treasurer hopes that ultimately the bank will pay a large per cent of its obligations, but at present the stress of circumstances falls heavily upon a few of us. The sympathy of all good men is most sincerely given to Mr. Kean, who was an earnest Christian, zealous in good works and ready to stand for Christ against the world's darkness. He has for several years been auditor of the N. C. A. accounts, and was treasurer for a number of benevolent organizations.

—The Midland has a good report of the late Iowa convention from Rev. L. Proudfit of Albia, Iowa.

—The N. C. A. wishes to sell out. What's that? No, no! Yes, positively wishes to sell out 1,000 subscriptions to the Cynosure for 1891, at $1.50 each. Good value for good money. Try it!

—A dispatch from Bro. J. P. Stoddard in Boston was received Thursday morning with the good news from the New England convention: "THE GRANDEST SUCCESS YET." The Boston Herald in its report of the first evening gives some of the burning passages of Wm. F. Davis' address on the first evening.

—Some time ago the Cynosure published an article on the tobacco mania by our good friend George W. Clark of Detroit. It was printed in tract form and widely circulated, and the author is contemplating its re-issue. He has letters from numerous persons who have been much benefited, and some who have been led to renounce the tobacco habit by reading it.

—A letter from Mrs. Tapley, Columbus, Miss., informs us that there are two colored lecturers who continue to work as they are able in that vicinity. Both are earnest Sabbath-school workers, one of them being a kind of S. S. missionary or superintendent, having twenty-four schools under his supervision. She asks for tracts, which they will gladly distribute in their work.

—Mr. Moody has returned from this city to Northfield, Mass. He was here several weeks lecturing before the Institute which generally is called by his name and holding revival meetings in the Chicago Avenue church adjoining. Before the Institute in one of his lectures he very freely and emphatically, we are told, restated his views in opposition to secret societies.

—A letter from a daughter watching at her father's dying bed, informs us that W. B. Walthall of Quaker Hill, Ind., is sick unto death. A nervous chill on the 12th inst., was too severe for his vital powers in old age to throw off, and last week he was slowly but surely sinking, conscious, yet happy, into rest with God. He has long been a warm supporter of our cause. God grant that a double portion of his spirit may fall on some young man whom God has chosen as his successor.

—The Wesleyan Advocate, noticing the fact that the next Wesleyan General Conference was appointed to be held in Wheaton, Ill., says that under existing circumstances the meeting will probably not be held in that place. It is true the Wesleyan Theological Seminary has been discontinued, and the Wesleyan church there has also ceased for the time being to hold regular meetings, but we are confident the General Conference would find a welcome by the College Church and be hospitably entertained.

—College secrecy is not everywhere so popular as some of the contributions in its defense would indicate. The University of Missouri is surely an exception. The University Argus, published by the students of that institution, contains a note from six of them repudiating and resenting the charge made in the society paper that they belonged to the Kappa Alpha fraternity. They brand the story "as an infamous and an unmitigated lie. Furthermore, the charge that a secret society is organized or about to be organized at the club is, so far as we know, also a lie." Kappa Alpha secrecy has a stigma attached to it at the University of Missouri.

—The Christian Instructor of Philadelphia, in an editorial upon the late meeting of the American Sabbath Union in that city, says that the addresses of "Tuesday evening were more or less on a low plane, and we think, did not a little injury to the Sabbath cause. These addresses were provided for by the mangers of the Union. The sentiments of at least some of the speakers in relation to the Sabbath were known, and it may be feared, therefore, reflected the views of the managers themselves. If so, the fears that have been awakened in the minds of many in relation to the continued usefulness of the American Sabbath Union may be well-grounded. Our judgment is that the Sabbath cause was not helped in this city by the popular meetings, or, indeed, by the convention."

PERSONAL NOTES.

—The New England agent is expecting in a few days, we understand, to come West to attend to some business connected with his mother's estate.

—S. K. Wheatlake, of Burgoon, Ohio, ably discusses "Masonic Benevolence" in the last number of the Free Methodist. He proves conclusively that the lodge is most selfish in its professed charities.

—Rev. George F. Milton of Elgin, Ill., member of the N. C. A. Board, received a severe injury Dec. 11, from a fall down a flight of steps. A fractured hip was the serious result. This providence seems a peculiarly severe one, as at this season Bro. Milton would naturally be expecting to do his most earnest work for Christ in connection with his church.

—Bro. H. W. Johnston writes to the Wesleyan from Freetown, Africa, of the death of a fourth of the nine Soudan missionaries, who left this country early this year. Charles Helmick, the present victim of fever, was a young man of such excellence of character and consecration of spirit that he had become very dear to Bro. Johnston, who mourns his death sorely.

—Prof. Isaac Terborgh, a late graduate of Wheaton, and now occupying the chair of natural sciences at Hartsville College, called on the Cynosure Saturday. He brings from President Payne and his associates the Hartsville contribution to the College Fraternity discussion. There is, he believes, a strong sentiment among the radical United Brethren in favor of uniting with the Wesleyans.

—Rev. Thos. M. Chalmers, whose failing health compelled him to give up pastoral work at Mundale, New York, has been spending a season with friends in Princeton, N. J. He goes to his father's home in Lawrence, Kansas, this week and promises a call at the Cynosure office. It must be regretted this earnest and faithful young minister is thus for a season shut away from the work of his heart. We pray that he may not be long indisposed.

WHEATON COLLEGE NOTES.

Prof. Falk, of Chicago, gave the opening concert on the new pipe organ in the chapel of Wheaton College on Monday evening of last week. His playing, which is so well known in Chicago, was very much admired. The instrument which was thus opened is a gift to the college of Mrs. L. H. Plumb of Streator, Mr. J. Q. Adams of Chicago, and other citizens. It is a beautiful instrument, made by Messrs. Cole & Woodbury of Boston, who were for many years associated with Messrs. Hook & Hastings. Those who have played and heard the organ say that it is a very fine one indeed, of its class.

The fall term of the college closed last week; examinations occurred on Thursday and Friday. The attendance has been larger than during the fall term of any year past, almost without exception, and the outlook for the winter term is very good indeed.

The next entertainment of the Wheaton Lecture Course is by Prof. W. C. Richards of Chicago; his lecture entitled "The Wonder World" in the afternoon, and in the evening his lecture called "The Wonders of Electricity." The Lecture Course this winter is very largely patronized, the audiences at the two entertainments so far given being in excess of those generally present.

The new building is not yet fully occupied, but a portion of it is to be in use during the next term. The chemical labratory has been prepared for use, and Prof. Whipple takes his classes into it for work, January 6th.

The consecration services at the opening of the College Chapel for service, after building of the organ and partial refitting of the room, was held on Sunday evening, Dec. 14th. Parts were taken by Rev. W. C. Bryant of the Baptist church, Rev. L. G. Lamb of the First Congregational church, Rev. J. T. Ladd of the Methodist church, Dr. A. H. Hiatt and Prof. H. A. Fischer of the College Church, Pres. J. Blanchard, and others. The sermon was preached by Rev. J. Brewer, pastor of the College Church. It was a very interesting and helpful discourse on the duty, privilege and profit of offering praise. * * *

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17, 1890.

A bill prohibiting the manufacture or sale of intoxicating liquors in the District of Columbia has been favorably reported to the House of Representatives, and if every member of Congress could have witnessed a scene that I did last night it would surely become a law.

It was in a store crowded with purchasers of holiday knicknacks that my attention was attracted by some unusual excitement in a knot of people gathered in front of one of the counters. Approaching I saw what I trust I shall never, never see again— a motherly looking woman, well, but not finely dressed, her hair slightly streaked with gray, carefully brushed back over a rather refined-looking face, in a maudlin state of intoxication, trying in vain to explain to a horrified young clerk what she wanted, and becoming boisterous because her disconnected language could not be understood.

But saddest of all was the sight of a dear, sweet-faced girl, child, not more than seven years old, who was clinging to the muddy and bedraggled skirts of the woman, and who, as the woman grew more excited as the proprietor asked her to leave the store, would tug at the skirts, and say, oh, so pitifully, "Mamma, oh mamma, please hush," repeating it several times in a tone so plaintive and touching that I saw strong men turn away with handkerchiefs to their eyes, while a number of ladies were sobbing as if their hearts were broken; and indeed it was a heartrending scene.

Finding that he could not persuade her to leave the store the proprietor sent for a policeman to move her, not to the station house, but to her home, if he could ascertain where it was. When the policeman touched her on the shoulder there was a momentary glimpse of intelligence in her reddened eyes, and fear and shame were plainly depicted for perhaps a second on her face, but it was gone as soon as it came and was replaced by a hideous drunken leer, as she turned doggedly to follow the policeman.

"Oh, Mr. policeman, please don't lock my mamma up," screamed the terribly frightened little girl, as she saw the big man with brass buttons leading the almost helpless woman out of the store, and she kept repeating it at short intervals. As the policeman left the store with the woman and child he turned his face towards where I was standing and two big tears were trickling down his cheeks. I shall always like that policeman for that exhibition of feeling.

Rev. Dr. Orville J. Nave, army chaplain at Fort Niobrara, Nebraska, delivered a very interesting address Sunday night on the Indians, their treatment and their grievances. He says the root of the present and of all past troubles with the Indians is the same—mismanagement. Dr. Nave's talk was anything else but complimentary to the whites, but was not in any sense personal. It is the system handed down to us from a past generation that he believes to be wrong.

Prof. L. J. Bertrand, late of the University of Paris, preached a powerful and instructive sermon upon the present attitude of France towards religion, here Sunday. He is the representative of the Evangelical societies of France and Switzerland, and his purpose in visiting the United States is to enlist the interest of the American people in the work of ridding France of infidelity and superstition and establishing in their stead the religion of Jesus Christ.

Senator Edmunds says his bill for the establish- of a national university in this city will not be considered at the present session of Congress. It also seems doubtful whether any of the measures affecting or concerning moral reform will be seriously considered, owing to the shortness of the session and the anxiety of the politicians to act upon measures in which they are more deeply interested. *

THE HOME.

A SONG OF NEW YEAR'S EVE.

With flashing of foam on a wrinkled sea,
And wisps of white in a clouded sky;
With shiver of snow on a bare-limb'd tree,
With winds that skurry and birds that fly,
With bells that toll by twos, by threes,
Across the mead and down the leas,
The old year lays him down to die.

With skulls that crumble and bones that bleach
On the ragged rocks of a mountain high;
With waves that thunder and smite the beach,
And wrecks that low on the wet sands lie;
With ships that stagger and then go down,
With men that struggle and gasp and drown,
The old year lays him down to die.

With women that weep and men that curse,
With girls that sob and youths that sigh;
With waving plumes of the hungry hearse,
With moans from lips that are hard and dry;
With hollow words in a minster nave,
With clods of earth by an open grave,
The old year lays him down to die.

Oh, day and night! Oh, morn and noon!
Oh, wild, unending human cry.
Oh, blood-red sun! Oh, pallid moon!
Oh, mocking life! Oh, cruel lie!
Shall all things now that draw life's breath
Go reeling onward still to death?
Shall all years lay them down and die?

* * * * * * *

With ripple of gold on a sunlit sea,
With glitter of silver in clouds on high;
With sparkle of snow on the strong brown tree,
With winds that sing and birds that fly;
With bells that peal by twos, by threes,
Across the mead and down the leas,
The new year comes across the sky.

With all glad things that smile and beckon,
With all sweet things that live and die;
With all good things that men can reckon,
With all strong things that strength can try;
With hope and love and undreamed graces,
With whispers low and warm embraces,
The new year comes across the sky.

Oh, deathless love, eternal youth!
Oh, glad, triumphant human cry!
Now God be praised for this one truth,
Though all else be a gilded lie;
When old things fade and old hopes fail,
And old years, dead, lie stark and pale,
The new years come across the sky.

HOLIDAYS AND THE DUTIES OF MINISTERS IN REGARD TO THEM.

Few persons, probably, realize how many objects have the term "holy" applied to them in the appointments and observances of men for professedly religious purposes. Besides the "Saint" which is so distinctively applied to the Apostles and Evangelists—though there is not the shadow of authority for it in the Bible—a list of twenty-five different objects is given in "Eadie's Ecclesiastical Cyclopedia," to which this term "holy" is applied, such as Holy Ashes, Holy Oil, Holy Candles, Holy Orders, Holy Thursday, etc., etc. Only one in the long list is ever found as a distinctive epithet in the New Testament, viz., the Holy Ghost. Yet, for all these, and the like there is claimed a kind of religious authority and sanctity, and they have been widely made to contain a mingling of some of the most sacred acts and observances, with customs and practices that are of the most worldly and trifling, and sometimes demoralizing and injurious, character or tendency.

Holiday is evidently the present accommodation or practical equivalent of the past Holy Day. But as the very pronunciation implies, it is stripped of much of its original meaning and is now largely a pleasure day of man, rather than a holy day of God.

Happily in this country the masses of the people have never yet made any extensive recognition of many of these days. In none of the directories for worship of the Congregationalist, Baptist, Methodist or Presbyterian churches is there provision made for an authoritative observance of any such days, and it is only in the Roman Catholic church and the churches that are most nearly akin to it in doctrine or in worship, that they are ever recognized or enjoined. But as men are always inclined to whatever will gratify the natural desires and feelings rather than the spiritual, the tendencies are ever, as facts are constantly showing, towards the multiplication of these days—a course which, it may be feared, often weakens or abuses the sanctity of true religion, by making it the excuse or the pretence of having such days at all, and thus have that religion practically held responsible for all the customs and practices that characterize and so often debase the countries and communities where they exist.

The one day of a professed religious character that in our country is most generally acknowledged, and perhaps least abused, is the now well known Thanksgiving day. In no sense is it claimed to be a fixed day, or one of express divine appointment, and hence its observance has been generally set forth from year to year as a recommendation or call rather than a positive command; and while it might be regarded as suggested to all under this dispensation by the great feast of Ingatherings under the former, yet it is in large measure a peculiarity of our own country. In other countries there have been occasional general thanksgiving days, as when the people of Leyden, in Holland, most devoutly observed October 30, 1575, as a day of general thanksgiving, as it was the first anniversary of their great deliverance from the most terrible calamities. Just after the first harvest was gathered in by the Plymouth Pilgrims of New England, in 1621, Governor Bradford sent out a call for all the colony to spend a day which he named in the month of October, in full-hearted thanksgiving to God. Thenceforward also—time after time the Puritan governors of the Colony of Massachusetts, and the Dutch and English governors of New Netherlands, or New York, pursued this course. Nearly every year during the Revolutionary war, and dark as things often were, Congress recommended some particular day for general thanksgiving. So did Washington, the first President, in 1789, for the general adoption of the National Constitution. And thus did several of our Presidents, occasionally at least, and many of the State governors quite regularly up to 1864, when the lamented President Lincoln instituted, near the close of the war, what has been observed throughout the country ever since—a National Thanksgiving Day.

That such a day, especially when recommended on the ground of the right of God to the grateful homage of his creatures and in public acknowledgment of the Lord Jesus Christ, is eminently becoming and dutiful, no one can in any sense justly deny. And no one can doubt that the general, cheerful public worship of God on that day, the social and genial good feeling which largely characterizes it—all attest the propriety and the value of it.

Beyond this day, however, there has been a disposition from a small beginning in the second century, and a much larger development in the fourth, to have days set apart with all the authority of church enactments which at first were apparently for religious observance, but are at length most marked for holiday purposes. Originally these days were founded upon acts or scenes in the life of our Lord or so-called martyrs and saints. In the second century the first recognition of such days began, as Bingham and Mosheim expressly declare, and that by having special regard paid to the anniversary days of the death and ascension of Christ. Two centuries later these days greatly increased in number, and that increase continued until, as in the Roman Catholic church alone, we have now a list of more than two hundred such days.

Even in the Church of England, and of her daughter, the Protestant Episcopal church in this country, there are forty such days. And in all these churches all the authority of the church in its rubrics and canons, and all the force of having one's reputation for piety be judged according as he is faithful in such observances, are brought to recommend or enforce them.

But are such days right, and ought they to be observed?

We unhesitatingly deny them, and this for the following among other reasons:

First. God has expressly appointed one day in seven—and only one—to be a holy day, and said of it—and said it of no other day—"Remember to keep it holy." In the very nature of the the case, any appointing of another day or of other days and by regarding them and calling them holy days, is an adding to this appointment of God, and cannot but be followed on his own solemn statement, with his adding to the doers of such things the plagues that are written in this book.

Second. There is not a hint to be found in the Bible of any other day than the Sabbath ever being intended to be a stated holy day. And hence, as no man was allowed to know where the body of Moses was buried, probably less men in subsequent ages might make their religious pilgrimage to the spot, or show some idolatrous or superstitious regard for it; so we may suppose God has never allowed men to know, with absolute certainty, the precise days for which, in several cases, these claims are set forth.

Take, for instance, Christmas—a day, which, it is assumed, commemorates the birth of Christ, and which, even in professed Protestant communities, as well as in the highest and most degraded walks alike of Romanism, many are coming so largely to practically adopt, and yet no man can tell when it was. Some day in nearly every month of the year has been claimed for it. Clemens Alexaudrinus, who died in the year 220, says it was on the 20th of May. Basilides fixed it on the 10th of January, and Bochart on the 22d of March. The learned Scaliger placed it in October, and the no less learned Dr. Lightfoot and Dr. Gill dated it in September. But in the clearest fact, no one knows from the Bible, or can know, when it was. Now is it reasonable that a day which was to be exalted to such an honor as this has been could have been left of God so absolutely unsettled and unappointed? And how, then, can it be but that there is a fearful responsibility taken when men practically regard it as if he had appointed it, and give themselves up to countenance or maintain it, with all its useless frivolities, and all under the pretence that it is for a religious purpose?

Third. We deny the right or authority of these days, because the practical tendency of them in any community is to weaken the hold which the Sabbath, as the day of the Lord, should have upon the conscience and the regards of men. In Roman Catholic countries, where there are so many holy days, there is scarcely any Sabbath. In the city of Havana, in the winter of 1840, a shopkeeper would not take pay from us for an article that we called for on Christmas, which came that year on Saturday, but asked that we should call the next day and pay, and when we replied we could not do business on the Sabbath, he immediately said: "Christmas holy day—more better than Sabbath day."

In our own city, comparatively recently, a lady, who is a devout member of one of the churches that has a large number of these days, reproved, with great earnestness and solemnity, her little boy for whistling on a Good Friday morning, and shortly aftewards herself had a large fashionable dinner party on the Sabbath.

Fourth. Because the multiplication of these days tends to demoralize and injure the masses of the people of any country. In any place where these days are largely observed the Sabbath largely ceases. Men are thrown on themselves. All doors of dissapation are opened. In the Island of Cuba, at the above-mentioned time, it was stated there were over ninety of these days in the year, during which, and because they were holy days, public works were generally stopped. Even the custom house was closed during those days. And while in the early morning, and perhaps forenoon, the churches were open and religious services were had, yet the afternoon and evening of each day, especially of the Sabbath, saw its Pasee crowded with promenaders. The bull-baitings were more frequent then than on any other days. All the theatres, operas and places of public amusements, even to those of the lowest and vilest character, were in full blast; and thus there, as in every community or country where such days are accepted and multiplied (as the tendency is always to have them do), the effect in the promotion of idleness, dissipation, and almost all personal and social evils, is so direct and mighty that they are evil, and only evil. But,

Lastly. As such days are nowhere mentioned in the Christian Scriptures; as there is not the slightest provision made for their observance, or the slightest hint of a command for it; and as their tendencies are so largely to evil, we believe that they are not in any sense of God, and cannot, therefore, be for good to man.

If then, in conclusion, it be asked, What are the duties of ministers in regard to the holy days? it must, we conceive, be answered, That in their popular sense, and so far as their religious character is concerned, they are not to be admitted at all. Let the day of thanksgiving, when properly recommended, be devoutly observed as an ordinance of God, set forth, for the time, in his provdence and Word. But of the large round of holidays, derived as many of them were from the worst and most debasing observances of heathenism and tending to demoralization and evil, let ministers stand aloof from them in word and deed, and urge their people to hold fast, not man's holiday, but God's holy day.—J. B. Dales, D. D., in Evangelical Repository.

A Methodist minister giving his reason to the editor of The People for not voting the Prohibition ticket, said that they were so few in number with such little prospects of success. The same minister the Sunday before pointed to the grand success of the progress of Christianity in China—38,000 Christians out of 348,000,000 of Chinese! This same minister would not have united with the Christian party in the time of Christ because they were so few in number and with so little prospects "of success". Oh, that we had more preachers with Christian courage!—The People.

THE STORY OF CANOSSA.

The reign of the German Emperor Henry IV. (A. D. 1066 to 1106) was a continued series of misfortunes, degradation and distress for forty years. His father, who had deposed three popes, one after another, died when he was six years old. He was kidnapped by an ambitious prelate and his early training was affected by the ambitious intrigues of the bishops of Rome and the nobles of the empire. He was crowned at 16. In 1075 he put down a revolution of the Saxons, who appealed to the Pope. Gregory eagerly espoused their cause, hoping thus to humble the proud German Emperor, and take some revenge for the unflinching authority exercised in Rome by his father. He summoned Henry to his tribunal at Rome to answer charges made by his enemies. Henry, irritated by this arrogance, assembled the German bishops and persuaded them to renounce the Pope. Gregory replied with the sentence of excommunication against him. The effect was marvelous, and revealed the power of superstition and subservience to Rome. Henry found himself deserted by friends and despised by enemies. The princes declared the ban legal, and the situation of the Emperor was dangerous. He could hardly exist, much less continue his reign, unless he could go to Rome and secure the Pope's forgiveness.

In the midst of the hard winter of 1077 the unfortunate monarch, accompanied by his family, began the painful and dangerous journey across the ice-fields of the Alps. Gregory was already on his way to Germany to be more near to the center of the conflict. The two met at Canossa, where the Pope was entertained at the court of Matilda of Tuscany. Henry begged that she would intercede for him, but the Pope would not be moved by promises, flatteries or tears unless the proud Emperor should do penance. Henry was obliged to comply with this demand, and stand from morning till night during three days (January 28th to 30th) in the severe cold in the courtyard of the castle, divested of all his imperial insignia, dressed in a common linen robe, barefooted and bare-headed and forbidden to taste food, imploring the Pope for forgiveness and mercy, and reciting the seven penitential psalms. It was not until the fourth day that the Pope allowed the unhappy and disfigured Emperor to appear before him, when, in the presence of his court, he absolved him from the ban with grave words and a haughty mien.

This act of uncommon and unprecedented severity was followed by the condition that Henry should appear at the next diet, to hear whether or not he should continue to be emperor, and even if restored, should in the future in every respect obey the dictates of Rome.

This remarkable triumph of the Pope over one of the most powerful rulers of the age struck terror to all others, and began an era of domination which lasted for centuries; and the event became so celebrated in history that it has given a name to all succeeding victories of Rome, whether over rulers and governments, or over opposing religious faiths. It is in this sense that the Roman Catholic press is rejoicing over the Protestant celebration of the religious festival days provided by the papacy as an agency for the spiritual subjugation of mankind. Thus the Catholic News replies to the Protestant sentiment, "We shall not go to Canossa," by showing that, in the celebration of religious festivals commanded by the Pope but not by Christ, Protestantism is on the road to the same humiliation to which Henry IV. was subjected. The News says:

"This is a very good cry, and it is well to shout it loudest when you are actually going. It produces a good effect. You can pick old Protestant books denouncing the mass, vestments, lights as theatrical; denouncing the keeping of feasts; denouncing set forms of prayer. Yet they are bravely getting back to them. Protestant churches have altars, vestments, crosses, even crucifixes, reredoses, rood screens, and people have learned to like them. They are not theatrical nowadays, but highly devotional, Scriptural, apostolical.

"Now, a Sunday-school convention, representing of course many Calvinistic bodies, has resolved to have special services on Christmas, Easter, Ascension, Pentecost, and Good Friday. What would the old Scotchmen who fought so bravely against the introduction of a bag of pipes, as they called an organ, think of all this? Moreover, Congregationalists, Presbyterians, Baptists, and others, are adopting or adapting the Episcopal marriage and funeral service. The tendency all along the line is to Canossa."

For half a century a temperance crusade has been carried on to redeem the holy land of man's body and soul, desecrated by the worse than Turkish tyranny of the brandy bottle and the whisky keg. Facts have been collected, parties have been rallied, legislatures have been besieged, great States have been put upon the witness stand, but where has the church been? Isolated pulpits have stood in battle against the crusaders; but the prominent pulpits, the fashionable pulpits, the wealthy pulpits are so intently watching the pews that they cannot see the drunkard, or if jogged and forced to look at him, they advise him to be more moderate, forgetful of Dr. Johnson's confession; "I can abstain, I cannot be moderate." To individual clergyman temperance owes much; but to churchianity, nothing.—Rev. Carlos Martyn, D. D.

If men will engage in this destructive traffic, if they will stoop to degrade their reason and reap the wages of iniquity, let them no longer have a law book as a pillow, nor quiet conscience with the opiate of a court license.—Senator Frelinghuysen.

COMMENTS BY E. E. FLAGG.

1. The young king.—Rehoboam had come to common advantage, that there seems to have been no the throne with this great and—in the East—unother heir to dispute his right. His manner of treating this revolt—for the language in which the people couched their demand shows that they were all ready for revolution—has led to the supposition that he may have been kept secluded in the harem till the period of his accession. It is almost certain that he was ignorant of the story of his father's apostasy, and the consequent rending of the kingdom by which only two tribes was to be left to the house of David, and the rest given to a young man from the ranks of the people. The courtiers who surrounded him would have been likely to keep this from his ears, and thus his ignorance was his destruction, as it has been that of many a young man, called to rule a nobler realm, yet all unwarned of the spiritual foes which lie in wait to rob him of his royal heritage and reduce him from a king to a slave. The youth of our land will one day be its rulers, if they are not taught the moral and physiological effects of liquor and tobacco; if they are allowed to think that it is a good thing for men to join a secret lodge and swear away their liberties on the altar of an unknown god, what will be the future destiny of our country entrusted to such hands. King Solomon's reign had this one redeeming virtue—wonderful in those savage, warlike times; it was a peaceful one from its beginning to its close. Yet such is humanity's insane love for the pomp and so-called glories of war that it is quite probable the national discontent would have been much less had the nation been taxed to gratify the ambition of a military despot, lavishing their blood and treasure in foreign conquests. It is noticeable that they do not ask to have the pure worship of Jehovah restored—only to have their taxes removed. They resemble many in the laboring classes to-day who clamor for mere material benefits, higher wages or fewer hours of work, while they care nothing for the question of Sabbath rest, the closing of the saloons, and other things which are of far more vital importance to the cause of labor.

1. Reho boam's bad advisers.—vs. 6–11. In Rehoboam's court were old men who had probably formed a part of Solomon's political cabinet, and at this crisis they gave the young monarch most politic advice. Had he listened to it, even if the catastrophe had not been averted, he would have justified his kingly right to rule. But it did not suit his despotic temper, and so he turns far more agreeable counsel to the younger courtiers who had grown up with him in his father's voluptuous, half-heathen court, and who perhaps had as little knowledge of the spirit and temper of the people as their royal master. Many a young man has gone to destruction by refusing to listen to the advice of those who were older and wiser than himself; nor is there any surer sign of national degeneracy than when old age is no longer honored, or its counsels heeded. We can see what had been the training of young Rehoboam. He had not been taught to feel for the sufferings of the poor and oppressed, to honor virtue, or respect age. The son of a heathen princess, he had been brought up in the traditions of Oriental despotism, and exposed to all the debasing influences of harem life. Can we wonder that he turned out one of the most weak and foolish kings of whom history gives any record. James II. who lost his kingdom for a mass is perhaps the nearest parallel. But Rehoboam lost his for a moment's display of childish and arrogant pride. Solomon little thought that it was not Jeroboam who was to work the overthrow of his kingdom, but his own son and heir. Rehoboam was given one chance to undo all his father's misdoing, and in spite of bad heredity and evil environment, may we not suppose that over against the most adverse circumstances God always sets some opposing influence for good, just as every current in air and sea has its counter current; and thus every soul be given its opportunity—its hour of grace, that once neglected may never come again.

3. The king's decision.—vs. 12–17. Miracles are not needed for the fulfillment of God's judgments. Usually they come as the natural consequence of sin, national or individual. When Solomon married heathen wives, and allowed the altars of a false religion to be erected in the very shadow of the temple of Jehovah, he laid the foundation for all the mischief which followed. He left a disloyal nation to be ruled over by an imbecile king, and both king and people were what those false worships had made them. The worship of a true God unites and consolidates a nation, but false worships disintegrate. The nations of Europe that are most turbulent and revolutionary prove this fact, and our own country may find in the lesson before us a note of warning.

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

—Mrs. Captain Roy, of Asheville, N. C,, has been intrusted by the National W. C. T. U. with the working up of a home and foreign missionary fund for the colored people of the South, with a view to evangelization in Africa.

—It is said that a wealthy gentleman of Liverpool has purchased the Garden of Gethsemane, near Jerusalem, in which the Saviour passed the night before his crucifixion. The purchase was made in order to prevent speculators from carrying out their schemes of building on the sacred grounds a hotel for the accommodation of visitors and tourists in the Holy Land.

—The city of Peshawur in the Punjab, N. W. India, has 80,000 inhabitants. The Afghans in it call themselves Bani-Israel—sons of Israel. They have a decidedly Semitic cast of feature, and might be the descendants of Jews transported to Media by Shalmaneser and Nebuchadnezzar 700 to 580 B. C. They are great enemies of idolatry and bigoted Mohammedans. The Gospel can be freely preached in Peshawur because of its strong English garrison; a handsome church is built; and English-speaking natives attend a literary institute. Before this wide door opened, the paucity of missionaries is the pressing distress. "Fields white unto harvest," is the summons proceeding from every quarter.—The Lutheran.

—A Japanese Christian church in Seto recently had occasion to build a house of worship. The building was completed in May; then it became necessary to report it to the government for registration. Hitherto every church building in Japan has been registered as private property in which Christian services would be held. No recognition being given to Christianity, its churches could not be registered as such. But as the Constitution makes all religions equally lawful, the pastor, Mr. Kato, and the local official, agreed that there was no reason for not registering this as a Christian church, exempt from taxations, with all the rights and privileges of a Buddhist temple. Such a request had never gone up to the government before, but they decided to try it. It was granted immediately. So this little country chapel is the first building ever registered in Japan as a Christian church.

—A conference of the Peace and Arbitration Association of the Society of Friends in the United States met in Richmond, Ind., Dec. 9, and delegates were present from the various Yearly Meetings. The conference was called to order by Daniel Hill, editor of the Messenger of Peace, and after devotional exercises, in which Barnabas, Hobbs, Dr. Richard Henry Thomas, and he took part, the following officers were chosen: Chairman, Dr. Richard Henry Thomas, Baltimore; Secretary, Emeline Underhill Burgess, New York.

—The canvass in favor of electing women as delegates to the Methodist General Conference is a very hopeful one, and there is a fair prospect for the ladies sharing in the deliberations of that great church congress in the future. The Independent reports a canvass of 112 districts, with 102,285 votes, of which 59,450 votes were in favor of the election of women delegates and 42,835 were opposed. There are 500 districts under the jurisdiction of the conference, and this encouraging showing may not hold good throughout all, but the ladies have every hope of success.

—The Methodists of Chicago are planning a great centennial anniversary for the 2d of March, 1891. On that day, 1791, John Wesley ceased the work of his marvellous earthly pilgrimage and went to his heavenly home. The meeting here is to be in the Auditorium.

—The new United Presbyterian church at this place was dedicated to the service of God, Sabbath, Dec. 7, Dr. T. H. Hanna, of the First church, Monmouth, delivering the dedicatory sermon.

—The United Presbyterian church at Bovina, N. Y., has been enjoying a remarkable season of revival. The Lord's Supper was observed Nov. 9th, the pastor, was aided Rev. R. W. Kidd. A deeper interest than usual was manifested by a very large congregation at the preliminary service. After the sermon some forty persons signified their desire to confess the Saviour and unite with his people. A quickening power, wielded only by the divine Spirit, seemed to accompany the preaching and singing and prayers, moving many to seek an interest in Christ for themselves and their friends. After the communion, meetings were continued the following week, until over fifty souls in all had been added to the church.

—Mr. Mills, the evangelist, goes from Peoria to Evanston, Ill., before the date of the Elgin meetings which have been noticed in these columns. There was much interest both among the students of Northwestern University as well as the citizens of Evanston in the preparation for the meetings, and strong hope that a great and genuine revival of religion would result. On a recent Sabbath the Congregational church at Oak Park, Ill., received eighty-six members as a part of the result of the meetings held by Mr. Mills in that place.

—Ira D. Sankey did not accompany Dr. George F. Pentecost on his evangelistic mission to India, as he is unable to leave this country on account of prior engagements. But he offered to pay the expense there and back of his friend, George C. Stebbins, who, it is hoped, may be able to go in his stead.

—From the new Minutes of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian church, it appears that Lafayette Avenue Church, Brooklyn, has the second largest membership of Presbyterian churches in New York and its sister city. The total is 2,250. The next largest is Fifth Avenue Church, New York, Dr. John Hall's, with 38 less. The Brooklyn Tabernacle heads the list with 4,372 members.

—Plymouth Church, Cleveland, Ohio, is a Swedish church and is the fifteenth Congregational church in Cleveland. It is said that there are about one thousand Swedes in Cleveland.

EDUCATIONAL NOTES.

—Mr. Trow Ahok, a prosperous merchant of Foo Chow, has just given $10,000 to found an Anglo-Chinese college in that city.

—Near-sightedness is overrunning the French people as much as the Germans. Among the senior boys in the different French colleges more than 46 per cent are near-sighted.

—Pres. Charles Kendall Adams, of Cornell University, has recently returned from Europe, and expresses a higher opinion of American colleges than of Oxford and Cambridge.

—The Columbia College library is said to be the best managed in the world. Writing materials are furnished for the visitors, and light meals are supplied to the students too busy to leave their work.

—At Guilford College, N. C., a recent revival was the means of the conversion of all but six students. The meetings were for both sexes and thirty males and nineteen female students were converted.

—At last they are about to introduce gas into the boys' dormitories at Rugby School. Up to now candles, stuck in a rude zinc candle-stick, have been used. Each evening it was the duty of the "fag" for the week to blow out the candle and put the stick outside the door.

—Senator Evarts has secured for Howard University, Washington, copies of all law books where there exist duplicates in the Congressional and judicial libraries. He has introduced a bill appropriating $16,000 annually for the maintenance of the law department. The theological department opens with promising classes.

—Temple College, connected with Grace Baptist Church, Philadelphia, Pa., has five hundred students enrolled. The number is smaller than last year. One of the distinctive features of the college is the missionary training and Bible students' departments. In the former department is given an opportunity for all who desire to devote their life to missionary work.

—University of Missouri, from its establishment in 1840 to 1890, had 9,000 students. Of the 500 academic graduates there are 75 teachers, 12 ministers, 20 bankers, 12 editors, 20 merchants, 134 lawyers, 30 doctors, 50 farmers, 137 in other vocations. Of the students 6,000 came from the farm. Of the 9,000, 3,150 have been self-supporting, 1,800 have come from families of the poor, 4,050 of larger means. The Rollins aid fund now amounts to $40,000. Available yearly, $2,000. In last twenty-five years, from this fund, $37,500 has been used. There have been 825 beneficiaries. There have been in attendance at University 500 girls. The first graduating class consisted of 2; the last, of 169.

—The catalogue of Princeton College, just issued, is larger than any preceding one. The following new names appear among the faculty: Woodrow Wilson, professor of jurisprudence and political economy; W. M. Francis Magie, professor of physics; Howard C. Warren, instructor in logic; John M. Brooks, instructor in mathematics; Louis E. Livingood, instructor in French and German; Robert H. Beattie, instructor in Latin; Robert W. Blake, instructor in Greek; Clarke B. Williams, instructor in mathematics; Robert E. Speer, instructor in Bible, and Ernest C. Richardson, librarian. Twelve more endowed scholarships appear in the list, making the whole number ninety, and a number of new prizes are offered in the departments of political history, English and mathematics. The whole number of students enrolled is 850, of whom 749 are in the under-graduate department.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

WASHINGTON.

The friends of Senator Ingalls are very much discouraged over the legislative situation in Kansas and have about given up all hope of his re-election. They have based their expectation upon a return of some of the Farmers' Alliance legislators to the Republican fold, but there is now very little prospect of it.

It is very evident that among the other reforms which this Congress will enact will be added a law to prevent undesirable immigration into the United States. A dozen bills or more have been introduced upon that subject. Some are crude and full of provisions which it would be impossible to execute; others are carefully prepared measures, and contain many meritorious provisions.

CHICAGO.

The Citizens' League has commenced a crusade against some of the leading down-town saloons. They have commenced suit against Potter Palmer, John B. Drake, George Hankins, Hannah & Hogg, W. J. McGarigle, and others for selling liquor to drunkards.

The failure of the private banking house of S. A. Kean & Co., last week was the first of its kind in this city for years. The house is well known throughout the country, as Mr. Kean was treasurer of a number of benevolent organizations. The condition of the bank had been critical since Dec. 1, but arrangements were being made to put it on a firm basis when the crash was precipitated by a small creditor putting his case in court. It is believed that the assets of the firm will largely, if not wholly, cover the liabilities.

COUNTRY.

It was reported Tuesday that a general movement for an eight-hour day will be made next May by the coal miners of Europe and America.

At Wichita, Kan., after the jury in the case of Nellie Mayers, charged with robbery and assault, had been out fifty-two hours Judge Balderson declared that he would have a verdict. At 3 A. M., he introduced a minister into the jury-room, who preached for an hour, prayed and withdrew. A verdict of guilty was reached immediately after.

The total number of children of school age in the State of Illinois according to the annual report of the Superintendent of Public Instruction is 1,163,440; total enrollment of scholars, 778,319; teachers 23,164.

A contract was let Friday at Chino, Cal., for a sugar beet factory with a capacity of 550 tons of beets daily and to cost over $500,000 and to be completed before August 1 next.

A mortgage for $16,000,000, executed by the Union Pacific Railroad in favor of Edwin O. Morgan and Oakes Ames, was filed at Fremont, Neb., Monday. The instrument was dated in 1869.

The great Pulitzer building, the new home of the New York World, was formally opened on Wednesday of last week. The occasion was marked by a brilliant display of fireworks from the lofty dome,

SCROFULA

Is that impurity of the blood which produces unsightly lumps or swellings in the neck; which causes running sores on the arms, legs, or feet; which develops ulcers in the eyes, ears, or nose, often causing blindness or deafness; which is the origin of pimples, cancerous growths, or "humors;" which, fastening upon the lungs, causes consumption and death. It is the most ancient of all diseases, and very few persons are entirely free from it.

How Can It Be CURED

By taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, which, by the remarkable cures it has accomplished, has proven itself to be a potent and peculiar medicine for this disease. If you suffer from scrofula, try Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"Every spring my wife and children have been troubled with scrofula, my little boy, three years old, being a terrible sufferer. Last spring he was one mass of sores from head to feet. We all took Hood's Sarsaparilla, and all have been cured of the scrofula. My little boy is entirely free from sores, and all four of my children look bright and healthy." W. B. DONALD KENNEDY

Of Roxbury, Mass., says

Don't write to me when taking the first bottle of my Medical Discovery. I know how it makes you feel, but it's all right. There are certain cases where the Discovery takes hold sharp, but it is the diseased spot in you it has taken hold of, and that's what you want. The Discovery has a search warrant for every humor, from backache to scrofula, inside and outside, and of course it makes a disturbance in your poor body. But the fight is short, you are better by the second bottle; if not, then tell me about it, and I will advise. I will, however, in the future, as in the past, answer any letter from a nursing mother.

Sincerely yours,

HOME AND HEALTH.

IMPLICIT OBEDIENCE.

I spoke to a lady the other day of her sister-in-law, who is one of my esteemed neighbors. "How well she is managing her four children without any nurse," I exclaimed. "She looks calm and untroubled, and yet I know she is delicate."

"She is a women of great decision of character," was the answer. "She has a system about the children. She never allows them to question what she says, and you know that saves a great deal of fret and worry."

The next morning I made a short call on the subject of our remarks. The lady came into the parlor, and after shaking hands with me, turned to take a chair and found that the two-year-old baby had followed her. "Why, baby, I did not know you were here! Run out to brother." "No, me don't want to!" "Oh, yes!" was the smiling answer. "Brother will play school with you."

The baby retreated slowly until she reached the middle of the room, and there she stood with her finger in her mouth eyeing her mother closely. The mother had turned in her chair away from me, and was watching the baby smilingly. It was evident that the visitor had been entirely forgotten for the moment; it was of the first importance that the baby should mind. I made a little note of the fact, too, that there was no "prunes and persimmons" expression on the mother's pretty face. She had simply spoken, and now expected the baby to do as she said.

"No," burst from the baby.

"Oh, yes," smiled mamma. "Brother is all ready to play with you."

The baby stood a moment longer, finger in her mouth studying her mother's face, and then ran out of the room. Then, and not till then, did the mother give me her attention.

The incident made such an impression on me that I want to write it for young mothers. I began with the theory that the best way to bring up a child was to reason with him, and in that way teach him obedience. I abandoned that theory long ago, and wish now that I had never held it for a day. When "implicit obedience" was brought to my mind I rejected it, largely because, under my new responsibility, I was newly conscious of my own fallibility.

"How can I," I would say to myself, "always know the right command to enforce?" Now I say to myself: "Be as nearly right as you can, but go ahead." Implicit obedience lovingly enforced is the only way to bring up a child, and "eternal vigilance" is its price —Christian Union.

A REMEDY FOR DIARRHŒA.

On the authority of Dr. Benjamin Clark, hot milk is given as a remedy for diarrhœa and is largely used in the West Indies. The milk need not be boiled, but should be taken as hot as possible without discomfort. Many persons are aware of the virtue of hot milk; but it is a most excellent remedy in many cases of dyspepsia, aiding in no way to make a person "bilious," as some are apt to think, and can often be taken hot by those who are unable to take it in any other way. When used as a dietetic remedy, milk should be made the chief article of diet, using grain preparations, and avoiding vegetables, fruits and meats. Hot milk is also, as we have often said, an excellent food for consumptives.

As Ayer's Sarsaparilla outstrips all other blood-purifiers in popular favor, so Ayer's Almanac is the most universally familiar publication of the kind in the world. It is printed in ten languages and the annual issue exceeds fourteen millions of copies. Ask your druggist for it.

The bald man's motto: "There is room at the top." This top may be supplied with a good crop of fine hair by using Hall's Hair Renewer. Try it.

Wonders

Are wrought by the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor in restoring gray hair to its original color, promoting a new growth, preventing the hair from falling, keeping it soft, silky, and abundant, and the scalp cool, healthy, and free from dandruff or humors. The universal testimony is that this preparation has no equal as a dressing, and is, therefore, indispensable to every well-furnished toilet.

"I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor for some time and it has worked wonders for me. I was troubled with dandruff and was rapidly becoming bald; but since using the Vigor my head is perfectly clear of dandruff, the hair has ceased coming out, and I now have a good growth, of the same color as when I was a young woman. I can heartily recommend any one suffering from dandruff or loss of hair to use Ayer's Hair Vigor as a dressing."—Mrs. Lydia O. Moody, East Pittston, Me.

"Some time ago my wife's hair began to come out quite freely.

Ayer's Hair Vigor

not only prevented my wife from becoming bald, but it also caused an entirely new growth of hair. I am ready to certify to this statement before a justice of the peace."—H. Hulsebus, Lewisburgh, Iowa.

"Some years ago, after a severe attack of brain fever, my hair all came out. I used such preparations for restoring it as my physicians ordered, but failed to produce a growth of hair. I then tried, successively, several articles recommended by druggists, and all alike fell short of accomplishing the desired result. The last remedy I applied was Ayer's Hair Vigor, which brought a growth of hair in a few weeks. I think I used eight bottles in two years; more than was necessary as a restorative, but I liked it as a dressing, and have continued to use it for that purpose. I believe Ayer's Hair Vigor possesses virtues far above those of any similar preparation now on the market."—Vincent Jones, Richmond, Ind.

FARM NOTES.

LARGE OR SMALL FARMS.

"The farmer may praise large estates, but let him cultivate a small one." Let this quotation from the Latin poet, Virgil, serve as a text for a few remarks on the size of farms that can be cultivated to the best advantage.

The question of the comparative profitableness of small and large farms is very frequently discussed in farm journals and magazines, but there does not appear to be any general agreement upon the answer to be given. There are many advocates of small, highly-cultivated farms, but the majority of farmers are, practically at least, in favor of owning as large a farm as they can pay for, and cultivating as much of it as they possibly can. Of course, this practice results in anything but highly-cultivated farms; and instead of getting thirty-six bushels of wheat to the acre, which is the average yield on good farms in England, where the land has been under cultivation for centuries, the farmer of this country is usually well satisfied with less than half that amount. Indeed, according to the American Encyclopædia, counties in this State, in which the average yield at the beginning of the century was 20 to 30 bushels to the acre, now return 5 to 7 bushels. Truly, there is no exaggeration in the suggestion of one of our farm exchanges that many a farmer could sell half his land and still raise as much on the rest of it as he now does on the whole.

There seems, therefore, to be plentiful room for doubt as to the advisability of working large farms. Of course, much depends upon circumstances. The price of land, the nature of the soil, the kind of farming to be followed, the cost of labor, and the proximity of a market for the produce. These, and other considerations, have to be taken into account, so that no invariable rule can be laid down to apply alike to all cases. The owner of new, rich soil in the West can work a much larger farm than can be advantageously cultivated in the Eastern States where the soil is worn out.

When laying their plans for the summer, farmers are apt to undertake more than they afterwards find they fully carry out. We have before us a letter from such a one. In the spring he determined to try to grow potatoes enough for his family, and corn-fodder enough for his animals in addition to a large amount of other work. Later on in the summer, he reviewed his work, found he had undertaken too much, and calculated that he would lose less by letting the potatoes and corn-fodder go in order to make a success of the other crops. He acted accordingly, and though the neglected crops turned out miserably, he congratulated himself on the general results. There is then this objection to large farms, that they are a constant temptation to the farmer to undertake more than he can put through at all well.

If thirty bushels of grain can, by proper care of the ground, be raised from one acre instead of from two, nearly half the cost of planting and of harvesting is saved, and also the interest on the value of one acre. The question, then, is whether the cost of properly caring for the ground more than counterbalances the extra cost of planting and harvesting occasioned by poor cultivation, plus the amount lost in interest on invested capital.

English farmers are forced by the dearness of land and the cheapness of labor to cultivate their land to the highest possible point and have until recent years done very well. American farmers are somewhat differently situated, yet it does seem that if farming can be made to pay in England it ought to be possible to redeem the worn-out farms of New England and to restore the agricultural regions of New York and Pennsylvania to their former prosperity. This year has indeed proved a very profitable one to farmers on Long Island and other sections in the East, and it may be hoped that a new impetus will thus be given to farming in this region.

We should be pleased to have brief statements of experience on this subject from our farmer readers. What is on the average the most profitable size of farms in the different sections of country for a man possessed of only moderate means and capacities?—New York Witness.

Women are not slow to comprehend. They're quick. They're alive, and yet it was a man who discovered the one remedy for their peculiar ailments. The man was Dr. Pierce.

The discovery was his "Favorite Prescription"—the boon to delicate women. Why go round "with one foot in the grave," suffering in silence—misunderstood—when there's a remedy at hand that isn't an experiment, but which is sold under the guarantee that if you are disappointed in any way in it, you can get your money back by applying to its makers.

We can hardly imagine a woman's not trying it. Possibly it may be true of one or two—but we doubt it. Women are ripe for it. They must have it. Think of a prescription and nine out of ten waiting for it. Carry the news to them!

The seat of sick headache is not in the brain. Regulate the stomach and you cure it. Dr. Pierce's Pellets are the Little Regulators.

We should esteem it a special favor if our readers would kindly name the Cynosure when answering any advertisement in our columns.

Old-fashioned ways in washing need strength in the washer and strength in what is washed. The modern way is to use Pearline. It saves labor for weak backs; it saves wear to delicate fabrics. It cleans houses as well as it washes clothes, and what it does, it does safely. Millions use it. Pearline is soap's successor; where soap fails, Pearline succeeds.

NEWS OF THE WEEK (Continued from 13th page).

and a luncheon, which followed its inspection by several thousand visitors. Speeches were made by C. M. Depew, Gov. Hill, Gov. Pattison of Pennsylvania, George W. Childs, and others.

The reported killing of Sitting Bull, his son, Black Bird, Catch Bear and four other hostiles, together with seven of the best police is confirmed. Before the firing had ceased three troops of cavalry came to the rescue of the Indian police, who were being routed by the skillful sharpshooters of the hostiles. They brought with them two machine guns, which were turned loose upon Sitting Bull's followers, and within five minutes the savages were out of range. The police were sent out to Sitting Bull's camp to arrest the old chief, as it had been reported that he had struck his tepees and was about to join the hostiles who have been pillaging along the White river.

Forty-one saloon-keepers were indicted at Keokuk, Iowa, Wednesday after fourteen days investigation.

Near Morrison, Ill., Monday, Robert Robinson, aged 70 years, shot and killed Miss Mary Wall, who had refused to marry him, and then committed suicide.

While drunk Sunday night, Francis Campbell, a farmer near Fortville, Ind., fatally shot his aged uncle and tried to kill his wife. He may be lynched.

At Burlington, Iowa, the ice in the river went out Tuesday, carrying with it the second pier of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy railroad bridge. The trains were not delayed, however.

A railroad wreck occurred at Bolivar, O., A corrected list of the dead shows six killed. The accident was due to spreading rails, caused by rotten ties on the trestle. Only the rear coach left the track, and it toppled over the edge and down to the water, thirty-five feet below. The coroner will hold some one responsible for criminal negligence.

Dr. Joel P. Justin's invention of a shell whereby dynamite can be thrown from an ordinary gun without fear of a premature explosion was tested near Syracuse, N. Y., Saturday, and proved a success.

Gov. Merriam of Minnesota has issued a proclamation declaring the adoption by the people of that State of the constitutional amendment making a verdict by five-sixths of a jury in a civil action valid.

The Indian troubles seem to be nearly over. Last week was one of alarms and reports of fighting which proved generally untrue. The Indians, who left Pine Ridge agency and were entrenched in the Bad Lands in the western part of South Dakota, have become divided, and 600 tepees have returned to the agency. There are 700 yet remaining hostile, and Gen. Miles hopes to secure peace without further disturbance.

A great storm swept the Atlantic States on Wednesday. In New York numerous accidents were caused by falling signs, but none of a serious character. A three-story frame building in Brooklyn was blown down and two boys were badly hurt. Small boats sunk at piers in both the North and East rivers, and the high tide and the gale have combined to make it difficult for the many ferryboats to run into their slips safely. A portion of the roof of Daly's theater was blown off. One man was severely injured. One of the iron smokestacks on the postoffice building was blown down and went crashing through the glass ceiling over the mailing-room, injuring the clerks. At Washington the storm was heavy and destructive. The flag on the White House was blown away and the flagstaff was broken. The heaviest snow in five years fell at Pittsburg, breaking the telegraph, telephone, and electric railway wires. Contact with the latter caused the death of three horses and serious injuries to several men. Business was practically suspended. At Staunton, Va., the snow ceased after a fall of three feet and was followed by rain. All trains are blocked. At Roanoke, Va., the roof of the blacksmith-shop at the Roanoke machine works fell in under a heavy weight of snow. One man of the night force was killed and eight were seriously injured. Over two feet of snow had fallen.

FOREIGN.

Prof. Koch has visited United States Minister Phelps at Berlin, for the purpose of assuring him, in view of the large mass of American letters and telegrams he has received, that it is impossible to depart from the principle of only giving the lymph to hospitals. Minister Phelps has sent a vial of the liquid to one of the leading medical institutes in the United States.

Emperor Francis Joseph has sanctioned the new law adding forty-five communes to the territory included within the city of Vienna. The population of the city now numbers 1,315,626.

M. Fallieres, French minister of justice, has instructed the procureurs generaux to prosecute the sellers of wines containing sulphuric acid. The sale of wines treated with plaster of paris will be tolerated until April 1.

Remi La Montagne, the murderer of Napoleon Michel, was hanged at Sherbrooke, Que., Friday. The excitement attending the execution caused the death of Sheriff Webb from acute heart failure.

Over eight hundred persons were killed recently by an explosion in a powder mill at Taiping, China.

A house in the native quarter of Bombay collapsed Friday, and thirty persons were killed and many injured.

A terrible accident occurred in Halifax, N. S., Friday, by which five men were drowned and several others had a narrow escape from death. A large gang of men were engaged in unloading coal from the steamer when the wharf gave way with fatal result to a part of the number.

The express train on the Intercolonial road, of Canada, met with a frightful accident Thursday. The scene of the wreck is an embankment at St. Joseph. At least six persons were killed outright, and a large number injured.

Word has been received that on Nov. 24 the city of Karlsbad, Bohemia, the well-known sanitary resort, was swept by a terrific flood from the rivers Tepl and Eger, the waters rushing through the streets and destroying many houses and bridges, depriving thousands of people of all they possessed. A relief committee has been formed.

A terrible accident occurred Dec. 17, at the Esconffiaul colliery at Hornu, province of Hainant, Belgium. A shift of eighteen men had entered the cage and the engine was started to lower them into the pit. Suddenly and without warning the rope broke and the men were precipitated to the bottom of the shaft. Every one of the occupants of the cage was killed.

A disaster has occurred at Cordova, where the canal has burst its embankments and destroyed hundreds of houses. One hundred lives are reported lost. Gen. Roca, the minister of the interior, has gone to the scene to superintend measures of relief.

Salvation Oil, the great liniment, should be a part of every traveling man's equipment.

THE BEST BLESSINGS OF THE

to all our readers! Our hands in theirs for a grander year of work for our great reform than ever. Our prayers with theirs for a deeper consecration to the name that is above every name; that there may not be left on earth one secret lodge to shelter the worship of evil spirits and to turn aside the dying eye from that Saviour Christ who was lifted up, as was the wilderness serpent-symbol, that all might look and live. We have no "cause" but his. Let us renew our vows to that cause, and gladly give labor and money and life itself, if so be that men may be reconciled to God through CHRIST.

The press reports have made us familiar with the Indian "Ghost-dance." It will ever be associated with the troubles of 1890, which are now, thanks to the careful management of Gen. Miles, likely to be ended without another Indian slaughter to be added to the long record of our national dishonor. But while in the Dakotas it means war and scalp-raising, in the Indian Territory it is the consummation of the Christmas festival. There it is simply a commemoration of the birth of Christ, which these untutored pagans enjoy thus, as much as more civilized worldlings do in their own way. This festival is a grand conception for the god of this world. It gives all classes of men an opportunity to confess Christ in the way best suited to their depraved tastes.

The Presbyterians of Chicago and vicinity have been grievously distressed with a quarrel and rupture in their church at Englewood. Rev. Mr. Williams, the pastor, was opposed by his church officers, but seemed to be sustained by a part of the church. The strife in the church was awful, rising once we believe to violence, and would more often had it not been for the presence of policemen. The civil courts were appealed to, and finally the Chicago presbytery had to compel a settlement and deposed both the stubborn preacher and the officers of the church. It comes to the Cynosure on good Presbyterian authority that the preacher Williams is a Knight Templar Freemason, and that the great strength of his adherents is from Freemasons outside the church. Such a condition might be expected in so bitter and prolonged a church quarrel. We beg to call the attention of the Interior to this solution of the case, which has so perplexed the Presbyterians of Chicago for months. If it be the true one, what is Dr. Gray's opinion of Freemasonry in the church? and what would be wisdom for the Chicago presbytery?

REV. B. T. ROBERTS.

Some expert will soon be needed to count the "third party" movements. This term, given the Prohibitionists in ridicule, may be yet the most popular. The latest is a call for a meeting in Cincinnati, Feb. 23, to which are invited "the Independent party, the People's party, the Union Labor party, the Federal and Confederate soldiers, the Farmer's Alliance, Farmer's Mutual Benefit Association, Citizen's Alliance, Knights of Labor, colored Farmer's Alliance, and all other industrial associations." Prohibitionists may feel complimented that their name is omitted in this invitation. It is made ostensibly in the name of the secret Farmer's Alliance, but really on the authority of an ex-confederate adventurer. The Alliance officers are to take party movements into future consideration.

Mr. Blaine may not be grateful to his Kansas friends. Their heads are turned with the secret Alliance successes, and last week away in the remote southwest quarter of the State, where men can barely live on their wind-swept farms, a few poor fellows worse crazed than their neighbors got up a grand secret society which shall bring them fame and dollars. They call this new affair the "Knights of Reciprocity." It is a political secret society, with all the pomp of lordly titles. Its founders fondly hope they are to secure a reform in elections, and reciprocal business exchanges between American nations and individual citizens. It is profoundly secret, and nothing even is given out for publication! Doubtless for the good reason that there is nothing in the whole affair worth printing, except as a warning to other demented people.

Just before Joseph Cook's late visit to Salt Lake City, Judge Anderson, before whom the examination into the character of the Endowment House oaths was made a year ago, rendered a decision which is crushing to the hopes of political Mormonism. The decision was rendered early in December and is reported in the Deseret Weekly, the Mormon church organ. Seven alien Mormons applied for naturalization papers. The ordinary qualifications were fulfilled in the case of each of these applicants, but each one also stated under oath before the court, that he was a member of the Mormon church in good standing. Judge Anderson refers to the examination made before him last year and the manifesto of Wilford Woodruff, and held that these men belong to a church "that requires an oath of hostility to the government" of which they seek to become citizen.s Although they had not yet taken the church oath, yet they stand on the same footing as those who have. Their application for citizenship was therefore denied. The Mormon papers are loud in their denunciation of Judge Anderson. If it stands the test of higher courts the decision renders the manifesto nugatory and every effort made by the Mormon church to secure practical independence, until its past record of hostility to the government is cleared up satisfactorily.

BY VICTORIA ALEXANDRA BUCK.

Father, when earth's tempests blow,
When thy ways we cannot know,
When life's fount beats faint and low,
Let me look to thee;
Oh! when heaven's banners fling
Blessings like a waving wing;
Teach my lips to praise and sing:
Hallelujah!

Hark! I hear a sound afar
Like the trampling steeds of war,
Or a rushing fiery car
Sweeping on its way;
Hark! a sound like battle-drum,
Splendor lightens all the gloom,
Like a conqueror see Him come,— Hallelujah!

Hark! adown the starry night
Rays of golden splendor bright
Burst upon the pilgrim's sight,
Brighter than the sun;
Oh! the halls of heaven ring
With the songs the angels sing;
Bells of glory ring and swing—
Hallelujah!

THIRD POINT OF FELLOWSHIP.

One of the most vicious features of Freemasonry is the "third point of fellowship," which returns in the fifth, sixth and seventh degrees, but makes its first appearance in the third.

There it is indicated by dramatic action in the murder play, when the candidate comes breast to breast with the master of the lodge. The lecture explains this to mean that a personal secret, Masonically given, is as secure in the breast of him who receives it as in his from whom it is received.

The same point is in the oaths of the third, fifth and sixth degrees, which bind the candidate to keep all personal secrets except murder and treason. "The exception proves the rule," and these two, selected from among crimes, are exceptions to secrets that are criminal. All others must be securely hidden, while, to reveal even these, is neither a Masonic obligation, nor, after the seventh degree, a Masonic privilege.

But hiding criminal secrets is itself a crime, hence, Masons are not only taught but even sworn to become, upon occasion, the meanest among criminals. The wickedness is emphasized by the oath of the seventh or Royal Arch degree, which swears protection to all secrets whatever, including murder and treason. Yet, even in the ordinary third degree, a Mason is liable every hour to be put in possession of a secret that will make him virtually a partaker of some detested crime. Any one who happens to have taken the same infamous oath and learned the same disgraceful signs can claim him for a silent slave.

He must wrong his nearest friend to serve the wicked interests of a scoundrel whom he never saw before. He cannot warn his best neighbor of approaching danger; he cannot save his most generous benefactor from impending ruin.

Not only must a Mason conceal burglary, incendiarism or any other crime already perpetrated, but he must protect even a criminal purpose and plan. Business schemes that will ruin men and make beggars of orphans, must be silently allowed to ripen. Power over a trusting girl, and the conquest of her virtue that is confidently anticipated, can be boasted by a villain with perfect safety, for a fellow Mason, wound in the serpent coils of the cable-tow, is disabled from giving her father or her brother the slightest warning sign.

This is a salient feature of that order whose "chivalrous principles" and "manly precepts" women sometimes admire as moths admire a flame.

Sworn not to name the real murderer, a Royal Arch Mason must let an innocent man lie in prison till his life wastes away, or die on the scaffold, leaving those who love him broken-hearted.

Whatever compels the perpetration of such deeds, is, in its own inherent nature, criminal. The third point of fellowship could not be better adapted, or more obviously intended, to secure a fellowship in crime. A vicious clannishness the substance of its teaching, a conspirator's oath its bond, it sets itself apart from humanity, meanly repudiating equal rights for the sake of unworthy advantage, and creating a fellowship of criminals and cowards that could not be more inconsistent with Christian fellowship or more hostile to the common fraternity of mankind. CRUCIFER.

SOUTH CAROLINA IN '32 AND '91.

BY REV. H. H. HINMAN.

The recent message of Governor Tillman of South Carolina demonstrates that the new, not less than the old, party in that State is fully committed to the policy of excluding colored voters from the right of suffrage. It is essentially a white man's party, and was elected by a meager minority of the whole people. The Negroes, I think, acted wisely in refusing to vote with the Democratic party. It was to them at best but a choice of evils, and prudence as well as self-respect required that they should choose neither. There seems to be great unanimity among the entire white population of that State on one question at least—the status of the Negro. To the South Carolinian there is no alternative between absolute Negro rule, with the incapacity, extravagance and misrule of what they call "the carpet-bag period," and the entire exclusion of all colored persons from participation in the government. They confidently appeal to Northern citizens and ask if we would be willing to submit to the combined power of poverty, ignorance and moral degradation? Considering that the colored population are considerably in excess of the white, there would be much force in their appeal, if this truly was the alternative. No system of rule by any class or race is in harmony with republican government, and no one who wishes well for his country can contemplate the rule of the ignorant and incapable over the wiser and stronger.

But did it never occur to our Southern brethren that in a republican government, where the civil and political rights of all are equally respected, such a state of things would be morally impossible? Is it not true that now, as in the past, there is an aristocracy of intelligence, wealth and capacity that always dominates, whatever may be the form of government, and that this is especially true in all free republics? The truth is, that the only barrier to peaceful co-operation in civil government in South Carolina is not the ignorance, the poverty or the moral incapacity of the Negro. These are far less than they were twenty years ago, and yet the opposition to the Negro vote is GREATER.

A precisely similar condition of society exists among the mountain white people of that State, and yet it has never been an obstacle to their exercise of the right of voting. The difficulty is in race prejudice, which is held as tenaciously and cultivated as assiduously as was the right of property in slaves half a century ago. So long as race antagonism is carefully cultivated, there may be danger that the Negro, like a poor blind Samson, may at least undertake to pull down the temple of liberty on the heads of his oppressors; but if his rights are accorded to him, and if the relation of the races is that of kindness and co-operation, there is no people in the world that will follow the leadership of superior intelligence with a more hearty cheerfulness.

In 1832 South Carolina, feeling strong in the almost entire unanimity of sentiment, undertook to nullify the laws of the United States. Because we had a strong national executive she was obliged to yield. In 1861 she seceded from the Union, and only a terrible war compelled her to return and to give up the system of slavery, which was declared to be the corner-stone of the Southern Confederacy. In 1890 and '91 she defies, not an act of Congress, but an article of the Constitution, to which she had given her solemn consent.

There is an approaching crisis in the history of the nation. History repeats itself, and South Carolina now, as in 1861, steps forth as the professed leader of the cotton growing States. The opposition to the freedom of the slave was even stronger than the opposition to the Negro's right of suffrage. That yielded to force, and it is very doubtful whether a milder method will now compel obedience to Constitutional law.

The education of the Negro, though of inconceivable importance to himself and to the country, will not settle this question. The opposition is not to ignorant, but to colored, voters. Doubtless, an amendment to the National Constitution making an ability to read one's ballot a condition of casting it, would do much to simplify the issue, but in any case the law must be enforced or our glory, if not our existence, as a nation is departed. Whether the passage of the Federal Election bill would do more than precipitate the crisis, remains to be seen, but I can but think that the argument of the President in its favor in his late message is most clear and conclusive. It is almost sixty years since our wayward sister State took her first step in disloyalty to the nation. May this be the last.

Berea. Ky.

HELPERS OF THE UNGODLY.

BY REV. J. W. HOYT.

"They that know it best speak most in its praise," was recently said in regard to "Free and Accepted Masonry." Now this may be true to some extent. The adherents of any false system always do the same, and are willing to make the greatest sacrifice for its support.

For illustration we turn to the days of Elijah. There were arrayed against him four hundred and fifty prophets of Baal. They were men that had the means of knowing the entire system of image worship, yet they under a pressure of circumstances yielded to the challenge of Elijah "that the God that should answer by fire, let him be God." This they would not have done if it had not been for the cry of the people which they feared, and if they refused, the victory would have been declared on the side of that great prophet, so the trial must be made. Masons sometimes attempt to defend their defenseless position.

Then again, when Paul was at Ephesus, by his preaching many were turned away from their idols; those that were benefited by that kind of craft began to find fault, and arrested some of Paul's assistants, and were determined to put an end to this opposition to their craftsman brotherhood. But the beloved brethren, by the help of God, were "rid out of their hand" for awhile at least. So we see again those that were the best acquainted with the nefarious brotherhood were loudest in its praise, for the same reason that secretists praise and uphold their system. Such was the brotherhood of the "great goddess of the Ephesians." They pretended to believe the falsehood that she had fallen down from Jupiter, and because of its mysterious birthright it should be sustained. So Masons begin their lying system by the false legend of the death and resurrection of "Hiram Abiff," a person that never had an existence only in the minds of deceived men for Satanic purposes.

We might call attention to many ways by which the heathen leaders terrorized those who might dispute their right to rule over them. So it has been with secretists since their first organization. They have killed and defamed, and when that could not succeed, they have done injury to the business of men of truth; and yet with great boldness they say, "It is as good if not better than the church." It may be as good as a "Masonic church." The church of Christ is the light of the world, and if they go into these secret organizations they become, like ancient Israel when she went into the various systems of idolatry, fallen and forsaken of God.

We might speak of the mysterious system of Mormonism organized for the sake of a preferred few and carrying on her degrading system under the cover of secrecy. So it is with the Roman Jesuit church, which is as essentially secret. If they cannot rule, they ruin. It is like the infamous liquor traffic, which makes itself rich over the ruin and disgrace of those who raised them to wealth and supposed honor.

The secret host desire all should become subservient to their wishes. All this is done for the sake of advantage, "having men's persons in admiration." But Christ and his followers did not pray and preach all for the sake of worldly advantage, but on the other hand they went about doing good to the needy and helpless, and thus showing the greatest patriotism of any class in the world. It did not become necessary to impose upon them horrid and blasphemous oaths in order to secure this loving obedience.

There can be no doubt that those who have risked their lives to show the corruptions of modern secret societies are men of undaunted courage and veracity, and are willing to sacrifice their lives if need be, so that the light may shine on this dark system.

Now what shall be done? Let workers constantly be employed until the nation becomes so thoroughly aroused to the nature and tendency of secret societies, that a nation thus quickened shall put away the evil and be saved forever from idolatry and its fatal consequences. For this let us pray with all our hearts, and ere long it shall be accomplished.

Ware, Mass.

CHOICE SELECTIONS FROM MASONIC AUTHORS.

(Compiled by George Fritschel, Leipzig, Germany.)

Freemasonry is far from claiming decison between Luther and Rome, but it asserts that faith as the church proclaims it is like every work of usurpation, an evil; is the fountain of all the sufferings which afflict mankind.—Count of Bresslar in Banhutte, 1865, p. 276.

Freemasonry is by no means and under no condition an exclusively Christian institution; it is a union of humanity, and rises as such high above every form of faith; its creed is eternal love, the love of God, embracing equally all men on the whole globe with equal brotherly love.—Heribert Rau, Mysteries of a Freemason, Part I.

Your eyes were opened [in initiation] for the light of eternal life: fear of God, love of men, purity of morals. Then the degree of Entered Apprentice is nothing but a symbol of the spiritual regeneration of man, who raises himself from time to eternity.... To-day [in Master Mason's degree] you are to learn how man, after he has earnestly striven for his own perfection and has truly maintained his love, is enabled to die in peace.—Marbach, Agenda M. B., p. 21.

We who are initiated Freemasons know that to become a Freemason means to become a man who has received a spiritual light....that the light which we give is again a symbol of that light in which we shall dwell when we have passed to perfection.—Marbach, Katechismusreden, p. 117.

Many have drawn the conclusion that Freemasonry is nothing else than a beneficiary institution, which offers benefactions in alms and gifts and various pecuniary advantages. Yes, even in lodges Freemasonry has been described as such. ....We are, on the contrary, entitled to raise the question, Is it in any manner in accordance with the objects of Freemasonry to grant pecuniary assistance, and not against them?—Marbach, Katechismusreden, p. 89.

These hands which are joined here will decay in the tomb; but the promise which you, my brother, have given will save your soul from perdition if you will hold it.—Marbach, Agenda B., p. 42.

You have risen from the dead, a living man among the living. Therefore, my brother, adorn yourself with the sprig of okazia, which is symbol of purity of the heart and of immortality.—Marbach, Agenda M. B., p. 63.

Not few see in Masonry a religious and Christian institution; they base their view upon the high esteem which Masons have in regard to the Bible; upon the regard which Masons have of the Gospel and Apocalypsis of St. John; a supposition which has risen from the too frequent use which the brothers in England and North America make of this book.—Acerellos, Die Freimaurerei, p. 5.

WATCH-NIGHT.

Watch, brethren, watch!
The year is dying;
Watch, brethren, watch!
Old Time is flying.
Watch as men watch the parting breath,
Watch as men watch for life or death.
Eternity is drawing nigh;
Eternity, Eternity!

Pray, brethren, pray!
The sands are falling;
Pray, brethren, pray!
God's voice is calling.
Yon turret strikes the dying chime;
We kneel upon the edge of time.
Eternity is drawing nigh;
Eternity, Eternity!

Praise, brethren, praise!
The skies are rending;
Praise, brethren, praise!
The fight is ending.
Behold, the glory draweth near,
The King himself will soon be here.
Eternity is drawing nigh;
Eternity, Eternity!

Look, brethren, look!
The day is breaking;
Hark, brethren, hark!
The dead are waking.
With girded loins we ready stand
Behold, the Bridegroom is at hand!
Eternity is drawing nigh;
Eternity, Eternity!

HURRAH FOR KANSAS!

ONE AMERICAN STILL ON DECK.

AVALON, Mo., Dec. 20, 1890.—(Special to Cynosure.)—Herewith is an item found in a late issue of the Kirwin (Kan.) Chief, to-wit:

"Senator Harkners of Clay county has been instructed by the Alliance to vote against Senator Ingalls, and he replies as follows: 'When I surrender my citizenship and my manhood and enter an oath-bound society which is to control my every thought and acknowledge the right of any ignorant or bigoted supreme chief to dictate to me, then, perhaps, I might pay some attention to such resolutions as were adopted in Dickinson county. But not until that unfortunate hour shall have arrived will I submit to such a degradation. I am always willing to pay due attention to the wishes of my constituency as expressed as the wishes of American citizens, but cowls, hoods, grips, signs and passwords do not enter into my conception of the rights and duties of an American public officer, nor will I give them the slightest attention.'"

The foregoing shows that at least one representative American is still on deck of the Kansas ship of state. But is he the only man in the political arena who dares challenge and defy the un-American lodge system? While thousands are cringing and truckling like whipped curs and born cowards before the dictating, bull-dozing lodges, let the brave words of Senator Harkners be rung and re-rung through the length and breadth of our land until they reach the remotest hamlet acknowledging allegiance to the glorious Stars and Stripes. The lodge treason must go if American liberty is to survive. Courage! Up and at the oath-bound slaves and despots.

HARTSVILLE COLLEGE.

Hartsville, Bartholomew county, is in the high region of Indiana, fifty miles southeast of Indianapolis. The upper courses of "Clifty," the stream mentioned in the "Hoosier Schoolmaster," run on two sides of the village. The community is healthy,—physically, morally, and spiritually.

Hartsville College is controlled by the conservative part of the "United Brethren in Christ." The influences are actively Christian, with no hint of sectarianism. The intellectual and moral atmosphere is helpful and bracing.

The institution offers classical, scientific and Normal courses of study. Connected also, are a preparatory school, and business, music and art departments. Increasing interest among the friends of the College is resulting in increased apparatus and endowment.

THE HARTSVILLE COLLEGE FACULTY ON COLLEGE SECRET SOCIETIES.

Perverse human nature is cowardly. Screened from the eye of authority or of public opinion, it puts on a brave front, shrinks from no excess, and scruples at no means to compass its aims. Hence the abusive and dangerous initiations of secret societies. Hence the wire-pulling and scheming that would not be risked but for the support of a pledge-bound organization. Then follow naturally the antagonisms to authority and the jealous ruptures of friendships, so common in colleges where the natural social relations of students are interfered with by these artificial, pledged relations.

In my own alma mater two flourishing open societies developed and trained the students' mental powers for many years. Then came the secret fraternities and the era of good feeling was at an end. Wholesome emulation yielded to place-seeking rivalry. The fellow-feeling that holds the members of a class together was gone. Few classes escaped without serious rupture,—so serious in some as not to be healed before graduation.

How much of the scheming of modern politics is due to the training received in secret societies cannot be known, but that such influences are potent will not be denied.

All my experience and observation lead me to condemn the principle of pledged secrecy as a basis of organization. To speak in the very mildest way, it puts a premium on bad management. It puts just dealing at a disadvantage. It is in direct opposition to the "law of love," to which God holds all men responsible.

Respecting this question, Hartsville College has an enviable history. Founded and controlled by a church whose disciplinary law prohibits "secret combinations," the fraternities have never been admitted. Three open literary societies unite and vie in helpfulness. All is peace and harmony.

E. G. PAINE, President.

Aside from what might be said against the principle of secret organizations and their influence upon society in general, it seems evident that they are especially injurious to the health and general prosperity of any institution of learning in which they exist.

It may readily be seen that in institutions where they are found, the caste spirit among the students is encouraged, time and energy are wasted; and at the same time no appreciable good is derived that could not be accomplished in some other way.

I can think of nothing that can be said in their favor; I can think of no necessity of a student that demands them, and where they exist I can see no good results that may be attributed to them; therefore, they waste time, energy, and money. I do not hesitate to conclude that they are a positive injury.

In our own State is a fair example of the results of college secret societies. The institution to which I refer supports a number of these organizations, and if one will take the pains to investigate the causes of some of the recent disturbances perpetrated there, he will find, I think, that they are traceable to some one or more of these organizations.

D. R. ELLABARGER,
Professor of Mathematics.

Any organization with a purpose so narrow as to exclude from its benefits all those who happen to be without its pale, does not partake of that public spirit of which Americans love to boast; certainly, it is not governed by the spirit of Christianity. If this be true, college secret societies fail to subserve the best interests of our young people.

My knowledge of these associations has convinced me that they not only fail to honor the noblest principles, but are decidedly evil in their tendencies. No student can make a practice of showing partiality among his fellows, on the ground of talent or popularity rather than of good character, as these organizations do, without dwarfing himself and cultivating a spirit which may make him a bane to society. Such discrimination should have no place in any community; for all honest men are peers and should be treated as such.

Selfishness also, the parent of so much misery, plays a prominent part in these societies as a "ruling passion;" thereby the grand conception of Christian benevolence is narrowed to one of self-gratification and party gain.

There is nothing to be dreaded more, perhaps, than the loss of moral sensitiveness which these organizations cause. The repeated violation of the higher laws of one's nature is not left unpunished, and the student, who once entered the minor orders of the college with hesitating feet, now is readily enticed into evils far more flagrant. These considerations make me decidedly opposed to college fraternities.

I. TERBORGH,
Professor of Natural Sciences.

When I was a boy of fifteen and attended a seminary, the only literary society was a secret society. The members asked me to join. I told them that I could not promise to be a faithful member, when it was not possible for me to find out beforehand to what I was subscribing. I said, "If you will tell me your laws and customs, I can then tell you whether or not I will join." They would not reveal, and I would not join; but a number of boys and young men organized another society with open doors, which furnished all advantages obtained in such associations, without a sacrifice of principle.

College secret societies are not secret because they have something too good to tell; everybody knows that; and if they have no guile that requires the bolted door; if they are not schemers against their fellows, the faculty and townsmen, pray why the folly?

Granting them to be honorable in their purpose, can we not see a reason for the secrecy in this, that the major secret societies which are not organized for righteous ends, and so need the dark, seek in every way to make secret societies popular. If every old ladies' tea party and young ladies' literary circle, every debating club and farmers' gathering and temperance union could be put under lock and guard, the public would look with little thought upon these mighty powers, which are laboring in the dark to wield the affairs of society to the advantage of the organized.

Let every college be true to the doctrine of love to the neighbor. Then, in teaching that a republic is a government which is not for any race, or rank, or clan, but for the uplifting of all, they will frown upon all advances of the enemy to equal rights.

O. W. PENTZER,
Prof. of Latin and Greek.

It is reported in one of our exchanges that, at an Odd-fellows' memorial service held not long ago in a village near Boston, Mass., the minister announced this as his text, "Where two or three are gathered together, there am I in the midst of them." It seems almost incredible that any one who claims to be a minister of the Gospel, should be guilty of such perversion of the Scriptures. It ought to be evident to every one that the Christian religion will not harmonize with the worship taught by the secret orders.

NEW ENGLAND LETTER.

Modern art and literature an enemy of war.—The president of Harvard College on scientific temperance instruction.—Massachusetts law and the secret endowment orders.—One white ribboner and the Sons of Temperance.

One noticable characteristic of the art and literature of the nineteenth century—at least of the latter part of it—is the fact that instead of teaching the glory of war as did so many of the noted writers of a century ago or later, as for instance Sir Walter Scott, there is a decided inclination to teach, at least negatively, the blessedness of peace. Even France, which is popularly supposed to be the most ambitious for military distinction of any nation, has given to the world through her artists and writers like Dore and Erckman-Chartrian, some of the most vivid pictures of the misery and degradation with which the laurels of her great generals are always bought; and the most ringing manifesto ever put forth in the interest of the Peace and Arbitration department of the World's W. C. T. U., has come from the pen and heart of a French woman. It seems as if the least impressible who viewed the Verestchagin collection lately on exhibition in Boston, must have been converted to the peace doctrine; and now we have the new Polish novel, "Fire and Sword," teaching the same lesson that the Russian painter does on his gigantic canvasses, and so vividly delineating the horrors of war, that as a critic remarks, "it gives one the feeling of walking over a field of battle among the wounded and unburied dead." Real noble art is always in advance of the times, and the science of teaching and of government ought to be. But in America we see children taught the military drill, and vast sums appropriated from the national treasury for warlike equipments and defences, the need of which exist only in the minds of politicians, and not in that of the statesman or the true political economist.

Certainly the president of Harvard College ought to lead the van in liberal and progressive ideas, yet he has recently stated his opinion that the study of physiology and hygiene in the grammar schools had better be given up until we can introduce perfect text-books and all the needful apparatus for such instruction. This is surely admirable logic, and I do not wonder that it has brought down upon him the keen lance of more than one quick-brained W. C. T. U. woman. The style of instruction in the Middle Ages, or even that which was in vogue in the fore part of this century, would hardly do now, but our ancestors, fortunately, held a different theory of education from President Eliot, and believed that imperfect methods of teaching were better than none at all. It is to be regretted that it is against scientific temperance instruction that his remarks are especially directed. He writes it down as a failure, because some of the text-books used contain errors of fact and wrong premises. But why imperfect methods of teaching the evil effect of alcohol and narcotics should be so much worse in this department than in any other branch of education, he does not tell us, and certainly he ought. Such foolish talk does not do the head of Harvard College any credit.

Envyings and jealousies are the bane of a good cause, but they often serve an excellent purpose in keeping down the growth of evil. For instance, it is largely owing to the jealousy felt by the Iron Hall, the oldest endowment order in the field, towards the other fraternal associations which have started later, that the Massachusetts Legislature finally amended the law so as to prevent the formation of any new so-called insurance companies. I notice that last Saturday's Transcript, in a lengthy article on this subject, calls attention to the fact that in spite of this law new companies are being formed every day, but it is under charters from other States, principally Maine and New Hampshire. The general statutes, chapter 329, acts of 1890, orders that "All corporations organized under the laws of another State or country carrying on a banking, mortgage, loan and investment or trust business within this commonwealth, shall indicate the State or country in which such foreign corporation is chartered or incorporated upon all its signs, advertisements, circulars, letter-heads, and other documents containing its name, in letters equally conspicuous with the name of such corporation."

This statute, although the penalty for its violation is $1,000, remains practically a dead letter, and the Transcript calls for legal action against such corporations, and also an amendment for bidding all organizations, which are debarred from incorporation in Massachusetts, from doing business there. It is something, that one Boston daily, and that the most literary and high-toned, has the courage to lift up its voice against these swindles. It is well to know the law on this point. If one of these companies could be prosecuted, and a legal decision rendered against it, it would be as the hand-writing on the wall to all the rest. There is one called the Non-Secret Endowment Order, intended for the benefit of those who object to the secrecy feature, but this is only a proof that the others are secret organizations in spite of their frequent denials. I am reminded of the experience of a friend who was strongly urged to join the Sons of Temperance. She was an earnest white ribboner, with much personal influence in the community where she resided, and willing to help in every good word and work. She objected, however, to joining a secret temperance society, but was met by the assurance that it was not secret, or to quote Miss Willard, "their greatest secret was that they had no secret;" and she at last consented to join, attend the meeting and pay her dues—but with one proviso, that in her case there should be no secret initiation. It is needless to say that they refused to admit her on these terms, and this white ribboner, being a sensible woman, went on her way rejoicing, and with her prejudices in favor of open temperance work nowise diminished.

"What an intelligent looking audience," remarked a lady to me on the first evening of our late Boston convention. A religious reform is always a winnowing process. It comes like a strong angel of judgment to sever the wheat from the tares. But more noticeable than anything else to me was the number of young ministers among the speakers; and I imagine that many an old veteran of the cause, as he heard their fearless, ringing words, thanked God, like Simeon, and said, "Mine eyes have seen thy salvation."

ELIZABETH E. FLAGG.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23, 1890.

Representative Cutcheon, of Michigan, who has made an enviable record during the eight years he has served in the House of Representatives by being always ready to aid and champion any measure calculated to help the cause of religion and temperance, has stirred up a hornets' nest in Washington's social circles by an address which he delivered last Sunday night in this city in which he said that the social customs of Washington were responsible for much of the evil resulting from the use of intoxicating drinks; that men and women being tempted beyond what they were able to bear, lost their moral balance and drifted into lives of sin, and that he knew of no other city in the country where there is as much wine drinking.

Washington society resents this truthful arraignment, and the most influential local newspaper in the city defends it editorially against Mr. Cutcheon's charge by saying that "it is evident that Mr. Cutcheon knows very little about the other cities in the country, or about Washington, either, for that matter. It is the uniform testimony of those competent to speak on the subject, that Washington is one of the most temperate cities in the United States."

Who are the persons "competent to speak on the subject?" I have heard the resident agent of one of the largest wholesale liquor establishments in this country say more than once that Washington purchased more wine than any city in the United States of equal population. This man has grown rich by selling liquor to residents of Washington. Is he not "competent to speak on the subject?" And if more wine is purchased by Washington than by any other city of equal population, is it not fair to presume that there is more wine drinking here than in any city of equal population? I think so; hence I think that Mr. Cutcheon's statement is a true one, although as a Washingtonian of many years' residence I am ashamed to write it.

Mr. Cutcheon's address contained other statements that are worthy of the most careful consideration of those interested in moral reform. Here is a gem: "Temperance and religion are one and the same thing. The essence of a Christian life is self-denial, and that is what religion means. It is temperance, not in the narrow and restricted sense in which the word is often used and understood by people, but in the broader view of a self-restraining power, by which not only the desire for drink, but all of the evil propensities of men are brought into complete subjection." Concluding, he said: "The children are the hope of the temperance cause. If I could make a total abstainer of every boy in this audience before he reaches the age of twenty-two, I should feel that I had accomplished a work of wondrous magnitude. That the boys and girls might be fully informed of the many dangers incident to the use of strong drink, I introduced in Congress some years ago the bill, which became a law and is now in operation in the district of Columbia, providing for temperance instruction in the public schools, and I feel that if I had done nothing else this one thing is worth my eight years of service in Congress."

It is expected that Mr. Harrison will, in a few days, issue a proclamation inviting the nations of the world to take part in the Columbian Exposition at Chicago. Petitions are still coming in requesting Congress to prohibit the opening of the Exposition on the Sabbath day, but so far Congress has shown no disposition to comply with the request, not even to the extent of introducing a bill or resolution for that purpose. This opportunity of showing to the whole world that the United States is a Christian nation must not be lost through indifference. It is always safe to assume that Congress will be indifferent on matters relating to moral reforms of any kind until it begins to feel the influence of the people throughout the country. This matter may therefore be said to be now in the hands of the people. Let them act.

—The colleges of the country are shown by statistics compiled by Dr. Dorchester, to have vastly improved in their religious tone during the past sixty years. "Indifference, and, in many cases, blatant antagonism to evangelical religion, was the rule in the educational institutions of America at the beginning of this century. In 1830, out of 2,633 students, in twenty-eight colleges, 693, or twenty-six per cent, were professing Christians. In 1350, the proportion in thirty colleges was 38 per cent. In 1865, in thirty-eight colleges it was 46 per cent. In 1880, in sixty-five colleges, with 12,063 students it was 50 per cent. We confidently believe that there will be an even better showing when the statistics can be brought down to 1890.

REFORM NEWS.

FROM BEREA TO FISK.

TOUR OF THE N. C. A. COLLEGE AGENT.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—On my arrival at Berea I met Rev. H. H. Hinman, who is laboring to advance universal church union, and had the privilege of rooming with him during my stay. He, with others, is engaged in publishing a monthly called The Reunion. Rev. J. G. Fee invited me to preach on the Sabbath before the communion; and in the evening I spoke again on reform; and I think there was no dissenting voice in the college or in the church as to the doctrines enunciated.

Dr. W. B. Stewart has been chosen as successor of Pres. E. H. Fairchild, and he was inaugurated on the 12th of October last. The college seems to be prospering; and it is doing a very important work among the mountain whites and the Afro-Americans of Kentucky. A good beginning has been made in industrial education here. Valuable additions to the printing establishment opens the way for more students to learn the art of printing. And they hope soon to form classes in carpentry and blacksmithing and other trades. The lady principal gives regular instruction in making and mending garments to the young ladies in their hall.

In addition to the preparatory and college departments, there is a class in homiletics of ten young men who are preparing for the ministry. Upon the whole it is wonderful what God has wrought through the instrumentality of Bro. Fee and his associates in this region. They have the Carpenter anti-secrecy volumes in their library; and a strong temperance sentiment prevails in the college and town, although surrounded by the whisky-making region of central Kentucky.

At Richmond I found that Pres. Logan of the Central University was absent; but calling upon Prof. W. Willson, he invited me to dine with him, and as librarian he agreed to receive our anti-secrecy literature. On Sabbath evening I preached in the Mission Baptist church of Richmond, Rev. Mr. Campbell, pastor, to a large and attentive audience.

I left Berea on the 17th inst. in a snow storm, while the ground was white. In going to Bowling Green the trains were behind time, and connections were lost, as is so common in this region, and I was compelled to tarry all night at Roland. Stopping at the private boarding-house of Mrs. Mary I. McAfee, I found them an earnest Christian family. I read the Scriptures and prayed and we took sweet counsel together, and had that evening a glad and joyful conference meeting.

The next day I arrived late, the train being an hour and a half behind time, at Bowling Green. The books which we sent some time ago to Ogden College appeared to be in good condition; but Pres. Oberchain thought the students did not read them much; and I noticed that the students were generally rather young. Mrs. Oberchain said that she enjoyed reading the Cynosure very much while it came to them, but she did not see it now.

I reached Nashville, Tenn., on the 19th, and took an electric car to Fisk University, where I was very kindly received. Pres. Cravath was gone to a trustee meeting in New York City. It must have been a prosperous journey, for they are to have a theological department with a new hall and theological professors. But the most singular thing—they have a new company of Jubilee singers to help raise the funds. They sung one night in Brooklyn, N. Y., and obtained $1,500, with the promise of the same amount each year for five years. Pres. Cravath told me that they are about to build a good-sized church, which is much needed to accommodate the University.

On Sabbath evening I preached in the Jackson Street Congregational church, Rev. H. H. Proctor, pastor. I find that my old friend and fellow-laborer, Bro. A. F. Smith, has moved with his family to Delta, Ohio, which is quite a disappointment to me. I remain as ever yours,

S. F. PORTER.

A HOPELESS CASE.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 26th, 1890.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—It seemed best for the present to spend but one week in Philadelphia. Further work will be arranged there later. Friends manifested an undiminished interest in N. C. A. work, and much was accomplished considering the short time spent.

The second discussion in the Second Colored Baptist church here seemed to be discouraging to the truth, though the result may be better than I know. Good attention was given to what was said. As two-thirds of the audience were from thirty minutes to an hour late, few heard all that was said, and a still smaller number seemed to comprehend the argument or realize the seriousness of the subject.

I endeavored to impress the audience with the fact that I was there to address them as a Christian, expecting to answer at the judgment bar of God in a few years for what I told them. This was a serious matter and one which affected the eternal interests of the souls present!

The light talk was on the other side. The pastor taking some time to sell copies of a speech he had made, and a number of things, tended to divert the attention and make the discussion appear to the surface-thinker as a mere battle of words. Of course no good comes to the one who attends such a discussion for the mere purpose of seeing who makes the best speech.

Other things occupying so much time, there was but little for general discussion. One spoke favoring the paper which I read. One spoke on the other side, and one killed time rambling around on various things he happened to think of. My opponent did not try to disapprove any of the propositions I had made. His attack was general and consisted largely in assertions which he did not attempt to prove. Not wishing to misrepresent him, and desiring to show to those who do not know the folly of Masonic arguments, allow me to quote a few which I took down:

"The Gospel is a stumbling stone to some; so is Masonry to those who do not understand it." As Masons, "we are taught to practice truth and be in union with everybody." "Masonry preserved the Bible." "It was organized among the Jews in the dark ages." "Your doors would be alarmed every day with beggars were it not for secret societies," etc., etc. The speaker pointing to me, said, "You know you were taught truth in the lodge."

The question in my mind is, How can I reach such a man with the truth? Is there any way to get him to see it. His mind is so befogged with error that he can not distinguish it; his ignorance so dense that he cannot comprehend a plain argument. He imagines he is arguing when he is but repeating lies that have been told him.

I am convinced that nothing but the regenerating power of an almighty God can make the blind to see, the deaf to hear, and the light shine into darkened hearts. Yours for Christ and reform,

W. B. STODDARD.

CORRESPONDENCE.

A REMARKABLE WORK IN MEMPHIS.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—Since I last wrote you I have had cause to rejoice in the wondrous work of God in convincing men and women by the plain, persistent preaching of the Gospel of Christ, which is without doubt "the power of God unto salvation." I have been sick most of the time since I last wrote you, but by the grace of God I am not so afflicted as not to be able to attend my church services every Sunday, though I am in bed nearly four days in every week.

Sunday, Nov. 2, was my forty-third birthday. I had been in bed all the week, and Sunday night I had to baptize. I made an earnest appeal (as I stepped on the edge of the pool) for the Master. And after immersing the candidate, I came up out of the water, and the congregation was singing, as you know our people can, "Glory to his name." I started to my room when a man, in the midst of the congregation of nearly 700, arose and pulling off his coat cried out, "Stop him! Stop him!! I want to be baptized." Leaving his seat he came rushing forward to where I was while the entire congregation arose to their feet apparently excited. I stopped and the man seemed to be filled with the Holy Spirit—in fact the entire building seemed to be permeated with holy fire; and before the church could vote this man in as a member on his confession of faith, another man arose and came rushing forward, and on his faith in the Lord Jesus Christ demanded that he, too, be baptized. I went back into the water and baptized these two men and God gave us a Pentecost shower, and the walls of our building resounded with the chorus, "There shall be showers of blessings."

During the last six weeks I have baptized thirteen happy converts, and among the number was my oldest child, Henry, 16 years of age. We are having a constant revival. The Holy Ghost seems to be with us each time we meet; we have had no protracted meeting for nearly four years, but we keep constantly before the folks the Gospel of Christ, "Look and live," and absolute separation from the world. I am the same uncompromising and unyielding contender for the separation of God's "salt of the earth" from the sand of the world.

I think sometimes with my complicated troubles (bodily afflictions) that the Lord's coming for me is not far distant, and I cannot afford to relax any in this fight of right against might. I did not tell you that two of the men who recently joined the church were 33° Masons, and one woman was the wife of a Royal Arch Mason, and another man was an Odd-fellow, and we have now two men, Odd-fellows, who come regularly to our service and we believe the Spirit is working with them. We are endeavoring to keep the altar fires burning, and as a result the dross of sin must and will be consumed. Pray for us.

We are now holding an institute in one of our city Baptist churches, and we have in attendance pastors Searcy of Brownsville, Owen of Stanton, Ayers of Ripley, Jones of Keeling, Lanier of Williston, Manney of Hunnington, Nelson of Millington, Smith of Carolina, Hazelton of Sommerville, Tennessee, with Brinkley, Lee and the writer, of Memphis; and it would have done your soul good to have heard the outspoken testimony against the lodge. These places are all small towns adjacent to Memphis, and these brethren have preached every lodge room shut in their various towns. In Brownsville Bro. Searcy said the landlord almost took the lodge furniture for rent.

The institute is being held in Bro. McMichael's church. He is outspoken, yet his church is mixed with sand. He wants it clean and hopes to get it so by constantly preaching against the lodge. He does not want to use coercive measures. My experience is that to deal with this evil in our churches, we must root it out. Sugar may do to catch flies; it will never kill or drive away chinches.

is moving along nicely. God is blessing the labors of Prof. Traver and the noble band of helpers with him. The evils of tobacco-using, whisky-drinking and secret society influence is being constantly held up before the students of the school. Thus far during the first term which closes next Wednesday over four hundred have been in attendance, and a magnificent work has been done. We are very anxious to consummate our industrial ideas for the benefit of the school pupils, but the way is not yet clear. We are having meetings every week in various churches throughout the city and thus raising means to support the school by way of voluntary collection. Last week we were able to get into one of the prominent churches in which the pastor had declared the Sunday before that Jesus himself was a Mason and an Odd-fellow, and his sermon was most unmercifully handled, and when the meeting adjourned there was considerable smoke in the atmosphere. We managed to get $10.30 out of the smoke for school purposes. We have a splendid accession in the way of a teacher in the person of Miss Annie O'Keefe of Chicago. We have this year a faculty of nine, six of whom are white and three colored, and with the Word (Bible) for our leading text book, the work being done is excellent. The nurse training department of our work is a prominent feature. Several of our leading physicians lecture to this class gratuitously every week, and many of the pupils who, in this department are all grown women, are at this writing out in the city and engaged in practical work. Last Saturday, the 13th inst., a telegram was sent from Newport, Ark, nearly 150 miles away, asking for a trained nurse, and one of our nurses left that evening with only two hours' notice. So you see the influence and name of the institution is spreading, and becoming a blessing to suffering humanity.

We are trying to make arrangements to care for our orphans and aged people. Our people when they become aged and helpless have no refuge but our county poor-house, and the provisions here are of a very inferior character. Some of us are trying to do what we can in this line. I have in my own home, and have had since last July, four orphans, and other families in my church have them quartered here and there. We are taking care of them for the Master, realizing that he who provides for the sparrows will help us as we try to feed and clothe them.

Now I have been four days writing at this letter. May God bless you and bring of his bounty and loving kindness to your hearts and homes.

KIDNAPPERS.

W. C. T. U. AND GOOD TEMPLARS JOIN IN TRICKING CHILDREN INTO THE LODGE.

NEWARK, N. Y.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—A new phase of the efforts of the secretists was manifested in this place lately. On Saturday, Nov. 29, our two boys, aged 10 years, were invited by a Good Templar lady to meet at the school-house for a temperance meeting. All the children of the public schools, as far as possible, were gathered together. A lady met with them who talked of temperance, and told them the children could have a society of their own and have their own officers, have little hymn-books of their own and some of them could be officers. They must pay 10 cents to join the society and five cents each quarter.

Monday they were invited to meet in the Good Templars' Hall. So the children wanted to go up and join the society. We went into the room, and the lady who was organizing the society invited me forward to a seat near the platform. The room was seated by the children sitting on seats against the wall around the whole room. The older peasons in the room gathered in a semi-circle, and were requested to put their right hand upon their heart and pledge themselves against drinking, tobacco, profanity and gambling. The leader then requested three or four persons to take the names of the children and their money. She said she had four rituals for them.

I then inquired if she was organizing a secret society of the children She said "Yes."

I told her, "I came up to see what kind of an organization they were giving to the children. I am interested in the temperance cause, and wish my children to be interested in the cause; but I am opposed to secret societies and do not wish my children connected with any secret organization. The cause of temperance in this State has been going backward since the secret temperance organizations had been formed in the State. No one is ever converted to temperance in all the secret organizations. The work of conversion to temperance is all done outside, before they enter such organizations, and instead of laboring for the good of the mass of the community, all the labors of the organization are confined to the secret walls of the lodge. Secret societies awaken a prejudice against the cause in the minds of the mass of the community."

The leader answered: "This feeling against secret societies is only a prejudice."

I replied, "There is a good reason for this prejudice, because there is no need of secrecy for any good purpose. I consider secretism the mark of Cain, because the worship in this respect is not acceptable to God. It is a work of darkness which God calls 'unfruitful works of darkness.'

"It is an abomination to toll the children on unknowingly in the path that ends in Odd-fellowship, Masonry or Ku-Klux-ism, as it is a stepping stone to these organizations, and those who argue for the secrecy of the one society, will argue for the secrecy of the others. Children are open-hearted and do not resort to secrecy except when they have been disobedient to their parents and teachers."

An officer of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union requested me to not say anything more, as I might prejudice the children against the society.

I answered, "To gather little children into secret societies under pretence of promoting the cause of temperance, and to place upon them this mark of the beast, was an abomination and a shame!" Yours in the truth,

SIDNEY WILDER.

THE FARMERS IN POLITICS.

MONROE, Iowa.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—I have been long expecting to learn through your paper the minds of your readers or editorial views on the subject of Farmers' Alliance policy. Your last issues broach the subject, with a few comments. I wish to be understood that I hold to all but the secrecy part. Christ says he that taketh the sword shall perish by the sword; so then it must be he that taketh secretism must perish by secretism. God has a hand in this great uprising of the people, and we should abide his time. We must abide "under the shadow of the Almighty," Psa. 91: 1. God will do his work, and we must see that we do ours. The National Union party is working to destroy caste, breaking up money rings, bribery, monopolies, syndicates which live by lodge power. If this party controls this government then Masonry and kindred orders must submit to the powers that be. So if there are any vital religious truths, or if we see any flowers of divine beauty in it, let us hopefully and faithfully water them. Should like to learn on this subject from some of the more intelligent of your writers. Am a worker with you all. J. HART.

PITH AND POINT.

PAGAN WORSHIP AND DIABOLICAL OATHS.

Edmond Ronayne is no doubt right, as to his opinion, of the horrible murderous oaths and penalties of Freemasonry, and of course, it is right to strike hard blows at the diabolical institution, by exposing these illegal oaths and penalties. I doubt not that if these barbarous oaths and murderous penalties were known by the public generally, thousands of young men would be saved from the cruel bondage of Masonic lodges. But I believe that were the Christ-ignoring policy of Masonry known, Christians would shun the lodge as they would the leprosy! My opinion is that the Cynosure's course has been, and still is, the best that can be chosen, viz., to instruct the people concerning both the Christless character of Freemasonry, and the horrible profanity of its devilish oaths and penalties. I love the Cynosure more and more for its fearless, manly and Christian exposure of the anti-Christian system of the Secret Empire! Go on, dear Cynosure, and may God crown your efforts against the kingdom of darkness with abundant success. I am yours for general reform.—R. S. MORTON, Millville, Nova Scotia,

Let us hear from all the Cynosure readers who have an opinion about Masonic oaths.

THE CYNOSURE FOR THE SOUTHERN MINISTERS.

I hail with joy the proposition you make of sending a number of our ministers the Cynosure gratuitously. The thought is an inspiration, no matter with whom it originated. I know of nothing that could do so much good. I send you a small list and a marked minute table. I am sorry I cannot aid the noble work.—R. N. COUNTEE.

A Y. M. C. A SECRETARY OUT OF PLACE.

To show you the spirit which prevails here, and because I think the Y. M. C. A. ought to know what kind of a man their general secretary here is, I will state the treatment I received at his hands. I dropped into the reading-room one day recently, and stayed about five or ten minutes. On my way down stairs, McCoy, the secretary, preceded me in company with another man. The janitor was on the stairway, with whom McCoy held a consultation. When I was passing the janitor he hailed me, and informed me that if I wished to use the reading-room, I would have to ask permission of the secretary. I hastened forward to McCoy to know whether he had given such an order, and was informed in insulting language that he had. I told him that I understood the animus of the order, and that it was because he knew that I was a representative of the N. C. A., though he pretended not to know who I was. Before they knew my business, the officers of the Association and the employees treated me courteously, but after they knew it, there was a dark Masonic frown upon their faces, and they did not recognize me. This I wish you to have published in the Cynosure, so as to fulfill my promise to McCoy.—M. H. NICHOLS, San Francisco, Cal.

GOOD WORDS.

I bid you God speed in the reforms advocated.—ROYAL HAMMOND, Galesburg, Ill.

I detest these orders of secrecy as hateful to God and harmful to men.—Ex-PRES. H. H. GEORGE.

I'll have to curtail in the number of periodicals of some kind, but I can't drop the Cynosure.—(Prof.) JOSEPH MOORE.

I shall do my best for the circulation of the Cynosure. If I had some Anti-masonic literature I think I could do good with it.—J. W. THOMPSON.

We take great pleasure in reading your paper; would not know how to do without it. Let the good work go on.—J. C. WOODWARD, Adams, N. Y.

I am receiving your paper regularly, and am very well pleased with its contents. I cannot do without it for I prize it next to my Bible.—I. L. BROWN, Westfield, Ill.

Allow me to say that I regard the Cynosure as a true safeguard to the church, and carrying a saving influence to all who read it.—(Rev.) B. DODGE, Pleasant Hill, Tenn.

We do not wish to discontinue the reading of your very valuable paper. We are entirely on your side in this question.—HERMAN. FRITSCHEL, Ass't Professor Wartburg Seminary.

May God's blessing be upon all the reform workers. I dearly love the Cynosure. Long may it live and lasting may be its work. May the truth triumph over every secret foe.—MRS. R. SCHNELLBACHER, Mankato, Kan.

LITERATURE.

SAVONAROLA, THE FLORENTINE MARTYR. By Emma H. Adams. Pp. 160. Price 50c. Pacific Press Publishing Co., Oakland, Cal.

This is a brief biography of intrancing interest. The prophet and martyr of Florence is comparatively unknown among the renowned galaxy of the Reformation. With the lives of Wickliffe, Huss, Jerome, Luther, Zwingle, Farel, Knox and Calvin we are all more or less familiar. They were, it is true, more nearly connected with the permanent results that came from the unfolding of the Word of God in the 16th century, while the life of the Dominican monk, who for a few brief years thrilled Italy, seemed to go out, and his work to perish, leaving no mark on the surface of an unquiet sea. One reason, evidently, is in the fact that Savonarola did not wholly break with Rome, yet Luther was years in coming to the point of secession, and Wickliffe died nominally a Catholic. This Italian priest led a wonderful life, full of inconsistencies, as we look back upon it; but full of marvelous zeal and reflecting wonderfully the power of the Word of God. This volume is well written, and takes the reader into close fellowship with the great spirit of a man who lived a century before his time; if, indeed, it can be said that Italy is even yet ready, after four centuries, to understand his ideas of civil liberty and the self-denial of a godly life. The name of Savonarola deserves to be more cherished by the Christian church, and we should be thankful for books like this that help us to understand him.

HIS YOUNG NEIGHBOR. By Ellen Louisa Davis. Pp. 256. Price $1.20. The London Religious Tract Society. For sale by F. H. Revell, Chicago.

This is a love story from the first chapter. Personal piety of the most earnest type is commended in its hero, as well as the noble virtues of temperance, fidelity and charity. The story is also well told, but the plot is full of such improbabilities that it is difficult to read some pages with composure, and makes the reader question the propriety of so closely weaving the warp of religious sentiment of greatest excellence so closely with so poor a woof.

The International Committee of the Y. M. C. A. of New York issue "Topics for Prayer Meetings and Bible Classes" for 1891, a little book which has proved of good service in the past to many pastors and other Christian workers in furnishing suitable subjects for prayer and Gospel meetings for young men and others. This pamphlet may be obtained from the Committee at five cents per copy.

In the January Scribner's Magazine, Mr. Stanley's paper on the "Pigmies of the Great African Forest" is his first compact and complete presentation of all that he learned about these strange dwarfs throughout the many months of his journey across Africa. He writes of them as one fascinated with their cunning and general intelligence, their docility when properly treated, and their aptitude in all ways for the things which civilized man has considered peculiarly his own. The life of these nomads in their Liliputian villages, their methods of hunting and fighting, and their habits and customs generally are explained in detail by Mr. Stanley, and illustrated from pictures based on photographs made by the expedition. Sir. Edwin Arnold's paper on Japanese People" is a picturesque description of street scenes in Tokio, the shops, and baths, the tea houses, cemeteries and jinrikishas, with the curiously-clad natives moving in and out of the busy scene. "Impressions of Australia," "Modern Fire Apparatus," "The Rothenburg Festival–play" and "Court Tennis" are all finely illustrated. The first-named is especially attractive in this respect, while the description of Australian scenery and village life is charming.

The Century magazine is running a fast press day and night in order to print the first installment of the delayed "Talleyrand Memoirs" in the January number. This same magazine was the first to print, before its appearance in France, the life and literary remains of the great French artist, Jean Francois Millet, and now the Century is to bring to light, before they appear in any other country, the long-hidden memoirs of the most famous of French diplomatists. This first article will be preceded by what is said to be a brilliant pen-portrait of Talleyrand, by Minister Whitelaw Reid, who has made the selections from the most interesting chapters of the first volume. The first installment of selections from "The Memoirs of Talleyrand," which is to appear in the January Century, will contain a sketch of the author's strange and lonely childhood, an account of his entry into Parisian society, his estimate of La Fayette, some account of the beginnings of the French Revolution, a striking passage concerning the Duke of Orleans; an account of Talleyrand's residence in England and America, and of a most interesting conversation between Talleyrand and Hamilton on the subject of Free Trade and Protection.

One of the most remarkable lists of famous contributors ever brought together in a single number of a magazine is presented in the January issue of the Ladies' Home Journal, of Philadelphia. The authors in that number will include Henry M. Stanley, Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes, ex-President Hayes, Hon. John Wanamaker, Joseph Jefferson, Hon. Hannibal Hamlin, Madame Albani, James Whitcomb Riley, Gen. Lew Wallace, George W. Childs, Dr. T. De Witt Talmage, Mrs. A. D. T. Whitney, Robert J. Burdette, Edward Bellamy, Will Carleton, Charles A. Dana, Sarah Orne Jewett, George W. Cable, Julian Hawthorne, Mrs. Lyman Abbott, Mrs. Margaret Bottome, and nearly twenty others.

The Evangelical Repository for the current month contains an able article by the editor, Rev. R. J. Miller, D.D., on the testimony of the Catacombs to the supreme excellency of the Christian religion and Christian civilization. The testimony will in another paper be continued, showing the usurpation and false doctrine of the Romish church.

The "Poetical Works of Jonathan W. Moss" are for sale by the author at Cameron, Marshall Co., West Va, Price $2.00.

IN BRIEF.

A colored woman has sued a Texas newspaper for $100 damages for having spoken of her as a white woman.

The Panama Canal Works are wrecked, even traces of the excavations are vanishing and the constructive machinery is worthless. This enterprise, in which $400,000,000 has been sunk, will figure as the monumental failure of the age.

The slender light-cable extending from Mars to the earth has brought the astonishing news of a great snow-storm on our neighbor planet! Prof. W. H. Pickering has given an account of fourteen photographs of Mars taken by Mr. Wilson—on which this unique announcement is recorded. The white spot covering the south pole is plainly visible on both lots of negatives, but is conspicuously larger on the second lot. It has been known for some years that the polar spots have varied gradually in size, diminishing in summer and increasing in winter, but this is the first time that the exact date and approximate extent of an accession has been observed.

Sir Joseph Lister in a speech at King's College on his return from Berlin, announced that within a month the world would be startled by two new discoveries. He said Dr. Koch's transcendingly important consumption cure hinted at and involved the cure and prevention of two of the most terrible contagious diseases known. Sir Joseph Lister had witnessed experiments on guinea pigs, in which they were inoculated with a new, simple chemical substance, which anyone would be able to prepare, and were totally unaffected when germs of these diseases were injected. Dr. Koch had practically concluded this work of discovery, but desired to make further tests. Therefore, he desired to keep his latest discovery secret for the present. Sir Joseph Lister said he was convinced that this discovery was the most important in the history of medicine since that of vaccine.

Luis Del Commun, of Cholulu, Pueblo, Mexico, says the Aztec Indians, of Mexico, are afflicted with a Messiah craze very similar to that which is disturbing the Indian in the Dakotas. All the Aztec tribes scattered throughout Mexico are believers in the prophesied Messiah expected to appear and free them from the foreign conquerors and restore them to their domain and their pristine glory. At Cholulu are the ruins of an old Aztec temple. This is the Mecca of the believers in the Messiah, and there are now encamped about it hundreds of Aztecs, who are engaged in performing all sorts of mysterious religious rites. Of these rites of old a human sacrifice was a part, accompanied with a flower dance. The sacrifice has been done away with, and now only the dance remains. The Aztec prophecy is very like that which is believed in by the Sioux. The Messiah will cause the volcano Popocatapetl to erupt and overwhelm the country with lava, which will destroy all but the Aztecs.

Dec. 1.—Special Telegram.—The plans for the great $50,000,000 bridge between New York City and Jersey City were unanimously adopted by the Commissioners Dec. 1. The enabling acts have already passed both the New Jersey and the New York Legislatures. The bridge will connect with all the elevated railroads and the great trunk lines. It will give the Pennsylvania, the Erie, the Baltimore and Ohio, and all the roads that now have terminals at Jersey City, direct connection with New York City and the East. There will be no less than six tracks on the structure, which, it is claimed, will be completed in three years. The proposed bridge will be a gigantic affair. It is to be 7,000 feet long, 100 feet wide, and 140 feet above high tide. The central span is to be 2,850 feet—not quite twice that of the Brooklyn structure; the two shore spans are to be 2,500 feet each. The towers are to be 509 feet high; the Brooklyn's are 280. The Washington Monument is 555. The four supporting cables are to be four feet each in diameter against the sixteen inches of the Brooklyn bridge. Each cable will be composed of 15,000 steel wires. The anchorages will be half as large as the national Capitol building, and each will contain more masonry than the largest of the pyramids of Egypt.

J. BLANCHARD, EDITOR.
HENRY L. KELLOGG, ASSOCIATE EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, JANUARY 1, 1891.

ALL AT IT. ALWAYS AT IT.

Since my last letter to our friends, contributions have been received from about two hundred of our subscribers. These gifts have enabled us to pay current expenses up to Dec. 1, and one dividend has been made in that month.

This result abundantly justifies our confidence that our fellow workers throughout the country have the means and the disposition to carry forward this branch of the Lord's work. The only thing needed is to bring the forces into line. A moderate contribution from half our subscribers will furnish all the funds required for extending our work on every side.

There is a special reason for generous planning at this time. We have a small sum of money tied up at our banker's. A portion of this we shall probably receive in time. The two principal facts bearing on this subject are the need of keeping our current expenses up and the fact that, God helping, we propose to hold another Conference of Christians in the spring, funds for which we shall need as last year.

Our friends will remember with gratitude the blessing which God bestowed on that gathering. It is still a power working for righteousness among men. Two thousand copies of the minutes complete were printed and all have been disposed of months since. Fifteen thousand copies of the address by Joseph Cook were printed and about seven thousand of them are already in circulation. Copies are now being sent by Missionary Secretaries to those aided by their societies.

We desire a greater meeting for the coming year. We believe that God is entirely willing to give it to us. In order to this end, however, we must have the prompt, prayerful, generous, hearty co-operation of all those who are in sympathy with our work.

We believe that our friends are willing to furnish all the funds needed to do all this work for God, and homes, and native land. "He gives twice who quickly gives." What your hearts prompt, let your hands do with your might. Send to Mr. W. I. Phillips, our treasurer, at 221 West Madison St., Chicago, Ill., your offering and help us by suggestion and prayer, as you are able. In the love of Jesus, sincerely yours,

CHARLES A. BLANCHARD,
Financial Secretary, N. C. A.

WHEN CHRIST promised to send the Holy Spirit to abide with his disciples, he told them he would do two things, viz., "He shall teach you all things and bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have said unto you," John 14: 26. We should ask and expect this every day. For though we have received the Holy Ghost, yet we must receive him again as the early disciples did. This will make us "complete in him," i. e., Christ. Then we come to know "all things" we need to know through the day, and portions of the Bible will come into our mind as we need them. Will our readers practice and prove this?

MARCUS R. BRITTEN is departed. See his obituary in another column. He was a "prince in Israel." He was an able and useful trustee of Wheaton College, and a firm advocate of every useful reform. His beautiful home near Vienna, Wisconsin, will mourn the absence of the mind that planted its trees, planned its beauties, and made it subserve, by its income, the kingdom of God. He gave liberally to secure the Carpenter building and Washington headquarters for the National Christian Association. We had hoped for a longer lease of his life for the sake of his excellent family and the anti-secret cause, but

"God is his own interpreter,
And he will make it plain."

The holy dead, Christ says, are "equal to the angels" (Luke 20: 36), who "are all ministering spirits" to us who remain in the pilgrimage.

B. T. ROBERTS.

SUPERINTENDENT OF THE FREE METHODIST CHURCH.

In September, 1826, William Morgan, of Batavia, N. Y., was murdered by Freemasons. The lodge in Leroy met and agreed to say that Masonry had nothing to do with his taking off. But as the excitement was not quelled, but increased, that lodge met again and agreed on another lie, and all the members uttered it. Yet there were at that time good men in the lodges, if there were such in western New York. But such was the power of the lodge oaths over their consciences those good men felt bound to shield what they regarded as a "holy order" by falsehood, if ordered to do so. Eli Farnham, for thirty years an elder in the First Church, Galesburg, Ill., said to the writer, "My father was one of those men; and I have always supposed him a good man. Certainly he was if I am." A few better men ever walked the earth than Eli Farnham. Those good men afterward confessed their sins, were restored to their churches, and voted to exclude adhering Masons from fellowship.

Benjamin T. Roberts was a youth when these horrors occurred. In 1848 he joined the Genesee M. E. Conference as a young preacher. This was twenty-two years after Morgan's murder, and sixteen years after the Anti-masons had given 28,000 votes for Wirt and Ellmaker. The Abolition national convention met in Philadelphia in 1833; and the holiness discussion was opened at Oberlin and elsewhere. Thus the Genesee Conference when Mr. Roberts united with it, had on hand three distinct issues, viz., Scriptural holiness, slavery, and secret societies; and as Wesley was pronounced on all these, the older and better class of Methodist preachers in that conference gave it a reputation for radicalism on all three.

But the General M. E. Conference in 1836, at Cincinnati, O., resolved:

"That we are decidedly opposed to modern Abolitionism, and wholly disclaim any right, wish, or intention to interfere in the civil and political relation between master and slave as it exists in the slave-holding States in this Union."

And they voted to censure George Storrs and Orange Scott, who had attended and prayed at an anti-slavery prayer meeting.

This put Roberts and some seventeen of the best ministers in Genesee Conference between the upper and nether millstones. These godly Methodist preachers in Genesee Conference were slowly ground to powder. Methodist piety was never so prevalent and popular as under their administration. One hundred and four tents were set up at a single camp meeting. Holiness was preached and practiced. And their organ, the Northern Independent, sustained the Free Soil Democrats who, in 1848, wheeled off from slavery and voted for liberty. This was the very year Mr. Roberts joined the conference.

A clique of ambitious preachers in Buffalo, backed by Methodist bishops, and "Hunker" Democrats, who had themselves succumbed to the slave power, resolved that Genesee Conference should wheel into line; and they succeeded. They joined the Odd-fellows and Masons, and held secret meetings by themselves. They branded the holiness preachers as Nazarites, and even good old Bishop Simpson, like Barnabas, "was carried away with their dissimulation." They tampered with the bishops, and sent old and eloquent preachers onto starvation circuits, where their large families must beg or starve. And when revivals followed them there they slandered their work,—they were fanatics.

"Their aim was mischief and their zeal pretence;
Their speech, rebellion against common sense;
Their crimes were such as Sodom never knew,
And perjury stood up to swear all true."

When young Roberts joined the conference in 1848, Rev. Eleazer Thomas gave each preacher Rev. C. D. Burlingham's pamphlet showing the infidel character of Masonry and Odd-fellowship, —and this in Buffalo! This uncapped afresh the lodge volcano of slander and detraction. They intimidated some, drove off others, bulldozed all of them, and tried some for "contumacy." But B. T. Roberts replied to them as Christ's early disciples answered the priests. The Buffalo clique had filled their city churches with dancing, card-playing, liquor-drinking Methodists; and such religion does not pay. Their church on Niagara street was in debt. They got up a clam-bake to pay that debt, which the Buffalo Courier thus describes:

"The spot selected was Clinton Forest, containing about twenty acres. .....Ten cents admission was demanded from each visitor. Within we found thousands of people, some ventilating their garments on swings; some playing games; hundreds eating.....Clams! Clams! was the cry and echo.....At the rope-walk a large crowd collected, and to the music of two bands, danced, which privilege cost each dancer ten cents."

with much more to the like effect.

Rev. Mr. Roberts had published a cool, argumentative article, entitled "New School Methodism," showing the doctrinal departure from original Methodism. A brother published, and to that calm article attached the Buffalo Courier's editorial notice of the clam-bake. The clique were resolved to get rid of Roberts; and though he knew nothing of the paper till he saw it in print, they accused, tried, convicted and turned him out of the church for that article which it was virtue to publish, and for technical "contumacy" or disobedience to their rules after they had dealt with him. The whole case was worthy of those who accused Christ of being "a Samaritan," and Paul of being an "Egyptian," when the whole difficulty was, they wished to be rid of those whose preaching condemned their unholy lives, and thus spoiled their leadership with the people.

Some of the good men turned out by the Buffalo clique had died amid the beams of glory vouchsafed to holy death-beds. Others preached to their former charges who rallied around them, and called themselves "Free" Methodists; and in August, 1860, held a convention and adopted a discipline of their own. The first General Conference of the Free Methodist church was held in October, 1862. Mr. Roberts has been chosen and re-chosen superintendent, and with two assistants has now the oversight of the general interests of this church, which has thus far witnessed a good confession for Christ.

CHRISTMAS AND THE INDEPENDENT.

The Independent gives its first eleven mammoth pages (Dec 18.) to Christmas. Doctors of divinity of various denominations, soldiers, travellers and scholars of distinction are the writers.

We give below the substance of an article by L. M. Atwood, D.D., president of a Universalist Theological Seminary in Canton, the once home of Silas Wright, New York, in the extracts below. Its title is: "The Puritans surrender to Christmas." And the writer says:

"The Christmas festival grows popular year by year."

"The Puritan face was set against Christmas as sternly as against witchcraft and priestcraft."

"But the Puritan has relaxed his features, and to-day smiles with the rest of the Christian world at the approach of Yule-tide."

But, the writer adds:

"In justice to the Puritan we must allow that the Christmas to which he has surrendered is quite another thing from that against which he revolted."

"So late as the beginning of 1800, it was still the custom, at Christmas midnight, to rock a cradle containing a doll and decorated with lights, on the top of the spire of the Cathedral of Tubingen; the lingering remnant of a multitude of purile observances once almost universal in Europe; it was a time of revelry among Teutons and Britons; the signal of a season of unrestrained intemperance and profligacy; so much so that the aid of Parliament was invoked in 1555 to put a stop to Christmas scandals."

And this doctor of Universalist theology rejoices that "The union of Churchman and Dissenter, Puritan and Papist, Calvinist and Universalist, is slowly growing up around the beautiful festival commemorative of the Advent among men of the Great Founder of Christianity."

But was the Puritan right in condemning Christmas? This question should be settled before we rejoice that it is blending the various sects in one. When this union is accomplished, what is to be its religion? Will men then obey Christ? or a priest who is his rival and substitute? When all sects are united by an institution got up by men, without pretence of a Bible warrant for it, will their religion be truth or fiction? Did any one ever hear of a sinner converted, a drunkard reclaimed, or a soul sanctified, in Christmas revels, ancient or modern? If none, is it not possible that Christmas may be putting America on the road to Mexico, Ireland, or Spain, which have always enjoyed Christ mass and other masses? Which will be most likely to give up, the Pope his despotism, or the Congregationalist his liberty?

Millions of little children, last week, expected and supposed they received presents from "Santa Claus," as they have heard their imaginary benefactor called. And when they learn that this is fiction, will it help them to believe that Christ was "The Truth," as he was?

The Puritans who came to New England and wrote and signed off Cape Cod, the first majority constitution ever known, CONDEMNED CHRISTMAS FOR PERMANENT REASONS.

"We hold," say they, "that all inventions of men . . . are to be excluded out of the exercises of religion." "That all outward means to express the inward worship of God ought, evidently, to be prescribed by the Word of God." (Neal's History of the Puritans, Vol. 1, p. 248.) And, finding no birthday of Christ, to be celebrated on a certain day observed as a Sabbath by a cessation of labor, "prescribed" in the Bible, but instituted and invented by men, who were priests, claiming Christ's power and prerogative of saving men by their self-projected worships: and finding Christmas revels neither saving or elevating, but, on the contrary, observing that as Christmas rises the Sabbath and all Christian ordinances sink; and finding that Christmas never comes alone, but is followed by Easter and some one hundred other festival days, nominally religious, all alike without warrant by the Word of God,—observing all these, they being opposed to the end, were also opposed to every step that led to it. And, as this Universalist writer says, "they set their faces against Christmas, as against witch-craft and priest-craft," and for the same sound reasons.

This writer rejoices that "Puritans are surrendering to Christmas." Pari passu, with this surrender the Congregationalists have surrendered to the world. Nearly one-fourth of the Congregational churches in the United States are now without pastors, and a like number of their pastors are without pulpits: and this, while they are intelligent, liberal, and, as a rule, capable men and women. From being numerically the first, they have fallen back to the sixth among the sects; and yet their cardinal principle of the independence of the local church is most popular with the American people.

The explanation of this singular phenomenon is, that a Puritan church with Christmas and Easter in it, is giving up the very principles which made Puritanism. They have, therefore, no defence against the secret lodges which are governed by human centralization, and run by spiritual forces which lead to the world and not to Christ. They "wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities and powers, against the rulers of the world's darkness, wicked spirits in high places." And those spirits have most to fear from churches which have the least organic alliances with the world, along with a clear assertion of the atonement and regeneration by the Holy Ghost.

The Congregational denomination is now dwarfed. From A. D. 1607, the landing of the first twenty slaves at Jamestown, Va., to 1863, when Lincoln emancipated three millions, Congregationalism was shut out of one-half of the United States. Slave-holders would not belong to churches where their slaves could vote. That is one thing which has been dwarfing Congregationalism for near 300 years.

Another cause which has dwarfed Congregationalism is the secret lodge. The first Supreme Grand Council, Albert Pike, now Supreme Grand Commander, was formed in Charleston, S. C., ninety years ago; and the white lodges excluded blacks.

But the chief cause which has put Congregationalism back in the race of sects is, that in 1826–32 New England, the home of Puritanism, was solid Anti-masonic. J. Q. Adams, Daniel Webster, Josiah Quincy, Edward Everett, and the Sumners, father and son, were all Anti-masons; and the churches excluded Masons. While in the South there were no Anti-masons. Jackson and his whole Cabinet were received into into Federal Lodge, No. 1., Washington, D. C., by a single vote. This has dwarfed Congregationalism.

So the tribe of Judah was dwarfed, while ten tribes followed Jeroboam into the lodge-worships at Dan and Bethel. But Judah lives to-day, and the ten tribes are lost. But the Judean remnant will be restored and bring life to the world. Rom. 11: 15. And the principle adopted at Nottinghamshire and Scrooby Manor, and brought to the United States, via Delft Haven, to-wit., that since Christ there are no priests, in churches or lodges, but usurpers and counterfeits—that principle will yet prevail and fill the earth. For Christ's throne is heaven, and his footstool earth; and he hath sworn by himself that to him every knee shall bow and every tongue confess. Priests and their masses, Christ-mass included, will then be forgotten. The Lord hasten it!

—After the announcement of Dr. George's article last week, we concluded, for several reasons, to hold it for another week, and print instead the contribution of Hartsville College to the College Fraternity discussion. The many friends of that institution and of Pres. Paine will read with satisfaction of the prosperity attending his labors.

—The Texas University magazine does not agree with Dr. Goodwin in his estimate of college secret societies, and argues that while some lodges may be bad, others are not, and the whole system should not therefore be wiped out. As well argue that the lottery business of Louisiana should not be exterminated, because a trifle of its stealings support a New Orleans hospital.

—Rev. Dr. J. P. Lytle of Sago, Ohio, has begun a series of articles in the United Presbyterian, on the origin and history of the opposition of the church of that name to secret societies. These articles are the substance of an address lately given to the students of Allegheny Theological Seminary. The editor commends the writing, and says that anything from Dr. Lytle's pen is sure to be read.

—While the press reports of the legal examination into the condition of the banking house of S. A. Kean & Co., lately suspended, are of the gloomiest nature, and even those who have heretofore been friends, tremble for the result, Miss F. E. Willard has nobly come to the aid of a good man in distress in a letter to the public, asking that many years of unselfish devotion to the poor, and manful adherence to Christian reforms, that might for the time be unpopular, deserve consideration at such a time as this. We are assured that the press reports of the case do not as yet state the whole truth. While there seems to be an unaccountable shrinking of the assets, there are yet large amounts of bonds which have a par value, and the creditors will in time be largely reimbursed.

PERSONAL NOTES.

—Rev. J. P. Richards, of the N. C. A. Board, has been sick for two weeks. His case was kindly remembered at the Board meeting Monday. He was unable to reach the office until the meeting adjourned.

—Bro. Rufus Smith was in Minneapolis lately and addressed on Sabbath afternoon, Dec. 21, the Y. M. C. A. meeting for men. He has lately purchased a house and lot close by the college grounds at Wheaton.

—Calvin W. Pritchard, editor of the Friends' paper, the Christian Worker of this city, has been appointed by H. K. Carroll special agent to collect statistics of Friends, to be placed in the government census reports.

—The aged Friend, Wm. B. Walthall, of whose serious illness we took note last week, died at his home in Quaker Hill, Ind., on the 22d ult. A brother who sends this word speaks of the great loss to the church in the death of this "truly great man" and "father in Israel."

—John G. Whittier celebrated his 83d birthday at his winter home near Danvers, Mass., Dec. 17th. By his request it was spent quietly, only a few of his most intimate personal friends calling. Many congratulatory letters and telegrams were sent him, which were left to be read in his leisure moments.

—Rev. Dr. J. W. Logue, an aged and widely esteemed minister of the United Presbyterian church, has returned to Monmouth, Ill., after spending a season with his son in Cleveland, Ohio. He will spend the winter with his daughter, wife of Dr. W. T. Campbell of the Second U. P. church of Monmouth.

—The News-letter of Brooklyn gives a large space to memorials of Rev. Joseph H. Wylie, the young Covenanter pastor of Olathe, Kansas, who died Sept. 30th last. He succeeded Rev. W. W. McMillan, with whose name our readers were familiar, and who yet resides in Olathe. Mr. Wylie was universally esteemed by all good men who knew him, and his labors promised great good to the church of Christ.

—Rev. E. P. Goodwin, D.D., of the First Congregational church of this city, has been appointed to preach the sermon at the International or World's Congregational Council, to be held in London in July, 1891. This council will be composed of 100 delegates from England, 100 delegates from the colonies, and 100 delegates from the United States, and will be the greatest Congregational council ever held.

—Rev. J. L. Rusbridge, with whom our Washington agent, Bro. W. B. Stoddard, had some controversy on the lodge question a year ago, has left the United Presbyterian church. He was at the time a missionary in charge of the Second U. P. church of Buffalo. He has lately gone to Philadelphia where he is ministering to a Presbyterian congregation. The Instructor says facetiously of this gentleman: "His transit from the Methodist Episcopal church by way of the United Presbyterian to the Presbyterian church has been somewhat rapid." A sincerely pious man might, we could imagine, make these changes; but such an one would surely have first separated from the lodge most radically.

THE N. C. A. BOARD MEETING.

The adjourned meeting of the Board was held in the Cynosure office Monday morning. There were present brethren Thomson, Pinkney, Whipple, Blanchard, Worrell, Arnold and Hitchcock.

Agent C. F. Hawley was directed to fulfill the trusts of the Board in New York State, required in the provision of some of the permanent funds.

The offer of Bro. Jordan to work two months in Arkansas was favorably considered. It was voted to sell a farm in Kansas, some time since donated to the Association, the understanding being that $500 could be had for it. The fund thus raised is to be set aside, according to vote, to aid in providing for a Christian Conference. It was voted that a Christian Conference be held in Chicago during the coming spring, and the corresponding secretary, Mr. Phillips, with Rev. A. Thomson and Pres. C. A. Blanchard, were appointed a general committee to provide for the meeting.

It was voted that the chairman and secretary address a letter of sympathy from the Board to Rev. G. R. Milton, one of the members, who is confined at home with a fractured limb.

BRO. ARNOLD RULED OUT.

Masons are doing all they can to hedge up our way here. All the preachers in the city read notices of our work except the M. E., South. I called on him in the church just after Sabbath-school, and before meeting time. He was just about to say he would read the notice to his congregation, when one of his members, a banker, said, "I object. This man has written a book called 'Stories of the Gods,' and it is an attack on Masonry, and I object to giving any countenance to such a work."

So of course the preacher had to meekly submit. He said he was sorry I had written the book, as he thought it interfered with my usefulness in other work.

It certainly interferes much with our finances, but finances are only for time, while God's favor is for eternity. Your brother in Christ,

I. R. B. ARNOLD.

—The married women in the Cincinnati public schools have won a great victory. The board of education has reinstated as teachers the married women recently dropped from the rolls.

THE HOME.

A PSALM FOR THE NEW YEAR.

O New Year, teach us faith!
The road of life is hard;
When our feet bleed and scourging winds us scathe,
Point thou to Him whose visage was more marred
Than any man's; who saith,
"Make straight paths for your feet," and to the opprest,
"Come ye to me, and I will give you rest."

Yet hang some lamp-like hope
Above this unknown way,
Kind year, to give our spirits freer scope
And our hands strength to work while it is day.
But if that way must slope
Tombward, O bring before our fading eyes
The lamp of life, the hope that never dies.

Comfort our souls with love—
Love of all human kind;
Love special, close, in which, like sheltered dove,
Each weary heart its own safe nest may find;
And love that turns above
Adoringly; contented to resign
All loves, if need be, for the love divine.

Friend, come thou like a friend,
And whether bright thy face
Or dim with clouds we cannot comprehend,
We'll hold our patient hands, each in his place,
And trust thee to the end,
Knowing thou leadest onward to those spheres
Where there are neither days, nor months, nor years.

—Dinah Muloch-Craik.

JANUARY 1.

"On the first day of the first month shalt thou set up the tabernacle." Exodus 11: 2.

And why was this period chosen for the erection? God has always reasons for his conduct; but he does not always "give account of any of his matters." We may, however, make two remarks here. First. Things that are the same to God, are not the same to us. Our goodness extendeth not to him; religion regards the exigencies of man: and when these are subserved, its provisions will be needless. John saw no temple in the New Jerusalem. All places are alike to God; yet we never feel in a common dwelling the solemnity that seizes us in the sanctuary. The first day of the year was no more to God than any other; but it would render the service more memorable and impressive to the people. Therefore says he, "On the first day of the first month shalt thou set up the tabernacle." Secondly. It is well to begin a new year with some good work; and to commence serving God after a new manner.

And have we no tabernacle to set up on this first day of this first month?

Let us begin the year with solemn reflection—and say, with Job, "When a few years are come I shall go the way whence I shall not return." Let me not only believe this, but think of it and feel the importance of the sentiment. Yes, in a little time I shall be no more seen. How—where—shall I be disposed of? The seasons will return as before: but the places that now know me will know me no more forever. Will this be a curse? or a blessing? If I die in my sins I shall return no more to my possessions and enjoyments; to the calls of mercy; to the throne of grace; to the house of prayer! If I die in the Lord I shall, O blessed impossibility! return no more to these thorns and briers; to this vain and wicked world; to this aching head; to this throbbing heart; to these temptations and troubles, and sorrows and sins.

Let us begin the year with self-inspection—and say, with the chief butler, "I do remember my faults this day." We are prone to think of the feelings of our fellow-creatures, and often imagine because we are free from their faults that we are faultless. But we may have other faults; we may have worse; and while a mote is in our brother's eye a beam may be in our own. Let us be open to conviction. Let us deal faithfully with our own hearts. Let us not compare ourselves with others, and especially the more vile of our fellow-creatures; but with our advantages; with our knowledge; with our professions; with the law of God.

Let us begin the year with a determination to abandon whatever appears sinful—and say with Elihu, "If I have done iniquity, I will do no more." Should the evil course or the evil passion solicit, let it plead in vain while the Saviour-Judge says, "If thy right eye offend thee, pluck it out, and cast it from thee: for it is profitable for thee that one of thy members should perish, and not that thy whole body should be cast into hell. And if thy right hand offend thee, cut it off, and cast it from thee: for it is profitable for thee that one of thy members should perish, and not that thy whole body should be cast into hell."

Begin the year with pious and personal dedication—and say, with David, "Lord, I am thine; save me." Through him who is the way yield yourselves unto God. It is your reasonable service. He has infinite claims on you. You will never be truly your own till you are his.

Begin the year with relative religion; and if the worship of God has never been established in your family, now commence it—and say, with Joshua, "As for me and my house, we will serve the Lord." A family without prayer is like a house without a roof. It is uncovered and exposed: and we know who has threatened to pour out his fury upon the families that call not upon his name.

Begin the year with fresh concern to be useful—and ask, with Saul of Tarsus, "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?" Let me look at my condition; my resources; my opportunities. How can I glorify God and promote the welfare of my fellow-creatures? Is there not a Bible to spread? Are there none perishing for lack of knowledge that I can myself instruct? Have I no irreligious neighbors to reclaim? Are there no poor to relieve? No widows and fatherless to visit?

Begin the year with more conduct in the arrangement of your affairs, and resemble Ezra and his brethren, who "did according to the custom, as the duty of every day required." God has said let every thing be done decently and in order. Much of your comfort will arise from regularity in your meals, in your devotions, in your callings; and your piety will be aided by it. Have a place to receive everything; an end to simplify it; a rule to arrange it. Leave nothing for the morrow that ought to be discharged to-day. Sufficient for each period will be its own claims; and your own mind ought to be always at liberty to attend to fresh engagements.

Finally. Time, this short, this uncertain, this all-important time, upon every instant of which eternity depends, will not allow of our trifling away any of its moments. Resolve therefore to redeem it. Gather up it. Gather up its fragments that nothing be lost. Especially rescue it from needless sleep; and if you have hitherto accustomed yourself to the shameful indulgence of lying late in bed, begin the new year with the habit of early rising; by which you will promote your health and improvement of every kind, and live much longer than others in the same number of days—and say, with David, "My voice shalt thou hear in the morning, O Lord: in the morning will I direct my prayer unto thee, and will look up."

And if this be your determination, the season will be the date of your happiness. God himself says, "From this day will I bless you."—Lutheran Standard.

REVIVALS A SURE CURE.

For spiritual colds. Many people have foolishly exposed themselves in the damp, foggy, low lands of disobedience, or amid the blizzards that are continually raging on the bleak hill top of unbelief, which sometimes settle in the head, causing wrong views of Jesus and his work. Sometimes it affects the heart, so that there is little or no charity for others. This condition is often attended by a high fever of variance, strife and contentions, in which the patients become so spiritually delirious that they harbor hard feelings towards others, and do not forgive them. Sometimes it settles on the lungs in such a way that it is very difficult to speak or pray, and it often causes respiration to cease altogether, ending in spiritual death. A genuine revival will banish the cold and bring the dead to life.—Sel.

It is often said when there is a profuse expenditure on a church that nothing is too good for the Lord. But sometimes, at least, what is claimed to be dedicated to him is for the gratification of human pride and taste. A clergyman lately visited a church and learned that it spent $3,000 per year on music and $150 per year on missions. This, he said, was a piece of refined selfishness he could not describe.—Intelligencer.

NEW YEAR'S MORN.

'Tis New Year's morn! The early light
Steals in my window, cold and white:
No birds with cheerful matin song
Welcome, with chorus loud and long;
But children's tones, more sweet than birds,
Are warbling forth the pleasant words:
List as they shout in voices gay,
"O, happy, happy New Year's Day!"

'Tis New Year's morn! How cold and still Lies the white snow o'er vale and hill:
No lovely flowers in garments fair
Are seen within the gardens bare;
But children, fairer than the flowers,
Gladden the chilly morning hours:
List as they shout in chorus gay,
"O, happy, happy New Year's Day!"

'Tis New Year's morn! The frosty breeze
Sighs gloomily through leafless trees;
No fragrant zephyrs, soft and sweet,
With rich perfume the New Year greet;
But children's prayers, like incense rise
Up to "Our Father" in the skies:
With joy I listen while they say,
"Thank God for happy New Year's Day!"

Oh, children, sing your New Year's song,
And let it echo all day long;
Bless God for all his mercies given;
So live that you may live in heaven.
Oh, children, heed this solemn word—
"Now is the time to serve the Lord."
With joy I listen while you say,
"Thank God for happy New Year's Day!"

SAM JENKINS'S DREAM.

"I just wish there wasn't any New Year."

It was a boy—Sam Jenkins—who spoke; the time, New Year's Eve; the place, Madison avenue and Sixty-ninth street. And what a night it was! and what a day it had been! Snow and slush all day long, and now the wind was blowing a gale across the Harlem flats, and the slush was freezing on the sidewalk, and there was not a star to be seen in all the sky.

Sam was a District Messenger boy, and had been on duty all day and all the evening, and this final call at nine o'clock, when his legs were tired, was the last ounce that broke the camel's back.

Since the noon hour he had been in a bad humor. Now he was not only tired, but cold and down-hearted, and as his foot slipped, and he just managed to save the fragile parcel he was carrying, he cried out with a spiteful voice, "I just wish there wasn't any New Year's."

Somehow Sam's ill-humor had made him very uncomfortable all the afternoon. He had had a scuffle near the office with Dick Rainey, and all about nothing, for Dick, noticing his peculiar gait, simply asked him what made his legs so heavy. He had quarreled with the old apple woman in the little shop round the corner because she wouldn't give him two apples for three cents, when the price was two cents apiece; he had thrown a lump of ice at a poor cat shivering behind a barrel on the Third avenue, and kicked at a wretched little dog that had sniffed up to him with his tail between his legs. Altogether Sam was in a very bad way. He didn't care for anybody or anything. Down town the gay shop windows had failed to catch his eye; the bright lights in the houses on the avenue were nothing to him. He was out with himself, and so he was out with everybody else.

I am sorry to say when Sam had delivered his parcel he snapped up the servant for having kept him waiting so long for his ticket, although the poor girl had nothing to do with that, and that he kicked the sidewalk very hard when he again put his foot upon it. And yet he had now only to report himself at the office, and then go home.

Sam lived on one of the side streets where the great tenement-houses loom up in long rows. It was past ten o'clock when he reached the hallway, and began his climb to the fourth floor. On the third floor he passed the room in which Jennie Wilson, the little lame girl, lived, and just then some one opened the door for a moment, and he heard Jennie say,

"Oh, I wonder if I ever will be well!" and "I am so tired!"

Then Sam, still cross, said to himself, "Why don't you go to sleep, then?" but in a moment he was ashamed of himself for having said it.

Bang! went the door behind him as he entered his mother's room. Without saying a word, he pitched his heavy coat into a corner, and shied his cap across the room.

"What's the matter, Sam?" asked his mother, with a kindly voice.

"Matter enough," answered Sam. "I'm tired to death. It's nothing but run, run, run all day and all night. I just wish there wasn't any New Year's. Nobody cares for a boy. It's Sam here, and Sam there, and Sam all the time. That's because I'm a boy. I wish I was a girl—yes, I do."

His mother soothed him while he ate his supper; but the frown did not lift from his face, for there was no sunshine in his heart.

Then he went to bed—went, too, without saying his prayers. It was not long before he fell asleep, and then he dreamed.

He dreamed that he was still in New York, that he was a messenger boy, and that it was the day before New Year's. All day long he was busy carrying messages and delivering parcels, and everybody was kind, and everybody was happy. It seemed to him that it was a great thing to be a messenger boy at such a time, when every one was doing something for some one else, and he had a hand in so much of it. As he thought of this (he was going up Madison avenue again), some one seemed to say: "Sam, you're a little fellow, but you can have a big heart if you want to. All day it's been growing bigger and bigger; now all you have to do is to keep it open, and see how much it will hold."

Then Sam laughed. He didn't know why, but he couldn't help it, he felt so good all over.

Pretty soon he came across a blind man. A dog was leading the man, but Sam helped the man over the crossing, and motioned to a butcher's cart to hold up. Then he saw a cat, half sick, lying in the gutter, and picked her up, saying, "Poor pussy!" and laid her inside the railing of a house, and asked the cook, who stood in the basement doorway, if she wouldn't give her a sop of milk. After a little he saw an old colored woman struggling along with a heavy basket of clothes, and said, "Aunty, I'm going up a few streets, and I'll take hold of the basket on this side." And so he went on up the avenue and down, and the sun was so bright and the air so pleasant, while it seemed as if he was just helping everybody. He didn't quite understand how, but kept on taking them into his heart, all the time feeling and saying, "Come in; there is still plenty of room." Soon all the poor people down in the side streets, and all the rich people up on the avenue, all the sick people in the hospital where he was yesterday, and the dreadful people he had seen down by the Tombs—why, he just thought of them all, and before he knew it they came crowding up and upon him, and he took all of them into his heart, and they didn't seem crowded a bit, for the more that came, the more room was there left. He could not understand it, but he was sure that the increase in the number only made him the happier; and as he went on thinking it over, he stretched out his arms just as wide as he could, and cried out: "Come in, all the world; come into my heart. I've plenty of room for all, for my heart grows just as fast as my love, and I just love everybody in this big, blessed world."

As Sam stretched out his arms, his mother woke him, saying, "I wish you a happy New Year, Sam, and it's time to get up."

And Sam got up. You could tell by his face that he had had a pleasant dream, for his voice was gentle and his manner very kind, as he said, "Well, mother, I guess I was pretty cross last night, but I'm going to try and be good-natured to-day."

Then his mother said, "You were tired last night, Sam." That's the way our mothers always try and overlook our faults when we are sorry.

Sam had to go to the office for half a day, and he had a little money which he intended to spend on his presents. Before he started for home, however, he made up with Dick Rainey by dancing a jig to show that his legs were light to-day. On his way home he called in at the old apple woman's to wish her a very happy New Year, and to take two apples at her price. He hoped to get a sight of the poor old cat and the wretched little dog, that he might show them how sorry he was, but they were gone. On the Third avenue he bought two or three little things for his mother, and an orange, some candy, and a bright picture paper for his little sister. And as Sam thought of these friends and all his other friends, and all the poor people in the houses and on the streets, oh! how he wished he could buy something for them all, but he couldn't. But then he could love them all the same.

There is not room to tell you all that he said to his mother, and sister, and Jenny, and what a bright, happy day it was to them and to Sam. He tried hard to make it all out, but he couldn't exactly understand it. "It was a nice, queer dream," he said, "and I found out one thing by it, and that is that you can make room in your heart for just as many folks as you please, and that you can't make other folks pleasant when you are cross yourself; and I just wish that New Year would come twenty times in a year."—Anson D. F. Randolph, in Harper's Young People.

TEMPERANCE.

THE FIGURES ALL POINT THE ONE MORAL.

The Standard, of Chicago, brings out these facts which point a moral that is going to find many illustrations in the comparative growth of Kansas and Nebraska in education and morals:

In the eight years from 1882 to 1889 the revenue on liquor paid to the national government by Kansas decreased 49 per cent, while the same by Nebraska increased 122 per cent. During the past decade taxes have averaged 13 cents and two mills lower in Kansas than in Nebraska, the difference last year having been nearly 60 per cent in favor of Kansas. Once more: Since Kansas adopted prohibition her population has increased 600,000, but her penitentiary attendance has actually fallen off five per cent, while the prison population of Nebraska has outran the great increase of her population 47 per cent. Kansas, with over a million and a half of people, has 174 boys in her reform school, but Nebraska, with one million population, has 245 boys in her reform school.

The first woman's temperance crusade which ever occurred in this county resulted in a victory for the crusaders. At Germantown, Tenn., nine miles from Memphis, there was but one saloon, and the women resolved that it should go. On Tuesday last they met in convention and nominated a Prohibition ticket for town officers and then went on a still hunt for votes. On Dec. 8th the election was held, and the woman's ticket, with "No license" at the head, was elected by a big majority. The fair politicians stood around the polls all day and saw that their husbands, sons and brothers voted right.

Poor Africa's deplorable condition under the rum curse is darker than when the stealing of millions of its people caused Livingston to call it the "open sore of the world." A hundred steam ships that sail from European and English ports to the west, south and east coasts, carry a principal cargo of rum and gin. Hamburg alone, by two lines of steamers, exported to Africa 200,000 tons of rum last year; and many other cities, including our town Boston, are engaged in the nefarious business of turning a Mississippi of death and destruction upon the defenceless Africans, annually decimating whole sections of that country. —Bishop Wm. Taylor.

Missionaries in India are looking to the introduction of the study of physiology and the effects of narcotics, known here as scientific temperance, as an important aid to their work of Christianizing and civilizing the natives. One of the greatest obstacles now in the way of their success is the disastrous effects upon these native races of the narcotic habits introduced by representatives from civilized countries. Rev. H. C. Stuntz, writing from Calcutta to Mrs. Mary H. Hunt, the responsible head of the movement in this country and superintendent of the same for the world's W. C. T. U., says that drink is a rising tide among the masses of that "massed" country, and they are looking to physiological instruction as to the nature and effects of alcohol and other narcotics as one of the most powerful means they can use to save the rising generation from the terrible evil. Rev. J. C. Lawson, writing also to Mrs. Hunt from Niani Tal, India, says: "We need this study of scientific temperance in India, for Englishmen are rapidly making this a drunken nation." Application has been made to the Government for the introduction of the study into the Government schools, and text-books on the subject are being prepared by resident missionaries to be put into the hands of the native students who may thus be warned in time to save them from slavery to the narcotic habits whose universal tendency is to weaken the strong and destroy the weak of all races. Text-books on physiology and hygiene and the effects of narcotics have been translated into the languages and introduced into the schools of Japan and the Sandwich Islands. The Chinese Minister of Education has recommended the same for the Government schools of that country. In Australia the subject has been made compulsory in the primary grades. In England considerable attention is being given to the subject by the teachers, and prominent philanthropists are engaging in efforts for its systematic introduction into the schools. Efforts to the same end are under way in Bulgaria, Denmark, France and other countries of Europe.

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

—The Baptists Preachers' Meeting of Baltimore is said to have taken action favorable to the taxation of church property.

—A whole congregation in Piedmont left the church of Rome in body and soul and called a Protestant pastor. The cause of this defection was the greed of the priest.

—The will of Roswell W. Cook, of Greenfield, Mass., makes the American Missionary Association and the Home Missionary Society residuary legatees of about $75,000.

—The Christian Observer, of Louisville, is satisfied after an examination of the census returns of the population of various cities in the South, that the growth of the membership of the Southern Presbyterian church in those cities has been almost if not quite as large as that of the population.

—During the past fifteen years the Cincinnati Baptists have added seven new churches to the number then existing, the total number now being twenty-six; the total membership has risen from 2,544 to 4,020; and the total amount of benevolent contributions raised last year is four-fold what it was fifteen years ago.

—An organization has been established in London for the purpose of counteracting the unbelief or agnosticism that is prevalent. It is called the Reading Union of the London Diocesan Church. It seeks to make Biblical research popular and the higher education it endeavors to promote is under the care of specialists. Between fifty and sixty of the London clergy and laity have been asked to serve on account of their exact knowledge of those peculiar kinds of learning which have lately made the archaic languages and literature of Egypt and Mesopotamia so helpful to the interpretation of the Scriptures.

—Doing good is a passion with some souls. Income and service are alike consecrated to human welfare. The animating motive is unselfishness. Among the notable modern illustrations of this master-principle in devotion to the needy and suffering, is the Maldavian Cusa, sister of the Romanian Minister, Theodore Rosetti. By the death of her young husband she came into possession of his estate, valued at $600,000. The entire annual income from this vast inheritance she devotes to charities. Not content with mere giving, she acts as nurse at the Children's Hospital at Jassy.—Presbyterian.

—Rev. Dr. Sheldon Jackson is back at Sitka from his trip to Western and Arctic Alaska. The cruise lasted five months. He established three schools at three different points, at Cape Prince of Wales, Point Hope and Point Barrow, being the three largest Esquimau settlements on the Arctic Coast of Alaska. The first is under the auspices of the American Missionary Association, the Congregational church of Southport, Conn., furnishing the funds for the building; the second under the Episcopal Missionary Society; and the third under the Presbyterian Board of Home Missions, the money being contributed by Mrs. Elliott F. Shepard, of New York.

—The Board of Church Extension of the M. E. church has just closed the first quarter of a century of organized church extension. The entire receipts from the beginning have been $4,017,978, of which $1,382,994 has been loans returned. There have been 7,399 churches aided in building. During the past year $185,993 have come to the general fund, and $55,725 have been contributed to the loan fund, which now amounts to $678,927. There is a plan of giving $250 each to frontier churches and $100 each from the mountain fund for cheaper churches in the mountain region. Only by rare exceptions is any money given to churches costing over $10,000. There are outstanding grants not yet paid to 288 churches; donations, $58,475; loans, $47,525; and applications not yet acted upon from 46 churches.

—A bi-centenary of the death of George Fox is to be observed among English Friends, Jan. 13th next. It is suggested as likely to promote the cause of that spiritual Christianity for which he suffered.

—The Church of the Pilgrims, of Brooklyn, of which the Rev. R. S. Storrs, D. D., is pastor, put four thousand dollars on the contribution plate one Sunday last month for the American Board for foreign mission work.

—Rev. J. D. Nutting, former editor of the Albany, Mo., Free Press, and a member of the N. C. Association, was installed pastor of the Tabernacle church, St. Louis, Dec. 19.

—Rev. R. T. Cross is now pastor of the Silver Lake church, Minneapolis, Minn.

—The veteran Presbyterian missionary in China, Dr. A. P. Happer, is afflicted with disease of the heart, in consequence of which he has been compelled to abandon the important work he has been doing for a new college in Canton.

—Queen Victoria has expressed her interest in General Booth's plan for the amelioration of the condition of inhabitants of the slums of London, while the Solicitor-General has forwarded a donation of $250, with an expression of his confidence in Mr. Booth's plans.

—The Bible used in the Second Presbyterian Church of Brooklyn, by Rev. Dr. Henry J. Van Dyke, is over two hundred years old. It was presented to the church in 1834.

—One thousand missionaries for China in five years! The great Shanghai Conference appeals to universal Christendom for an increase of the missionary force from Christian countries to China, of an aggregate annual average of two hundred for five years to come.

—During the year ending June 30th, 1890, 19 brethren and 17 sisters have been called to service in the mission fields of the Moravian church. The work now embraces 113 stations and 21 out stations. There are 299 foreign and 40 native missionaries. The total membership is 87,263, of whom 33,644 are baptized children, 20,620 scholars taught by 344 teachers in 235 schools. This is an increase of 1,457 in total membership over the previous year.

—As the fruit of the recent revival in Plainfield, N. J., led by Evangelist B. Fay Mills, the Trinity Reformed church received ninety-four new members, eighty-six on confession of faith, and eight by letter from other churches, At the same time forty new members were received into the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, twenty-two into the First Baptist church and forty-six into Hope chapel, a mission of the Crescent Avenue church. The First Presbyterian church and the Methodist Episcopal church have also had large additions.

—The population of South Dakota increased in the past ten years 233 per cent. During the same time the number of communicants in Presbyterian churches increased more than 1,700 per cent, or from 203 in our twelve white churches in 1880 to 3,492 in 111 churches in 1890. Our Indian churches in the same time increased from ten in 1880, with 822 members, to fourteen in 1890, with 1,080 members. We now have a membership in our 125 churches of 4,535. During the ten years seventy-nine church buildings and nineteen manses have been built. Two educational institutions have been established—Pierre University, with 105 students, and Scotland Academy, with eighty-three students. This marvelous growth has been in the face of droughts, capital contests, Prohibition and woman suffrage, campaigns, Indian scares, etc., together with the restlessness ot new communities, frequent changes of ministers, inadequate support of same, and sharp competition.—Interior.

COMMENTS BY E. E. FLAGG.

1. Jeroboam's policy for strengthening his kingdom.—vs. 25–29. The calling of David and Jeroboam to a throne took place under very similar circumstances. Both were from the people, and could not show princely or royal origin; and to both was made the same conditional promise:—a perpetuation of their respective dynasties if they would but walk before the Lord with a perfect heart. But the extreme unlikeness of the two characters comes out more and more. Jeroboam's impatience to seize the throne while Solomon was yet living, and his heading of the revolt against Rehoboam, which without doubt he had himself secretly stirred up, is in sharp and vivid contrast with the constant loyalty which David showed to Saul, even when the latter was hunting him to his death. David, from the time he took the reins of government, acted like one who felt himself king by divine right, while Jeroboam, on the contrary, acts with all the jealous consciousness of insecurity natural to one who felt himself to be a usurper. The reason is not hard to find. One believed God fully; the other did not. One gave him the service of a true and loyal heart, while the other if he served him at all did so only so far as his own self-interest prompted. His first measure, the building of a magnificent and strongly-fortified capital city, first at Shechem, the old crowning place of the kings, and then at Penuel, hallowed as the scene of Jacob's wrestling with the angel, was a very wise and politic one. But unfortunately Jeroboam did not stop here. He must carry his policy still farther and utterly disregard the conditions under which he had been made king. Constantly haunted by a fear that the nation, if allowed to go to Jerusalem yearly to worship, would turn back again to their old allegiance, he resorts to the pitiful expedient of setting up a temple worship of his own. Had his faith been like David's, he would have been delivered both from this fear and the consequent temptation. But there was something back of Jeroboam's want of faith—a disobedient heart; for disobedience is always at the root of unbelief. He knew that self and not God was the prime object of his affections and service; and while he was not fulfilling his part of the covenant, to walk before him with a perfect heart, how could he expect God would fulfill his. In view of this seeming danger to his throne the king took counsel. But it is evident that Jeroboam chose his ministers of state from a class of men who, like himself, preferred policy to principle. Yet the prophet, Ahijah, was then living, and should have been what Nathan was to David, one of his chief advisers. Acting on their wicked and foolish counsel, he made two calves of gold as symbols of Jehovah, and set one in Dan at the northern-most limit of his kingdom, and the other in Bethel on the southern border almost within sight of Jerusalem; and then with a tender regard for the people, almost equal to that felt by many political leaders at the present day, who do not want the poor man deprived of his liquor or tobacco, or shut off from amusement and recreation on the Sabbath, he tells them that it is too much for them to go up to Jerusalem; that they can worship God just as acceptably without all that trouble and inconvenience. Counsel that takes the side of our own selfish ease is always to be suspected.

2. The apostasy under Jeroboam.—vs. 29–33. From parallel passages in Chronicles, we learn that, alarmed at these changes and perhaps apprehensive of persecution, there was an exodus of the priests and Levites, and probably others of the most godly and devoted among his subjects. Thus his short-sighted policy defeated its own ends, and in reality strengthened the kingdom of Judah and weakened his own, though the king and his courtiers probably flattered themselves when they saw the people flocking to Bethlehem, that it was a great success. This calf-worship was not Baalism pure and simple, but the worship of Jehovah under a Baalistic symbol. Lodge-worship contains no spiritual element; it is always symbolic and thus degrades and corrupts the true religion exactly as this symbolic calf-worship degraded and corrupted Judaism. To quote Geikie, "Symbolism was a direct step towards, and thus prepared the way for its full introduction and the ruin of the nation." Many people think God can be just as acceptably worshiped under such names as the Grand Architect of the Universe, and other lodge titles, as by those he has given to us in the Bible. But God is not an architect; he is a Creator. All man-invented names for the Highest convey wrong and earthy ideas about him, and wrong ideas of God are the essence of paganism. Jeroboam's calf-worship obscured all true perceptions of Jehovah, and reduced him to the level of the creature; lodge-symbolism does the same. But as the human mind cannot conceive of abstract spirit, God has given us his Son, to embody in his life and character a true idea of what he is. This one Type of himself which he has given to men, the lodge rejects, and like Jeroboam, makes its own ritual, and takes priests "of the lowest of the people" who have no fear of God in their hearts to minister at its altars.

For the last three months of 1890 the Christian Cynosure has given especial attention to the college secret societies for the benefit of the hundreds of colleges to whose reading-rooms it is sent. This interesting discussion, in which have appeared the opinions of some of the very ablest American educators, will be incidentally continued next year.

But with the first of the year will begin to be published the results of a wider investigation than has yet been made into the identity of

MODERN AND ANCIENT SECRETISM.

The ancient secret societies were the MYSTERIES practiced in Chaldea, Egypt, Phœnicia, Greece, Rome, etc. These were the pagan religious systems of the ancient world.

WERE THEY RELATED TO THE LODGES OF TO-DAY?

This question we shall endeavor to answer. We believe that new evidence of the most intimate relation has been lately found, and that the presentation of this evidence to be made in the "Cynosure" will amaze Christendom the moment it is realized.

THE WHITE CROSS LEAGUE

and Social Purity movement is come none too soon, as will appear in the course of this investigation.

In connection with this most important topic the Cynosure will give particular attention to the

publishing them in full so far as they can be obtained, and showing their absolute incompatibility to good citizenship as well as to Christianity.

The peculiar features which have made the Cynosure so valuable in the past will be continued. Current events and the interference of the lodge in them will have especial attention. Able correspondence will be continued from New England, Washington, the Southern Mississippi district, and the Pacific Coast. The portraits and sketches of notable persons who have been identified with Christian reforms will be continued, and will be, as in the past, a very popular feature of the paper. The Sabbath-school lesson notes by Miss E. E. Flagg will be continued. For all who wish to wisely improve every opportunity against the lodge they are the best. The Home and Temperance and other departments will continue to be filled with excellent reading for the fireside.

BE SURE

that the Cynosure comes to your home during 1891.

You can nowhere else read fully the writings and sayings of such men as Joseph Cook, D. L. Moody, George F. Pentecost, D.D., E. P. Goodwin, D.D., Pres. J. Blanchard, Pres. H. H. George, and a host of men as good if not as great, on the subject of secret societies.

Nowhere else can you read of the progress of this reform week by week; and as the secret societies are now beginning openly to nominate and elect men to Congress and State offices, as they number hundreds of orders and millions of members, the issues they raise are of importance to every American.

Since the lodges are so aggressive every citizen should understand their nature and history and something of the men who invented and who manage them. You need the Cynosure, therefore, to keep abreast of the times as a well-informed American.

You ought also to help on this movement against the secret lodges. How better begin than by subscribing for the Cynosure? And $1.50 is but little to give in aid of so good a cause.

OBITUARY.

MARCUS R. BRITTEN, was born in the town of Amsterdam, Montgomery Co., N. Y., Sept. 18, 1815. His parents were natives of New Jersey. Young Britten went to Michigan in the fall of 1836, where he resided about two years; he then returned to New York in the spring of 1839, visited his old home, and was brought to the Saviour the last night he was in his father's house. He came to Wisconsin the same year and purchased the beautiful farm near Spring Prairie, on which he resided till death called him away. He was married at Little Falls, N, Y., Jan. 3, 1841, to Miss Caroline Klock, who proved a true fellow-helper to him. They came the same year to their Spring Prairie home. They have had four children, three still living, who were all present at the funeral. Soon after coming to Wisconsin he united with the Baptist church at Rochester, where he was elected deacon, and retained his membership as long as the church maintained its visibility.

He was a man of strong convictions and positive ideas, earnest and unrelenting in condemning what he believed to be wrong and equally earnest in maintaining what he believed to be right.

In 1843 he cut loose from his old party and identified himself with the Abolitionists. His anti-slavery convictions were not mere theory. He kept a house of refuge and assisted the fugitive in getting to a land of freedom, as shown in the Glover rescue, of Booth notoriety. He was an intense opponent of all secret oath-bound societies, as the readers of the Cynosure are well aware, and took an active interest in the prohibition movement. Verily for such "to live is Christ, but to die is gain." E. L. H.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

WASHINGTON.

It is said that the House Committee on Military Affairs will favorably report the resolution providing for an investigation into the killing of Sitting Bull.

Washington has experienced the heaviest snowstorm in years, and Friday morning travel of all kinds was almost suspended. The snow was ten inches deep on a level.

The President Tuesday made two important appointments. That of Henry B. Brown, of Michigan, to be Associate Justice of the United States Supreme Court to succeed the late Justice Miller, deceased, and Colonel Charles H. Sutherland to be Surgeon General of the United States Army, to succeed Dr. Jedediah H. Baxter, of Vermont, deceased. Judge Brown has had long experience on the Michigan bench, and the appointment is received with favor.

The United States Supreme Court last Monday rendered an important decision in a Mormon polygamy case, holding that a wife is not a competent witness against her husband when polygamy is the crime charged.

The Sunday-closing crusade against the World's Fair has opened up in earnest, and on the desk of each Senator and Representative lately was a letter asking

DONALD KENNEDY

Of Roxbury, Mass., says

Don't write to me when taking the first bottle of my Medical Discovery. I know how it makes you feel, but it's all right. There are certain cases where the Discovery takes hold sharp, but it is the diseased spot in you it has taken hold of, and that's what you want. The Discovery has a search warrant for every humor, from backache to scrofula, inside and outside, and of course it makes a disturbance in your poor body. But the fight is short, you are better by the second bottle; if not, then tell me about it, and I will advise. I will, however, in the future, as in the past, answer any letter from a nursing mother.

Sincerely yours,
DONALD KENNEDY,

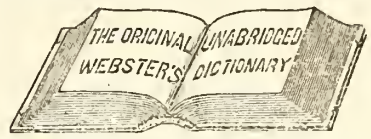
O. A. BLANCHARD, Pres

REMARKABLE OFFER!



Nearly everyone is familiar with the name, but it has been estimated that only one in every two hundred and eighty persons in the United States is fortunate enough to have access to the valuable information contained within the covers of the grandest work ever written by mortal man,

Webster's
UNABRIDGED DICTIONARY.

That this is an unfortunate state of affairs will be admitted by all, and it is due to the fact that no one save the rich could afford them.

The Dictionary is a necessity in every home, school and business house. It fills a vacancy and furnishes knowledge which no one hundred volumes of the choicest books could supply, and all young or old, educated or ignorant, rich or poor should have it within reach and refer to its contents every day in the year.

The Loomis reprint contains all the matter as compiled and arranged by our esteemed and honored author and statesmau

NOAH WEBSTER.

About forty years of his life was devoted to this great work, and when we consider the fact that this book contains about 100,000 words, we will appreciate that these years must have been well spent.

Some idea of the magnitude of this book may be gained from the fact that it contains over 440 cubic inches of paper and has about 300,000 square inches of printed surface.

In addition to the 100,000 words it contains a portrait of the author, together with his biography and a valuable table of 12,000 synonymous words.

By special arrangement with the publishers, we are permitted to furnish this valuable volume: 1st. To any subscriber to our paper; 2nd. To any renewal subscription; and 3rd. To any person who has paid a full year's subscription within the past six months, on receipt of $1.50 for the paper one year, and two dollars and seventy-five cents to cover express charges, packing, etc., of the Dictionary.

Odd-fellowship: ITS HISTORY AND ITS WORK. By President J. Blanchard. A neat pamphlet with cover. Postpaid, 5 cts.

HOME AND HEALTH.

A GREAT REVOLUTION.

There has been as great a revolution in food products as in any other department of commerce. The old-fashioned grocery was a dirty, ill-smelling shop, the chief stock of which was a hogshead of sugar, sacks of green coffee and few other products in crude form. To-day, the grocery is one of the most attractive shops one can visit. An enormous variety of products put up in handsomely labeled packages of tin, glass and paper are presented on every side. Machinery and skilled labor have here, as elsewhere, revolutionized conditions. The weighing and measuring out of products in bulk is largely done away with, as these can be done more quickly and correctly in large factories with machinery and a sub-division of labor. The grocer buys a certain number of packages ready for handing out, and this can be done with less expensive help than if each parcel had to be weighed or measured and put up as called for by the consumer. Business is systematized; the dealer can give a certain number packages to a clerk or department and require the return of the goods or the price therefor. Leaks and waste are prevented. Consumers, too, are quick to see the advantage of buying specific quantities which are guarateed by large and responsible manufacturers; so time, on the part of both dealer and consumer, is economized.

The preservation of food products in tin has placed a much needed supply of anti-scorbutic food within reach of the masses at all seasons, and improvement in diet means improvement in health and morals. Society owes as much to M. Appert, the inventor of preserving food by hermetically sealing it in tin or glass, as it does to Jenner or any of the other great pioneers in the healing art. Indeed, prevention is better than cure, and on this theory Appert is entitled to the first place.—Kate Fields Washington.

There is one principal cause of all the diseases that now hurry half of every generation to the grave before they are twenty years of age. Self-abuse sows the seeds of death. Three-fourths of those who die beyond twenty and under forty are victims of that, or other health-destroying habits contracted in their youth. Parents are fearfully responsible for the moral and physical decay and death of children and youth.

Bathe the feet in warm water frequently in the winter and upon removing them dash cold water upon them to prevent taking cold, then wipe them thoroughly and hold them to the fire rubbing them with the hand until they are dry and pliable in every part. This promotes warmth and health, as well as cleanliness and comfort. Keep the feet warm and the head cool if you want to get well or keep well. Cold or damp feet are sure to bring on some ailment.

Constipation is the cause of three-fourths of the ordinary sickness such as headache, neuraligia, piles, and gastric troubles. Constipation is caused in most cases by medicines swallowed for various ailments such as coughs, colds, throat diseases and consumption. These contain opium and other drugs which repress disease partially, but do not permanently relieve in any case while they leave the system clogged, and health is gradually undermined. Use coarse foods and take exercise in the open air, but avoid pills or any nostrums for the regulation of the bowels.

Oh, this ringing in the ears!
Oh, this humming in the head!
Hawking, blowing, snuffing, gasping,
Watering eyes and throat a-rasping,
Health impaired and comfort fled,
Till I would that I were dead!

What folly to suffer so with catarrhal troubles, when the worst cases of chronic catarrh in the head are relieved and cured by the mild, cleansing and healing properties of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. It purifies the foul breath, by removing the cause of offence, heals the sore and inflamed passages, and perfects a lasting cure.

Permanent Results,

And not a mere temporary exhilaration, are produced by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. This medicine, being an alterative, and working constitutionally, through the blood, its effects may not be immediately apparent in all cases, but the gain in health and strength, through its persistent use, is real and lasting. It reaches every drop of blood in the body.

"I have none but good words to speak regarding Ayer's Sarsaparilla. All during the winter I was languid, tired, and without any appetite, until I commenced the use of this remedy. I took three bottles. Its effects have been revivifying, and I feel as if I had entered a new life. I did not think it was in the power of medicine to produce such a wonderful change, as has Ayer's Sarsaparilla in my case."—Mrs. C. Johnson, 310 Hicks st., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"I have used Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and also other preparations of a like nature, for the purposes of a blood-purifier, and, while receiving no good, but often positive harm, from others, I have always derived benefit from Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and have no hesitation in recommending it to any one in want of a reliable blood-purifier."—Mrs. M. C. Hopkinson, 110 Merrimack Corporation, Lowell, Mass.

☞ The safest and most reliable tonic, alterative, and diuretic is

Ayer's Sarsaparilla —FOR— Debility.

"I was a great sufferer from a low condition of the blood and general debility, becoming, finally, so reduced that I was unfit for work. Nothing that I did for the complaint helped me so much as Ayer's Sarsaparilla, a few bottles of which restored me to health and strength. I take every opportunity to recommend this medicine in similar cases."—C. Evick, 14 E. Main st., Chillicothe, Ohio.

"Ayer's Sarsaparilla is one of the very few proprietary medicines that I can honestly recommend. I have seen it used in this place, in a number of cases, with very satisfactory results, and I have used it in my own family, for salt-rheum, with abundant success. I consider it to be the leading blood-purifier of the day."—Charles C. Davis, Nashua, N. H.

"I suffered from general debility for fifteen years. A few bottles of Ayer's Sarsaparilla completely cured me, and I now enjoy good health."—Mrs. J. F. McElhinney, Truro, N. S.

FARM NOTES.

Under favorable circumstances nature is supposed to be self-sustaining. Where the entire vegetable product of a farm is fed upon the farm and the urine and excrement carefully husbanded and judiciously returned to the land the actual loss is not large. This not being the case, however, and as our population is largely collecting in towns and cities where excrement and sewage are carried to waste, thus effecting an absolute waste for the country farm, the question becomes an important one, "How shall we maintain the fertility of our farms?"

In the time of Abraham and Lot, wealth consisted in "flocks and herds," now in "stocks and bonds." The produce of virgin soils of the West by rapid railroad transit is now thrown into sharp competition with the more costly production of the worn farms of the East. All this emphasizes the question above named, and farmers need to bestir themselves and study the problem opened before us.

It is an admitted fact that the continued growing of the same crop upon land is unwise, is exhaustive. Hence the natural question is as to a judicious system of rotation.

A point of prime importance is to adopt a system which shall secure and profitably utilize a frequent recurrence of forage crops of which red clover as a recuperative crop probably stands at the head. Thus, the farmers of western New York follow wheat by clover, and when the soil is well filled with clover roots there is material available as plant-food, when plowed under, for a succeeding crop of wheat.

In New England a very common practice has been to turn under sod-land, plant corn with a moderate dressing of stable manure, then follow with potatoes, using a "special fertilizer," succeeded by a grain crop, usually rye or wheat, seeding at the same kind with 10 quarts of timothy and 4 to 6 quarts of medium red clover per acre, to be mowed two years and then be put through a similar rotation. These crops with good management are usually remunerative, but the ultimate success of this system depends largely upon the profitable feeding of the forage upon the farm and thus returning as far as possible what has been abstracted from the soil.

Any system which ignores continuous depletion must lead to deterioration and ultimate failure. Therefore we strongly favor dairying as an essential aid in carrying out the idea of restoring in urine and excrement those elements to the farm which are constantly being taken out by continuous cropping. Something can never, by human means, be produced from nothing. A pond with a free outlet but no inlets will soon become dry; the same principle holds true on the farm. Therefore it is often good policy for the farmer to make liberal and judicious purchases of bran, oil-meal and other feeds from the use of which he can see a profit, and also an essential aid in maintaining the fertility of the farm.

But aside from these wise and important returns to the farmer to aid in restoring lost fertility, the forage crops, by their effect upon the soil in filling it with their ramification of roots acting upon the soil and subsoil, mechanically and otherwise, are a most important factor as a restorative agent, and never in any system of rotation to be overlooked. Hence frequent resceding with clover and the grasses cannot be too strongly emphasized.

Experience seems to show that with all crops a continuous repetition is not wise; for two reasons—first, because of the withdrawal of the required elements in the soil to make just those crops; second, the presence of fungous and insect parasites, as is often the case, induced to the injury of a repeated crop. We find this true with annual crops. We find it no less true with regard to orchards. Hence the apple may follow the peach or the pear the apple, or vice versa, but to repeat on the same site is folly. But no orchard has as good promise repeated after any other orchard, as on new land.

In conclusion we advise to convert vegetable into animal products as far as practicable in order "to let one hand wash the other." And also to invoke the aid of recuperative forage crops to be fed on the land or turned under, as the special circumstances may demand.—P. M. Augur, Connecticut State Pomologist.

COUNTRY.

Wednesday at East Lynn, Conn., Judge Hall decided that a "paster" put on a blank space on a ticket made the ballot illegal under the State law. If sustained, the decision will invalidate 3,500 Prohibition ballots and elect Morris (Dem.) Governor.

Statistics published in the last issue of Engineering News show that 5,775 miles of new railroad tracks were laid during 1890, against 5,095 miles in 1889. The total amount of railway now completed in the United States is 167,172 miles.

The twelve railways in Central and Southern Kansas under control of the Gould interest, have been consolidated into one company, to be known as the Kansas, Colorado and Pacific Railroad Company.

A conspiracy to flood the United States with counterfeit silver dollars was unearthed at Pittsburg Friday by the arrest of nineteen Italians employed to pass the coins. Eleven hundred dollars in spurious coin was secured. The counterfeit is nearly perfect.

Capitulations of Indians are reported at Fort Bennett and Fort Sully, about 590 surrendering at the latter place. Sitting Bull's men say they are afraid to return to Standing Rock, and desire to remain at Cheyenne.

The latest reports from the agencies in South Dakota state that the ranks of the hostile Indians are rapidly diminishing, and all danger of fighting is over for the present. The troops are so arranged as to surround the rebel camps and prevent mischief to settlers.

Six ex-aldermen at Des Moines, Iowa, were Tuesday indicted on the charge of conspiracy to defraud the city. A number of justices of the peace and constables were also indicted for blackmail and conspiracy to defraud the county by piling up costs in liquor cases.

An unknown woman, aged about 60, fell on a sidewalk in New York City Thursday. Her long hat-pin was driven into her brain, causing almost instant death.

A car of stone became overbalanced while being unloaded near Gosport, Ind., Tuesday, and upset, throwing ten men down a forty-foot embankment. Five were hurt, two fatally.

The Eastern Market building at Detroit, completed six weeks ago, was wrecked by a whirlwind Tuesday. Three persons were hurt and a number of horses were crushed.

It was announced Tuesday that the London parties who were negotiating for the Emmons mine in Colorado would start for America Saturday to complete the deal. The price is $17,000,000.

A severe earthquake shock was felt at Knoxville, Tenn., and in the surrounding county at 6 o'clock Tuesday morning.

The heaviest storm of sleet ever known at Lexington, Ky., occurred Thursday afternoon and during the night. Shade trees and telegraph and telephone poles were broken and miles of wire were down. The city fire-alarm system was entirely ruined, many of the boxes being burned out.

Heavy snowstorms prevailed Thursday throughout Ohio, seriously impeding street car traffic at Cincinnati and Columbus. Railway trains were also considerably delayed.

A fierce wind struck the new syndicate town of Barberton, near Akron, O., Tuesday afternoon. The only building destroyed was the new shoe shop and the Creedmoor Cartridge Company. All of the brick work had been finished, and the carpenters were at work on the ridge pole when the high wind demolished the walls down to the first story in a twinkling, and seven men were hurled into the heaps of timbers and brick. One was instantly killed, and six severely injured.

A severe storm raged Friday in New York and New England reaching south to Virginia and west to Ohio. Business was much delayed, and in some places a very low temperature was recorded.

The first loss of life from the great snowstorm is just reported from Hamlin, Lincoln county, W. Va. James Vest, a school teacher, was found frozen to death near there. He was buried in a snow drift on a road leading across the mountains, and was evidently on his way home to spend New Years when overcome by the cold.

FOREIGN.

Owing to the railroad strike, which has been in progress in Scotland for some time past, several sugar refineries in Greenock have been compelled to suspend operations.

It was estimated last Thursday that about nine thousand men are out on strike on the various railways in Scotland. Traffic on the North British railway has almost ceased. The company will suspend the operations of its steamers on Loch Lomond and the Clyde in order to obtain employes to work on the railway.

The Paris papers announce that Emperor William has decided to visit that city. The Emperor, according to the Gaulois, will travel in strict incognito, and will not take up his residence at the German embassy. Subsequently still, according to the newspaper mentioned, the German Emperor will proceed to Cannes and San Remo.

Her majesty's ship Magnet left Portsmouth Dec. 22, for the coast of Galway. The Magnet is loaded with meal and potatoes, together with a quantity of government stores of all description. This cargo is one of a series sent and to be sent by the government to relieve the distress of the famishing inhabitants of certain sections of Ireland. Three other British gunboats which have been engaged in similar work for some time past, have been ordered to continue this duty three months longer, when, it is hoped, there will be no further necessity for rendering assistance along the coast.

In the Kilkenny election in Ireland the Parnellites suffered a crushing defeat. The McCarthy candidate was elected by 1,200 majority. Parnell, however, blindly pushes forward and protests that he will keep up the fight.

The political operations of the secret Farmers' Allianee and Farmers' Mutual Benefit Association recall the excitement two years ago at the discovery of a secret organization in the Republican party in southern Ohio, popularly known as the "Stranglers." For several years this secret oath-bound fraternity ruled in the political affairs of Cincinnati and other cities of that State. Exposure seemed to kill the odious organization, but it is said to be reviving, being cherished by Foraker and other Freemasons of like kidney with the hope of keeping old John Sherman out of the Senate after his present term. The State of Ohio cannot afford to tolerate such business as this.

A serious charge was made in some of our city papers last week against the State and National banks. They hope to get a bill through the next Legislature limiting the independence of private bankers and subjecting them to official examination. This is well enough; but the statement is that in order to create a popular sentiment that will sustain the measure and insure it, the incorporated banks have used the unfortunate failure of Mr. Kean to further this purpose in a most dishonorable way; that they have employed the Jewish lawyer who has been prosecuting the investigation before the county court, and by him have created the impression that the assets of the Kean bank will hardly realize ten per cent, whereas the assignees hope to pay forty and probably more. To victimize a man of Mr. Kean's long and well-known standing for such a purpose is a gross injustice, the effect of which will certainly react upon the heads of its agents.

The School Board of this city saw the petition of 1,600 citizens for the restoration of the Bible to its place in the public schools, heard the eloquent plea of the women who presented it, and then unanimously voted that "the prayer of the petitioners be not granted." But France, vacillating between Masonic infidelity and the intrigues of the Jesuits, is learning a lesson that our Catholic-infidel-Protestant school men of Chicago may some time wish they had been wise enough to heed in time. The French minister of Public Education lately confessed while the school budget was being discussed in the Assembly that the abolition of religious instruction in the high schools and colleges was so injurious to the interests of the State and depopulated these schools in such an alarming manner, that the teachers of religion had to be reinstated. The same thing was reported of the lower public schools. Since the enforcement of the radical school laws the public schools have lost two-thirds of their pupils, who are sent by their parents to the free church-schools.

Christendom has been long amazed at the opium traffic of Great Britain. How a nation nominally, and really, so Christian, can continue to ruin millions of human beings, body and soul, for money, is past understanding. But our own Christian administration is at the same business. Mr. Blaine's reciprocity speeches and continental leagues are coming into market. The State Department has just issued a pamphlet, which shows that the consuls employed by the United States in Spanish America have been directed to obtain all information possible that could be useful in promoting a certain kind of trade, carried on by citizens of foreign name and lineage under the American flag. Mr. Blaine has spoken so earnestly for the opening of these southern markets to our manufactures, that all good men ought to be interested in the result. Therefore this pamphlet might be supposed to be of vast interest,—to the boot and shoe trade, or the manufacturers of agricultural implements, for instance. Not so! The United States Government, under the direction of Mr. Blaine, has made itself AN AGENCY FOR SELLING BEER! Not satisfied with killing off his fellow citizens by ten thousands, this man is prostituting his high office and using the public funds to help kill off as many as possible of the citizens of other nations, for whom he has for years been protesting the greatest friendship! Verily, what will the end be?

A big fire in Baltimore, Dec. 26, wiped out the Masonic joss house of that city and the Grand Lodge of Maryland is in deepest mourning. All its precious records are gone to smoke, its costly banners, and relics "which throw light on the early history of the city." Alas! beside these unspeakable losses the Knight Templars lost their trumpery of feathers, gold lace, big gloves and pewter swords. Their 500 suits were worth they say $100,000, or $200 apiece. Their families can probably say that they deserved to lose them: and the public can say, if the lodge organizations could have gone up in smoke also, leaving the individual members honest, untainted American citizens, unsmirched by lodge oaths and folly, it would have been thrice a blessing. The public has a right to know, too, what sort of Masonic trinkets or records "throw light" on the history of Baltimore. Were they some memorandum of lodge favoritism in courts, or politics?

A later report informs us that the burned out lodges applied to Secretary of the Treasury Windom for the use of the old United States courthouse, and received a prompt reply granting the request, and the building was formally handed over to be used by the Freemasons until their temple is rebuilt. There is nothing in the language of the report to show that this was a business transaction and that the government would be reimbursed for the use of its building, but rather that these lodges are to be housed at government expense, when nothing is more evident that lodge triumph means the overthrow of our republican institutions. An application of Judge Anderson's anti-Mormon decision is needed in Washington.

In connection with Bro. Hinman's notice of the Jewish exodus from Russia it is interesting to note that in the months of June and July of the past year there came to this country about 10,000 Russian Jews. So says one of the Hebrew journals. This flow of immigration is likely to increase, for the condition of the Jew in Europe grows more perilous and intolerable. There are two points toward which these moving columns generally go, Palestine and the United States. But the president of the Jewish Alliance says that for one Russian Jew who goes to Palestine nearly ten come to America, and the Jews already resident here are almost in consternation at the number of poor, pillaged, discouraged co-religionists who are constantly appealing to them for help and direction. They have organized several colonies, but only two are in any respect prosperous—the colonies at Rosenhayne and Vineland, N. J. There is now a movement agitating the wealthy Jews of Europe, and which may enlist the Rothchilds, to remove a half million of their countrymen to the fertile lands of Buenos Ayres. The estimated cost will be some $20,000,000, but it will be the founding of a new empire in a propitious district.

A PRACTICAL SURVEY OF THE COLLEGE FRATERNITIES.

BY REV. H. H. GEORGE, D.D., EX-PRESIDENT OF GENEVA COLLEGE.

The college with which I have been connected for a number of years, had among its uncompromising principles this one, viz., That no secret society should have any place within the range of its authority. With this as a fact, I have not had the opportunity of such familiarity with the workings of the college societies as some others have had. But I have a number of serious objections to them. And,

1. Their secret character allows them to organize, and carry on their dark movements in colleges, where they are not permitted.

It is a well-known fact that they do exist in colleges whose laws expressly forbid anything of the kind. I know of a college whose code is emphatic against such orders, and yet it is an open secret among its students, that two or three fraternities are running flush, and doing a thriving business. This is sheer deception, and deception that could only be carried on under a cover of secrecy. An exposure would make liable to the censures of the college.

Young men ought to go to college to observe, and not to break, law. When by as ystematized order of night meetings, a number of students band together to oppose the Board, to deceive the Faculty, and to put themselves squarely against the well known laws of the institution, is it an honorable thing? Can honorable men bind themselves by secret bonds to continually trample law under their feet?

What must be the effect of such an organized effort to deceive upon the character of the young man himself? He enters college, matriculates, and promises to obey the laws. He attends chapel exercises, goes before his professor in recitation, and discharges his daily duties as a law-abiding student. He leaves the impression upon all he meets, in the daytime, that he is loyal to the college, but at night he gathers with his cabal and plots rebellion; he desires and plans and purposes to carry out his course of opposition to that college law that forbids such societies. The effect of this can only be to cherish and cultivate a false element in the character of that young man. He is educating himself to deceive; and deception is deception all the same wherever you find it. It may be found in different lines of effort, and may have different degrees of consequences, but it is always deception the same. Should this element in one form get a place in a young man's heart at school, it is not a great stretch to suppose that it might have a place in the same heart when that young man has gone out of school and has gone into business.

No parent can have a proper sense of the exceeding sensitiveness, and tender delicacy of the elements that enter into genuine character, who would not use all his influence to prevent his son from a deliberate course of deception, or a confirmed habit of it. For if that parent have any intelligence, he must know that the habit of mind becomes very strong; so strong, indeed, that no matter in what different directions the mind may turn, or to what engagements, the habit is always there.

Nor is this element in the young man's character only a mere deception, to be overlooked as a slight equivocation; but if you push the analysis of the case it will be found to be bald falsehood. Take the concrete case: A. B. C. D. E. and F. appear before the proper officers of the college on September the 15th on entering college, and that day they promise faithfully that they will keep all the laws of the institution while attending it, one of which (and it is read to them) "that there shall be no secret societies in this college;" and on the night of the 15th of November, the same A. B. C. D. E. and F. go into some secret room, close the door and darken the windows, and enter into a Kappa Phi organization, in direct opposition to the college law. What name must the Professor of Ethics give to a course of that kind? The act in November is directly opposite to the promise in September. To the same question in September, will you obey this law, the answer is yes, and in November it is no. They cannot both be true, for logic says contradictions cannot both be true, and by the same logic they cannot both be false; hence between them is a bald falsehood. Then the boy learns to lie. Pitiable as the conclusion is, the fact cannot be evaded, that the student of an anti-secret college who enters into, and helps to carry on a secret fraternity, when he has solemnly promised that he will not do so, is cultivating the element of falsity in his character; which should be deplored and labored against, and prayed against the same as any other false bent that prophesies evil in the student's life.

It has in it, as well, the element of presumption. The fact that the college has a law against such societies proves that it believes them to be wrong. When students organize them in such a college, they say, The college is wrong, or it does not know. We propose to set them up in the face of the college, and trample under foot any law it may have made on the subject.

2. These student secret organizations cannot be for the good of the college, but must be alone for the selfish interests of the student.

Was it ever heard of, that a number of students had to meet at night with closed doors and dark windows to plan the good of a college? If there be something not right about the college in the opinion of these men, something wanting that might give the college greater efficiency, why not talk about it in daylight; talk to the professors about it; nobody is supposed to be more interested in the welfare of the college than they. Don't hide the matter. Don't get behind the door to concoct it. The college is open; willing to consider suggestions. It has never yet been proposed as a reform measure; the world has never yet heard that a clique of students had to organize a college reform society in the night, and take oaths, and have signs and grips and passwords to carry out their reformation.

Then they are alone for the peculiar interests of the parties getting them up and carrying them on. The college is supposed to extend alike privileges to all students. No well-conducted institution can have any favoritism. Any professor who for a moment indulges in anything of the kind, falls beneath the dignity of his position. But it is with this share-and-share-alike privilege that these society men are dissatisfied. There is a grade to be made in examination, a contest place to be filled, a prize to be won, or a society honor to be reached, and alike privileges do not satisfy these aspirants. They are not willing to risk the chance for these prizes upon the fair race of talent and study and effort. They will plot another way. They band together for the purpose of thwarting others; putting obstacles in their way, prejudicing their efforts, and running through their prospects. They plot to bring combined influence upon professor and fellow-student, and especially literary societies, to oust the hopeful student in order to get the place and prospect for another.

By this means, frankness and fairness and justice are sacrificed. The student of real merit is discriminated against; too magnanimous himself to get down to such a pot-house-politics plan of reaching an honor, and hindered from reaching it in any fair way, the honor is taken from the deserving and given to the undeserving. It is not at all strange that men who have trained themselves to such habits, or gotten such bents of mind in college, when they come out and enter political circles, are ready for any kind of maneuvering there. To jostle a man out of a place of honor in the literary society of college, by defamation of character, by plotted prejudice, by secretly-conspired votes, is a deed precisely like that of politicians who, by bribery, and slander, and divers conspiracies, defeat men in their aspirations for political trust. The deeds are similar enough in their maturity, to be recognized as twins in their origin. When college men learn these things at college, what is to hinder them from practicing them out of college? If you separate selfish plans and aims and objects from college fraternities, in my judgment you cut their tap-root, or you draw away all the soil and moisture and richness that nourishes from their roots, when they must necessarily wither and die.

3. The time and attention given to these societies are damaging to college work.

No college should have more, and every college should have as much, work as will occupy all the time and talent of the student. If not in its curriculum of study, that should be supplemented by a carefully systematized course of reading. The college years are not long enough to be run through by any organized system that will consume any part of their time, or waste any portion of the strength to be given to them. The work of a college period of life is too definite, too unique, too momentous in its prospectiveness, to be tampered with by anything that will emasculate it. These societies do levy severely upon time. They take time in their meetings in planning, and they take time out of meetings in talking over what was done, and arranging to carry out their plans. They engage the mind and draw it off from its rightful study, they excite the brain with some secret scheme, they divide the attention, they dissipate study by their own projects. All this they do, while every hour of time and force of attention given to anything not properly college exercise, are so much wasted. In the vivacity of youth men do not always see the grade of scholarship, as also the grade of character and noble manhood every man ought to carry with him out of college; nor do they always duly estimate the character of those things that must inevitably detract from this grade. The time and divided attention of fraternities cannot help but lower college standards. Nor can they take to themselves the claim of recreation, or rest from study; they are not such. They are exacting upon strength, exciting and exhausting, but in a direction that cannot help, only harm their college work. A student cannot run the rounds of a fraternity, endure its waste of time, bear its exhaustion of strength, and be the student he might have been if he had never entered it.

I object, then, to the whole system of college fraternities, because they waste the time, burden the strength, and seriously interfere with the student in his college work.

4. They divert money needed for college expenses, to unwise and often unholy purposes.

The average parent who sends his son to college has no means to spare, beyond what the boy actually needs. There are college needs, not a few, that must have money to supply them. And if the means sent by parents for college needs, be wasted in fraternity lines, or any other unnecessary ways, the student is embarrassed just so much. Besides the sin and folly of wasting money for useless objects, it saps so much of the vitality from college efforts. Books are unbought, facilities for improvement are not secured, students make false pretences to get more money,—and all because they have diverted needed funds from their designed ends, to selfish and unhallowed purposes. If these fraternities cost nothing, they were unworthy the worthy student, and every farthing they cost, just adds so much to their objectionable character.

THE RUSSIAN EXODUS.

BY REV. H. H. HINMAN.

The recent and renewed persecution of the Jews by the Russian government, and the flight of great numbers to other lands, notably to Great Britain and the United States, recalls the wonderful statements of both history and prophecy in reference to this people.

The number of Jews in Russia is from 4,500,000 to 5,000,000, twice as many as came out of Egypt and equal to the population of Palestine in the days of Solomon or in the time of our Saviour. They are, in fact, an imperium in imperio of such gigantic proportions and such cohesive and financial power, that the modern as well as the ancient Pharaoh has become alarmed. Nor is this anti-Semitic feeling confined to Russia. In Austria, Germany, and all over Continental Europe, where the Jews are in sufficient numbers to constitute an important factor in society, there is the same race antagonism. The only nations that offer to the Jew a genuine hospitality are Great Britain, her colonies and the United States.

Whether this indicates, as some suppose, that the Anglo-Saxon race are of Hebrew origin, it at least indicates that the two greatest of the Protestant nations are to bear an important part in the conversion of this people to Christianity and their restoration to their ancient home in Syria.

If there are any two facts more clearly predicted than all others, they are the conversion of the Jews to Christ and their rehabitation as a nation in the land of their fathers. The route from southern Russia to Palestine would not seem to be by the way of the Atlantic Ocean and the Mississippi Valley; but in the providence of God they come here for protection, instruction, and for the accumulation of the wealth essential to the founding of a great Christian nation on the Eastern shore of the Mediterranean. There are already more Jews in Jerusalem than returned from the Babylonian captivity; and the new railroad from Jaffa to Jerusalem will make it both easy and profitable for this people to occupy their ancient home.

SUNDAY PLEASURING.

From four different sources testimony comes as to the increasing desecration of the Sabbath by the habit of devoting its afternoon and evening to social pleasures. Rev. Dr. Hamlin of Washington, the President's pastor, declared in a Sabbath convention of this year that he considered the habit of devoting Sabbath afternoons to social pleasures the most serious peril that now threatens the Sabbath. He mentioned the fact that several fashionable families in Washington boldly announce Sunday receptions, while others, more quietly, in increasing numbers, receive their friends in the afternoon and give Sunday teas, thus driving out the American Sabbath and introducing the Continental Sunday even in the very capital itself. Dr. John Hall has publicly lamented the increase of Sunday evening parties among fashionable people of the metropolis. Mrs. Sangster, whose position as the editor of Harper's Bazar makes her an authority in this matter, also deplores the fact that even Christian women apologize for, and participate in, these Sunday evening gayeties, which cannot fail to make an ever-widening breach in the wall that protects the Rest Day. An incidental confirmation of these three utterances came unconsciously in the answer of a dealer in bric-a-brac, who being inquired of as to what is wanted of decorators, replied that "among the things that are most asked for just now are novelties for Sunday evening teas." These social pleasures on the Sabbath in the homes of the rich are hostile to the whole spirit of the day, not only from a Christian, but even from the humane, standpoint; for they open the way for the poor, who have no handsome parlors and attractive music, to demand the saloon and the Sunday theatre.

This Sunday pleasuring of "society" is a bad case of Anglo-mania. At the very time when we are getting so much horrible evidence that the so-called "nobility" of England needs the moral culture of well-kept Sabbaths to improve both reputation and character, they are multiplying Sunday parties at which theatrical performances, smoking concerts, comic recitations, exhibitions of jugglery, billiards, coach drives, lawn tennis, boxing, and dancing turn the Lord's Day into a day of labor and revelry. Even the St. James Gazette (April 18, 1889), which is by no means Puritanic, is driven to the following protest: "Purely selfish amusements, which exact the labor of others, are more inexcusable on Sunday than on any day of the week. The silly and empty-headed ostentation often displayed in the so-called upper circles cannot be denounced too strongly. 'Society'—if one must use the word—might do far more than the church ever can in this matter, by setting the example of wholesome rational relaxation on Sundays. The utter absence of right feeling and good taste among people who might be looked to for refinement is nowhere more apparent than in the Sunday diversions of the rich and 'smart.'"

Washington and New York "society" has not yet caught up with the lustful, drunken lords of London in this assault upon the national Sabbath, but they are on the same road, and there is no logical stopping-place between a Sunday dinner-party and a Sunday dance or drama. The so-called Christians who sanction these Sunday parties are the superlatives of hypocrisy.—Our Day.

THINK NOT THAT GOD DESERTS THE FIELD.

Think not that God deserts the field,
Though Truth the battle loses;
But grasp again Faith's sword and shield,
And follow where he chooses.
He shrouds himself in dark events,
No mortal eye beholds him;
And many an adverse providence
As in a cloud enfolds him.

We see Truth's foes closing around,
Distrusting her resources;
Faith fills the teeming battle-ground
With chariots and with horses.
And lo, God's standard rises clear
Amid the smoke and thunder;
Embattled armies disappear,
Or into fragments sunder.

The baffled surf ebbs to the sea,
As though its task forsaking,
But to return more mightily,
In greater volumes breaking.
What God hath sworn shall yet be done,
No power of man can stay him,
Upon the seas he plants his throne,
And all the waves obey him.

Soldiers of Christ, take heart again,
Fear not dark portents solemn;
God moves across the battle plain,
In many an unseen column.
The very stars of the blue night,
As they fulfill their courses,
Shall wheel obedient in the fight,
And add them to our forces.

SLAUGHTER IN WARS OF THE LAST THIRTY YEARS.

According to the estimates of French and German statisticians there have perished in the wars of the last thirty years 2,500,000 men, while there has been expended to carry them on no less than the inconceivable sum of $13,000,000,000. Of this amount France has paid nearly $3,500,000,000 as the cost of the war with Prussia, while her loss in men is placed at 155,000. Of these 80,000 were killed on the field of battle, 36,000 died of sickness, accidents, or suicide, and 20,000 in German prisons, while there died from other causes enough to bring the number up to the given aggregate. The sick and wounded amounted to 477,421, the lives of many thousands of whom were doubtless shortened by their illness or injuries. According to Dr. Roth, a German authority, the Germans lost during the war 60,000 men killed or rendered invalid and $600,000,000 in money, this being the excess of expenditure or of material losses over the $1,250,000,000 paid by France by way of indemnity. Dr. Engel, another German statistician, gives the followiug as the approximate cost of the principal wars of the last thirty years: Crimean war, $2,000,000,000; Italian war of 1859, $300,000,000; Prusso-Danish war of 1864, $35,000,000; war of the rebellion (North), $5,100,000,000, (South) $2,300,000,000; Prusso-Austrian war of 1866, $330,000,000; Russo-Turkish war, $125,000,000; South African wars, $8,770,000; African war, $13,250,000; Servo Bulgarian, $176,000,000. All these wars were murderous in the extreme. The Crimean war, in which few battles were fought, cost 750,000 lives, only 50,000 less than were killed or died of their wounds North and South during the war of the rebellion. The figures, it must be remembered, are German, and might not agree precisely with the American estimates. The Mexican and Chinese expeditions cost $200,000,000 and 65,000 lives. There were 250,000 killed and mortally wounded during the Russo-Turkish war, and 45,000 each in the Italian war of 1859 and the war between Prussia and Austria. In the other wars the loss of life was relatively less, which did not make either the men or money easier to part with in the more limited areas where they occurred. And this is but a part of the accounting since it does not include the millions expended during the last twenty years in maintaining the vast armaments of the European powers, the losses caused by the stoppage of commerce and manufactures, and the continual derangement of industries by the abstraction from useful employment of so many millions of persons held for a period of military service extending from three to five years.—San Francisco Chronicle.

POLITICAL SECRETISM.

The anti-secret reform has need for double diligence in this age and land of secret conclaves and orders. No man can tell what dynamitic plots may be hatching in the secret halls of the many-headed secret dynasty. Men are trained in these secret orders to conceal their operations from the eyes of the outside world, and they form habits of reserve in all the relations of life that fits them for dangerous operations, though they may not be actually so engaged. No government can be entirely secure, while a million secret conclaves are being held within its borders, where the members are sworn to secrecy.

We now have the spectacle before us of a secret political organization formed expressly for political objects, and already electing their Congressmen and Legislators to carry out their special objects. They have among their leaders the wily politician, who is seeking his own ends without regard to the interests of society, as well as the sturdy yeoman. It would be perfectly safe, we think, to say that either the party will break to pieces, or it will ultimately break the Government to pieces. If some classes conspire in secret, others have the same right, and they will use it just as was done at the time of the French Revolution. History is continually repeating itself, and we are at fault if we learn no lessons from the past in regard to the dangers of conspiring, one against another, in the face of our oft-repeated declaration of equality of rights. The Christian Cynosure, of Chicago, is doing valiant service in battling against the various orders in the country. It is worthy to be sustained in its work by all who love open and fair dealing among men.—Christian Instructor.

"Neither Christianity nor any other system of religion is a part of the law of this State." Such was the point of a decision of the Supreme Court in one of our States. That is a sophism which is coming into general legal popularity. It is thoroughly and radically untrue. Christianity is the basal, the fundamental, law of the United States and of every State, and it is recognized in the statute law of every State, to say nothing of the common law, which is permeated with it. The functions of the church and of the State are separated by impassable boundaries, but both rest upon the common Christian foundation. The attempt to eliminate Christianity as a part of the laws, and as a part of the education of the people is an attempt to disintegrate the foundations upon which our free institutions rest.—The Interior.

"Freemasonry is a philosophical development of the ancient system of sun-worship." So says Mackey's Manual. Surely, then, the lodge should have no attractions for Christians. Sun-worship, in all its branches and developments, is one of the works of the devil, which the Son of Man came to destroy.—United Presbyterian.

CHRISTLESS PRAYERS.

THE JEWISH CONFERENCE AND THE SECRET LODGES.

The attempt of some papers and pastors of Chicago to make a point against the Anti-masonic discussion after the late Jewish Conference, was noted in these columns at the time, their misrepresentations pointed out and their arguments refuted. Since then the Tribune has published Pres. C. A. Blanchard's reply to his criticisers and other editors have added an interesting comment. These are all worth preserving and we give them herewith:

PRESIDENT BLANCHARD'S LETTER TO THE TRIBUNE.

WHEATON COLLEGE, Dec. 2.

I have been deeply interested in the letters and interviews which you have printed bearing on the Christian-Jewish conference recently held in your city. Before the assembling of that conference I saw some criticisms on its general plan, but since its work was done the only part of it which seems to be objected to is that taken by the Christian ministers who were requested to conduct the devotional exercises. It is a subject of congratulation that all are now agreed that those holding two faiths so related as are the Jewish and Christian may meet for kindly interchange of views without awakening the theological hatreds of ages now happily long past. Should another such conference be held doubtless some of our brethren who could not find time to attend the one recently in session will be present, in which case they will be prepared more intelligently to pass judgment upon the exercises as a whole and in detail.

It is, I confess, a matter of great surprise to me that these brethren should be so deeply stirred by the use of Christless prayers as they seem to be. Several of them announce themselves as Masons, and some who do not, might, I think, properly do so. Now every reasonably well-read professional man knows that Freemasonry is a complete deistic system, rejecting Jesus Christ and boasting that pagans, pirates, rebels, and Indians are eligible to membership in its lodges. I read at a single sitting sixty-five prayers printed for the use of those Christian ministers who are chaplains of lodges, chapters, councils, consistories, etc., not one of which contained mention of our Lord Jesus Christ, a confession of sin, or allusion to the Holy Ghost. This is, as I say, known to all well-read men; that it is known to some of the men who furnished your reporters with protests against Christless prayers in public, is clearly stated by themselves. Still further and far worse this same lodge which prays not occasionally but always and by law without any mention of our Saviour, lays hands on the New Testament and strikes out that holy name from the page, where it was written by the Spirit of God. It has always been impossible for me to understand how Christians could for one hour remain connected with an institution which thus ignores and insults the Saviour of the world.

Others who were interviewed and who are so filled with alarm have been in Chicago for years, where thousands of men are connected with nearly one thousand different lodges, in most of which our Lord Jesus Christ cannot be lawfully named. I have heard some of these brethren privately express themselves against these Christ-rejecting orders, but have not known them to do so publicly except in the case of the Clan-na-Gael, when they simply echoed the daily press. I rejoice greatly that they so clearly see the character of prayers from which the name of our Lord and Saviour is purposely excluded, and shall expect to hear from them such a continual and earnest protest that all Christian men in this region shall understand that to write, print, and read prayers, or to offer them without reading, if the name of Jesus be purposely omitted, is like the denial of Peter or the treason of Judas. Pastors occupying such pulpits as that of the Second Presbyterian or Union Park Congregational Church cannot speak out manfully against Christless prayers without doing great good. I trust that their zeal may not diminish, for I believe with all my heart that the whole list of prayers from which the name of Jesus has been excluded and which are repeated in the lodges of Chicago, week by week, are an offense to God and the ruin of the precious souls for whom the Saviour died. It is quite time that the thousands of well-intentioned but uninformed men who have united with these secret orders to obtain some petty political or business advantage were warned of their danger from the deistic (atheistic) religions which they involve and teach. It is a source of sincere gladness to me that we are to have the aid of so influential men in accomplishing so great a task.

It will be naturally inferred that the writer never agreed to offer prayer in the late conference or elsewhere which should omit that name which is above every name. When invited to offer prayer at that gathering it was my impression that the two parties to the conference were honest men and nothing has yet occurred to change that opinion. I expected the Christians to act as Christians, the Jews as Jews, and that each party while self-respectful should also respect the other. Accordingly I prayed as always in the name of Jesus. My engagements were such that I heard none of the other prayers with which sessions were opened, but I suppose that other men who led the devotions of that remarkable assemblage did in all good faith as I did—i. e., prayed according to the faith which they profess. The Tribune report of the prayer which I offered included possibly one-third of the words uttered, and the reporter would probably be the last man to pretend that he took my words verbatim. It is certainly a compliment to the reporting of the Chicago press that men who have been residing in cities should have assumed verbal accuracy in a case in which it was not even intimated.

I am sure that my critics do not hate the Jews. The Jesus whom they receive as the world's Saviour was of that nation. The Paul whose words echo and reach through so many ten thousands of Christian churches was a Jew, and I am sure that they could, any one of them, sit down in friendly converse with representatives of that people whose long past has been such a heart-breaking tragedy, whose future is so radiant with prophetic hope. In this converse they would not be blundering and brutal, for they are educated men. They would not attempt to exalt and magnify points of difference; they would, on the contrary, emphasize points of agreement. Beginning at Moses and all the prophets they would speak with their friends of the Messiah who came once in shame and anguish, but who is truly coming again with the names of his people in his heart, and the scepter of a universal dominion in his hand. This I understand to be our purpose. This seemed to me the effect produced by the able paper of Dr. Marquis. If we did not accomplish all that others might we did honestly what we could. CHARLES A. BLANCHARD

COMMENTS OF THE PRESS.

We are more than gratified that Dr. C. A. Blanchard denies the report that he made a Christless prayer in the Jewish Conference here a short time since as was reported in the papers. The Tribune of last Thursday contains an article from his pen strongly condemning such prayers, as might be expected. From the first we felt there must be a mistake about the matter. But the correction was so long coming, we began to fear there was some foundation for the report. But now it looks like a plot to injure his reputation on account of his opposition to Masonic prayers which are Christless. The very men who have been active in condemning the Doctor have nothing to say against the Christless prayers offered by ministers in the lodges all over the land. We hope this episode will serve to open the eyes of many Christians to the wickedness of Christless prayers under any circumstances.—Christian Instructor, Dec. 11.

Why did the papers speak out so decidedly against Christless prayers when used in this Jew-Christian Conference, and yet have not a word of condemnation for ministers and other members of the Christian church who are year after year praying in the lodges of Freemasons, Odd-fellows, etc., and by law of the lodges rejecting the name of Jesus from the religious services? Is it not as sinful in the one case as in the other? In the Conference Jesus' name was omitted out of deference to the Jews. In the lodge his name is omitted for the same, or a similar reason. Indeed, the matter seems, if possible, to be worse in the case of the lodge than in the Conference. In the former Christ's name is rejected by law and permanently; in the latter it was only temporarily or for a single occasion omitted. Will the editors of the papers here referred to think over this matter, and will they answer our "Why?"—Idem, Dec. 25.

Christless prayers we know are common. Secret orders have their rituals, and from every prayer they contain, the name and mediation of Christ are studiously excluded. They hold that as their membership is made up of Jews, Mohammedans, and deists, as well as Christians, everything of a distinctively Christian character must be omitted from their prayers. But every intelligent Christian man knows that such prayers are not only useless, but highly dishonoring to the hearer of prayer. It would be far better to make no pretense of worship whatever, than attempt to approach God in any other way than through the Lord Jesus Christ.—United Presbyterian.

Dr. Blanchard, Jr., of Wheaton, was among those who were reported to have omitted the name of Christ, out of deference to the rabbis, at the late Jew-Christian Conference, and on that understanding of the facts was sharply criticised, because one of the sharpest of the counts in his indictment of Masonry is the paganism of its ritual. The young Doctor lay low in the grass while the criticism was going on. Dr. Noble of the great west-side Congregational church was lurid in his remarks. "Judas Iscariot has a younger brother," he said. A Christian minister who would purposely, and for the purpose of winning grace from unbelievers, refuse to speak Christ's name in prayer, is according to Dr. Noble and some other ministers, a brother of Judas Iscariot. Then Blanchard up and let fly both barrels, and trudged home with a bagful of Masonic ministerial game. He was misreported. He did not omit the name of Christ in his prayer. And so he is now loaded for bear with the ammunition that was fixed for him. Blanchard is a mild spoken sort of a man, but he is never at home so comfortably as when out of doors in a scrimmage.—Interior, Dec. 11

INDIANS AND EDUCATIONAL METHODS.

That the so-called "Indian problem" is gradually resolving itself under the educational methods which intelligent minds and honest hearts are centering into a system can not be doubted. Reports sent out by the Indian Rights Association and by Commissioner Morgan leave little room to doubt that, under just treatment in his material conditions, the Indian, generally speaking, is not only willing but is even anxious to learn and follow the ways of peace. In view of what has been accomplished by decent and just dealing with the Indian it is cowardice or vicious greed that urges procedure against the red men on the theory that the only good Indian is the dead Indian. Persons who advocate humane and philanthropic measures and declare the possibility of converting our Indians into orderly, respectable, and educated industrious citizens have been sneered at over-much, and we hear a great deal about the treachery, intractability and instinct savagery of the Indian; but from influential and disinterested sources we hear altogether too little of the outrages, public and personal, to which the Indian has been subjected as the result of frontier encroachments and the avarice of white men.

The outbreak in Dakota, deplorable to the last degree, has been, nevertheless, of very great service in supporting the educational system. Ten years ago such an uprising, especially coupled with an intense religious enthusiasm, would have precipitated one of the worst Indian wars in the last third of a century; whereas now the disaffected and hostile forces that withdrew from the reservations were not of that numeric dignity to threaten serious opposition to the soldiers. Indian haters found in this outbreak so much to sustain their extreme opinions how the Indians should be dealt with that they did not give thought to the lesson presented in the attitude of the trained Indian scouts who remained faithful to their implied trust, though they had in so doing to turn against their brothers and kindred. Let it not be forgot that the men who went intrepidly forward under orders to capture Sitting Bull or to disarm the hostiles at Wounded Knee were the Indian police who might—had treachery been the dominant characteristic of the Indian—have turned their weapons against the government that employed them.

In proportion as the Indian is educated is he reluctant to engage in a futile war against the overwhelming whites. It is ignorance or the despair of outraged humanity that sends Indians upon the war path now, and with personal justice supplementing the educational system we have everything to hope for from the rising generation of Indians. The public has been clearly in sympathy with the humane methods of General Brooke at Pine Ridge Agency, and are now in sympathy with the policy of General Miles in his attempt to force a surrender without further bloodshed. Men who fight like the Sioux must have some future in a nation like this, and while the people favor decisive action against savage outlaws they favor educational methods with the masses of Indians. We believe with Commissioner Morgan that there should be larger appropriations for schools and educational purposes. He says "$3,000,000 will be necessary to the care of 15,000 boarding and 6,600 day pupils, whereas the appropriation for Indian education for 1891 is only $1,842,770. This is an illustration of the inadequate way in which we undertake to deal with our great problem." The figures suggest their own comment. There has been a gradual increase of appropriations to the race, for in 1877 only $20,000 was allowed. But we have been flipping crumbs where we should be tendering loaves, and it is time we grew wisely just. Justice will do more than bullets to make good Indians.—Inter Ocean.

NEW ENGLAND LETTER.

New Year moralizings.—Prohibition facts.—Parlor meetings.—Dr. Cuyler on Club houses.

The old-fashioned New England winter is not yet obsolete as the merry jingle of sleigh-bells, and the record of the mercury for a week past testify. Indeed, the way it has now come to the front after its long period of retirement with Boreas at the North Pole reminds us of the similar manner in which moral issues may pass out of sight for a time, but only for a time. Both temperance and anti-secrecy have had their moribund periods, but there is something in the very air of New England that makes it impossible for a moral question to die without hope of resurrection before it is finally settled. Even in its ashes live its wonted fires, and as soon as the angel of an awakened public sentiment rolls away the stone from the sepulchre it will come forth to confound its adversaries. There are some wonderful analogies in nature. For instance, the robins it is said have flown much farther south than usual this season, warned by their instinct that a winter of unusual severity is ahead. But instinct is a very easy word to speak and a very hard one to explain. Ask in what way nature whispered her secret counsels to these tiny intelligences, and you have touched a mystery before which the learned and the unlearned are alike dumb. And yet how many refuse to believe that there is such a thing as spiritual instinct; in those strange impressions for which no reason can be given at the time, yet prove in the sequel to have been the pressure of God's guiding hand, by which without knowledge or forethought of its own, the trustful, childlike soul has been led in ways it knew not! Every devout Christian life will show more or less remarkable experience of this kind, and the skeptic who doubts them may well learn his inconsistency by considering the fowls of the air.

The result of the Worcester election has much chagrined the best part of her citizens, but as the mayor and aldermen are are not obliged to grant licenses unless they choose it is hoped that the pressure of public sentiment will be so strong against their doing so that "the first prohibition city of New England" will still continue practically, no-license. The police records show that more than three thousand women were arrested for drunkenness in Boston last year. This is certainly appalling when we take into consideration that these figures do not give the whole number, as a certain portion always escape arrest. But such facts emphasize the justice as well as the necessity of giving municipal suffrage to women that they may help in the only practical way to banish this terrible stumbling-block over which so many of their frail sisters are falling daily, wounded and dishonored. The independent women voters of Boston, at the late election, succeeded in electing four of the eight candidates they nominated, while Mrs. Emily A. Fifield, the only woman who received a party nomination, had a larger vote and a larger majority by 2,000 than any other candidate; and yet not one of these was nominated by the successful Democrats, which certainly shows that a power lies in woman's ballot, and why the liquor sellers and their allies are prepared to fight to the last extremity against giving it to her. One noticeable fact was that very few with the right to vote stayed away from the polls, and even these few had good excuses. This is in strong contrast with the action of many male voters who stay away for no better reason than their own indifference. "You ladies can account for your absentees," said a prominent Republican politician;" we cannot account for ours." And this is the sex that we are assured would show nothing but absentees if given the ballot!

Bro. Stoddard reports the last parlor meeting at Mrs. D. Towers as unusually spiritual. It was on Odd-fellowship, explained by a chart; and as this is the secret order which seems to have most popularity and influence—the Governor of Vermont is said to have lately joined it—it would be well if these parlor meetings could be made to extend beyond the vicinity of Boston. Conventions are excellent, even indispensable; but as a leavening agent the humble parlor meeting with its quiet yet effectual way of presenting the truth, to some of the most intelligent minds in the communities where they are held, must take precedence, at least in this stage of the work, of any other. Many people who know nothing about the lodge seem to have the impression that it is a dry subject, but if this is so Bro. Stoddard is the man to clothe the dry bones with flesh, and make it appear as the most living and vital of themes. There is more entertainment as well as instruction by far in one of these parlor talks than in the average popular lecture, and I would especially counsel every anti-secret woman who wishes to reach in the immediate circle about her, her own sex, to consider what she can do in this direction.

Dr. T. L. Cuyler preached in Park St. church last Sunday, and though he did not preach an anti-secret sermon, he made a good point against those associations that exclude the wife and mother, by saying: "God created the home. I am not sure that he created the club-house and many another rival and antagonist of home. A man has no more right to rob his family than to swindle his creditors. Many times I think that if the mothers should apply a torch to a great many of the club-houses we should applaud the righteous incendiarism." We never went so far as to say this ourselves, but so long as the eloquent Brooklyn pastor has done so, we venture to add our earnest Amen.

REFORM NEWS.

ANOTHER METHODIST RECORD.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—I need not write to you of the annual meeting of the Iowa Association after the interesting account of it given by the corresponding secretary. Although the meeting was held in the eastern part of the State, I was pleased to meet the venerable Rev. McKee of Clarinda, and his young and vigorous brother in the ministry, Rev. Sharp of Blanchard, both from southwest Iowa. Rev. M. A. Gault, also from southwest Iowa, cheered us by his presence and edified us by his able address. Pres. C. A. Blanchard was with us and presented Christ as the Redeemer and only Saviour of men. He objected to secret societies on the ground that more young men are kept from coming to Christ by the lodges than by any other means that Satan has devised.

I love the Iowa brethren and rejoice in the work that God has wrought among them, in turning so many away from the lodge and in keeping so many others from being caught in that dreadful snare of the wicked one.

While at Lisbon, Iowa, I was informed that Rev. Newell, the present pastor of the M. E. church of that place, took several degrees in Freemasonry, but has become thoroughly disgusted and does not want anything more to do with it. He says the Methodist ministers are fast leaving the lodge.

Dr. Heald, the Methodist pastor at Mt. Vernon, Iowa, said he was persuaded to join the Masons. He became disgusted and left, and did not mean to have anything more to do with them.

Rev. Cripin, a presiding elder in the Upper Iowa Conference of the M. E. church, took many degrees, but has now turned from the lodge and will have nothing more to do with Masonry.

Rev. Mr. Barnes, formerly pastor of the Methodist church of Lisbon, Iowa, took three degrees in Masonry and then renounced it, giving as his reasons: 1. Masonry necessitates late hours; 2. Masonry has oaths and rites that belong to barbaric times; 3. Church members who are active Masons are rarely active Christians; 4. Masonry, with very many persons, becomes a substitute for the religion of Christ, which is the only saving religion.

Upon Rev. Mr. Barnes' declaration of reasons for renouncing Freemasonry, I would remark that intelligent churchmen, be they ministers or laymen, who have passed through the ceremonies of initiation, and taken the oaths of Freemasonry and are not disgusted with their barbaric character, should not complain, if, in the language of John Brown to the pro-slavery ministers who visited him while awaiting execution in Virginia, they are regarded as "heathen gentlemen" by those who are acquainted with the ceremonies they have gone through and the oaths they have taken. The ceremonies, certainly, are disgusting, and the oaths are horribly wicked and profane.

I would further remark, that it is not possible that any man loyal to Christ, whose eyes are open to the fact that Masonry and Odd-fellowship are Satanic conspiracies to supplant Christianity and substitute in its place a heathen deistical worship, can adhere to and uphold these orders. The fact that, as Rev. Mr. Barnes says, very many persons are led to accept Masonry as a substitute for Christianity, and base their hopes of heaven upon it instead of becoming Christians, ought to and WILL arouse every truly loyal Christian and constrain him to come up to the help of the Lord against the anti-Christ of the lodge.

Mr. Bunner, a very wicked man, was converted at a Free Methodist camp meeting in Story Co., Iowa. He was a Mason and an Odd-fellow. He was admonished to leave those orders, and promised to think and pray over the matter. After much prayer for Divine guidance, he concluded to open the Bible and receive, as the word of God spoken to him, the first Scripture that met his eyes, and be guided by it in determining his relation to the secret orders. He opened the Bible and was confronted by the Divine injunction:

"Be not unequally yoked together with unbelievers: for what fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness? and what communion hath light with darkness? and what concord hath Christ with Belial? or what part hath he that believeth with an infidel? and what agreement hath the temple of God with idols? for ye are the temple of the living God: as God hath said, I will dwell in them and walk in them; and I will be their God and they shall be my people. Wherefore come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you, and will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty."

In obedience to the Divine Word he immediately renounced Masonry and Odd-fellowship. He had been invited to take part in a Masonic parade, but he now positively refused and told the Masons that he would never have any further connection with them; that he now left them forever.

This occurred four years ago and he is still firmly opposed to the secret orders. He began to preach the Gospel and is said to be very successful in winning souls to Christ.

The leaven of Anti-masonic truth is working in the meal of our churches. Let us freely consecrate money and personal service to this work until the court-house and the church are freed from the domination of the lodge. If you cannot go forth to the battle against this foe of equal justice and of our holy Christianity, do not, I intreat you, for the love of Christ and native land, withhold the money that is needed to push forward this reform.

If Satan through the secret lodge system is choking the life out of the churches and flooding the land with infidelity; if the covenants of the lodge, as so many cable-tows, are binding our young men to Satan; if, even now, the percentage of our young men who are won to Christ has become alarmingly small, is it not time to awake and come up to the help of the Lord against this mighty foe of God's annointed one, our only Saviour?

Brethren! by pen and VOICE and PURSE let us resist the Masonic anti-Christ. Your fellow worker with Christ, C. F. HAWLEY.

CORRESPONDENCE.

ALL THINGS THROUGH CHRIST.

CINCINNATI, O., Dec. 29, 1890.

EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE:—The purpose determines the life. A good purpose makes a good life, a great purpose a great life. The Saviour indicated the high purpose of his life when he said: "I have glorified thee upon the earth." The inspiration in the life of the Apostle Paul in all his missionary journeys and in every trial from the Macedonian prison to the block at Rome, is indicated in his declaration, "For me to live is Christ." Francis Xavier, misled though he was, had the spirit of the Master. He washes the sores and cleanses the garments of the crew sick of the scurvy; he rings the bell in the streets of Goa to call the boys to his school; and though warned in a dream that privations and perils would be the price, his prayer still was: "More souls, O God, even more!" No wonder that in ten years he visited fifty kingdoms, preached over 9,000 miles of territory and baptized 1,000,000 souls. Seven men met in a tailor-shop in Hamburg in 1835, and resolved to personally undertake the work of publishing the good news. In twenty years they organized 50 congregations, won 10,000 converts, distributed half a million of Bibles and 8,000,000 pages of tracts and preached the Gospel to 2,500,000 souls. If there were 250 such consecrated souls in the church, within thirty years the Gospel might be preached to all the inhabitants of the world. If every member of the Reformed churches would give one cent per day for missions, it would amount to $365,000,000 per annum. If we cannot "go down into the mine" with Carey, we can with Fuller "hold the rope." What possibilities! The world evangelized within the present century.

Last Sabbath I preached morning and evening in the Sixth Presbyterian church. At 3 P. M. I addressed a colored church. This society was established last March and under the care of Bro. Johnston has gained very rapidly. Though his talents are small, they are consecrated. When Theresa, the Spanish maid, would build a convent she had only four ducats. Her friends said she could do nothing with that. "Theresa and four ducats are nothing," she said; "but Theresa, four ducats and God can do anything." All God asks is for us to consecrate what we have. His strength is made perfect in our weakness.

At 6:30 P. M. I attended the Y. P. S. C. E. of the Sixth Christian church. One of the striking signs of the times is the fact that God has put it into the hearts of the young people in all the churches to organize for service. Joan of Arc, the French peasant girl, called of God, rode at the head of the French army carrying a little banner, and led them from victory to victory, until the enemy was driven out and the king enthroned. "A child shall lead them." A young man in Boston works twenty-four hours every day. He is a clerk and works twelve hours per day. Out of his salary he supports a student missionary in China, who works while his helper sleeps. The young people can take the world for Christ. J. M. FOSTER.

SAVE THIS CHURCH.

MONTDALE, Pa.

There is in Pennsylvania one Baptist church opposed to secretism, both in theory and practice. Last winter God revived us, and many souls turned to God. Our anti-secret record was maintained in taking in members, some pledging to forsake the lodge for a home in the church. Now anti-secret Baptists are coming in from twenty-five miles and more, to find a congenial church home, out of reach of the dragon flood of lodgery.

While these things transpire, the enemy is sowing bad seed (he has no good seed), and found in the church a candidate for Odd-fellowship,—an odd fellowship indeed for a Gospel church. Through pure spite, secretists "compass sea and land to make one proselyte," and so break down the hated rule of this church against secretism. Next, the lodge members began to boast. By this it became apparent that something had happened. Though secretly done, this was too good a secret for them to keep.

Nine-tenths of the church are in favor of keeping this body free from false worship, and in due time will so speak. There must be in northeast Pennsylvania one church where right-minded Baptists can find a congenial church home. The brother of whom we speak left this church twenty years ago for the Good Templar church, preferring false worship to the true. But on confession, some years later he re-united with this church, being forgiven and cordially received by all. But now, knowing well the church rule against secretism, he repeats the offence, to the grief of all who understand the case. Peradventure God will once more pardon him on confession, and the church has the pleasure of forgiving this second lapse into the false worships. It seems this time to have the complexion of an apostasy. We hope better things, and "things which accompany salvation, though we thus speak." Brethren, pray for him and us.

Among the anti-secret brethren who have fled from lodge worship, is Bro. A. F. Sanford, formerly of Oneonta, N. Y. He is forged by the God of nature for a successful evangelist, and is a candidate for ordination in this church on Jan. 7th, 1891. God has repeatedly sanctioned his efforts to win souls to Christ. H. I. Higgins, Gospel singer from Massachusetts, is now assisting him in meetings at Tomkinsville, Pa. They seem to be God's men, and clean from liquor, lodgery, tobacco, and, we hope, from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit. They are outspoken against all sin as they see things.

Perhaps you may think me not as active in circulating the Cynosure as I ought to be, and may be I am not. But allow me to explain. I intended to contribute at least $3 a year to give the Cynosure to the colored pastors of the South. I am grieved that at present I cannot do this. I have tried to get subscribers to this best of papers, but it seems next to impossible. Now for the cause. There is nothing causeless, though many things void of reason. The best men and best things are most slandered. Angels, who "are ministering SPIRITS," could not live among men, only that they are spirits, and godless men cannot see them. Angels in Sodom had to defend themselves by supernatural means. The prophets, "of whom the world was not worthy," were men, and had bodies as well as spirits, and so were subjects of wicked assaults. Jesus, who took on a human body, could never have lived in our world thirty-two years, but for special Divine interposition. No other human form was ever so cruelly defamed.

Among all the journals known to me, I know of none so much needed, and at the same time so intensely hated, as our "Liberator" in this reform, the Christian Cynosure. Many would like it, only it would hurt their business among lodge-ridden people. Please be not hasty in condemning us in this statement. Facts for faces and faces for facts. In our midst are good people who regard the Cynosure an emissary, and the men who publish and who read it as dangerous to the peace of society.

HAVE THEM READ IT!

Just what we are trying to do; and in some degree we are digging under this rock-bluff of Satan. If the Cynosure is most hated, it is for the cause that the best is most hated. Here the battle of no fellowship for the lodge has been fought; and the senior editor, with his son, C. A. Blanchard, president of Wheaton College, helped win the victory twenty years ago. "Glory to God in the highest," good will to the Cynosure and its editors.

I am now in my 71st year, and am "ready to be offered on Truth's altar, and put off the militant, the war suit, and take a crown of glory. Can one so unworthy expect a crown? I am too old to run down hill, but can run up hill and help to scale Satan's strongholds. So "guards, up and at them!" Truth is on the field.

Very truly yours, NATHAN CALLENDER.

AMERICAN SABBATH UNION.

BATAVIA, N. Y., Dec. 24, 1890.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—The root of the division in the American Sabbath Union at its recent annual meeting, and the cause of my previous resignation, is in the following facts:

I have in hand one of the Mail and Express envelopes that was sent to a Southern vice-president of the American Sabbath Union which contains a circular headed "Office of the American Sabbath Union," and wholly devoted to urging those to whom it is sent to subscribe for the Mail and Express, special reference being made to its relations to the Grant Monument fund. This paper is dated "January 20th, 1890." I was then a secretary, but it was signed only by secretaries Knowles and Taylor, and was never shown to me or authorized by the Executive Committee. The envelope also contains two regular advertisements of the Mail and Express, one in red mostly devoted to the Grant fund, the other, of eight pages in white. This last contains among other things the following statements: "The Weekly Mail and Express is a Republican paper, not a narrow, partisan sheet, but a strong and fearless exponent of true Republican principles." "The Weekly Mail and Express is the organ of the American Sabbath Union."

This last statement is false. The official organ of the American Sabbath Union is a syndicate column of Sabbath reform news and notes called "The Pearl of Days" column, which, by vote of the Executive Committee on the only occasion action was taken on this matter, was to be sent out to the press simultaneously, that all papers desiring to do so might use it at the same time. Either the matter was not worth using in other papers, or President Shepard and Secretary Knowles have habitually neglected to use it as ordered. In any case, the statement that the Mail and Express is "the official organ" is as false as it has been harmful.

PENNSYLVANIA FRIENDS, ATTENTION!

EDITORS CYNOSURE:—I desire to say to you, to all our anti-secret friends, and particularly to all Pennsylvania readers of the Cynosure, that I regard the three months' trial for twenty-five cents as the best plan we have ever had to secure subscribers for the paper. Many will take it on trial, if asked to do so. I have received four trial subscriptions, and expect to get more. And as the Cynosure is needed more in Pennsylvania than in any other State, I am anxious to hear of our friends in all the counties going to work, determined to secure all the readers possible..

Pennsylvania must be "brought to light." The Philadelphians are demanding a new Philadelphia. They are disgusted with the present Jesuitic city civilization. But the entire State needs to be born again, religiously, socially, politically and morally. We have too much Jesuitic pressure to the square inch in every town and township. So let us start a new era in Pennsylvania, by scattering Cynosure readers all over the State.

E. J. C.

A Michigan woman whose husband went out to chop and didn't return at night dreamed that she saw a tree fall upon and crush him. She got assistance to look for him and he was found crushed. It wasn't under a tree, however, but on the public highway, where he got drunk, lay down and let a load of hay roll over him.

PITH AND POINT.

THE FARMERS' ALLIANCE IS AN OPPORTUNITY.

The Farmers' Alliance is pushing this lodge question into politics, where it must be settled. The outlook now is that in '92 every candidate can be successfully interviewed on lodgery and induced to commit himself for or against the anti-American system. In the meantime the farmers are being diverted and alienated from political prohibition. The lodge-ridden Alliance in politics precipitates the real question at issue and gives us a fighting chance. Let us man our bark for '92.—M. N. BUTLER.

A GOOD RESOLUTION.

I was out two days after I received those tracts, but failed to get a subscriber; but got some tracts where they will bring forth fruit unto life everlasting. I expect to be out enough to procure my quota, i. e., fifteen subscribers, if the Lord will. I realize that the walls of Jericho, i. e., the Secret Empire, will not tumble down without a long and persistent effort; but it must fall, because it is in the way of the progress of Zion. I see it clearly, and also the confounding of the languages of the Secret Empire, as there was at the Tower of Babel. I hear the Masons say Masonry is revealed. Thanks be to God there is enough revealed to make it very loathsome to those that are co-workers with Christ.—M. L. WORCESTER.

TRACTS AND CAMP MEETING TESTIMONY.

I have given away and induced others to give away about three pounds of tracts in the last few months. I have also spoken to some eighteen preachers and evangelists on this lodge question. This question is upon us to be settled. At a camp meeting last August, the preacher in charge, C. A. Fleming, rebuked the lodge from the pulpit on both Sabbaths of the meeting. Tracts were also freely given out. I believe it would be good to have a lecture here to reach the people.—GEO. HAWKINS, Seehorn, Ill.

IS THE NATIONAL REFORM ASSOCIATION A TWO-HORNED BEAST?

There is a book published by the Review and Herald Publishing Co., at Battle Creek, Mich., Chicago, Ill., Toronto, Can., and Atlanta, Ga., called "Bible Readings for the Home Circle." They claim that the two-horned beast spoken of in Rev. 13: 11 is the National Reform Association in the United States. Now it seems to me if they had said the two-horned beast represents the Secret Empire, they would have guessed it exactly; that is, admitting that the first beast which John saw represents what they claim, then the Secret Empire would represent the "image" of that beast. The two horns being the claim of Christianity and the claim of benevolence; or, worship of God and love to man.

I write to express a wish that some one capable of doing justice to the subject would criticize said work along this line, from page 226 to page 254 inclusive, and publish in the Cynosure.—IRA A. CHAMBERLAIN, Bristow, Iowa.

Will some friend who has access to this volume give us some reply as suggested in Bro. Chamberlain's note?

GOOD WORDS.

The Cynosure is a blessed accompaniment to the Word of God.—INCREASE LEADBETTER.

The Cynosure improves with age and is having a good influence on this age.—REV. W. G. WADDLE.

I like the paper more and more, and I wish I could send you a hundred subscribers. God bless you and open the hearts of his people to the needs of the times.—R. J. HILL.

The Cynosure is pure gold, the more it is rubbed the brighter it shines.—B. DODGE, Missionary of the A. M. A. among the mountain whites on the Cumberland Plateau, Pleasant Hill, Tenn.

The Lord bless your work and bring the counsels of evil men to naught. I have read and aided to scatter your excellent paper in years past and hope to continue to do so in the future.—JASON F. AMES.

LITERATURE.

"Jew and Gentile" is the name of a volume containing the journal of the proceedings of the late conference between Israelites and Christians recently held in Chicago. It is worth noting in this connection that Rabbi Hirsch is now delivering a lecture on the striking topic, "The Crucifixion from a Jewish Standpoint." It contains of course the different papers and addresses by Drs. Goodwin, Barrows, and others. In its minute of the proceedings a careless compiler has left the reporter's incorrect minute of the prayers of Prof. Curtis and Pres. C. A. Blanchard. This partial and very inacurate report led to the controversy about Christless prayers. It is to be regretted that such mischievous things get into permanent form.

"Britain's Crime against China, a short history of the Opium Traffic," is the title of a striking document from Dyer Brothers, London, England, written by Maurice Gregory, one of the editors of the Banner of Asia, Bombay. The iniquity of the opium trade, and especially of the compulsion used by England to secure its sale, and the resulting revenue, are told in calm but terrible sentences. The efforts to check the evil and prevent its farther ravages are also recounted. Other tracts on the same topic and of a similar nature accompany the pamphlet. It is a question that deserves the attention of American Christians as well as English.

The Collins Printing House, Philadelphia, publishes a discourse by Rev. W. A. Patton, Wayne, Pa., containing some Lessons from the Life of George W. Childs, proprietor of the Philadelphia Ledger.

Dr. A. J. Gordon, who lectures before the Chicago Bible Institute (Mr. Moody's Training School) during January, is one of our best devotional writers. His "In Christ" and "Twofold Life" are largely read. A few months since he published "Ecce Venit," a tender presentation of the premillennial idea, and the book has already exhausted its first edition. The second edition will soon be out.

A. S. Barnes & Co., New York, have just published a new atlas by the famous geographer, James Montieth. It is entitled "A School and Family Atlas," and contains all the latest maps and statistics, and is illustrated with numerous engravings showing the physical outlines of the different countries and the various characteristics of the industrial centers all over the world.

OBITUARY.

DAVID MARSHALL was born in East Tennessee, seventh month, 17th, 1821; died at Carthage, Ind., twelfth month, 22d, 1890, aged 69 years, 5 months and 5 days.

In 1847 he was united in marriage to Elinda Binford. There were born to them two children, neither of whom are living. He was converted in early life; has ever since been a consistent, devoted follower of Christ, and a firm believer in the doctrine of the Gospel as held by Friends.

He was recorded a minister near the year 1860. He loved the church and lived not for himself alone, but for others. He had a quick perception of the truths of Scripture, and took a broad, comprehensive view of its doctrines, so as to stand in the front ranks as a teacher of righteousness. His time, talents, and means were consecrated to the Master. His character among his neighbors and his social qualities were of the highest order. His place in the Sabbath-school and pulpit was never vacant when he was able to attend, feeling it to be a pleasant duty to engage in these, as way opened for work. When he kept still in our meetings, we felt that he had a calm, restful assurance in the merit of Christ; when he spoke he gave a clear testimony to the power of atoning blood, and the preciousness of a conscious indwelling of the Holy Spirit. On account of failing health, his labors the last few years were mostly in his home meeting, where the worth of his ministry and wise counsel cannot be estimated.

He was much interested in all branches of church work, was one who spoke out clearly against all sins, and in favor of every good cause. He was careful, in the first place to examine all phases of truth and error, and then to speak so that all knew just where he stood. One of his loved themes was the resurrection, and he joyfully anticipated that day when men shall know what full salvation means.

The death of this loved friend removes another of those trusty veterans in the Lord's army, who faithfully and patiently bore many persecutions and reproaches, and yet remained in active service, daily adorning the doctrines delivered to others. Truly, a great and good man has fallen, and while he has gone to his eternal and glorious reward, we who are left feel like saying, "Help, Lord, for the godly man ceaseth, the faithful fail from among the children of men." K. M.

With his thumb, a boy is said to have saved the Netherlands from inundation. Many people have been saved from the invasion of disease by a bottle of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. This medicine imparts tone to the system and strengthens every organ and fibre of the body.

Public Speakers and Singers

Can use "BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES" freely, without fear of injury, as they contain nothing injurious. They are invaluable for allaying the hoarseness and irritation incident to vocal exertion, effectually clearing and strengthening the voice. "Have used them through all my ministerial life."—Rev. C. S. Vedder, Charleston, S. C. Ask for and obtain only "BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES." 25 cents a box.

A faded and discolored beard is untidy and a misfortune. It may be prevented by using Buckingham's Dye for the Whiskers, a never-failing remedy.

"A RACE WITH DEATH!"

Among the nameless heroes, none are more worthy of martyrdom than he who rode down the valley of the Conemaugh, warning the people ahead of the Johnstown flood. Mounted on a powerful horse, faster and faster went the rider, but the flood was swiftly gaining, until it caught the unlucky horseman and swept on, grinding, erushing, annihilating both weak and strong.

In the same way is disease lurking near, like unto the sword of Damoeles, ready to fall, without warning, on its victim, who allows his system to beeome elogged up, and his blood poisoned, and thereby his health endangered.

To eradicate all poisons from the system, no matter what their name or nature, and save yourself a spell of malarial, typhoid or bilious fever, or eruptions, swellings, tumors and kindred disfigurements, keep the liver and kidneys healthy and vigorous, by the use of Dr. Pieree's Golden Medieal Discovery.

Unlike the sarsaparillas, that are said to be good for the blood in Mareh, April and May, the "Golden Medieal Discovery" works equally well all the year round.

It's the only blood-purifier sold, through druggists, absolutely on trial! Your money returned if it doesn't do exactly as recommended. It's a coneentrated vegetable extraet, and the cheapest blood-purifier and liver invigorator sold, through druggists, no matter how many doses are offered for a dollar, beeause you only pay for the good you get.

Can you ask more?

J. BLANCHARD, EDITOR.
HENRY L. KELLOGG, ASSOCIATE EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, JANUARY 8, 1891.

A LESSON FROM AFRICA.

Henry M. Stanley, the African explorer, is lecturing through the country and spent a portion of last week in this city, speaking twice in the Auditorium. His books are now being read by thousands, and they strikingly confirm the Bible cosmogony. The Bible dictionaries tell us that in the region of that "Darkest Africa," which Stanley has explored in hunting Emin Pasha, there were once civilized people, in the days of "Candace, Queen of Ethiopia," whose treasurer was reading Isaiah when Philip met and baptized him.

But now Bartellot and Jameson, of Stanley's rear guard, with a handful of half-starved men, could whip, torture, murder, and sell those peoples to be killed and eaten by cannibals; and, though surrounded by natives, a thousand to one, this little squad of men kept those thousands at bay, day and night, though they were human beings like Stanley's men; and one wonders why those thousands did not wipe out the Christians and Mohammedans of Stanley's party in a single night.

The explanation is this: In Bible cosmogony, if we go back where eternity opens into time, we see God and angels on one side, and Satan and legions of devils on the other, originating and keeping up the ceaseless conflict between right and wrong, which we see going on about us at this day.

Stanley tells us that he read his Bible every night before turning in, and worshiped God. The natives around him, though descended from peoples who, ages since, had Christian States, and have furnished one Ethiopic manuscript of the Bible, yet let their religion run down into idolatry, which, Paul says, is Gentile worship of devils. Cole and Hinman tell us those natives have lodges cut out of dense chapparel, where they meet at midnight and practice their mysteries. In Sierre Leone, when Hinman was there, there were three secret orders: the Purrow, the Bondoo, and another whose very name was secret, but who killed and ate a human being, and sent a piece to each member who should be absent from the lodge meeting. Mr. Hinman says the governor of Sierre Leone ordered them to leave and burned down their village.

Idolatry imbrutes men, and men can whip brutes. The Satanic legions, once angels, who met and resisted Christ, mesmerize and imbrute their worshipers. Even Jameson, the papers say, had become so imbruted by contact with idolaters, that he bought a girl ten years old, for six pieces of cloth, and sold her, or gave her to be tied to a tree, stabbed and eaten; and looked on while the thing was done! Horrible as this seems, it is little if any worse than the Masonic murder of Morgan, Cronin in Chicago, and lately Henessey in New Orleans. Masonry, Mormonism and popery are of the same nature. Their god is, Christ says, "a liar from the beginning;" and as the good Dr. Norris says: "They include the spirit of murder, and every crime this side." Let us rejoice that "Darkest Africa" is opening, and the fire of the Gospel can now be kindled at the bottom of the human grate.

THE LIFE TO COME.

Is it certain and real? If so, why not uncover it to men?

It is certain, because the Bible reveals it, and Christ "brought it to light." God, and "the sons of God" who sang and shouted when the earth was founded, were and are inhabitants of that world. So were the angel messengers who came to Abraham, Lot, Manoah and others. They did not belong to this earth. They moved by their wills. Gravitation had no relation to their bodies. Then the visions vouchsafed to patriarchs and prophets, as to Jacob at Bethel, and to Elisha's young man who saw "horses of fire and chariots of fire round about Elisha,"—those were real defenders, as what followed showed. Then, also, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob whom Christ proved to the Sadducees to be alive; and Moses and Elias in the Mount, and the angel prophet who gave the Apocalypse, all these were real persons.

Then many persons like Paul, 2 Cor. 12: 1–6, and John the Revelator, have been permitted to see the inhabitants of the next world, and to hear its sounds of joy. And, moreover, many like William Tennent have seen heaven and returned. Tennent, born in 1705, died in 1777, the year of our Independence, one of the most sober and truthful of our patriots. He said he was three days in heaven; and books by Judge Boudinot and others take his testimony concerning what he saw and heard in heaven—of the reality of the next world as entirely reliable. There are many such witnesses as Tennent, the best and holiest of men; and though men, women and children have borne such witness, their testimonies never clash. But Christ went into eternity, and walked back into time, and near two thousand years of history have proved and are proving his words true.

Why not then uncover the next world to ordinary mortals? Because it is not necessary. Our duties are here. Because it is impossible. Our race is sin-blind. Because men would worship its glorious inhabitants as Daniel and John would have worshiped angels. They even now worship devils. No! "The veil which covers the next world is woven by the hand of mercy."

THE INDIAN TROUBLES.

As we have for some time anticipated, the Democrats in Congress are moving to create political capital out of the Indian war for the campaign of 1892. They are not much to be blamed for yielding to so great a temptation. The administration has been morally weak in dealing with this case, as in various others. Had it been a case of defalcation or fraud, as with Gen. Belknap during the Grant administration, a prompt investigation would have been ordered, and the party leaders would have used the utmost diligence to save themselves from popular disgrace. President Harrison, in his late message, congratulates the country on the purity of his administration from such a misfortune. But what is a public steal like Belknap's or the Whiskey Ring swindles in comparison with administrative injustice, with the violation of public pledges on the part of the government; and pledges made, not to the powerful who could defend themselves from wrong, but from the few and the weak?

This movement in Congress seems not to have been suggested until the fighting really began on Monday of last week. The ghoulish reports of the butchery of Indian women and children fleeing for their lives from brave U. S. troops form a lurid coloring for the picture the Democrats will soon hang up before President Harrison; while the treachery of the Indians, long a prey to white rapacity, and their own exaggerated fears, is easily explained.

More reasonable and statesmanlike proposals have been suggested in Congress for several weeks. Senator Manderson introduced a resolution with a view to secure the thorough investigation of the Indian troubles and reach, if possible, the real seat of the dissatisfaction and secure a law transferring them to the care of the War Department, or in some other way settling this vexing question so as to prevent future disturbances. Senator Pettigrew of South Dakota, on the day following (Dec. 20) introduced a bill making it "a crime to sell, give, trade to or by any means place firearms or ammunition in the hands of Indians on reservations or under the control of agents unless by special permission of the Secretary of the Interior; also authorizing the President to immediately disarm all Indians on reservations or who receive assistance from the government."

On the 22 ult. Representative Blanchard of Louisiana offered resolutions calling for the investigation of the Indian troubles, and especially the killing of Sitting Bull, which his preamble said "appears to have been accomplished under circumstances recognized neither by the laws of war nor those of peace."

Protests are also being filed in Washington from Eastern philanthropists against the slaughter of Indians, who seem from ample testimony to have a just grievance against the government. One of these is a memorial from the Friends of Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Delaware, which says:

"The discontent and suffering which have followed the reduction of rations due the Sioux under the stipulations of former treaties, at a time when the failure of crops had already caused a scarcity of food, by which they were threatened with starvation; and the opening of eleven million acres of their land to occupation by the whites, before the terms of the agreement for its sale, as they understood it, had been ratified by the government, and the money provided for its payment; appear to have been the chief causes of the distrust and animosity toward the whites, and the disposition on the part of some of them, to acts of violence which now exist. These feelings have no doubt also been stimulated by the delusion industriously propagated among them of the speedy appearance of a supernatural being as the avenger of their wrongs and their deliverer. . . . Statistics have been published in the daily press which show that the expenses of this government since its formation in 1776, to 1886, a period of one hundred and ten years, on account of the Indians, have been upwards of nine hundred and twenty-nine millions of dollars; and that of this sum six hundred and ninety-six millions have been expended by the War Department in wars with them and expenses incident thereto. Of this enormous aggregate over two hundred millions are stated to have been expended in hostilities with different tribes during the ten years from 1872 to 1882; the primary cause of which, in accordance with the testimony before adduced, has been the rapacity and injustice of the whites."

We have before mentioned the fact that General Miles and his subordinate, Gen. Brooke, who are personally directing the campaign in South Dakota believe that the Indians have been deeply wronged. Those who are intimate with the circumstances do not hesitate to give their opinion, that the injustice with which the Sioux were treated after the last treaty was made, to open a large part of their reservation for settlement, so agitated the late General Crook as to hasten his death. Ex-Gov. Foster of Ohio, who recently served on an important Indian commission, and whose views ought to have great weight, lately said: "In my opinion the difficulties might be easily avoided. The whole matter has been brought about by a combination of bad policy and of the incompetency of some officials. The Sioux are starving. Give the Sioux plenty to eat and there will be no further trouble."

A Roman Catholic missionary, Crafts, at Pine Ridge agency, has lately written to the Freeman's Journal. He says that in the beginning the Indians hoped for much aid from the government to enable them to become like the whites. They were, however, in every way abused, mocked, and discouraged. Instead of being wards they have felt they were the victims of unscrupulous politicians, who benefited by their misery. He adds:

"I know what I say, for I have shared their sufferings for many years. In their desperation General Crook brought them hope. Their confidence in him led them to hope that he would be able to realize their hopes. His death was their death blow, and they felt it. The Indians are not fools, but men of keen intelligence. Reduction in rations increased their fears. Even the Indian agents protested against the cruelty. Mr. Lee, who took the census, made grave mistakes. He counted less than the real numbers and made false reports of prosperity that did not exist. It is not to be wondered that they believed in a Messiah, whom they at first doubted, and listened to every deceiver who promised hope."

There is much more evidence of the same sort, as a recent letter from the special correspondent of the Inter Ocean at Pine Ridge confirms the above statements. Such testimony can be powerfully used by the opposition party in the investigation which is quite sure to come. And, if General Miles fails in the defensive and pacific measures which he has wisely determined to use to the utmost, the result will only be more unfortunate for the administration which has suffered such abuses to grow into disastrous war.

—Rev. O. S. Juul, pastor of the Norwegian Lutheran church, corner of May and Erie streets in this city, is preparing a paper on Good Templarism for the next meeting of his conference.

—A letter from the New England agent came in too late for the present number. We regret the delay as we are all deeply interested in the N. E. work since the late successful meeting in Boston.

—Some 800 copies of Joseph Cook's address before the last April conference have been just sent from this office to Baptist home missionaries, with a commendation from Dr. Morehouse, missionary secretary, and from Dr. A. J. Gordon of Boston.

—Rev. A. J. Gordon is now in this city lecturing for the month of January in the Missionary Institute. He preached in the Moody church on the Sabbath. Mr. Moody is preaching in Dr. Gordon's pulpit, Clarendon Ave. church, Boston, during the month.

—The students and instructors who find this number of the Cynosure on their reading room tables will find Dr. George's article on the college fraternities instructive reading. We also most heartily commend to them the addresses at the Boston meeting, several of which are engaged for the Cynosure.

—The Roman Catholic Bishop Freppel of France gave a reception on Friday to the priests of the diocese of Angers and made an address, in which he declared that the campaign of irreligious Frenchmen, i. e., Freemasons, against the church, although now less glaringly conducted, was still continued. He was of the conviction that Catholics must organize; not as a party, but under the directions of their bishops, and "wrest from Freemasons and Free Thinkers the rights and liberties of which they have been deprived."

—W. B. Wickersham, of the Friends, graduated at Earlham College in 1867, and has been connected with the public library of this city for eighteen years. He is now its superintendent. In this great collection there is a circulating library of 135,000 books, from which there were made 843,971 loans last year; and a reference library of 30,000 volumes with large and well furnished reading rooms in which were used 376,508 volumes. There are twenty-two delivery stations in the city where orders left for books in the morning are filled the same day.

—The Christian Standard of Philadelphia is a "National Association Holiness Journal," and speaks very truly respecting Sabbath-school entertainments which are prepared for the sole purpose of pleasing the world and are modeled after its fashion: "What good can result from these juvenile exhibitions of elocution and song, finery and vanity, flowers and gilt pasteboard? They do indeed, 'draw' immensely, but not to the truth nor to Christ. A young man who was employed in a theatre, said that he received his first training and taste for the stage in Sunday-school concerts."

—Confirming the press reports of destitution in Nebraska and the Dakotas, Mrs. C. A. Blanchard has lately received several letters asking for aid. One from the "Dorcas Society" of Huron, S. Dakota, says that the last dry season causes harder times than ever. Many who did not need aid last year are now compelled to ask it. The society had forty-two families on their list absolutely dependent on charity for all clothing, with little to supply them. Applicants were daily turned away. The C. & N. W. R. R. will take goods free up to Feb. 10th. Goods sent to "President of the Dorcas Society, Huron, S. D.," will go safely.

—The Christian Standard of Cincinnati rebukes some features of fashionable white society by contrasting them with the antics of the poor savages in the West: "Officials were surprised to find that Indian youths who had been in the Government schools for several years, wearing the garments of civilization and imbibing its culture, had put on the blankets of the savages and gone into the "ghost dances." But why should this be more surprising than that young women who have been reared in Christian homes, under the most elevating and refining influences known to civilization, should put on immodest apparel and engage in dances quite as impure, if not so savage; or, that young men, reared under the same holy influences, should take to swearing, drinking and all manner of wickedness? The backward step from Christian training to such immoralities, which thousands of our young people take, is really greater than that which the Indian youth takes from a Government school to the 'ghost dance.'"

—Rev. Addison Foster, the Advance correspondent in Boston, gives a kindly notice of the late New England convention. It will cheer the Boston friends and all others to read it, only Bro. Stoddard will not wish the remarks concerning himself to discount his standing as a reform worker. The paragraph reads: "The New England Christian Association, an organization opposed to secret societies, has just held its annual convention in the Park Street church. Its secretary, Rev. J. P. Stoddard, made a report stating that 40,000 circulars and tracts, and 30,000 copies of the publication of the organization had been distributed, while seventy-three meetings had been held. Mr. Stoddard is not denunciatory or harsh in his methods, as are some reformers, but seeks to win men by reasonable speech. He does much work in a quiet way, especially among young men. Addresses were made at the convention by Rev. L. W. Frink, Rev. E. M. Darst, Rev. Jas. M. Gray, Rev. Roland D. Grant, Rev. F. O. Cunningham, and Rev. Hezekiah Davis. The speakers agreed that secret societies tend to draw men away from the church, and so greatly hinder the work of Christ among men."

—A painful interest yet lingers about the Phœnix murders in Park, Dublin, seven years ago by the Irish secret society known as the Invincibles. The subsequent assassination of the informer Carey, by a member of the society believed to have been sent for the purpose from this country, and the execution of several of the gang, will ever form a remarkable chapter in the history of secret societies. A Dublin dispatch last Friday, gives a glimpse of some of the survivors of that desperate affair. A prisoner who has just been released from confinement in Downpatrick Prison gives an account of the daily occupation in jail of his fellow prisoners who belonged to the Dublin secret society known as the "Invincibles." Joseph Mullett, he says, supervises the book bindery department, and has charge of the prison library. McCaffrey works in the laundry; FitzHarris, Laurence, and Hanlon pass their time in attending to business in the tailoring department; O'Brien and Maroney are interested in the workings of the shoemaking department; Dan Delaney is a feature of the carpentering department, and James Mullett is variously occupied in doing odd jobs about the prison.

THE WORLD'S FAIR PETITIONS.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—Every petition to the Columbian Commission with reference to the Sabbath at the World's Fair needs to be preceded by a special petition for its proper reception. Unless there has been a change of plan since the writer visited headquarters, not one of the hundreds of petitions—all but one then against Sunday opening—has been even "received" by the Commission, except the individual petition of a Commissioner from Tennessee. The sender of each petition gets a prompt letter from the secretary, and the petition itself is beautifully buried in a scrapbook where inquiring friends may see it if they wish. The "right of petitions" is thus practically denied. Let any one contrast this with the reception of petitions in the United States Senate, of which the Commission is a minature, and he will see why the following resolution introduced by the writer in the Western Pennsylvania Sabbath Convention should be widely adopted and its request urged by pulpit and press and personal letters: "Resolved, that we appeal through our officers, and ask others to join us in appealing, to the Columbian Commission, which is a special senate of two persons from each State and Territory, to follow the custom of the United States Senate by receiving at every meeting the petitions with reference to Sunday opening of the World's Fair, that the Commissioners may know what petitions are coming in on both sides, and and that they, and the public also through the record, may feel the influence, meeting by meeting, of this petitioning."

WILBUR F. CRAFTS.

"Knights of Reciprocity"—this is one of the latest of the new secret societies that have come into existence so plentifully recently. Leaders of this new order met a few days ago in Garden City, Kansas, to organize a Grand Lodge of the State. All these organizations are objectionable, not only on the ground of their secrecy, for which there is no justification whatever, but also and especially, because a Christian cannot be intimately associated with irreligious men without endangering his Christian character. "Have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them."—United Presbyterian.

—A dispatch from Hillsboro, Ill., to the Inter Ocean says that since last August Miss Jennie Denham has been confined to a dark room most of the time suffering from a complication of nervous troubles and sore eyes, being unable to walk or see at all. A few days ago she was visited by a number of the Pentecost sisters. They prayed for her for some time, and before they left the house Miss Denham arose from her bed and walked about, and she also removed the bandage from her eyes and was able to see very well. She has since been able to take long walks and seems fully restored to health.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31, 1890.

The local churches are beginning to take some interest in the question of closing the World's Fair on the Sabbath day, and resolutions something like the following are being adopted: "That the ——— church, having a membership of ——, a Sunday-school of —— scholars, and about ——— adherents, hereby petitions the Columbian Commission to close the World's Fair exhibition every Lord's day, in obedience to the Divine command, which is binding upon every human being, thereby presenting to the other nations there represented the object-lesson of a Christian nation publicly obeying God's law."

The intent of this resolution is good; but in the first place it is not strong enough, and in the next place it is not properly addressed. Congress is the authority to impress with the necessity for closing the Exposition on the Sabbath. It will be a much more forcible and useful object-lesson to foreign nations for Congress to enact a law prohibiting the opening of the Exposition on Sunday, thus showing a dutiful recognition of God's law by our highest law-making power, than it will be to have the Exposition closed by order of the Columbian Commission, a subordinate body; and besides that, if there is no law against its being open on that day, and the attendance should not be as large during the week as the Commission anticipates, the Commission might see fit to change their minds and authorize it to open on Sundays, when it would be too late to prevent it. There is only one safe way, and that is to demand of Congress the enactment of a law that will make it impossible to open the Exposition on the Sabbath day. Remember that, and address your petitions to Congress, and not to the Columbian Commission.

In no other city is the custom of paying New Year's calls observed as extensively as it is in Washington, and in no other city is wine offered to callers by as many women. This question has been uppermost in the minds of Christians and temperance people as the first of the year draws nearer, and earnest entreaty and prayer has been, and is being, used to lessen this evil and remove this great temptation from the paths of susceptible young men. The W. C. T. U. are this afternoon offering a "prayer for public awakening against social wine drinking," and many good men and women are engaged in trying to persuade those who will receive callers to offer them coffee or tea in place of wine; and some promises, unfortunately only a few, have been obtained.

Mrs. Secretary Noble tells a pathetic little story about social wine drinking that is deserving of the widest possible circulation. She said: "I was some years since deeply impressed by a simple incident during the evening reception at a friend's house in St. Louis, which influenced me to take a decided stand. The circumstance was a conversation I overheard between two young people. The young man was offered a glass of wine by his fair hostess, who, upon his refusal, urged the glass upon him. 'Do not ask me to drink,' he pleaded, 'as it is my weakness, and I fear to indulge.' In a spirit of thoughtless vanity she ignored his excuse, and handing him the wine said: 'Only take this to please me, and drink to my health.' He complied rather than to appear ungallant, and was intoxicated for three weeks afterward. I shall never willingly be the means of placing temptation in another's way, and my New Year's reception will be no exception to this rule."

Mrs. Senator Carlisle said "I never touch wine of any kind, and I never permit it to appear upon my table."

Mrs. Secretary Windom said, "I believe that one should be governed in such matters by conscience rather than by the mere following of a fashion. I would rather run the risk of giving offense to the few than risk being the instrument of evil to any."

More than a thousand public school teachers, from New York, Brooklyn, and Philadelphia, took advantage of the holidays to visit Washington this week. They inspected everything, and the President tendered them a special reception, after which they visited Mount Vernon in a body.

THE HOME.

HIS COMING.

They tell me a solemn story,
But it is not sad to me,
For in its sweet unfolding
My Saviour's love I see.

They say that at any moment
The Lord of life may come
To lift me from the cloudland
Into the light of home.

They say I may have no warning;
I may not even hear
The rustle of his garments,
As he softly draweth near.

Suddenly in a moment,
Upon my ear may fall
The summons loved of our Master,
"Answer the Master's call."

Perhaps he will come in the noontide
Of some bright, sunny day,
When with dear ones all around me,
My life seems bright and gay.

Pleasant must be the pathway,
Easy the shining road,
Up from the dimmer sunlight
Into the light of God.

Perhaps he will come in the stillness
Of the mild and quiet night,
When the earth is calmly sleeping,
'Neath the moonbeams' silvery light;

When the stars are softly shining
O'er the slumbering land and sea,
Perhaps in the holy stillness
The Master will come for me.

—Horatius Bonar.

"HE'S COMING TO-MORROW!"

"The night is far spent; the day is at hand."

I.

My soul vibrated for a moment like a harp. Was it true? The night, the long night of the world's groping agony and blind desire—is it almost over? Is the day at hand?

Again: "They shall see the Son of Man coming in a cloud, with power and great glory. And when these things begin to come to pass, then lift up your heads, for your redemption draweth nigh."

Coming! The Son of Man really coming, coming into this world again with power and great glory?

Will this really ever happen? Will this solid, commonplace earth see it? Will these skies brighten and flash? and will upturned faces in this city be watching to see him coming?

So our minister preached, and for moments I felt a thrill of reality in hearing. But, as the well-dressed crowd passed down the isle, my neighbor, Mr. Stockton, whispered to me not to forget the meeting of the bank directors on Monday evening, and Mrs. Goldthwaith poured into my wife's ear a charge not to forget her party on Thursday; and my wife, as she came out, asked me if I had observed the extravagant toilet of Mrs. Pennyman.

"So absurd," she said, "when her income, I know, cannot be half what ours is! and I never think of sending to Paris for my things; I should look on it as morally wrong."

I spoke of the sermon. "Yes," said my wife, "what a sermon—so solemn! so solemn. What could be more powerful than such discourses? My dear, by-the-by, don't forget to change Mary's opal ring for a diamond one. Dear me! the Christmas presents were all so on my mind, and I was thinking of them every now and then in church; and that was so wrong of me."

"My dear," said I, "sometimes it seems to me as if our life were unreal. We go to church, and the things that we hear are either true or false. If they are true, what things they are! For instance, these Advent sermons. If we are looking for that coming, we ought to feel and live differently from what we do! Do we really believe what we hear in church? Or is it a dream?"

"I do believe," said my wife, earnestly (she is a good women, my wife,) "yes, I do believe, but it is just as you say. O dear! I feel as if I am very worldly—I have so much to think of!" and she sighed.

So did I; I knew that I, too, was very worldly. After a pause I said, "Suppose Christ should really come this Christmas, and it should be authoritatively annouuced that he would be here to-morrow?"

"I think," said my wife, "there would be some embarrassment on the part of our great men, legislators, and chief councilors, in anticipation of a personal interview. Fancy a meeting of the city council to arrange a reception for the Lord Jesus Christ!"

"Perhaps," said I, "he would refuse all offers of the rich and great. Perhaps our fashionable churches would plead for his presence in vain. He would not be in palaces."

"O!" said my wife earnestly, "If I thought our money separated us from him, I would give it all—yes, all—might I only see him."

She spoke from the bottom of her heart, and for a moment her face was glorified.

"You will see him some day," said I, "and the money that we are willing to give up at a word from him will not keep him from us."

II.

That evening the thoughts of my waking hours mirrored themselves in a dream.

I seemed to be out walking in the streets, and to be conscious of a strange, vague sense of something just declared, of which all were speaking with an air of mystery.

There was a whispering stillness around. Groups of men at the corners of the streets, and discussing an impending something with suppressed voices.

I heard one say to another, "Really coming? What? to-morrow?" And the others said, "Yes, to-morrow: on Christmas Day he will be here."

It was night. The stars were glittering down with a keen and frosty light; the shops glistened in their Christmas array; but the same sense of hushed expectancy pervaded everything. There seemed to be nothing doing; and each person looked wistfully on his neighbor as if to say, "Have you heard?"

Suddenly, as I walked, an angel-form was with me, gliding softly by my side. The face was solemn, serene, and calm. Above the forehead was a pale, tremulous, phosphorous radiance of light, purer than any on earth—a light of a quality so different from that of the street lamps, that my celestial attendant seemed to move in a sphere alone.

Yet, though I felt awe, I felt a sort of confiding love as I said, "Tell me, is it really true? Is Christ coming?"

"He is," said the angel. "To-morrow he will be here!"

"What joy!" I cried.

"Is it joy?" said the angel. "Alas, to many it is only terror! Come with me."

In a moment I seemed to be standing with him in a parlor of one of the chief palaces of the city. A stout, florid, bald-headed man was seated at a table covered with papers, which he was sorting over with nervous anxiety, muttering to himself as he did so. On a sofa lay a sad-looking, delicate woman, her emaciated hands clasped over a little book. The room was, in all its appointments, a witness of a boundless wealth. Gold and silver, and gems, and foreign furniture, and costly pictures, and articles of virtu—everything that money could buy—were heaped together; and yet the man himself seemed to me to have been neither elevated nor refined by the confluence of all these treasures. He seemed nervous and uneasy. He wiped the sweat from his brow, and spoke—

"I don't know, wife, how you feel, but I don't like this news. I don't understand it. It puts a stop to everything that I know anything about."

"O John!" said the woman, turning towards him a face pale and fervent, and clasping her hands, "How can you say so?"

And, as she spoke, I could see breaking out above her head a tremulous light like that above the brow of an angel.

"Well, Mary, it's the truth. I don't care if I say it. I don't want to meet—well, I wish he would put it off. What does he want of me? I'd be willing to make over—well, three millions to found a hospital, if he'd be satisfied and let me go on. Yes, I'd give three millions—to buy off from to-morrow."

"Is he not our best friend?"

"Best friend!" said the man, with a look of half-fright, half-anger. "Mary, you don't know what you're talking about! You know I always hated those things. There's no use in it; I can't see into them. In fact, I hate them."

She cast on him a look full of pity. "Cannot I make you see?" she said.

"No, indeed, you can't. Why, look here," he added, pointing to the papers, "here is what stands for millions! To-night it's mine; and to-morrow it will be all so much waste paper; and then what have I left? Do you think I can rejoice? I'd give half, I'd give—yes, the whole, not to have him come these hundred years." She stretched out her thin hand towards him, but he pushed it back.

"Do you see," said the angel to me solemnly, "between him and her there is a 'great gulf fixed.' They have lived in one house with that gulf between them for years! She cannot go to him; he cannot come to her. To-morrow she will rise to Christ as a dewdrop to the sun! and he will call to the mountains and rocks to fall on him—not because Christ hates him, but because he hates Christ."

Again the scene was changed. We stood together in a little low attic, lighted by one small lamp—how poor it was—a broken chair, a rickety table, a bed in the corner where the little ones were cuddling close to one another for warmth. Poor things! the air was so frosty that their breath congealed upon the bed-clothes, as they talked in baby voices: "When mother comes she will bring us some supper," said they. "But I'm so cold," said the little outsider. "Get in the middle, then," said the other two, "and we'll warm you. Mother promised she'd make a fire when she came in, if that man would pay her." "What a bad man he is," said the oldest boy, "he never pays mother if he can help it."

Just then the door opened, and a pale, thin woman came in, laden with packages.

She laid all down, and came to her children's bed, clasping her hands in rapture.

"Joy! joy, children! O joy, joy! Christ is coming! He will be here to-morrow."

Every little bird in the nest was up, and the little arms around the mother's neck; the children believed at once. They had heard of the good Jesus. He had been their mother's only Friend through many a cold and hungry day, and they doubted not he was coming.

"O mother, will he take us? He will, won't he?"

"Yes, my little ones," she said softly, smiling to herself, "He shall gather the lambs with his arms, and carry them in his bosom."

Suddenly again, another scene was present.

We stood in a lonely room, where a woman was sitting with her head bowed forward upon her hands. Alone, forsaken, slandered, she was in bitterness of spirit. Hard, cruel tongues had spoken her name with vile assertions, and a thoughtless world had believed. There had been a babble of accusations, a crowd to rejoice in iniquity, and few to pity. She thought herself alone and she spoke: "Judge me, O Lord! for I have walked in my integrity. I am as a wonder unto many: but thou art my strong refuge."

In a moment the angel touched her, "My sister," he said, "be of good cheer. Christ will be here to-morrow."

She started up with her hands clasped, her eyes bright, her whole form dilated, as she seemed to look into the heavens, and said with rapture—

"Come, Lord, and judge me; for thou knowest me altogether. Come, Son of Man, in thee have I trusted; let me never be confounded. O, for the judgment seat of Christ!"

Again I stood in a brilliant room, full of luxuries. Three or four fair women were standing pensively talking with each other. Their apartment was bestrewn with jewelry, laces, silks, velvets, and every fanciful elegance of fashion; but they looked troubled.

"This seems to me really awful," said one with a suppressed sigh. "What troubles me is, I know so little about it."

"Yes," said another, "and it puts a stop to everything! Of what use will all these be to-morrow?"

There was a poor seamstress in the corner of the room who now spoke. "We shall be ever with the Lord," she said.

"I'm sure I don't know what that can mean," said the first speaker, with a kind of shudder, "it seems rather fearful."

"Well," said the other, "it seems so sudden—when one never dreamed of any such thing—to change all at once from this to that other life."

"It is enough to be with him," said the poor woman. "O, I have so longed for it!"

"The great gulf," again said the angel.

Then again we stood on the steps of a church. A band of clergymen were together; Episcopalian, Methodist, Baptist, Presbyterian, Old School and New School, all stood hand in hand.

"It's no matter now about these old issues," they said. "He is coming; he will settle all. Ordinations and ordinances, sacraments and creeds, are the scaffolding of the edifice. They are the shadow; the substance is Christ." And hand in hand they turned their faces where the Christmas morning light began faintly glowing, and I heard them saying together, with one heart and one voice—

"Come, Lord Jesus; come quickly."—Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe. (Republished by request.)

A FEW APHORISMS.

Think what you please, say what you ought.
All food is fit to eat, but all words are not fit to speak.
The same stick that beat the black dog may beat the white one.
He who speaks, sows; he who keeps silence, reaps.
The sun rises here, he sets there.
What God has wet he will dry.
The evil which comes from thy mouth falls into thy bosom.
The sun sets, misfortunes never.
The good white dies, the black remains.
All are not thieves that the dogs bark at.
It is only at fruit-trees that thieves throw stones.
All are not friends that speak one fair.
All are not saints that go to church.
Punishment is a cripple, but it arrives.
Stretch your arm no farther than your sleeve will reach.
In laying your plans, measure your resources.
What comes with the flute goes with the drum.
Only those who have smelled the smoke of battle will answer the bugle call.
Every man carries a fool in his sleeve.
Hang your knap-sack where you can reach it.
Feed the hungry, but don't put the trough too high.
God has made no one to abandon him.
He who needs fire will seek it with his fingers.

NORSE LULLABY.

The sky is dark and the hills are white
As the storm-king speeds from the north to-night,
And this is the song the storm-king sings,
As over the world his cloak he flings:
"Sleep, sleep, little one, sleep;"
He rustles his wings and gruffly sings;
"Sleep, little one, sleep."

On yonder mountain-side a vine
Clings at the foot of a mother pine;
The tree bends over the trembling thing
And only the vine can hear her sing:
"Sleep, sleep, little one, sleep—
What shall you fear when I am here?
"Sleep, little one, sleep."

The king may sing in his bitter flight,
The tree may croon to the vine to-night,
But the little snowflake at my breast
Liketh the song I sing the best—
Sleep, sleep, little one, sleep;
Weary thou art, anext my heart,
Sleep, little one, sleep.

NEW YEAR WORDS TO GIRLS.

You are sitting quite quietly watching the old year as it fades away and the new one as it comes in. You think of all the joys and sorrows that have come to you during 1890, and of your hopes and ambitions for 1891; you believe just as you did a year ago—that you will make a great resolve that the year shall be better and your life nobler and more unselfish than it was last year. Now don't do this. Don't make the big resolve. Think, hope and pray what you want to, but in its place, make a lot of little resolves that each one of which will in time tend to make you reach the goal you desire to.

Resolve to think a little less about yourself and a little more of the comforts of others.

Resolve to be less quick of speech and more certain in action than you have been.

Resolve not to let the wicked little demon of envy enter your heart and make you bitter and fault-finding.

Resolve to consider those of your own household; the inclination on the part of too many of us is to reserve our virtues and our graces for those outside, and this is all wrong.

My dear girls, you had better blush unseen, as good daughters and good sisters, than gain all the fame imaginable as bright talkers and great beauties without any homely talent. I like that word homely—I use it perhaps in a different sense from the one you give it. It means belonging to the home; and as the home is the place where love and charity should abide, so the talents that belong to it are best worth possessing. God bless every one of you and give you some day a home of your own. It may come in the new year. It may be in the years that are far off, but if it never comes just remember that the talent of making a home may be yours, and even though you can only exercise it in a single room you must not bury it and count it of no value.—Ruth Ashmore in the Ladies' Home Journal.

TEMPERANCE.

SPURGEON ON STRONG DRINK.

Water is the strongest drink. It drives mills, it's the drink of lions and horses, and Samson never drank anything else. Let young men be teetotalers if only for economy's sake. The beer money will soon build a house. If what goes into the mash tub went into the kneeding trough, families would be better fed and better taught. If what is spent in waste were only saved for a rainy day, work-houses would never be built. The man who spends his money with the publican, and thinks the landlord's bow and "How do ye do, my good fellow?" means true respect, is a perfect simpleton. We don't light fires for the herring's comfort, but to roast him. Men do not keep pot houses for the laborer's good; if they do they certainly miss their aim. Why then should people drink "for the good of the house?" If I spend money for the good of any house let it be my own, and not the landlord's. It is a bad well into which you must put water; and the beer-house is a bad friend because it takes your all and leaves you nothing but headaches.

He who calls those his friends who let him sit and drink by the hour together, is ignorant—very ignorant. Why, red lions, and tigers, and eagles, and vultures, are all creatures of prey, and why do so many put themselves within the power of their jaws and talons? Such as drink and live riotously, and wonder why their faces are so blotchy and their pockets so bare, would leave off wondering if they had two grains of wisdom. They might as well ask an elm tree for peas as look to those loose habits for health snd wealth. Those who go to the public house for happiness climb a tree to find fish.—Herald of Life.

STRONG DRINK AMONG THE INDIANS.

[Letter from Miss Caroline E. Greene, a gifted young lady from Providence, R. I., and teacher in the Seminole school at Sasakwa, Indian Territory.]

It is a well known fact, that many years ago a law was passed by the government of the United States, which prohibited the sale of intoxicating liquors to Indians in any part of the country. Notwithstanding this law, quantities of the vilest liquors are every year brought into the Territory, working a vast amount of harm and causing much misery to these already benighted people. The violators of this law, together with all Indians who have committed crimes against white men, are arrested by a United States Marshal who passes through the county once every two or three months and are carried to Fort Smith, Arkansas, or Wichitaw, Kansas, at which place all trials take place. An Indian, immediately on leaving the prison at Fort Smith, can step into a saloon and easily obtain any quantity of the very stuff which caused him the trouble. Only recently a Choctaw Indian, having gone to Fort Smith as a witness, became intoxicated and attempted to take the life of an officer, whereupon the officer shot him down instantly. This is one of many such instances. Little or nothing is done with the violators of this law at Fort Smith, and the common plea of the saloon-keeper is that he did not know the man to be an Indian.

A drunken Indian is said to be worse than a drunken white man. They do indeed seem to be more dangerous. The women seldom drink, but stand in awe and terror of a man under the influence of liquor, and well they may, for such men are usually armed, and use their weapons at random. Last evening a poor woman fled from her home to avoid meeting a drunken brother, and came to the mission for safety. There are times when the women at a church service scarcely kneel during prayer, so fearful are they of the drunken men just outside. Often at night the inmates of the mission are disturbed by drunken men prowling about, shooting and whooping. At such times the girls become greatly excited and it is difficult to control them.

Almost every man in the nation who is not a Christian, drinks; and sad as it is, many times Christians yield to the temptation. A short time ago one of the foremost men of the nation returned to his home from St. Louis in an intoxicated state, and in possession of a number of bottles of the dreadful stuff which had been given them as a present. He had been away for some time, and his little daughter, a child of about six years of age, at the mission, went home Saturday night to see him and remain over Sunday. On her return when asked if she had had a pleasant time, the only answer "Papa was drunk" was indeed pitiful to hear, and spoke volumes. He is a man respected for his strict integrity and strong Christian character, and one to whom the missionaries look for much help in the furtherance of the Gospel among this people. Terrible are the deeds which are being heard of constantly, resulting from intemperance, and little is being done to prevent it. A few societies exist among the Creeks along the line of railroad, at places visited by Frances Willard a short time ago; but temperance work in the interior is limited to the efforts of the missionaries in the churches. At this mission school temperance meetings are held once every month, when the workers seek to show to these young Indian girls the terrible effects of alcoholic drinks on the body, mind and spirit. Many of them have fathers and brothers slaves to drink, and it is our earnest prayer that through these girls we may reach the victims of this dreadful evil. We ask your prayers that this great evil of intemperance which has caused so much suffering and wretchedness to these poor degraded Indian homes, may be speedily swept out, and the Seminole people become that happy people whose God is the Lord.—The Outlook.

EDUCATIONAL NOTES.

—The Minnesota Legislature will be asked to appropriate about $175,000 this winter for the State University. The sum of $100,000 is to be asked for to erect a medical building on the university grounds, and $75,000 for a building at the State farm. The latter is something of a new departure, but the regents feel that it is important that the expenditure be made if the university is to keep among the educational institutions of first rank. The present total enrollment exceeds 1,100.

—The regents of Heidelberg University, Tiffin, Ohio, have chosen Rev. John A. Peters, D.D., pastor of Shiloh Reformed Church, Danville, Pa., president of the literary department of that institution, lately vacated by the resignation of Rev. Geo. W. Williard, D.D. This election, says the Christian World, of Dayton, has given general satisfaction. The whole German Reformed church seems united in expressions of pleasure at his election, and a general hope is indulged that he may be able to accept soon.

—The Leland Standford, Jr., University is advancing to speedy completion, and it is thought that it will be ready for the occupation of students on the first day of October of next year. So far as is yet determined the institution is not intended for the admission of free pupils. This educational establishment is not calculated to become eleemosynary in its character, nor to become the resort of any class of pupils except those who are desirous of acquiring an education. The cost of maintenance of pupils is to be fixed at a minimum, probably not less than $200 per annum.

—Haverford College (Pa.), Isaac Sharpless, LL. D., president, the oldest collegiate institution under the control of Friends, was opened in 1833. The college has a healthful situation in extensive and beautiful grounds. Furnished with various scientific laboratories, an astronomical observatory, and working library of 25,000 volumes, it offers great advantages to those desiring a higher education. All undergraduates are required to pursue courses in Biblical study. An active Y. M. C. A. holds weekly meetings and a number of the students are engaged in mission work.—Christian Worker.

—Prof. W. G. Frost of Oberlin College spoke of the recent meetings conducted by the Evangelist Mills before the Chicago ministers last week. Most of the students in the college were already Christians when he came; but the students in the preparatory school and young people of the village were quite generally brought into the meetings and to Christ. Students already Christians had become so quickened that through meetings held by them in adjacent places 140 conversions had occurred. A number of revivals have also sprung up in distant places through the correspondence of the students. The college is gaining steadily, though yet without a president. No other institution is more thoroughly governed by all of the faculty, so that no slackening in the work has occurred.

COMMENTS BY E. E. FLAGG.

1. Elijah's message.—v. 1. It does not follow from this abrupt introduction that Ahab did not know of the existence of such a prophet before. It is much more likely that this was the culmination of a long series of disregarded warnings. It is noticeable, however, that this greatest prophet of the old dispensation is the one of whose lineage and early life we know the least. It is generally thought that he was not a native Israelite, and it is certain that he was brought up among a people accustomed to a nomadic way of life, and quite outside the pale of the fashion or even the civilization of that day. All the more startling must have seemed such an apparition in King Ahab's court where his connection with a Tyrian princess could not have failed to introduce a luxury unknown to purer and simpler times. There is a sublimity in his message that makes it well worth our study. The first idea, "As the Lord God of Israel liveth," brings us face to face as it were with "the eternal years" of God. The second, "Before whom I stand," shows us the spring of the prophet's fearless courage. There is nothing like the consciousness that he stands continually in the King's presence, to make a Christian fearless; but if he serves God one day and the world and self the next he will never be an Elijah. We are apt to take too low a view of our Christian possibilities, and be content with admiring the saintly heroes of past ages without a thought that we are expected to emulate them. Yet nothing is more clearly taught in the Bible than this: that with all the diversities of Christian service the command is "that ye come behind in no gift." The same elements go to make up the physical body, whether of philosopher or peasant; so every true spiritual life needs the same elements for growth that Paul or Luther needed, though there may be a difference in degree or proportion. What was there in Samuel extraordinary?" asks Milton in his Defence of the English people. "He was a prophet, you will say; so are they that follow his example." The times demand Elijahs, men in whom the fear of the world has no place; and according to James, who tells us that "he was a man of like passions with us," there is nothing to prevent every Christian from being an Elijah.

2. Elijah's first refuge.—v. 2-8. God always has a hiding place ready for the soul that obeys him, fearless of consequences. To drink from a brook and be fed by ravens was not luxurious living. The Lord has never promised to provide his servants with delicate or costly fare, but "their bread and their waters shall be sure." "And he drank of the brook." In every Christian's life, though it may wind through desert and wilderness there is always a "brook by the way." He is never left without providential indications of God's unfailing care. And when the brook dries up God is not limited in his resources. He can and will provide "some better thing" for those who trust him.

3. The widow of Zarephath.—vs. 8-16. We are not told that Elijah felt a moment's anxiety regarding his future supplies, nor the least reluctance to obey the seemingly strange command, to seek the protection of a kinswoman of the murderous Jezebel who was hunting for his life. The Bible never hides the weaknesses of its greatest and best characters, so we are sure that any such feeling on the prophet's part would have been recorded. But how natural would it have been to give way to doubt and despondency as he saw the brook slowly drying up. They who follow his example in opposing evil are often put in severe straits. There are many to-day who are conscious of the evil the lodge is doing, but they fear its power and are silent. They have not the courage to be Elijahs, and look to God for their daily bread. If the native country of his deadly enemy seemed to the prophet a strange hiding place, the widow's destitute condition must have been a still greater trial to his faith. Yet the very fact that she was of Jezebel's race and known to be in extreme want, was the very reason that Elijah was safe under her roof. The most untoward circumstances may surround the man who is faithful to God, and at the very moment when he seems about to be crushed, they are often made to form his refuge. But if Elijah's faith was wonderful, that of this poor woman is even more so. She was certainly one of those select souls like Cornelius and the centurion who, though reared in a heathen land, are in some mysterious way taught of the Holy Spirit. As she took the last of her scanty store of meal to bake a cake for the prophet, it does not seem to have occurred to her for a moment to doubt Elijah's word that the barrel of meal should not waste nor the cruse of oil fail. Her case finely illustrates the proverb, "There is that that scattereth and yet increaseth." What we give to God in the person of his servants is always rendered back. Whoever receives a prophet in the name of a prophet never fails of a prophet's reward.

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

—Speaking of his proposed missionary enterprise in India, Rev. George F. Pentecost says it was suggested to him by some high caste Hindus, of whom there are five millions in India.

—Rev. Wm. H. Chandler, evangelist of the Congregational Home Missionary Society in Illinois, lately closed a very successful series of meetings in De Pue. There were forty-six conversions. Twenty-six united with the church, nearly all adults. The testimony of Mr. Chandler is that the success of the work is largely due to the faithful preaching and personal labor of the pastor, Rev. Parker Hurless.

—Rev. N. D. Fanning, years ago pastor in Aurora and Marengo, Ill., closed his work with the Robbinsdale, Minn., church, Dec. 21. During his ministry the church has been greatly strengthened and a building costing nearly $1,000 is approaching completion. Mr. Fanning has already begun work with the Oak Park church, Minneapolis.

—Armour Mission in this city suffers a severe loss in the resignation of Rev. J. D. McCord, who has conducted the religious work at the Mission from its beginning, and has been very successful. Mr. McCord, it is understood, enters a field of greater usefulness in working in connection with an organized church, and has been chosen as assistant pastor to Dr. Goodwin of the First Congregational Church.

—Six colored ministers, with their elders, belonging to the Southern Presbyterian church in Mississippi, have met in conference and asked to be set apart as a separate colored presbytery. There was some difference of opinion before the result was reached. The reasons given are brief and general: "1. That it will be an incentive to greater effort among our people. 2. That it will remove a great many of the embarrassments that now meet us in the way."

—The First United Presbyterian congregation of Lincoln, Neb., has been organized with thirty-six members. The date of the organization was Dec. 12, 1890.

—The deaths from cholera last summer in Japan were estimated at 27,000, of whom only fifty were Christians.

—The "Evangel," the American Baptist Mission steamer on the lower Congo, is the first vessel to make the passage from the mouth of the river to Matadi in a day.

—There are eleven provinces in China with 982 walled cities, in 913 of which there is no missionary.

—A local paper speaks thus of the revival in Elgin, Ill.: "The union revival services which began Sunday in the Congregational church, under the leadership of Rev. B. F. Mills, have stirred our people most profoundly. It is conservatively estimated that 1,800 people were present at the morning service and 2,200 in the evening. At least the house was crowded, with many people standing. The earnest words of the preacher are listened to with wrapt attention. Such things can but bear fruit, and we believe there are great things in store for Elgin."

—That the schools of the Baptist Home Mission Society for the colored people and the Indians are thoroughly religious in spirit is shown by the fact that in the last seven years nearly two thousand students have made a profession of faith in Christ. Dr. Owen, of Roger Williams University, writing of the conversion of fifteen young men in the school, says, "The meetings have been as calm and orderly and free from noise and excitement as if held among a thoughtful and earnest white congregation."

For the last three months of 1890 the Christian Cynosure has given especial attention to the college secret societies for the benefit of the hundreds of colleges to whose reading-rooms it is sent. This interesting discussion, in which have appeared the opinions of some of the very ablest American educators, will be incidentally continued next year.

But with the first of the year will begin to be published the results of a wider investigation than has yet been made into the identity of

MODERN AND ANCIENT SECRETISM.

The ancient secret societies were the MYSTERIES practiced in Chaldea, Egypt, Phœnicia, Greece, Rome, etc. These were the pagan religious systems of the ancient world.

WERE THEY RELATED TO THE LODGES OF TO-DAY?

This question we shall endeavor to answer. We believe that new evidence of the most intimate relation has been lately found, and that the presentation of this evidence to be made in the "Cynosure" will amaze Christendom the moment it is realized.

THE WHITE CROSS LEAGUE

and Social Purity movement is come none too soon, as will appear in the course of this investigation.

In connection with this most important topic the Cynosure will give particular attention to the

publishing them in full so far as they can be obtained, and showing their absolute incompatibility to good citizenship as well as to Christianity.

The peculiar features which have made the Cynosure so valuable in the past will be continued. Current events and the interference of the lodge in them will have especial attention. Able correspondence will be continued from New England, Washington, the Southern Mississippi district, and the Pacific Coast. The portraits and sketches of notable persons who have been identified with Christian reforms will be continued, and will be, as in the past, a very popular feature of the paper. The Sabbath-school lesson notes by Miss E. E. Flagg will be continued. For all who wish to wisely improve every opportunity against the lodge they are the best. The Home and Temperance and other departments will continue to be filled with excellent reading for the fireside.

BE SURE

that the Cynosure comes to your home during 1891.

You can nowhere else read fully the writings and sayings of such men as Joseph Cook, D. L. Moody, George F. Pentecost, D.D., E. P. Goodwin, D.D., Pres. J. Blanchard, Pres. H. H. George, and a host of men as good if not as great, on the subject of secret societies.

Nowhere else can you read of the progress of this reform week by week; and as the secret societies are now beginning openly to nominate and elect men to Congress and State offices, as they number hundreds of orders and millions of members, the issues they raise are of importance to every American.

Since the lodges are so aggressive every citizen should understand their nature and history and something of the men who invented and who manage them. You need the Cynosure, therefore, to keep abreast of the times as a well-informed American.

You ought also to help on this movement against the secret lodges. How better begin than by subscribing for the Cynosure? And $1.50 is but little to give in aid of so good a cause.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

CHICAGO.

The government building is settling gradually and unevenly causing much trouble by the breaking of gas and water pipes. The other day a 6-inch water pipe broke and flooded the mailing department in the basement. The Government architect is working on plans for a larger building to occupy the same block to cost $7,000,000. More than half that amount has been spent on the old building, of which the Masons laid the cornerstone in 1876 with great parade.

In Chicago, during 1890, 2,219,312 cattle and 5,733,082 hogs were slaughtered, against, respectively, 1,763,310 and 4,211,767 in the previous year. The increase in general trade in the city has been from 6 to 33 per cent, and the products of factories is $25,000,000 greater than in the year 1889.

Henry M. Stanley lectured on his late African explorations to an immense audience in the Auditorium on Friday and Saturday evenings.

The 11,608 buildings erected in Chicago in 1890 cover a frontage of fifty and one-half miles, at a cost of $47,322,100.

George E. Warne, late cashier of the Kean Bank, was discharged by Justice Hamburger, and then brought suit against W. W. Royer for $50,000, on a charge of malicious prosecution.

The Government show in Chicago will far surpass the one it gave at the Centennial in Philadelphia, as will be readily perceived when the fact is considered that at the exposition of 1876 only $80,000 was spent upon a building and $500,000 upon the display it contained. The building for the coming World's Fair will cost $400,000 and $1,000,000 will be spent upon the exhibit in it and its annexes. In the latter, which will afford more than 50,000 additional feet of floor space, will be accommodated the navy, the life-saving service, the military hospital service, etc.

THE INDIANS.

A battle took place on Wounded Knee creek near Pine Ridge agency last week Monday. The Seventh Cavalry was disarming the Indians of Big Foot's band. The scouts thought the work complete, when the order was given to search for hidden weapons. Instantly the Indians opened with revolvers and rifles which had been concealed under their blankets. At the first volley Capt. Wallace, in command of Company K, was killed, and Lieutenant Garlington was wounded in the arm. Every one then began firing. The Hotchkiss Battery turning their shells loose in the crowd, in a flash all were scattered, the soldiers chasing the few fugitives up the draw. There are from twenty-five to thirty soldiers killed and wounded, so far as could be learned in the confusion, and the Indian band was wiped out.

Specials from Gordon, Neb., Jan 4, say that two scouts just arrived there confirm the report of a battle the day before. The first reports were to the effect that a battle was raging about ten miles northeast of Gordon. The booming of cannon could be heard distinctly. The fight was between the Indians and a detachment sent out by Gen. Miles from Rosebud agency to bury the dead Indians killed at Wounded Knee battle of Dec. 29. The hostile Sioux objected to the burial of their dead by the pale-faced foe and opened fire. After desperate and sharp firing of the Hotchkiss gun they were forced to return to the protection of the friendly ravines. No deaths were reported.

The Kickapoo Indians began a ghost dance on their reservation near Hiawatha, Kan., on the 28th ult. and continued

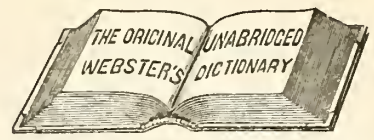
REMARKABLE OFFER!



Nearly everyone is familiar with the name, but it has been estimated that only one in every two hundred and eighty persons in the United States is fortunate enough to have access to the valuable information contained within the covers of the grandest work ever written by mortal man,

Webster's
UNABRIDGED DICTIONARY.

That this is an unfortunate state of affairs will be admitted by all, and it is due to the fact that no one save the rich could afford them.

The Dictionary is a necessity in every home, school and business house. It fills a vacancy and furnishes knowledge which no one hundred volumes of the choicest books could supply, and all young or old, educated or ignorant, rich or poor should have it within reach and refer to its contents every day in the year.

The Loomis reprint contains all the matter as compiled and arranged by our esteemed and honored author and statesman

NOAH WEBSTER.

About forty years of his life was devoted to this great work, and when we consider the fact that this book contains about 100,000 words, we will appreciate that these years must have been well spent.

Some idea of the magnitude of this book may be gained from the fact that it contains over 440 cubic inches of paper and has about 300,000 square inches of printed surface.

In addition to the 100,000 words it contains a portrait of the author, together with his biography and a valuable table of 12,000 synonymous words.

By special arrangement with the publishers, we are permitted to furnish this valuable volume: 1st. To any subscriber to our paper; 2nd. To any renewal subscription; and 3rd. To any person who has paid a full year's subscription within the past six months, on receipt of $1.50 for the paper one year, and two dollars and seventy-five cents to cover express charges, packing, etc., of the Dictionary.

HOME AND HEALTH.

A COLD IN THE HEAD.

A genuine cold is simply the closing of the pores of the surface, about seven millions in the human system, retaining a portion of the effete particles of the ever-decaying body, more or less poisonous, this retention necessarily antagonizing good health; the lungs—sustaining a very intimate relation to the skin—usually are more especially affected, performing some of the labors of the surface. It is usual, however, for the weaker parts of the system to take on diseased action, which is but another name for recuperative efforts, the efforts of nature, by apparently inimical means, pain producing, ordinarily—by which to remove a real difficulty, not always observed by the victim. Some of these efforts are regarded by the masses as "colds in the head," while it is probable that not more than one in ten of these supposed colds have any connection with the closing of the pores. Most, if not all of the irritation in the nasal passages, the inflammation of the mucous surfaces, not only of the nasal passages, but of the throat, etc., with the sores about the nose and on the lips, usually regarded as "cold sores," have their origin in a deranged state of the stomach, the inner surface of this organ having a similar appearance. As a result of improper dietetic habits, taking food very difficult of digestion, too much of ordinary food, or at improper times, eating so rapidly that it is not half masticated, some have a continuous "head cold" and are unable to breathe with the mouth closed, thus inducing additional disease. The appropriate treatment of such supposed colds, etc., is the adoption of simple habits, careful dieting, making the grains and fruits more than usually prominent, eating flesh very sparingly—if at all—no pork, or any of the products of the filthy scavenger! In these modern, progressive times there are so many excellent, nutritious, easily digested, delicate and palatable preparations from the grains, that none need select food of a doubtful quality, these preparations being sold for far less than the popular luxuries, although they contain much more nourishment. These preparations may, with great propriety, constitute a part of the morning meal or the dinner, while the majority of all communities would be benefited by using them as the only food taken at the latter meal. Such a course, with due care in all respects, would soon remove that "all gone feeling at the pit of the stomach," with other unpleasant sensations, when the "head colds" would also disappear. I will add that these supposed colds have led many persons to take undue care of the head, in contrast with the feet, which demands a great deal more attention as the means of warding off such dreaded evils, such as wearing fur caps or close hats, and in audiences covering the head when there may be the slightest air stirring, etc., while those of reasonable intellect and a normal amount of hair should have sufficient brain activity to keep the head as warm as it should be, under ordinary circumstances.—Dr. Hanaford in the Phrenological Journal.

SLEEP FOR SCHOOL CHILDREN.

We all know how much greater is the need of children for sleep than of grown persons, and how necessary for their good it is to be able fully to satisfy this need; but how great it is generally at any particular age of the child is very hard to define exactly. The amount varies under different climatic conditions. In Sweden, we consider a sleep of eleven or twelve hours necessary for the younger school children, and of at least eight or nine hours for the older ones. Yet the investigations have shown that this requirement lacks much of being met in all the classes, through the whole school. Boys in the higher classes get but little more than seven hours in bed; and as that is the average, it is easy to perceive that many of them must content themselves with still less sleep. It is also evident from the investigations that the sleeping time is diminished with the increase of the working hours from class to class, so that pupils of the same age enjoy less according as they are higher in their classes. It thus appears constantly that in schools of relatively longer hours of work, the sleeping time of the pupils is correspondingly shorter. In short, the prolongation of the working hours takes place for the most part at the cost of the time for sleep.—Prof. Axel Key, in Popular Science Monthly.

—Soup made of dried peas, is recommended as a substitute for beef tea for invalids. Peas are very nutritious, and a dish of well made pea soup with good bread will make an excellent and economical dinner for a well person.

There's a patent medicine which is not a patent medicine—paradoxical as that may sound. It's a discovery! the golden discovery of medical science! It's the medicine for you—tired, run down, exhausted, nerve-wasted men and women; for you sufferers from diseases of skin or scalp, liver or lungs—its chance is with every one, its season always, because it aims to purify the fountain of life—the blood—upon which all such diseases depend. The medicine is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. The makers of it have enough confidence in it to sell it on trial. That is—you can get it from your druggist, and if it doesn't do what it's claimed to do, you can get your money back, every cent of it.

That's what its makers call taking the risk of their words.

Tiny, little, sugar-coated granules, are what Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are. The best Liver Pills ever invented; active, yet mild in operation; cure sick and bilious headaches. One a dose.

FARM NOTES.

FEEDING MILCH COWS IN COLD WEATHER.

One cow fed generously will be far more profitable than two cows supplied with a small allowance of feed. Much of the feed consumed is employed to maintain the temperature of a cow's system. If a cow is supplied with barely enough feed to keep up the animal heat, there will be no material for making milk. If one cow be fed with an amount of fodder and meal that would be a small allowance for two cows, a part of the food will be appropriated to the production of milk. The temperature of all the cold water that a cow takes into her stomach, must be raised to blood heat by means of the consumption of food that would otherwise make milk. Hence, if the drinking water be heated to about eighty or ninety degrees Fahrenheit, all the food that would be required to warm that water would be saved.

My own practice in the management of the cow while she yields milk in cold weather, used to be when we kept a cow, to take a teakettleful of boiling water to the barn, both morning and evening, and pour the hot water on a large basketful of cut hay and cornstalks. The mass was then shoveled over and over, until every piece was wet, after which two quarts of wheat bran and a quart or two of oil meal were sprinkled over the smoking feed. The whole was then forked over and over, and fed warm. About an hour after feeding, another teakettle of hot water was taken to the barn, and poured into two pailfuls of cold water, which the cow swallows at one draught.

At noon she was supplied with a peck of roots, cut fine, and all the hay and cut cornstalks she will eat. At evening she was again fed with warm feed and supplied with warm water. The teakettle was always kept on the kitchen stove full of water. It pays generously in milk, to incur the little extra trouble of warming the water for a cow, when the weather is freezing cold. During the very cold snaps, if one does not take extra good care of his cows, there will be a great falling off in the daily quantity of milk. Then when there is a shrinkage of milk in cold weather, it will be found exceedingly difficult, even by extra feeding, to increase the daily yield to the quantity given before the shrinkage.—N. Y. Evangelist.

CUTTING AND GRINDING FEED.

There may be some difference among scientific experimenters regarding the exact measure of benefit derived from grinding and cutting feed, but that there is a saving of feed by so doing is an accepted fact. One man raises the objection that it costs more to cut and grind the feed than the saving amounts to. The reply is: Those feeders, like street car companies, fancy dairymen and others, who figure every item of cost, say we can cut and grind our feed cheaper in a steel and iron machine than in the cow or horse. It is an accepted fact for the horse, the fattening steer, or the dairy cow, the best results are secured by feeding considerable grain. It is claimed that when the grain is ground and mixed with chopped straw, hay, or fodder, it is easier and more rapidly digested, that a larger percentage is assimilated by the animal, and that there is less vital force exhausted in the dairy work.

Another argument in favor of cutting feed is the fact that whatever refuse there is, is so short and fine it becomes a better absorbent of liquids, making the manure more valuable and more easily handled. But the most convincing reason we find is that wherever the practice of grinding and cutting the feed is in vogue, there we find the animals in thrifty condition, horses fat, dairy cows giving large yields of milk, steers gaining rapidly, and doing this on much less feed than where grain is fed whole, corn fodder fed from racks or on the ground, and the loose hay thrown in the mangers by the forkful.

Last winter we saw cows and horses in a stable with several inches of refuse hay under their feet, and the mangers full in front of them. The owner said it would not pay to cut hay or fodder, or grind feed; they were too cheap; his stock were all thin in flesh, and he did not have a marketable animal in the place. He also admitted that he did not know how much feed it took to winter an animal; he never had a feed mill or feed cutter on the place; never cut up corn, it did not pay; he had never tried it, but he knew. Those who have tried it say it pays, and it would seem that they are the ones who ought to know.—Farm, Stock and Home.

BRONCHITIS

Is an inflammation of the bronchial tubes—the air-passages leading into the lungs. Few other complaints are so prevalent, or call for more prompt and energetic action. As neglect or delay may result seriously, effective remedies should always be at hand. Apply at once a mustard poultice to the upper part of the chest, and, for internal treatment, take frequent doses of

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

C. O. Lepper, Druggist, Fort Wayne, Ind., writes: "My little sister, four years of age, was so ill from bronchitis that we had almost given up hope of her recovery. Our family physician, a skilful man and of large experience, pronounced it useless to give her any more medicine, saying he had done all it was possible to do, and we must prepare for the worst. As a last resort, we determined to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and I can truly say, with most happy results. After taking a few doses she seemed to breathe easier, and, within a week, was out of danger. We continued giving the Pectoral until satisfied she was entirely well. This indisputable evidence of the great merit of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral has given me unbounded confidence in the preparation, and I recommend it to my customers, knowing it cannot disappoint them."

"Ayer's Cherry Pectoral cured me of a bad cough and my partner of bronchitis. I know of numerous cases in which this preparation has proved very beneficial in families of so that the medicine is known among them as 'the consoler of the afflicted.'"—Jaime Rufus Vidal, San Cristobel, San Domingo.

"A short time ago, I was taken with a severe attack of bronchitis. The remedies ordinarily used in such cases failed to give me relief. Almost in despair of ever finding anything to cure me, I bought a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and was helped from the first dose. I had not finished one bottle before the disease left me, and my throat and lungs were as sound as ever."—Geo. B. Hunter, Altoona, Pa.

several days. One of their number fell dead with exhaustion Wednesday. No trouble is expected to result from their fanaticism.

COUNTRY.

For two days following "Christmas" the papers reported an extraordinary number of murders. There were two cases of persons burned to death by fire catching in the Santa Claus disguises which they wore.

The newspapers at Dubuque, Iowa, have received official notice that the printing of drawings of prizes at church fairs and other entertainments, is a violation of the lottery law. It is not explained what churches thus tempt the papers to violate the law.

The Chattanooga Tradesman says the increase of white population in the South has been 26.2 per cent, and of the colored population only 10 per cent; and that there are now 475,930 persons of Northern birth in the South, against 240,385 ten years ago. The State, county and municipal indebtedness of the South aggregates $183,772,353. The first of these statements is quite problematical.

Among the bills to be pushed by the Farmers' Alliance in the Kansas Legislature are: Suppression of the Pinkerton detective and similar organizations; for the Crawford system of primaries; the Australian ballot system; revision of mortgage and redemption laws; making the interest rate 6 per cent, and reduction of railway rates so as to make the rate of income 6 per cent on the actual investments.

Thirty coal mines along the Monongahela river are now idle on account of the strike for an advance of ½ cent per bushel in the price of mining. About 3,000 men are out, and the strikers claim the strike will be general in a few days.

In the county court at Pittsburg Judge Stowe handed down an opinion on the pumping of oil wells on Sunday. Suits were brought by the Law and Order Society, but were dismissed by the Judge, who maintained that the pumping of the wells on Sunday was an absolute necessity, since salt water generally ruins a standing well.

Friday morning Mrs. George Bain, living near Irwin, Pa., arose at 6 o'clock and drowned herself in a well. Three weeks ago her lovely young daughter went crazy. This drove her husband insane, and he died in a mad-house here Dec. 30, and now the last of the family commits suicide.

Five men were instantly killed by the bursting of a cylinder head on the towboat Annie Roberts, at Portsmouth, Ohio, Friday.

Two men, a woman and a boy were burned to death in the Avenue Hotel at Corsicana, Texas, Thursday night. Firemen attempted to rescue them but failed and barely escaped with their own lives.

The Braddock, Pa., Wire Works, the Scottdale Rolling Mill and Pipe Works, and the Charlotte Furnace and Coke Works were closed down Friday, throwing 1,400 men out of employment. The business of Scottdale is almost paralyzed.

It is reported that in a riot at Catharine Station, Ala., on Tuesday night, a number of persons were killed. Facts touching the affray are meager, but it is known that the colored postmaster was driven out of town.

An earthquake shock was felt over central California on Friday. Prof. E. S. Holden, of Lick Observatory at Mount Hamilton, telegraphs that registers there indicate that the shock was the most severe that has occurred since 1868. Ceilings were cracked in the observatory and fell to the floor. The large telescope at the observatory is believed to be uninjured.

A correspondent of the Boston Transcript reports the finding in Hundred Dome Cave, in Edmonson county, Kentucky, of over 2,000 mummies of what must have been a superior race of men, and which he believed antedated Adam. The bodies are well preserved.

On the last day of 1890 it was telegraphed from Bismarck that the "continued summer weather in North Dakota is the source of considerable conjecture. Thus far this winter the mercury has not dropped to the zero mark. Farmers have been plowing in their fields all winter. The 'oldest settler' fails to recall a similar instance in the history of the Missouri slope. This morning opened as pleasant as a June day. Men can wear straw hats and linen coats without feeling uncomfortable, and the ladies find use for their parasols. There were flakes of snow last week, but they were quickly dissolved by a warm rain."

FOREIGN.

The railway strike in Scotland is about over. Several hundred of the strikers continue to hold meetings, but their places are being rapidly filled. Railway traffic is resuming its normal condition, and it seems that the men who are unyielding must permanently lose the positions they recently left.

A London dispatch of the 2d says: "A family of five persons without a home, who have been tramping through the country, were found by a road side near Cambridge this morning all frozen to death."

The communications from Mr. William O'Brien to several members of the Irish party disclose the fact that at the Boulogne conference Mr. Parnell's terms of reunion with the party, as expressed by him, included a merely nominal withdrawal of his claims to the leadership and a merely temporal retirement from political life, and a voice in the councils of the Home Rulers.

The London Chronicle's Vienna correspondent says reports have been received from Russia that severe anti-Semitic measures are being enforced; that hundreds of Jewish shops are being closed daily, and that thousands of families are being expelled from the different villages throughout Russia. A great exodus of Russian Jews, especially to America, the correspondent says, may be expected in the spring.

The Vienna Tagblatt says that the German Government has taken the initiative toward calling a conference to consider the establishment of an international system of protection against anarchist outrages.

On Dec. 3, at Lima, Peru, followers of Pierola attempted to start a revolution by capturing Fort Santa Catalina. A fierce fight, lasting two hours, followed, in which seventy-five of the insurrectionists are reported to have been killed.

A terrific storm prevailed early last week at Trieste. Numerous chimneys and roofs have been blown down and torn off by the wind, and many accidents to passers-by resulted. Carriage traffic was impossible, and wayfarers were compelled to cling to ropes to make their way along the streets. In London, at the same time, it was said the weather prevailing throughout England was the severest that has been experienced since the year 1813. On the continent the weather was equally severe. Reports of intensely cold weather come from Paris, Vienna, Berlin and Frankfort-on-the-Main. In the last mentioned city seven persons were found frozen to death in the streets.

Don't write to me when taking the first bottle of my Medical Discovery. I know how it makes you feel, but it's all right. There are certain cases where the Discovery takes hold sharp, but it is the diseased spot in you it has taken hold of, and that's what you want. The Discovery has a search warrant for every humor, from backache to scrofula, inside and outside, and of course it makes a disturbance in your poor body. But the fight is short, you are better by the second bottle; if not, then tell me about it, and I will advise. I will, however, in the future, as in the past, answer any letter from a nursing mother.

The suggestion of our Washington correspondent last week, that petitions against the opening of the World's Fair of 1893 on the Sabbath day be sent to the members of Congress, is a good one. We understand that resolutions have been introduced in both houses to this effect. Let the movers be immediately sustained by the petitions of the people everywhere. Congregations and all proper assemblies can pass resolutions which should be forwarded without delay.

A recent cablegram from Dublin shows that the vindictive spirit of the secret lodge is not dead, although the "Invincibles" connected with the murder of Secretary Burke and Lord Cavendish in Phœnix Park, Dublin, are executed or serving sentences in prison. In December Rev. John Healy, Roman Catholic bishop of Cloufert, Ireland, was visiting one of the parishes of his diocese, and spoke in a sermon in strong condemnation of secret societies. That night while sleeping in the house of the priest a bullet was fired through the window, believed to have been intended for the bishop. He was asleep, however, and did not know of the outrage, because the careful priest, alarmed lest some member of his flock thould be discovered as its author, concealed the effect of the ball as long as possible.

The situation in Dakota was little changed last week. The army under General Miles was carefully maneuvered to close in upon the Indians who have left their agencies, and at the same time prevent another conflict. Reports from these outside Indian camps promise frequently that they are breaking up, and it is said that General Miles is much disappointed that these reports have not yet come true. There are in all 20,000 of the Sioux Indians. Of these 16,500 are peacefully abiding on their reservations, leaving but 3,500 in the hostile camps, surrounded by 8,000 soldiers. The situation of the Indians is hopeless, but it may also be so desperate that they prefer to die fighting rather than return to the agency. The plan of the commanding general is a pacific one, and there will be no art of persuasion untried to induce them to again yield to the tender mercies of our government.

A Sunday dispatch informs the public that Powderly of the Knights of Labor, "Grand Master" of American workingmen, has just issued a circular to his lodges recommending a joint conference of industrial organizations to be held next July at Washington, D. C., for the purpose of formulating a political industrial platform. "The object of the conference is to perfect measures and form a third party for aggressive educational and political work in the campaign of 1892, which, it is declared, should result in the election of a President and a Congressman committed to the interests of labor." The call for a similar conference issued from Kansas is of similar purport. Both ignore the Prohibition party which has been courting their friendship. This, on the part of Powderly, is very unkind toward his friends in the W. C. T. U.

The farmer who burned down his barn to be rid of the rats was a wise man compared with the managers of the so-called "National Religious Liberty Society," whose single aim seems to be to antagonize every effort for the perpetuity of the Sabbath day as generally observed by the Christian church. The managers of this singular organization were in Washington last week lobbying against the measures now before both houses providing that no exposition for which appropriation is made by Congress shall be opened on the Sabbath. They leave no stone unturned to hinder the effort now made to preserve this day from absolute secularization. They boast much of personal liberty and separation of church and state, but their real purpose is not manifest. They are very strenuous observers of Saturday for Sabbath, but when they have succeeded in destroying all regard for the Sabbath, as their work is certainly calculated to do, what possible basis will they then have on which to set up a Saturday Sabbath? If the seventh day is the Sabbath their work is fanatical; if the first, it is wicked.

Roman Catholic writers have long boasted of the chastity of their church of which the rarity of their divorces was an evidence. But they do not tell us all the truth at once. Domestic infelicity is probably as frequent in Romanist families as any other; but while the outside world runs to the courts and fills the daily press with the disgusting details of marital quarrels, the papist goes to his priest or bishop who manages to quietly effect what is made notorious with the Protestant. A few days since, when the publication of marriage licenses was urged in Baltimore Cardinal Gibbons opposed it decidedly, as interfering with private affairs and because of "human frailty." The nature of this frailty is signified in the dispatch published in the last Catholic Review, which thus reports the words of the Cardinal: "There are daily cases which come before him, he said, where it is almost a necessity that the date of the marriage should be kept secret. For instance, only a short while ago an application was made for a dispensation, and it was granted beause of the fact that the young woman was in a delicate condition, and it was to the interest of the parties to conceal the exact date of the marriage. If the issuance of the license had been published the woman's reputation would have been blighted and the marriage prevented." This is the other side of the picture which the priests have so long been holding up to the world to show what Eden-like virtue exists in the perpetual sunshine of Romanism.

LODGE RELIGION.

ADDRESS OF REV. F. O. CUNNINGHAM, SOMERVILLE, MASS., AT THE LATE BOSTON CONVENTION.

I am to talk a little while to-night, in regard to lodge religion, and when I say "The Lodge," I do not mean simply Masonry, though I believe Masonry to be the highest type of what the lodge is; but I mean the general lodge idea. Every organization which we find in this world, stands for some idea, some central thought. Many lodges claim to stand for the principles of fraternity, mutual protection and mutual insurance, but we find that the lodge has in it other ideas than these.

I wish to say to you first, that the lodge is a religion, because it has a certain ritual and a priesthood. Men tell me very often: "Well, Mr. Cunningham, if I only live up to the teachings of Masonry, that will be sure to gain me admittance into heaven; that will be religion enough." But the fallacy of that claim has been already proven by selections from their own ritual. And so, assuming at the very first that the lodge is a religion, I have a few matters to bring against it; and I bring them forward only after careful study of the subject, and after comparison with what the Scriptures teach us is pure religion.

In the first place, lodge religion does not recognize Christ as the foundation. There are some people who claim that Christ is recognized in the lodge in some senses; but whatever there may be of truth in that statement, it is true that Christ is not recognized as the foundation of lodge religion; and my Bible tells me distinctly that other foundation can no man lay, than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ.

Thus lodge religion is proven at the start to be a false religion, because it is not based upon the only foundation.

Then lodge religion has, in nearly every one of the prominent lodges, a counterfeit regeneration. Christ said except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God. Now the lodge ritual teaches us that a man may inherit the kingdom of God by adherence to his vows in the Masonic lodge. But there is a very material omission. The presence and power of God's Spirit is never invoked or even recognized in a lodge such as the one spoken of.

Lodge religion has oaths, by some declared to be bloodthirsty; I do not know positively, I never took one. But they are at least in direct violation of the command of Christ, when he said: "Swear not at all; neither by heaven, for it is God's throne; nor by the earth, for it is his footstool, nor by your own head." A man has no right, if he is loyal to Christ and to his commands, to take any oath of the character which must be taken to gain admittance to a lodge.

Lodge religion has high sounding titles. If they mean nothing, they are childish and foolish; if they mean something, they are blasphemous. No man on earth has any right to even take a title which is "worshipful." There are many other titles which I have no time to speak of, but this is certainly blasphemous. When John, on the Isle of Patmos, fell down before the angel, more worthy of worship than a man, the angel said: "See thou do it not." When Cornelius fell down before Peter, whom he awaited in answer to prayer, Peter said, "Stand up, I myself also am a man." But in the very name "worshipful," which is assumed by the master of one of these lodges, there is an assumption of divine attributes, and a recognition of the right of one man more than another to worship, by thus drawing comparisons. A man has no right to take the Name of names, and assume the character which goes with it. Lodge religion has a tendency to degrade the individual, and to degrade his ideas of what worship is.

Lodge religion, again, is misleading; misleading because it does not present the "whole counsel of God." It garbles Scripture. It is said to rest on the Bible, but the Bible on which it rests is sadly mutilated, the most precious name of all being omitted.

I once went to a funeral, and as I was coming out of the door, one of the members of our church, who was a Mason, said to me: "Pastor, I think the clergyman who conducted that funeral service was a Mason." "Why?" I asked. "Well," said he, "from the way he quoted the Bible." Said I, "Didn't he quote it correctly?" "No." "Do you mean to tell me as a Mason," I asked, "that they do not quote the Bible correctly?" I had turned him on himself, and he said "They never do; they haven't the right to do it." I said that any system which made it impossible to quote the Bible correctly, was unworthy of confidence.

Lodge religion flatters men. It teaches men that there is only the necessity of certain rites, certain forms, a certain ritual to be obeyed, that the man may finally reach heaven. Man is a sinner; they must know this if they read the Bible carefully, for the character of man is shown there. What men need to be told to-day is that they are sinners, and that needs to be proven to them by the power of God's Spirit; and never till a man recognizes his sinfulness, is he in a position to receive the grace of God.

Lodge religion makes much of its charity. How badly they must misuse the Greek word Charis, which means love. Their charity is extended to the widow and the orphan of their own members, who were in good standing in the order, and had paid their debts to their own lodge. This has no relation to true Christian charity, which goes out to relieve any widow, any orphan, anyone in need, anywhere. There is no such thing as confining the spirit of ministry, if it is in us as it is in the Gospel of Christ.

Lodge religion is of the earth, earthy; we are told distinctly that Christians are to keep themselves unspotted from the world, and that this is a part of pure religion. A Mason said to me the other day: "We believe that pure religion, and undefiled before God and the Father, is this: to visit the widow and the fatherless in their affliction;" and there he stopped. I said to him: "You do not go far enough. There is more in pure religion than simply to visit the widow and the orphan, commendable as that is." "How, then, can I keep myself unspotted from the world?" "By moving in the world, and yet being so filled with the Spirit that its touch may not contaminate."

Lodge religion is suspicious because of its secrecy. I spent an hour talking with a policeman the other night, in regard to his work, and how it was continually bringing him in contact with wrong-doers. I said to him: "Doesn't it give you a peculiar feeling to realize that your only duty is to grapple with felons; that you have nothing to do with peaceable citizens?" And after talking a little while, he said: "At one o'clock the lights go out, and the streets become dark, and it is then that I have especially to keep my eyes open. If I hear a firm and steady step coming down the street I make up my mind that that man is all right, and honest, and I pay no attention to him; but if I hear a hesitating, halting step, I immediately think: 'that man needs attention;' and I watch him." "Then," I said, "you believe that under the cover of darkness and secrecy, is the time for the performance of foul deeds?" "Certainly," he said; "that is the reason we double our force in the night time." So that works done in secret are a cause for suspicion. Darkness suits foul deeds and wicked counsels. The Gospel tells us to have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather to reprove them.

It is the mission of the church to stand in its place as the light of the world, and its testimony is directly opposed to all things which are secret, and done under cover of darkness.

Lodge religion is dangerous to Christianity, because so many professed Christian ministers sit in the council of the lodge room, and hear their Bible and their faith mutilated and torn to pieces, and are silent. How can any man belonging to a lodge in this country, have any respect whatever for the teachings of a man who will sit quietly, listen to the mutilation of the most sacred teachings of the Word of God, and yet claim to be one called of God to proclaim his truth.

Again, lodge religion is contrary to the spirit of brotherhood. In the spirit of the Gospel of Christ there is no Jew, nor Greek, bond or free, perfect or maimed. But it has been proven that there are these distinctions in the lodge, and so the true idea of brotherhood is entirely done away with.

I heard of a lodge the other day that was called the "Good Samaritan Lodge," and it moved me to write a little article for the paper. The Good Samaritan did not ask for the "grip" before he came to the assistance of that poor man. He ministered to one who not only did not belong to his fraternity, but who was separated from him by centuries of national prejudice.

We have already seen to-night that lodge secret rites are begotten from the ancient mysteries, which always had power over the degenerate human heart.

The lodge sets itself squarely against the church and truth of God, when the test comes. We may sometimes think that the church and the lodge can live peaceably. So they can. The dog and the cat can so long as there is no special test. But as I heard a man say the other day in this connection, as soon as there comes a test between their two natures, the dog nature and the cat nature, there will be trouble. And so between the lodge and the church, as soon as the test is applied, an open defiance of the church follows.

The Grand Master of Alabama says, "A Mason, having joined a church, the laws of which require a renunciation of Masonry, notwithstanding he holds a demit, is not entitled to its benefits; neither is the widow of such an one entitled after his death." So that the Masonic law means that a man cannot join a church that has courage enough to express itself on this question. It is a somewhat new way of putting it, but one with which I have entire sympathy, that any "organization which attempts to close the mouth of a Christian man or woman, is not a safe organization." (Applause.)

The lodge also states itself against government; now follow it: "We know no North, no South, no East, no West, and we know no government save our own." I sat down in my study to-day, and I said: "What can I say to them to-night about that;" and after I had formed a good sentence, I took up Joseph Cook's speech, and began to read it, and he had said the same words, so I said I should not bring them here to-night, without giving credit. But as he has said: "If that is not buncombe and braggadocia, it is treason."

Loyalty to the personal Christ is the supreme duty of the hour. Separation from the world, consecration and concentration upon the mission of the church, is what is most demanded. I firmly believe that the church of Christ is unique in its foundation,—the Rock of Ages on which it rests,—there is no organization on earth that can take its place. Here abide faith, hope and love, these three, the three links of truest brotherhood; and if any man wants to join an organization, I advise him to join the best, which is the church of Christ. A man said the other day, speaking about his lodge, that he was sick for weeks, and the lodge came to him, provided a watcher by him, gave him five dollars a week for twenty weeks, and made up a purse of one hundred and ten dollars for him when he got well; and then when he went to church, the first thing that was presented to him was a bill of fifteen dollars for pew rent of a pew that he had not occupied. He said, "I pay about two or three hundred dollars a year into the church, and about six or eight into the lodge, and this is the difference in the returns I get from the two."

"Well," I said, "If you are going to draw comparisons, taking the best of your side and the worst of ours, I won't admit it. Then again, you had paid that lodge faithfully, and they had promised you just what you received. That was simply business. If I pay for a life insurance, I do not consider that the company is proving itself very kind and charitable to pay the policy to my wife when I am dead. I have paid all I agreed to, and what they do is simply business; and in the same way you understood when you joined this lodge, that they were to give you these benefits. And then the church, knowing that you were so well cared for by your lodge, had no special need to meet in your case; did it? And besides this we are to notice this fact: I do not believe that a church that would present you a bill for pew rent under such circumstances, is a church of Christ. (Applause). I don't believe in pew rents anyway. If you have been so unfortunate as to join a church of this kind, you had better get out of it, and join a church that is a true church." (Applause.)

The church's sphere is self-sacrifice. Her mission is her commission. When we preach the Gospel of love in the spirit of Christ, then shall the poor have the Gospel preached unto them, and the broken heart shall be bound up. The church is to "preach deliverance to the captive, and recovering of sight to them that are blind." We are here to-night, not in anger, but in love, to preach deliverance to the captives, bound by their lodge oaths; and recovering of sight to those blind ones who went into their lodges hoodwinked, and have been so ever since. We are here to preach the truth.

I do not believe in delegating this work to a body of reformers who have no Christian principles. It is the mission of the church of Christ to reprove the unfruitful works of darkness, and to be the light of the world. Some say that we had better put up with Masonry, and have as much in common with it as possible, in order to number them among our friends in a time of test. There are people who say that we want to tolerate the Masons, and help them along all we can, because by-and-by there is coming a struggle between the Protestants and Papists, and we shall need their help. But I say to them, "How do you know they will help us?" No system that has so much that is in common with Romanism in it, is fit to rely upon when the test comes. If a time of test comes, those only will stand who have a personal faith in the personal Christ. Christian men should testify against an evil in their midst, just as freely as they would testify against an evil in Africa or the isles of the sea. As Bro. Grant said, there are men who may not feel called upon to speak out against these systems, and very rightly, but nevertheless, it is more and more the duty of every Christian man and every Christian minister to speak out against these false systems. It is the place especially of the ministers to lead the people, and not be led by them. I said to my people, that it would be a curious sight to see a flock of sheep leading a shepherd; we should suppose that some goats had come into the flock, because this is the nature of goats and not of sheep; or perhaps we should think there were some wolves there in sheep's clothing. The nature of the sheep is never to lead the shepherd. That man only is called to be a pastor, who has the courage to lead. He should trust the Word of God, and not be diverted by men who claim to have the good of the people at heart.

It is a day of loose ideas in religion. Fundamental truths are carelessly ignored and denied. In the midst of these conditions, the church has no right to cater to the world in matters of entertainment for revenue. Abraham would not accept a thread or a shoe-latchet from a pagan king, and it is time for Christ's people to have some independence of spirit.

Wouldn't it have been queer if, when the children of Israel were commanded to build the tabernacle, they had got up a great fair, and got the Philistines and the rest of the Canaanites to come and buy of them, and had built the tabernacle in that way? There wouldn't have been any story of the tabernacle to come down to us; but the Israelites brought in their gifts freely, until they were restrained.

It is the privilege and duty of every Christian to stand in the tent of meeting, even Christ, and with trumpet voice demand, "Who is on the Lord's side?" The golden calf, which was the result of human construction, was a sample of devil worship. The church must be true to her King. A person cannot accept Christ as Saviour alone, they must accept him as Lord also, and must be loyal to him; let us remember that. Our citizenship is in heaven, whence we wait for our King, and may we be ready to meet him with joy, and not with grief. (Applause.)

The depth to which the Republican party has fallen is well illustrated in the remarks of a Worcester, Mass., restaurant-keeper to a reporter who asked him regarding the chances for Hewitt, the 32-degree Masonic liquor-seller, "that he controlled too many votes to make it policy to keep him on the outs altogether, and though he had suffered for his indiscretion in the past, now that they had come to an understanding no trouble need be apprehended about his case." He ended by naming over a list of those who would be likely to get licenses, that sounded like the roll-call of Boston's aldermen. And it is at the hands of the Republican party in the person of Worcester's public officials that they are to get their permit to make widows and orphans, and fill jails and poorhouses with the fruit of their abominable traffic.

THE AGGRESSIVENESS OF EVIL.

BY ELDER NATHAN CALLENDER.

In history nothing is more apparent than the pushing capacity of thoroughly bad things. How the serpent got into Paradise must remain a mystery; but the fact must be a warning to all.

Leaving God out of the conflict, it is a question whether, in this world, good can compete with evil, right with wrong, in any case. In the eye of holy beings there must be an inherent power in right and goodness. But in this world it is necessary to remember the tendency of the soil both literally and morally. In both the natural and the moral world the obnoxious grows without the gardener, and almost in spite of him. We need not sow tares, ragweed, and Canada thistles, nor till the soil to grow them. In the moral kingdom, "the wicked one" sows bad seed enough, and he does not lack helpers. They are "legion," both on earth and from hell.

Such facts as these must make it plain that evils let alone in the world will engulf it in total ruin. In spite of Noah and Lot, evil culminated in the old world in a fatal deluge, and flames in the case of Sodom. Noah was a "preacher of righteousness" in antediluvian days, and a standing reproof by a continuous protest against ungodliness. I wish we might know more about the ministry of Noah; but that he did not let the sins of the world go unrebuked, as many of the popular titled clergy do now, is certain; for he was a preacher of righteousness. Poor Lot's "righteous soul was vexed from day to day," and he came near perishing in the doomed city of Sodom.

Now it is a fact beyond dispute, that sin in the church, specially organized sin, left alone, will sooner or later work ruin to any church fellowshiping it. Such a church disobeys God in the act of sinful fellowships. Proof texts might be quoted here, but it is not necessary. Secretism in all its branches is organized conspiracy against Christ and the Gospel. Let the church of Christ harbor and fellowship one representative of any one of these orders with its disloyal oaths, and such a church aids and abets the planting of a torpedo that will explode and blow it to dust, or else that pet of false worships will manipulate the whole body into an agency of the adversary of all good. Sad cases of this kind are thick all about. There are churches right around us the large majority of whose members are opposed to secretism, who loathe it, and still they are tied hands and feet by the one or two prominent members who worship at the altars of Baal. Masons boast that there is not a church without at least one secretist, and that single one can and will keep that church all right if left alone. Though this is not literally correct, there is too much truth in it by far to be overlooked.

As to the unmeasured potency of evil, "the whole creation travaileth in pain" under the untold anguish. God, angels and good men have the battle of "Armageddon" on hand. Waiving the question of the definite meaning of the term in Rev. 16: 16, one thing is sure, that the moral questions looming up to mountains, to be scaled by the invincibility of God's host, present a formidable front to the thoughtful reformer.

Let us take a square look at just one of the "spirits that now work in the children of disobedience."

Nine hundred millions of dollars annually used to conduct the alcoholic war against humanity, home and heaven! This in our country alone, embracing sixty-three millions of people. Nearly $14 to each soul!—yes, SOUL. Has this hellish business nothing to do with souls? What is its influence on morals, character, and on ETERNAL DESTINY? Can any one but the Omniscient comprehend? Can any duration but eternity measure the evil? We are now on the aggressive character of sin. Will the "powers that be" of these United States confine themselves to the debauchery and the demonizing of this dear people? Oh, no! See the stupendous enterprise of this evil—the superhuman push in "Prince Alcohol." Here allow me to quote from the New York Voice of Dec. 25, 1890:

"A Drummer for Beer—Secretary Blaine Prostitutes the Consular Machinery in the Interests of the Brewers—U. S. Officials Used to Introduce American Beer." READ THE FACTS IN "VOICE!"

"All our consuls in Mexico, South and Central America, and the West Indies, receive at the request of leading brewers, a circular letter instructing them to procure all information necessary to introduce and develop the business of American drunkard-making in these countries. An official pamphlet has been printed containing the replies of the consuls, which can be obtained only by addressing the Secretary of State."

Think of this. Is this our model government, —serpent-like to crawl into every garden of the world to prostitute its inhabitants into beer demons? Temperance tax-payers pay large salaries to U. S. consuls to help develop, by the agency of the Secretary of State and the government, this "irrepressible" beer interest! What a mission! And what missionaries! Can Satan outdo them? When dignitaries of state and church enlist in the work of the "Dark Continent" of sin, either by actual work for the empire of Satan, or by sinful silence, we might imagine his majesty at leisure to go to some popular resort, escorted by legions of time-servers, who know too well how to live on fat salaries while they consume the hard earnings of the brave and true. When will enough self-denying brave men go to these "pleasure grounds" to see fair play in the combat between the good and the bad elements striving for the mastery?

Come we to secretism and we find a power known as "the unfruitful works of darkness," less open but more subtle, and perhaps more dangerous than the rum god—because only a few know his strength, while many are resolved that none shall know it. It takes a hero to reconnoiter the field and make a true report. Men of state and pulpit say, "I don't know anything about the lodge and don't want to!" Oh, what public servants! Worth their weight in vacuity. A paid servant of the people, paid to know the things vitally affecting their weal or their woe, knows nothing of the oath-bound gangs of his fellow citizens numbering millions; and moreover, DON'T WANT TO KNOW!

But we must look briefly at the practical bearings of the aggressiveness of evil in our world. We are not sure that moral evil can work at all without agents. Anything, even a serpent, as in Eden, can, by the consent of the occupants, defile a world at once. By this fact let God's agents be educated into co-workers with God. "We then as workers together with him, beseech you also, that ye receive not the grace of God in vain." We war against the strong man armed, but he is not omnipotent. We work with One who is. The crying curse of the world is that God's professed people do not "come up to the help of the Lord against the mighty." The possibilities to be contemplated by God's loyal army are measured only by infinity. Why does the bad triumph in our world so shamefully? Because the good is not made aggressive by the united, courageous, faithful, and invincible efforts of the Christian church, the pulpit and the press. With such facts in view, it is a burning disgrace that the votaries of Satan so control this nineteenth century that even yet our world must "lie in the wicked one." Satan is having his way in the state, and alas, in a large degree in the church also. "The burden of the Lord" is on us as it was upon the prophets thousands of years ago. Awful is the responsibility of those to whom God has given the opportunity to roll back the tidal wave of evil by his power, and yet refuse to do it.

Montdale, Pa.

The Louisiana Lottery business has been fast declining since the new law. The business in the North is almost entirely cut off, and despite a desperate struggle which gave a momentary show of advantage, the hand of the Government is choking it down. A final blow seems to be the death of the president, Dauphin, the central and inspiring genius of the company. It is believed that he has no successor, and that the fight will be given up.

THEY ARE ONE!

IDENTITY OF FREEMASONRY AND MODERN SECRET SOCIETIES WITH THE ANCIENT PAGAN MYSTERIES.

THOUGH MASONRY IS IDENTICAL WITH THE ANCIENT MYSTERIES, IT IS SO IN THIS QUALIFIED SENSE, THAT IT PRESENTS BUT AN IMPERFECT IMAGE OF THEIR BRILLIANCY.—Albert Pike, Grand Commander of the Supreme Council, Sovereign Grand Inspectors-General, in "Morals and Dogma," p. 624.

Behind this veil of Isis I have long thought was concealed our Masonic birth. I now fully believe it. There was the cradle of Masonry: no matter by what name it was called: no matter by whom it was enjoyed.—The Genius of Masonry, by Samuel L. Krapp, p. 99.

There is no doubt that our ceremonies and mysteries were derived from the rites, ceremones, and institutions of the ancients, and some of them from the remotest ages.—The Spirit of Masonry, by William Hutchinson, Carlisle, Eng., 1802.

The Mysteries of Freemasonry; or an exposition of the religious dogmas and customs of the ancient Egyptians; showing from the origin, nature, and object of the rites and ceremonies of remote antiquity, their identity with the order of modern Masonry.—Title of a book by John Fellows, A. M., published in London, 1860.

We recommend to our reader to peruse the treatise of a most learned and zealous Mason, dedicated Demen die es Verstehen, or to those who can understand. He leaves no stone unturned throughout antiquity to prove the identity of the ancient mysteries of Eleusis, of the Jews, of the Druids, and of the Egyptians with those of Freemasonry.—Memoires of the Abbe Barreul.

The original object of the secret rites of Freemasonry has been a subject of inquiry for upwards of six hundred years, and the enigma seems not to have been satisfactorily solved. The initiated, as well as those without the pale of the order, are equally ignorant of their derivation and import. What mote it be? is a question as difficult of solution now as when first propounded by King Henry VI. of England. The intention of this work is to endeavor to unravel the intricate web in which the mystery is involved, by tracing the order back to its source, and by showing its intimate connection and similitude to institutions more ancient, put it beyond a doubt, that it sprang from, and is a continuation of the rites and ceremonies observed in those establishments.....What are emphatically called the mysteries, is but another name for religion; and an exposition of what they consisted, is of course embraced in the subject as forming a parallel with the rites of Masonry.—The Mysteries of Freemasonry, by John Fellows, Int.

Freemasonry is based on Sabeism, the worship of the stars; but, as before observed, its original intention has long since been lost sight of and abandoned. Modern Masons not only continue the ceremonies of ancient Masonry, consisting of seven degrees, which relate exclusively to pagan rites, but have added thereto about fifty others. These are founded partly upon pagan mysteries, and partly upon Jewish and Christian doctrines; forming altogether an incoherent medley of opposite principles. The partisans, however, of opposing sects seem to be reconciled to it, not stopping to inquire into the meaning of the symbols, or willing to be deceived by the false explication given of them, congregate together in great harmony. And, although the ceremonies relate wholly to religion, either pagan, Jewish, or Christian, discussion on the subject is absolutely prohibited in the lodge.—The Mysteries of Masonry, by John Fellows, p. 257.

NEW ENGLAND LETTER.

Census statistics.—Shall our school children study history? Arelic of New England's dark ages.—Some Indian names. —The benefit order craze.—Rev. L. W. Frink and the grange.

The late census reports put Massachusetts at the head of the list for density of population, "Little Rhody" following very close after. If Texas had as many to the square mile she would have over thirty-one million of inhabitants. Statistics like these give one some idea of America's future immensity, and the overwhelming importance of her settling the great moral questions now pressing upon her before her population becomes too unwieldly and too heterogenous to settle them without strife. Think what the labor question may grow to be, with lawless secret combinations on the one hand, and billionaire money kings with their powers for wholesale corruption and bribery on the other! Yet our government has the ability to prevent a future reign of terror by at once making illegal all secret societies, and levying a direct income tax which by making the rich pay their just and proportionate share, will shift the burden of taxation from the shoulders of the poor, and keep down these overgrown fortunes which are really a greater menace to the future peace of our country than all the anarchists the old world can send over to these shores. But governments are always short-sighted; or if they foresee the evil day, they seem by their actions to say with Louis XIV., "After us the Deluge." What if the framers of the Constitution had been sagacious enough to nip slavery in the bud, instead of leaving it for their descendants to do, thus saving the nation those four years of civil strife!

Apropos to the above, it is rather amusing that while New England is stirred up over the question of school histories that shall satisfy the Romish church by leaving out all mention of anything unfavorable in her past records, the Southern States are agitated over a similar problem; the trouble being that the text-books now provided for Southern schools, being generally the work of Northern writers, persist in speaking of it as the Civil War. This does not please the ante-bellum element, and they are therefore demanding that there be no history taught in the schools until books are provided which shall give it the somewhat ponderous title of "The Rise and Fall of the Confederate States." Poor Clio! Surely the majestic Muse of History has fallen on evil times.

The other day a man cutting down a white ash tree in Porter, Maine, came upon a curious relic of New England's dark ages, in a lock of hair imbedded six inches or so under the bark, and evidently placed there as a charm to cure the toothache by some sufferer thereby, whose headstone has doubtless been gathering moss for a century. We can only hope that his or her faith worked a cure, for drawing teeth in those days when gas and ether were unknown, and the only dentist was the family doctor, had terrors impossible for this generation to realize. The ghoulish notion that when consumption appeared in a family its future progress could be stayed by disinterring the corpse of a member who had died of that disease and burning the liver, was another old country superstition, which aged people tell me had its believers in most New England communities. What would our simple-minded ancestors have said to this new discovery of Dr. Koch, and all the talk about baccilli and the germ theory; and to know that after all it was a literal "worm" that nipped so many of their fairest household blossoms in the bud.

We make fun of the jaw-breaking Russian names, but in the State of Massachusetts we have a lake named Chanbunagungamang. This with Chinquassabamtook, and Moostocuraguntic, ought to give the Russian "funny man," if there be such a personage recognized on journalistic staffs in the Czar's dominions, a fine chance to retaliate. The fading race of the red man has at least left an indelible mark in these formidable names, which look as if they ought to be shrieked by a steam whistle, yet in reality have a music in their liquid, flowing syllables that makes them linger in the memory, sweet as the strain of some half-forgotten song.

The Springfield Republican is authority for the statement that in the little city of Waltham no less than 125 of the so-called benefit or endowment orders are operating; and complaint is made by the local merchants that the working men and women, particularly in the watch factory, are unable to pay for food and clothing, not because they do not earn good wages but because "their money is mainly thrown into the maw of these endowment associations. Other towns are suffering just as acutely from this mania to get something for nothing; but the greatest harm done by this new kind of mathematics is not so much in teaching that two and two make eight, as by teaching people to rely on the goddess of Chance instead of Providence and their own industry. The assertion of the Republican that, "It is worse than a dozen Louisiana lotteries planted in so many parts of the commonwealth," does not emphasize the evil any too strongly.

The very candid and able address of Rev. L. W. Frink at our late convention on "The Grange and Country Churches," has stirred anew the ashes of the former controversy, and shows that there is still a hot fire raging underneath. I doubt if another pastor in New England has been so roundly abused in print by the lodge, or treated to so many of their choicest epithets as has Bro. Frink—all because he has so nobly and courageously stood for the truth. Is it possible that a minister of the Gospel in free and enlightened Massachusetts cannot express his views on a great moral question; in other words, cannot do his bounden duty as a watchman on the walls of Zion, without bringing down upon himself a storm of scurrilous abuse? His contest with the grange has attracted sufficient attention for Mr. Frink to be interviewed by a reporter of the Worcester Telegram, and the result in a closely printed column and a half now lies before me. Bating the professional varnish of humorous exaggeration with which the Telegram reporter tells the story, it is a very fair account of Mr. Frink's position; and through the columns of that paper which is widely read, they will reach a large number to whom anti-secrecy is a new question. The folly and blindness of the lodge party was never more clearly shown than in thus stirring up a controversy which had apparently died down, and thus giving it celebrity far beyond the locality to which it was at first confined. And the end is not yet. The starving, boycotting process which has been tried on so many faithful ministers, the modern substitute for the rack and the thumbscrew of less enlightened days, will doubtless be used against Bro. Frink. He needs our prayers. Let them rise as a wall of fire round about him while he battles in the name of Christ against the adversary who would destroy His Bride, the church of the living God.

ELIZABETH E. FLAGG.

—Miss Mary C. Collins, a well-known missionary teacher among the Indians, who has been several years in the South Dakota agencies, reached Keokuk, Iowa, last week. She visited Sitting Bull's camp just before the latter was killed by the police. She says the old chieftain promised her the ghost dances should be stopped at once, but broke his word. In reference to the battle at Wounded Knee she said the soldiers wanted to avenge Custer's death and Spotted Eagle wanted to avenge Sitting Bull's death. She is greatly opposed to massing troops on the frontier and thought had not the soldiers been sent to interrupt the Indians at their dances they would soon have quieted down and the sacrifice of so many lives would thus have been averted.

—The national headquarters of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union have been removed from this city to Evanston so as to be near to the national president, Miss F. E. Willard. Four rooms have been fitted up as offices, which will be occupied by the general officers of the National as well as the World's Woman's Christian Temperance Union, so that Evanston will have in it the executive forces of these two great organizations. The headquarters will be opened January 15 with an appropriate dedicatory service and a reception in the evening. The Union Signal office and publication rooms will be continued in the same quarters in this city they have long occupied. All departments will come together again in the new Temperance Temple when it is completed.

—The conflict between Masonry and Catholicism in Italy seems to lose none of its warmth. The Journal of Rome says that "The Italian elections of 1890 have been carried by Masonry;" that "Crispi has given himself, bound hand and foot to Masonry;" that "ruler now of the tribunals where it administers justice, of the prisons where it places its disciples, of the administrative offices ..... of Government and Parliament, Masonry has now become the the true Sovereign of Italy." The Masonic Lodge of the Valley of the Tiber in its election manifesto speaks of pulling down the Vatican in order that the stones may be used "to construct the temple of emancipated reason." The conflict seems irrepressible, but in deciding where to bestow sympathy it should be considered that Italian Masonry seems to be much more rationalistic than American Masonry.—Christian Standard, Cincinnati.

REFORM NEWS.

LODGE INSURANCE FRAUDS.

FROM THE N. E. SECRETARY.

BOSTON, Jan 2d, 1891.

The weather and walks are exceptionally bad here to-day. The rain and slush is in striking contrast with yesterday's sunshine and superb sleighing. The first Cynosure of 1891 has just been hastily perused. Reports of progress are encouraging and will incite us, I trust, to renewed energy and liberal offerings to sustain the work which God has so manifestly blest during the past year. I note with especial interest the vigorous movement in the direction of another conference of churches, to be held in Chicago. The value to the cause of Christ of those before held, was, and is, very great; but this will, I trust, be seven-fold greater. When the meeting is held I hope the cause in New England will be represented by some of its ablest advocates.

"ROBBING PETER TO PAY PAUL."

"Such is the main principle of 'Endowment Societies.' "

This is the caption of an article of a column and two-thirds in the Boston Herald of Dec. 31st, in which some pretty severe strictures are made upon these "Benevolent (!) Orders." After giving facts and figures, the writer adds:

"When it comes the turn of the second batch to be paid off with these profits, the receipts from still later members are used in the same way. A new debt is created and the old one has not been paid. This is the beautiful financial plan of some of these 'investment companies' (heaven save the mark!). It is in effect the plan of the late Mrs. Howe's 'bank,' which in the same way borrowed the money of its depositors to pay its liberal rates of interest, the object of large interest payments being to attract fresh deposits. In the nature of things such companies must end in ruin."

Said a well-known business man to me yesterday, in speaking of these orders, "Obligations mature and are paid in their numerical succession from No. 1 up, and the officers and those in the 'rings' secure all the first numbers, and by the time these are paid off the company is broke." This interesting little game is exposed by the Herald as follows:

"How about the 'bond' schemes that have come in from New Hampshire and elsewhere?"

"An investor pays $5 for a bond and $1.50 per month for assessments. The $5 goes to the management, and 25 or 50 cents of each assessment finds its way into the same capacious pocket. When they have sold 100 bonds, holder No. 1 gets $100, at a minimum cost of $6.50. Each one costs a little more than its predecessor.

"They have a seemingly fair rule that no one shall hold bonds of two consecutive numbers. See how neatly this is evaded. Suppose ten men organize a company. The president takes bond No. 1, the secretary No. 2, the treasurer No. 3, and so on to No. 10. Then they begin again. The president takes No. 11, the secretary No. 12, the treasurer No. 13. This system of repeating is followed until the first 1,000-bonds are taken up by the organizers. All these must be paid before anybody else gets a cent, and by that time the company goes up, and everybody but the first ten gets left.

"The Iron Hall will burst in the end. No man has yet invented a scheme whereby $1 would pay for $3. The Louisiana lottery, which is forbidden by the State and national laws, is at the top notch of morality, when compared with some of these schemes. In that the poor at least have an equal chance with the rich.

"I am so thoroughly convinced that the multiplication table tells the truth that I shall continue to fight these schemes to the end."

Some who read the Boston papers will remember that in a recent over-hauling of the "Benevolent" Order of Good-fellows, it appeared that its founder, Darius Wilson, was deriving an annual income of forty-five thousand dollars from this order alone, which suggests why greedy and unprincipled men are so active in multiplying these associations and schemes of robbery to fleece the poor out of their hard-earned wages.

To-day's Herald contains another lengthy article on the subject; and now that the investigation seems to be started in earnest, we may hope that the eyes of some, at least, will be opened to see and escape the snares set for their feet. While in an office at Worcester not long ago, I was shown a list with localities and names of 757 of these secret "benevolent" orders that had collapsed within a few years. I think the publication and a wide circulation of this list would be a warning and do much to arrest the "craze" so prevalent for "wild cat" insurance.

NEW HEADQUARTERS IN BOSTON.

JAN. 8, 1891.—A half-hour's wait for an out train gives me an opportunity to say to the friends that it is well with us, and with the cause in Boston. The advanced interest of the work, in the estimation of our friends, makes a change in our location desirable. Every well-wisher of the work appreciates the timely aid of Mrs. Jones in giving our cause a place on one of the busy thoroughfares of this crowded city for the past year. In this as in other instances the cause has found in her "help in time of need," and her prompt and decided action will be held in grateful remembrance with the prayer that she may receive a liberal reward.

We have secured three commodious rooms, with all modern conveniences, in "Hotel Howland," 218 Columbus avenue, which will be our address in future. We have arranged to move on Saturday, the 10th inst., and shall be glad to see our friends in the city, or who may be in the city at any time. Our quarters are pleasant and easily reached by the elevator, and as Columbus is one of the best known avenues on Back Bay, and Hotel Howland is near the Providence depot, and recognized as among the first-class family hotels of Boston, our friends from abroad will have no difficulty in finding us.

This, like other cities, furnishes a field for philanthropic volunteer effort; and among the goodly host who have on the whole armor of Christian warfare, and go down to do battle in the dark places of sin and suffering, with very rare exceptions these brave men and women have no fellowship with self-seeking, vain-glorious lodges. The Master has been pleased to so enlighten some of the most active Christian workers through parlor talks and other agencies, that they feel constrained to lift up their voices and show others the great iniquity which has but recently come to their knowledge.

The question is being frequently asked, "Can't we have another meeting like that in Park Street church?" I think it practicable to make the attempt somewhere in New England; and as an outgrowth of the awakened conscience and enlightened understanding of Christians upon this subject, I am confident it would result in great good. Is there a pastor and church in New England who will invite and entertain such a conference of Christian workers for two evenings and one day? If so, write me at Hotel Howland, or to Miss E. E. Flagg, Sec. N. E. C. A., Wellesley, Mass. "Up! it is Jehovah's rally," and who will "come to the help of the Lord against the mighty?"

J. P. STODDARD.

CORRESPONDENCE.

MISS WILLARD'S ADDRESS.

CINCINNATI, O., Jan. 7, 1891.

EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE:—A copy of my book, "Reformation Principles," was placed in the hands of each of the one hundred members of the Kentucky State Constitutional convention. One of the delegates, Hon. J. C. Johnson, writes me since that the questions discussed in that work are before them now and they hope to stand by the truth.

Last Sabbath morning I preached in the Ninth St. M. E. church, Covington, Ky. In the evening in the Fifth St. Christian church.

I have been reading Miss Willard's annual address at the Atlanta National W. C. T. U. convention. It is a statesman-like document, which all the friends of reform will want to keep by them for reference. Her pointed sayings one cannot forget. The Bible has been upset twenty-seven times in the past five years by the enemies of divine revelation. But it is like a cube of granite, upset it and you set it up. The Bible and Prohibition are alike in this. President Harrison could send a note of encouragement to South Dakota in her struggle against the Louisiana lottery, but he had no word of cheer for Nebraska in her struggle against the saloon. In New York 27,000 husbands are supported by their wives. We hear much about eight-hour husbands; what about the sixteen-hour wife? In London 60,000 families live in cellars. No wonder the great soul of Booth, with his muscular Christianity, proposes to lift them out. While her belief that the wage-system will pass away, may be chimerical, her demand that all be granted an opportunity to make a living, and that drunkards and moral incurables be placed within walls and compelled to work, must be granted Every one ought to read that address. J. M. FOSTER.

THE LODGE IN POLITICS.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—We are standing to-day on the threshold of the new year. The last twelve months have not been idle ones. Many able men and women have had their attention called to this lodge question. Once their minds directed into right paths of investigation and we can only leave the results with Him who holdeth the nations in the hollow of his hand. Will the seed sown in weakness be raised in power? Doubtless some of this effort will bring forth thirty, sixty, or mayhap an hundred-fold. We have simply done what we could, and now we turn from the past to the present and future.

This has been indeed a busy New Year's day. Correspondence and mailing literature, planning and pondering, preparing for the oncoming campaign. At last, and much sooner than some of us expected, the lodge has thrown off the mask and boldly entered the arena of American politics. Masonry has been waiting a favorable opportunity to ride into power. The Farmers' and Laborers' Union is only the cat's-paw to rake the political chestnuts out of the fire, and somebody is going to get scorched. A deluge of lodge politics omens no good to our land and country. To see the yeomen of the nation marching under lodge banners and leaders, should startle every true American. There is a battle ahead. The question has passed from the church and the pulpit, and the ministry and laity, if they keep abreast of the movement, must now enter the primary, the convention and legislative hall. The lodge is massing its forces for '92.

American patriots, sound the alarm! There is not a moment to lose. Begin at once to drum up recruits. Deluge your community with telling literature. Use the printing-press and the post-office. Let every American newspaper, religious and secular, speak in clarion tones. We have thousands of pages of convincing literature ready to send out. For a limited time we will mail fifteen pages of literature, including a copy of our "Masonic Government," to any address for only two cents. Thus one dollar will reach fifty influential homes direct from our headquarters by mail. We have found several thousand of our tract on Masonic Government, and we are willing to donate them while they last. If need be we will start a rapid press, and run it night and day, to grind out information for the people on this particular phase of lodgery. In fact, our literature is peculiar to itself, and W. L. Enlow has a rapid press that should be kept going until after the next general election.

The Cynosure and the N. C. A. can do a grand work by leading the churches of America to the ballot-box in the coming contest. Every agency should be in motion. Men and women, at their homes and business, can send in their dollars, fives and tens, and names by the fifties and hundreds of influential people in their own county or State, it is desirable to reach and enlist. Many have been trying this plan and find it very effective.

At one bound this lodge question has sprung to the front in American politics. Shall we stand by our American principles, doctrines and institutions against the despotism and treason of oath-bound lodgery? When you have decided, just pen us a line. We can rely on the Old Guard and thousands will doubtless be flocking to the American standard by '92. M. N. BUTLER,

Avalon, Mo.

THE WOLF HOWLS.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—The correspondence herewith speaks for itself. Please give it an insertion in your paper, which is one that Masonic boycotting can't suppress. I have lived at Lawn Ridge, Ill., a small borough twenty miles north of Peoria. I am well known there, and the character of Mr. Smith also. JAMES H. JONES.

LAWN RIDGE, Ill., Nov. 12th 1890.

James H. Jones, Esq., Cambridge, N. Y.,

DEAR FRIEND:—Do You Know of A Man by the Name of McKinley Who resides someWhere in the East, And is About to Engage in Publishing A Book Exposing Free Masonry, I. E., if he Can find a partner who is a Mason, Now allow me to Caution you not to engage in that buisness with him, Any mason who will breake his Solem Masonic obligation is no less than a Perjured OUT CAST VILEN AND CAN NOT BE BELEIVED UNDER OATH And I Caution you not to Engage or associate with any of that Class of Republican Broken doun Poletecians As they hereafter will have a rough Road to travel Very Respectfully Wm E Smith

LANSINGBURGH, N. Y., Nov. 24, 1890.

Wm. E. Smith, Esq., Lawn Ridge, Ill.,

DEAR SIR:—Yours of the 12th inst. reached Cambridge, as directed, by due course of mail and forwarded thence to me here and is now before me. Though short, it is very pointed and constitutes a text for quite a chapter in response. It properly deserves to be treated in silent contempt. But being acquainted with your traits of character, with your tittle tattle and laughs over your sayings and written productions, that your vanity leads you to think are smart, when not met in a way to take you off, induces me to give my version of your letter and yourself lest you will chuckle (which you are wont to do) to your Masonic brethren that you have given me a stunner and that I dare not reply to it, and that my silence is equivalent to a plea of guilty of the perjury you are so bold to assert, and evidently impute to me.

Now in the first place I assume you have seen the Jones blue book entitled "Wolves in Sheep's Clothing;" in fact I have been informed that such is the case. This is what makes the old wolf howl thus: "Any Mason who will breake his solem Masonic obligation is no less than a Perjured out cast vilen and can not be believed under Oath."

Solemn Masonic obligation!—conceived in sin and born in iniquity, and with all the solemnity with which it is clothed, the candidate cannot be trusted without taking upon him the most diabolical penalty that human ingenuity can invent, which is used in the Entered Apprenticed degree, as given by Morgan:

"Furthermore do I promise and swear, that I will not write, print, stamp, stain, hew, cut, carve, indent, paint or engrave it on any movable or immovable thing under the whole canopy of heaven; whereby or whereon the least letter, figure, character, mark, stain, shadow or resemblance of the same may become legible or intelligible to myself or any other person in the known world, whereby the secrets of Masonry may be unlawfully obtained through my unworthiness. To all which I do most solemnly and sincerely promise and swear, without the least equivocation, mental reservation or self-evasion of mind in me whatever; binding myself under no less penalty than to have my throat cut across, my tongue torn out by the roots, and my body buried in the rough sands of the sea at low-water mark where the tide ebbs and flows twice in twenty-four hours. So help me God, and keep me steadfast in the due performance of the same."

Then again in the third or Master's degree, which penalty is to "have my body severed in two in the midst, and divided to the north and south, my bowels burnt to ashes in the center, and the ashes scattered before the four winds of heaven." And, sir, you don't stop here. Just think of the terrible oaths and damnable penalties that follow in each and every degree up to the thirty-third, respectively, which you can learn by reading the blue book.

You boldly assert that any Mason who breaks his solemn Masonic obligation is no less than a perjured, outcast villain and cannot be believed under oath. Why, sir, what can I think of you, whom I have seen in church at divers times in the attitude of pious devotion at prayer time, but a wolf in sheep's clothing. You must have two gods to serve. One a lodge god, the other a religious god.

Perjury! He who takes such oaths and penalties of self-destruction, irreligion and blasphemy and keeps in league with the Masonic fraternity, is a perjurer manifest, and his veracity is to be questioned. Read the blue book, and learn more about Masonry than you can find out in your little Lawn Ridge lodge; and then confess and repent and be saved by the true God before it is too late. Do not try to serve both God and mammon. To carry such a burden as this is enough to round anybody's shoulders. I don't wonder that yours are so much bent. What benefit has Masonry been to you? Yours truly, JAMES H. JONES.

A FAITHFUL CONFERENCE.

DEKALB, Iowa.

The United Brethren church under the constitution of 1841 of the conference of West Des-Moines convened near Norwood in annual session in October, and continued three days. It was a grand success. Bishop Barnaby lectured on the state of the church for more than two hours one evening to a large and appreciative audience. He also lectured in the Baptist church at Carlisle, where the U. B. church was locked against him by liberals, but it caused the lecture to bear immediate fruit. Eighteen of the most prominent persons signed a paper to stand by the old constitution and confession. One of them had paid five hundred dollars to build the church there. So you see the "radicals" will have some of the men of "means and influence" even in West Des Moines, and best of all, the approbation of God, in that they have not compromised with "the unfruitful works of darkness." "There shall be no connection with secret combinations," so hated by the lodge and the devil, "has caused all our trouble," say liberals. What became of their covenant of fidelity to it? The constitution survives the wreck. There are many, however, who passed from the old to the new, which has the secrecy clause stricken out or so weakened that there can be no successful attempt to keep secrecy out. Many of them have been so blinded as to think or say the new is the strongest against the orders. It seems to me that what is most needed in this age is a type of Christians who will stand up to honest convictions and act it out in the face of all opposition. All heaven is calling for men who will trust God for grace to "stem the flood" of worldliness that has deluged the churches in the "perilous times of the last days." There is "spiritual wickedness in high places," to be counteracted when bishops and leaders in Israel will compromise with anti-Christ. God wants a people who will be and are faithful to him alone. To be faithful to God and the reform principles of his Gospel is just the right kind of Christian perfection and the only kind that will be crowned. "Be thou faithful unto death and I will give thee a crown of life."

West Des Moines conference, which covers enough territory to engage sixty ministers or more, was consolidated to thirteen circuits and missions; preachers were mustered to man nine of those fields. There was but one presiding elder elected to superintend the whole. J. E. Ham is the elder this year. He is an able minister. The conference passed short, pointed, strong resolutions on rum and lodgery, in harmony with the Word of God, and the usages and constitution of the denomination.

There are a faithful few here even of the United Brethren, who would "rather be right than to be popular," as Bro. Siemiller says.

PITH AND POINT.

A HAPPY NEW YEAR.

"A happy New Year" rings out on the air,
From homes full of joy, from homes full of care,
From hut of the lowly, from hall of the high,
Merry glad voices to voices reply;
From voices of children, so free and so clear,
A happy, a happy, a happy New Year!

"A happy New Year" rings out on the air,
To hearts who're nearing the verge of despair;
The rainbow of hope shall span their dark sky,—
This happy New Year that's passing them by;
To those who are weeping, O dry every tear,
Say softly, A happy, a happy New Year.

JOHN N. LLOYD.

A GOOD LETTER TO BRO. W. B. STODDARD.

I am very glad now that I subscribed for the Cynosure. I find much valuable information in it, and it arms me for the fight which must be continued between the church and the world. I shall keep my papers for future reference. I surely wish that I was able to send something to pay for copies to be distributed among colored pastors. I wish you success in your work; may the Lord bless you.—J. MILTON WALDRON.

I spoke in Bro. Waldron's church and am convinced that he is not one of the compromise kind. Should he succeed in getting his members out of the lodge he will do a great work.—W. B. S.

THE AGED MAY HELP BY PRAYER.

I will send a few names to which you may, if you please, send sample copies of the Cynosure. I get almost discouraged I find so many weak-kneed Anti-masons. They take so many papers they do not get time to read the Cynosure. I am an old man, but would be glad to help in the good cause you are engaged in. The Lord is a prayer-hearing and prayer-answering God.—M. WOODWARD.

HE VOTED FOR BIRNEY.

I have taken the Cynosure since its publication commenced, and expect to take it, if its high character is preserved, as long as I live. The Cynosure reminds me of the National Era, published in Washington, D. C., in 1844 and later, which took the uncompromising work in behalf of the Liberty party, and the abolition of slavery. I gave my first vote for Jas. G. Birney in 1844 for President of the United States.

The Cynosure has done a good and noble work. When it began to awaken the people out of their slumber there was but little said or done in opposition to secret societies; but that evil is being exposed throughout the nation.—SAMUEL HARPER, New Concord, O.

HARD TIMES IN NEBRASKA.

Times are very hard in this part of Nebraska. We have had a failure in corn crop this year, so I will have to ask you to discontinue the Christian Cynosure to my address for a while: I would be very glad to help along the reform work if I could, but I cannot this year. I have given away your tracts and copies of the Cynosure. I have tried to get subscribers but have failed.—W. C. GADDIS, Wescott, Nebraska.

A QUESTION FOR BRO. DIVOLL.

I would like to ask Mr. Josiah Divoll, in the Cynosure how he expects to get God in the Constitution, without voting for it? or how he expects to obey that command, appoint righteous rulers over us, without voting for them?—O. TICHENOR.

HOW OUR GOOD WOMEN ARE WATCHING AND WAITING.

I am especially interested in Miss Flagg's letters, and that our W. C. T. U. will also stand by this very unpopular reform; also am praying that God will get underneath and shake things terribly, and mightily prevail against our common foe. With what interest thousands of women are looking on and watching in this great moral conflict. If God would come and unite the different forces in the field on the basis of truth, how God's cause would move on. I trust he is doing this,—I know he is doing this very thing just as fast as individuals wheel into line.—A. R. M.

GOOD WORDS.

With love for the cause and the workers, I am as ever yours.—MRS. GEORGE CLARK, Oberlin, O.

We have been readers of your paper for two years. It it a very correct exponent of our views on secret societies. We could hardly feel at home without it.—W. S. KINNER, Rockford, O.

I could not do without the paper,—no, not I. I have been reading it nearly from its first number. We expect to send you a club soon. Your paper is a big gun. It is so constructed that it hits every sin. ROBERT. W. SPEER, New Concord, O.

I just want to say, Be encouraged. Be not in the least discouraged. There is a mighty host who, if only they would not be afraid to speak out, would be on the Lord's side,—yes, very many. It should be said to them, "If the Lord be God, serve him; but if Baal, then follow him."—S. L. WOOD, State Center, Iowa.

LITERATURE.

THE TWO-FOLD GIFT OF THE HOLY GHOST. By Thos. K. Doty, author of "Lessons in Holiness." Pp. 240. Price, 75 cents. Christian Harvester Office, Cleveland, Ohio.

The revival in the church of holy living as a specific and fundamental doctrine and experience in the past fifteen years is a marked era in ecclesiastical history. Associations have been formed and numerous papers established to support the movement. The Christian Harvester, of which the author of this work is editor, is one of these papers,—earnest and full of kindling zeal for a pure Gospel. In connection with this revival naturally greatly increased attention has been given to the person and work of the Holy Spirit, until we are come to regard the present in its proper light as the dispensation of the Spirit. We have come to regard him as God, a person not an essence,—the God with us, comforting and counseling believers, and inspiring them to be witnesses for Christ, so that as his blessed guidance is followed, through the Word, the church is to go on more earnestly fulfilling the final command of our Lord. The personal work of sanctification is immediately that of the Spirit, as is also that of regeneration. The sanctified believer has put away all "filthiness of the flesh," and the holiness movement has therefore set free many who were bound of Satan in the lodge, of whom Bro. Doty was one. His book is one of the most excellent, instructive and practical of any that have come to our knowledge. The exposition of the Scriptures concerning the personality and work of the Spirit is very clear, able and comforting. There is much dogmatizing on these topics by Christians who never fully felt the power of the Spirit's work, or are not living in gracious fellowship with him. To all such and to those who have not yet learned what gifts the Lord is waiting to bestow on his people we heartily commend the careful reading of this volume.

The first installment of the selections from Talleyrand's long-expected Memoirs is the most striking feature of the January Century. A sketch of Talleyrand by Minister Whitelaw Reid prefaces this installment. The opening pages tell of Talleyrand's neglected childhood, and his entry into Parisian society. They also give his views of La Fayette, on the French Revolution; some account of the beginnings of the latter; a sketch of the author's stay in England and the United States, and a highly interesting conversation between himself and Alexander Hamilton on Free Trade and Protection. The California series gives us the "Pioneer Spanish Families in California," and an account of the contemporary life in the Spanish "Missions of Alta California." Both articles are illustrated from authentic sources, Mr. Fenn having made a special trip to California to make his sparkling drawings of the Missions, which refute the charge that "America has no ruins!" In "A Romance of Morgan's Rough Riders," General Basil W. Duke, who was Morgan's right-hand brigadier, describes General John H. Morgan's famous raid into Indiana and Ohio; General O. B. Willcox contributes a chapter on the capture of a large part of the command; and Captain Thomas H. Hines, who planned the escape, relates how Morgan and a few of his officers tunneled out of the Ohio State Penitentiary, and, after thrilling adventures, reached the Confederate lines. The frontispiece is a portrait of the sculptor Augustus Saint-Gaudens, engraved by Whitney from a painting by Kenyon Cox.

The Missionary Review for the month presents a fine portrait of Rev. Dr. Sherwood, the editor lately deceased, with a sketch. Dr. Pierson writes a strong editorial on Livingston and Stanley and is eloquent with so noble a theme. Rev. John Rutherford of Rothesay, Scotland, writes a very instructive article on the theme: "Examples from modern missionary history of the unmistakable interposition of God in answer to prayer and in behalf of his servants and their work." Dr. Laurie of Providence, R. I., answers the question, "Do heathen multiply faster than converts?" proving that while figures discourage, facts give good cheer to every one who prays for Christ to return. Several other interesting articles, editorial notes, missionary news, the international department, etc., make up a valuable number.

The last number of the Church Review, quarterly, is replete with elaborate and learned discussions of all matters that pertain to the Protestant Episcopal church, of which it is the organ, and especially of the question of the reunion of Christendom. The April number contained a symposium on Christian Union from twenty distinguished non-Episcopal divines. The present issue is, in a measure, a reply by some of the most distinguished members of "The Church." They mainly consider the subject of the Historic Episcopate and define the attitude of the Anglican church towards other communions. They all reach the same conclusions; and while most American Christians will dissent from them, none will dispute the marked ability and profound research with which the investigation has been conducted. The Review is published at No. 1 Union Square, New York, at $4.00 per annum.

The Missionary Link, the organ of the Woman's Union Missionary Society, is hereafter to be issued every month, and will thus be able to put this old and useful organization more prominently before the churches. The January number begins the twenty-second volume of this first periodical in America devoted exclusively to the conversion of heathen women. The society inaugurated the special form of work known as "Woman's Mission to Women," and is the mother of all the woman's mission boards among the churches. The Link is sent for 50 cts per year. Address, Bible House, New York.

The Converted Catholic for the month opens with a portrait of the celebrated Father Gavazzi. Rev. Mr. O'Connor, editor of the magazine and pastor of the Reformed Catholic congregation, has been deprived of the use of the Masonic Temple hall, where he has preached for ten years, but finds a number of Christian pulpits open to him, and the effort to secure a permanent house of worship will now be pushed to completion.

The attractive part of Vick's Magazine this month, is the vegetable exhibition at the Illinois State Fair, where large prizes were distributed to those who competed for the best crops from Vick's seeds. Skillful gardeners report how they attained success with various vegetables.

All our readers will be pleased to learn that Hood's Calendar for 1891 is now ready, and copies may be obtained of the drug stores or by sending 6 cents in stamps to C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass. Every year it seems handsomer than the year before. The issue for '91 represents two boys and a girl playing musical instruments, all brought out in beautiful colors.

In the January St. Nicholas Charles Dudley Warner calls up the thousands of its readers to hear "A Talk about Reading," which is delivered with all the earnestness of a true humorist when talking of graver matters. The Pratt Institute, Brooklyn's "Great Industrial School," is fully described by a well-informed writer, and explained by the artistic illustrations of Mr. Wiles, and the young people will marvel at this wonderful school wherein are taught all things teachable, from high art to dusting a room. The young readers will all be charmed by the short but complete article on Michael Angelo by Alexander Black, illustrated by the frontispiece.

OBITUARY.

AARON S. HAMLIN died at his home near Clayton, Mich., Oct. 16, 1890, aged 85 years, 6 months and 18 days.

He with his wife and three children moved from New York on the farm on which he died, in June, 1835. He was a member of the M. E. church for sixty years. Many years he had been a faithful reader of the Christian Cynosure, being a very strong anti-secret-society man; probably stronger on the question than most of the friends of the reform, as he lived in the vicinity where the Morgan tragedy occurred; and with this awful murder on his mind he never failed to present the evil of secrecy to the visitor, whether he be stranger or otherwise.

F.

MRS. G. G. WILCOX passed to her reward above Oct. 14, 1890, at Asherville, Kansas, aged 74 years, 4 months and 14 days.

She was born in Vermont of godly parents, and early gave her heart to Christ, always contending for the faith once delivered to the saints, a reader of the Bible and a constant attendant upon the worship of God in his house. She was a subscriber to the Christian Cynosure for many years.

A. O. F.

WILLIAM B. WALTHALL died at 8:10 A. M., December 22, 1890, at his home at Quaker Hill, Ind.

He was born in Dinwiddie county, Va., on the 25th of January, 1818. His parents, Wm. B. and Martha (Bailey) Walthall, were natives of Virginia, but of English descent. In 1830 his parents, being Quakers, and opposed to slavery, moved to the free State of Ohio. They located in Clinton county, where the mother of the deceased had relatives. In 1842, when he had attained the age of 24 years, he left the parental roof to find a home in the then far West. After traveling on horseback for eight days, he reached Vermillion county, Indiana, settling on the farm where he continued to reside up to the day of his death. On the 9th of March, 1842, he was united in wedlock, before a monthly meeting of the Society of Friends, to Sarah Haworth, who died April 28, 1854. In the autumn of 1855, he was united in marriage to Lydia J. Branson, who died less than a year ago.

Mr. Walthall had been a member of the Friends church since early manhood, and always tried to live an upright and Christian life. For years he had been an active worker in the temperance cause, and spent his time and money in trying to build up a sentiment in his faith of believing. He was a good man, an earnest and devout Christian, and his loss will be greatly felt in the community where he has lived so long.

BEECHAM'S PILLS cure Sick-Headache.

"Twin roses by the zephyr blown apart,
Only to meet again more close, and share
The inward fragrance of each other's heart."

So Keats describes the lovers in "Isabella." Many lovers have been separated because the health of the lady in the case failed. No man finds attraction in a woman who is subject to nervous excitability, exhaustion, prostration, hysteria, spasms and other distressing, nervous symptoms, commonly attendant upon functional derangement and organic diseases peculiar to women.

The remedy for all such maladies is Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. As a soothing and strengthening nervine it is unequaled. As an invigorating tonic, it imparts strength to the uterine organs as well as to the whole system. Contains no alcohol to inebriate; no sugar or syrup to derange digestion; a legitimate medicine, not a beverage.

For all displacements, as prolapsus, retroversion, anteversion and flexions, causing weak and aching back, bearing-down sensations, ulceration, unnatural discharges and kindred ailments, the "Favorite Prescription" is an unequaled remedy, and the only guaranteed one.

You only pay for the good you get in using Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

HENRY L. KELLOGG, ASSOCIATE EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, JANUARY 15, 1891.

THE COLORED PASTORS.

God is remembering them. We have not so urgently pressed for contributions to send the Cynosure to their homes this year, since other work of the N. C. A. was in great need also of funds. The responses to our brief invitations have been cheering, but not more so than the thankful letters that come from the colored pastors. As this number was about ready for press a letter from Rev. Edward Hildreth informed us that there had been appropriated from the bequest left by Philo Carpenter, the well-remembered benefactor of our reform, a sum sufficient to send the Cynosure to 300 pastors in the South. This is grand news. If now the friends of the colored race in the country can add 300 more to this list we can well supply the Baptist pastors in several States and all the Congregational teachers and pastors in the South. Few of these are able to subscribe. Their resources are small—in many cases ridiculously so. But they are very susceptible to the truth, and are ready to give it to their people. If the paper could be followed next year with an able lecturer, whole States might be carried against the lodge, so far as the colored churches are concerned. We thank God and take courage.

EVANGELISM.

The golden shower of tongues which came on the disciples in that "upper room," (Acts. 2: 3,) appears to have pictured "the gifts to men" which Christ gave to his disciples soon after his ascension. And "evangelists" are next after "apostles," and before "pastors and teachers." They were a class of preachers not permanently stationed, but sent to bear the "Good News" of salvation by Christ to one community, and then pass on to another.

Within the last few years, evangelists have increased in the churches in the vicinity of the lakes. Their labors have had encouraging success, and large additions have been made to many churches.

Questions are raised as to the relative value of the work of evangelists, compared with the labors of settled pastors. Such questions are generally answered by the providence of God. There have been no great revivals of religion except where the regular channels of religious labor have overflowed their banks. Christianity was spread from Pentecost by evangelists. Luther's colporteurs were evangelists and spread over Germany. Wycliffe said he considered his vocation to be "teaching simple men and women the way to Christ." Before our American Revolution the churches had run low. In 1740 Whitefield and the Wesleys in England, and joined by President Edwards and the Tennents in the United States, were leading evangelists in what the histories call "The Great Awakening," which, added to the churches, estimated between twenty-five and fifty thousand members. Edwards and the Tennents were pastors, but they traveled extensively and preached as evangelists. This "Great Awakening" was a baptism of the Spirit to save the churches from extinction by the terrible demoralization of the seven years' war, which soon followed.

The Constitution was adopted in 1789, and extensive local revivals, particularly in Kentucky, followed soon after the settling of the government. In the year 1800, Peter Cartwright and the eccentric Lorenzo Dow, as Methodists, and many Presbyterians, preached with great power, and the awakening was general. Educated ministers could not be had, and uneducated evangelists were called in to supply the deficiency. They were first ordained in Cumberland county, and thus originated "the Cumberland Presbyterian church." This work spread into Tennessee and southern Ohio, where the Gallaghers held Presbyterian camp meetings with great popular effect. Jerks, outcries, faintings and convulsions marked and marred this great religious upheaval. A few Presbyterian ministers seceded and formed a society of Shakers. And Esquire Carey, near Cincinnati, said to the writer, that he had seen men of property and standing in society, on their hands and knees, barking at trees, and saying they had "treed Jesus Christ." This movement extended to near 1830. Then 1500 Masonic lodges went down in the Middle and Eastern States, and the mighty void in the time and mind of the population was filled with the Spirit of God, and a wave of revival swept over the entire field where devils had been worshiped in the lodges. The Evangelist Finney was prominent in these mighty turnings to God. But this greatest of American revivals was by no means limited by the labors of Finney and the evangelists who followed him.

The labors of Evangelist Moody, who is now preaching in Boston, are too familiar to our readers to need mention. Both Finney's and Moody's labors have not only swept widely over this country, but extended into Europe.

The rule for employing evangelists is, engage only those whose labors are owned of God; when you can by their help gain access to the people, and when a handful of Christians who have a mind to the work and are ready in the day of God's power are prepared to second his efforts.

LODGE RULE IN CHICAGO.

In 1889 this city deliberately selected for its chief magistrate a man whose moral and religious training had been in the Masonic lodge. It was to have been expected that the character produced by such nurture should be manifested, and that effect upon the welfare of Chicago would be apparent. No intelligent man or woman of our million people is indifferent to that effect to-day, what ever may have been their opinion two years ago. The sentiment given by Dr. Noble at the meeting of the Congregational Club last fall, that the ruins of Chicago were only the dirty old shed known as the Illinois Central depot and the reputation of Mayor Cregier, is held by all respectable people in Chicago. It was about the same time the Citizens' Association issued a remarkable report which used denunciatory speech, thus:

"Every gambling house, lottery place and policy shop in the city can be closed within forty-eight hours and kept closed if the mayor chooses to do it. He has the law and the requisite means at his command, and if he will but exercise the will he can accomplish the object. It is idle to tell us that it would take the whole police force to do so; it would not; that is but a figure of speech. Still more absurd is the statement which has been so often made, that the mayor has no knowledge of the existence of these public places for gambling and lotteries. . . . Prominent citizens, his personal friends, fortified by affidavits which we procured for the purpose, have called on him in friendly remonstrance. What has been the result? To all except the last there has been a contemptuous indifference."

Dr. John H. Barrows, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, in a address a few days later used this vehement language:

"Everybody knows that the mayor and the majority of the aldermen are only the standing committee of the grog-shops.

"The real mayor of Chicago is rum and the so-called mayor is simply the tool of the rum bottle as well as the lackey of the gambling-room. The saloon is the institution which the common council of Chicago informs us is entitled to the most careful consideration, the most constant defense against the slightest infringement of its rights.

"With the tools of the saloon controlling the common council and the chief executive, the liquor-shops are planted just where the liquor-sellers please—in the precincts of schools and under the shadow of church spires. Every ordinance that would curtail the saloon abomination is violated. Sunday is made the chief day of carrying on this diabolical traffic and the mayor of the city brazenly breaks his official oath by permitting its continuance."

The daily press which have some care for the moral character of the city like the Inter Ocean and News approved this terrible arraignment as a conservative speech. The Inter Ocean last week published the record of Cregier's public services in Chicago for which he has been well paid by the city for thirty-eight years. There are other public services, and services not public, for which he has his reward from the lodge. Except for that influence he would neither have been mayor, nor would he have so long and steadily drawn upon the public treasury. Twice of late has this Past Grand Master appealed to the influential business men of this city for their sympathy, but with such cringing and dishonorable terms that they either denounced him to his face, or left the room in speechless disgust. This excellent Mason is now accused of manipulating the police to secure a re-election. The Clan-na-Gael is again showing its red hand on the force. If a man is known to oppose them, he is set aside; and the mayor is depending on them and the gamblers, and the secret societies of vile women, and the other secret societies to keep him in power.

Altogether Chicago seems to be an agreeable place for a World's Fair!

—The Washington agent has again been laid by for a few days with an attack of malaria. He writes of improvement and expectation of soon assuming active work on his important field.

—The introductory note to the beautiful hymn Veni, Creator Spiritus in our Home department should have been credited to the excellent volume "The Two-fold Gift of the Holy Ghost," noticed in our literary review.

—The Christian Witness and Independent Christian both publish this month a portrait of the popular and well beloved president of the New England Association, Mr. John A. Conant of Willimantic, Conn. The accompanying sketch is by Miss E. E. Flagg.

—A business man in Boston who has paid over $1400 into the treasuries of the secret lodges, but now, converted to the Lord Jesus Christ as his only Saviour, renounces the whole secret business, begins with the Cynosure this year, expecting a better investment of his money.

—Parlor conferences and meetings for special prayer have been a very effectual aid to the New England work. A number of good women of the W. C. T. U. are engaged with Mrs. Stoddard in getting out the Home Guard, and in attending meetings where their testimony against the lodge iniquity may be heard.

—"Death to Informers" was on the card pinned to a dead white man hung in a roadside tree on the border of Lumpkin and Dawson counties in Georgia, a few days ago. No one knew the victim, nor was there any clue to the Morganizers. The perpetrators of the horrible affair are well concealed by a secret combination of some sort.

—The office of the New England Secretary, Rev. J. P. Stoddard, was last week removed to a more convenient location for his work at No. 218, Columbus Ave, Hotel Howland. In the front parlor on the first floor a lady friend who has become warmly enlisted, will keep a table full of tracts and a sample of the books for sale at the Boston office. Bro. Stoddard is much encouraged by the co-operation of a number of Christian workers in Boston.

—Bro. M. H. Nichols, our California agent, has changed his address to No. 520 Kearney St., San Francisco. He wrote last week from Seattle, Washington, where he had gone with the expectation of entering land. He found friends among the Free Methodist brethren and an opening for lectures. We sincerely hope that he may find the work opening more favorably than in California. Among others he met our old friend, Rev. Henry Cogswell, who is well known to many of our readers in Ohio, Illinois and California.

—The rage for great office buildings has affected the Y. M. C. A. of this city, and they have concluded plans for a fourteen-story building to occupy the present location of Farwell Hall continuing to and fronting on La Salle street. The total investment will amount to $1,400,000. The present quarters of the Y. M. C. A. are not altogether convenient, and Farwell Hall does not seem to be so much used as formerly for conventions and public entertainments; but it is questionable whether the vast sum named for this new building might not be employed to much greater advantage in some other way to promote the cause of our Lord Jesus Christ. The Association has been steadily drifting away from the poor young man, whose clothes or manners might be offensive to the wealthy member. The latter have pleasant meetings at the hall, but we do not hear of conversions as when years ago Mr. Moody was manager of the Association.

—We find the following notice of an interesting anniversary in the Flail of Wheaton, Ill., of the 8th inst. The readers of the Cynosure will of course be interested in the event: "The eightieth birthday of Pres. Jonathan Blanchard, for more than thirty years one of our citizens, and identified with the religious and educational interests of the State for nearly fifty years, will be publicly celebrated in the College chapel on the evening of January 19, 1891. Brief addresses will be made by a number of personal friends, letters will be read from those at a distance, a good musical program will be provided, and all are invited to share in the pleasures of the evening. Should religious meetings be in progress at this time, an arrangement will be made for another hour of religious service, so that the event which we are to celebrate will not detract from the movement toward a higher and better religious condition of things for which we are all hoping."

—Bro. C. S. Bullock, the representative from Northwestern University, Evanston, Ill., in the College contest at our last State Convention in Illinois, writes us from Brown's Town, Jamaica, West Indies. After the Missionary Conference at Indianapolis, in September, he engaged to go to Jamaica to superintend an interesting independent mission, but later wrote us of disappointment in that expectation. He expects to return to the United States during the present month to labor for a time for African missions. Dr. James Johnston, the founder of the Jamaica mission, is planning an African mission for colored men in this country. We understand that a company have been engaged and expect to go to the field next month. Bro. Bullock is an enthusiastic worker. While at Evanston he addressed the students on the college secret societies, against which there has been such an uprising of late in the University. He was also chairman of the Students' Bureau of Correspondence. He desires to speak on missionary themes on his return, and churches in the vicinity of Chicago who would like to hear him will please address this office.

PERSONAL NOTES.

—Hon. Richard Edwards, our late Superintendent of Public Instruction in Illinois, and Dr. J. E. Roy, are among the speakers expected at the anniversary at Wheaton next Monday, noticed in another column.

—Rev. S. F. Porter, our college agent, wrote last from Sherwood, Tenn. He was suffering from a fall received in Berea and from a cold and was threatened with illness, from which misfortune may heaven protect him.

—Rev. C. Conkling, an old resident of Oberlin, but lately residing in Cleveland, O., was in Chicago early this week arranging to fill an engagement for the Sabbath Alliance. His field will be Southern Illinois, with headquarters at Springfield.

—Bro. Davidson is still toiling on in New Orleans with a cheerful courage, bearing burdens of sickness at home and discouragement abroad from poverty and race prejudice that would sink many men. He patiently waits for the fulfillment of his prayers for the establishment of his church on a better financial basis.

—Rev. S. A. Gilley, who has for several years been a Wesleyan pastor in southwestern Iowa, has lately removed to Marengo in the eastern part of the State. Bro. Gilley is a steadfast reformer, and has of late years given much attention to the prohibition work. He was nominated for Congress by the Prohibitionists of his district last year.

—Rev. D. Simon, long pastor at Prospect, Ohio, has become editor of the Lutheran Standard of Columbus. The Standard for some years was edited by Prof. M. Loy, president of Capitol University of that city. Rev. Mr. Simon has for years been prominent in the Lutheran church of Ohio, and has been an able contributor to the Cynosure on topics related to our reform.

—The September India Watchman of Bombay thus describes Bro. W. J. Gladwin who has lately returned to his missionary work in that city: "Is a feeble man to look at, but he is one of God's chosen vessels. His eighteen years of service in India is marked with much divine favor, and almost all India and Ceylon have been put under obligation to this unselfish servant of God, who like Paul has not consented that any other than his own hands should support himself and family nearly the whole of these eighteen years. His reputation is as wide as the empire and we hesitate not to say he holds a deep place in the confidence of many of the best people in India. It is not now the time to mention his varied and tremendous service to many good causes in India. A lone man, uncommissioned by any great society, he has found an unprecedented call for his services ever since he went to America and longing to get back to India, he is led step by step by the Spirit of God as to the time of his return. His visit to America will result in much good to India. Fifty candidates are on his books as correspondents looking to the foreign work. Let our readers pray for our absent comrade."

—A private letter from Bro. H. W. Johnston, missionary in Free Town, Sierre Leone, to the Wesleyan Missionary Secretary, announces his probable immediate return home with his wife, whose health is rapidly breaking down from repeated attacks of African fever. Physicians urge this step as the only remedy. Miss Harris, connected with the mission, has also been severely ill but is recovering. Bro. Johnston was formerly connected with the American at Washington and the Crank at College Springs, Iowa. Miss Harris was a student at Wheaton several years ago.

BRO. ARNOLD WATCHES THE FUND FOR COLORED PASTORS.

IRONTON, Ohio, Jan. 5, 1891.

DEAR FRIENDS:—I just learned yesterday through the Cynosure, that your funds were in Kean's bank, which must, of course, crippled you for the present. I hasten to send you all I have on hand now,—six dollars, which is for the Minister's fund.

I hope others will send in their contributions, as I consider the Cynosure a positive necessity. The present condition of church, society and nation demands it. Had two very large gatherings on the boat yesterday. (Sabbath).

I. R. B. ARNOLD.

THE CALL

FOR A CHRISTIAN CONFERENCE ON THE SECRET LODGE SYSTEM.

We, the undersigned, believe that there is no good which can be accomplished, in times of peace and in a free land, by secret societies which cannot be secured more easily and perfectly by open organization.

We believe that much of the time and money so greatly needed by the cause of our Lord Jesus Christ is wasted in the large and unprofitable expenses of secret orders.

We believe that union of Christians with men of the world in oath-bound organizations is forbidden by the Word of God and always injurious to the spiritual life of those Christians who enter such societies.

We believe that some oath-bound societies are clearly hostile to the peace and welfare of our country.

We therefore invite all those who sympathize with us in the views above expressed to meet in "A Conference of Christians," to be held under the auspices of "The National Christian Association," in the city of Chicago, to consult and pray respecting the best method of saving men, the churches, and our land from the injurious influence of such societies.

[Give name, postoffice, county and State, plainly, with public or official position and denomination.]

☞The friends of the N. C. A. everywhere are urgently requested to secure the names of pastors or other influential persons to the above call and send to the Corresponding Secretary, W. I. Phillips, at this office. ☜

—The class of 1826 at Yale College, of which there are now but six survivors, has received a new recruit, a descendant of one of the famous men of this country. He is Douglas Putnam, of Ohio, a grandson of the old General Israel Putnam, who has been as rugged and as sterling a son of Ohio as his grandfather was of Connecticut. Among the original members of the class were two brothers, who rode to New Haven from Ohio on horseback at the beginning of their college year in 1822. In their junior year their father died, and only one of the boys could be spared from home to return for the senior year. The other brother, Douglas Putnam, was kept in Ohio busy in the settlement of his father's estate, which comprised a large interest in the Ohio Land Company. He afterward became one of the founders and trustees of Marietta College. Mr. Putnam is now a vigorous man of eighty-four. The corporation of Yale University have voted to admit him to the degree of B. A. and restore him to the rolls of his class.—New York Tribune.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7, 1891.

"Nations and their rulers" is the subject for to-day in the annual week of prayer, which began with last Sabbath in every civilized nation, and which was originated in far-away India more than thirty years ago by an invitation from the Christians of Sodiana mission to all other Christians to join them in a week of prayer that "God would pour out his Spirit on all flesh, so that all the ends of the earth might see his salvation."

When one reads the telegraphic news from the Indian reservation in the Northwest it cannot fail to impress upon his mind the need which this nation and its rulers have for the prayers of all Christians; therefore it is a consolation to know that in every country in the civilized world, and in many that are only beginning to feel the first quickening effects of those twin sisters of light, Christianity and civilization, good men and women are to-day offering orisons to the great Ruler in behalf of our nation and its rulers; and the knowledge inspires the hope that the authorities of the United States may be governed by true Christian charity and a forgiving spirit, and not by the savage and pagan idea of revenge in their future dealings with the Indian. The thought should never for a moment be lost sight of that the United States is in sentiment, if not in law, a Christian nation, and that our every act, be it for good or bad—there have already been too many bad ones—in dealing with a race far below the Anglo-Saxon in the scale of civilization, is telegraphed to the furthermost parts of the world, and analyzed with critical care by people who have been educated to look to America for that exact justice between man and man, which Jesus taught his followers. Let us not disappoint the people who regard us as forming the front rank of the world's grand army of Christianity and enlightenment. Rather let us justify that regard by our acts.

There is a disposition to justify un-Christian acts upon the part of our officials in their dealings with the Indians by citing the acts of other nations in dealing with inferior or weaker races. Such a justification is worse than none at all; because it carries an implied approval of acts of which the nations that permitted them have become heartily ashamed, and of which no American has ever approved. If we are worthy, as a nation, to continue in the vanguard of the army of Christianity and civilization, let us demonstrate it to the world by our treatment of the Indians; it is a grand opportunity; we cannot remain stationary, but must go backward or forward. Let every Christian pray that it may be forward.

Rev. Dr. S. S. Mitchell, of Buffalo, N. Y., made glad the hearts of many people Sunday evening by an eloquent sermon preached from the text: "All things work together for good for them that love God."

This evening there will be a distinguished gathering of Episcopal prelates at the missionary meeting of the woman's auxiliary at Epiphany church. Bishop Paret will preside, and it is expected that Bishop Dudley of Kentucky, Bishop Leonard of Utah, and Bishop Leonard of Ohio, will be present.

There is great grief among temperance people on account of the death of Mrs. C. N. Whitney, who came here a few years ago from Portsmouth, Va,, and at once became prominent as a worker in the cause of reform.

Postmaster-General Wanamaker made a strong appeal to the audience at the Central Union Mission Sunday night to come out of a degraded and sinful life and pursue the better way.

A temperance mass meeting under the auspices of the W. C. T. U. was held Sunday afternoon. Among the speakers were Dr. A. B. Leonard, of New York; Rev. Anna Shaw, and Representative Pickler, of South Dakota. It is particularly gratifying to note the large number of our public men who are aiding by word and example the cause of temperance at the capital.

THE HOME.

THE "VENI, CREATOR SPIRITUS."

The remarkable Hymn to the Holy Ghost, Veni, Creator Spiritus, was one of the seven great hymns of the Mediæval Church. It was a mark that was left by the lengthy contest which was waged concerning the Person and Work of the Holy Ghost. It was sung at Whitsuntide, the annual festival commemorative of the Descent of the Holy Ghost at Pentecost. Early in the thirteenth century, it was sung by the boys of the unfortunate "Children's Crusade," as they sailed out of the harbor of Marseilles to slavery and death. In the Romish Church, it is still used on solemn occasions, such as the elevation of popes and the cornation of kings. It was among the early translations of the Reformation, and is still used by various Protestant churches in their ordination ccremonies.

The authorship of the Veni, Creator Spiritus is attributed by some to Gregory the Great, who died A. D., 604. But it is popularly attributed to Charlemagne, who lived A. D., 742–814. The first historical noticc of it is under the date of A. D., 898. As it now appears, the last stanza is supposed to be the product of a later period.

The following is the English translation of the hymn by Cosin:

Come, Holy Ghost, our souls inspire,
And lighten with Celestial Fire;
Thou the Anointing Spirit art,
Who doth thy seven-fold gifts impart;
Thy blessed Unction from above,
Is comfort, life, and fire of love.

Enable with perpetual light,
The dullness of our blinded sight;
Anoint and checr our soiled face,
With the abundance of thy grace;
Keep far our foes, give peace at home;
Where thou art Guide, no ill can come.

Teach us to know the Father, Son,
And thee, of Both, to be but One;
That, through the ages all along,
This may be our endless song:
Praisc to thy Eternal Merit,
Father, Son, and Holy Spirit!

THE HOLY SPIRIT.

The church seems to have scarcely realized the greatness of its privileges under the dispensation of the Spirit. We are not to think as we read the New Testament records of divine inspirations enjoyed by the apostles and early Christians that they were more highly favored than ourselves. To many the language used in speaking of the spiritual gifts of the apostolic churches seems to describe an extinct experience—an experience not possible to man at the present time. How few habitually realize the Spirit's presence! As for the mass of believers, is it not true that they know nothing of that presence by experience? The language commonly used in prayer seems to assume that the Spirit is far away, that we must ascend up into the heavens to bring him down, or descend into the deep to bring him up. God is entreated to "send" the Spirit, as if his dispensation had closed, and he had left the world and could only be induced to return by a special mandate of the Father, issued in answer to the most vehement importunity. Why this habit of thinking and praying as if the Spirit were afar off? If he is to abide with us forever, how is it that his presence and influence are felt so seldom and so feebly?

Doubtless one reason is that the pulpit does not pay enough attention to the manifold offices of the Spirit. Probably not more than one sermon in a hundred has for its theme the doctrine or work of the Spirit; yet, in view of the fact that this is the dispensation of the Spirit, to whom, since the ascension of Christ, all the work of the Trinity in the salvation of men has been committed, not one sermon should ignore him. Another reason for the feeble and fitful consciousness of the Spirit's presence is unfaithfulness to the light we have. The Spirit is quenched by disobedience to his commands, by refusing to follow his guidance, by the dominion of selfish purposes and pre-occupations. The jangle of worldly voices makes the soul deaf to the gentle whispers of the Comforter. These are some of the reasons why the doctrine of the Spirit seems obscure and mysterious, and why the inspired accounts of his dealings with the first Christians are to many but a record of an obsolete and no longer possible experience. The remedy will be found in a revival of what used to be characterized as "Holy Ghost preaching," and in a general and earnest effort to lift the church to a higher plane of Christian experience and spiritual power.—Dr. Edwards in Northwestern Christian Advocate.

LED OF THE SPIRIT.

How does he lead us? I reply, by acting upon and asserting his supremacy within every faculty of our nature. He captivates our imagination, setting before our minds a high and godlike ideal, the very contemplation of which awakes holy enthusiasm within our souls. He enlightens our understandings, giving us to know more and more of the mystery of his will. He warms our affections by such manifestations of the love of God as must necessarily awaken a response, even within our cold hearts. He binds us in the chains of our holy friendship to the eternal God, establishing a blessed intercourse between the human soul and its Lord; and thus, through our imagination, our understanding, our affections, he wields our will as the instrument of his own good pleasure—wields it in happy obedience surrendered to his control.

Led of the Spirit! How does he lead us? Very delicately, very gently, a step at a time; not laying before us the map of our future lives, but indicating what can be done at the moment; and as he gives the light, he assures us of the power: "I will guide thee by mine eye." O brethren, if we would be led by him, how jealous need we to be of anything which in any way interferes with our intercourse with him! how jealous of any object which draws aside our gaze from him! Surely it is only as it becomes the habit of our life to look into his face, that we can be guided by his eye! and it is just here that we fail. We let a coldness arise in our intercourse; we grieve that gentle, sensitive Spirit by our indifference; then, as we lose the light of his eye, we begin to look about for some substitute for our heavenly guide, and by and by we put the bit and bridle of the law into our mouth, and offer ourselves to be dragged hither and thither, even while we might still hear his voice whisper in our ear: "Be ye not like unto horse and mule, which have no understanding, whose mouth must be held with bit and bridle." O, my dear brethren, if you desire to grow in grace, yield an eager and ready ear to the slightest suggestion of the Spirit's mind and will. Thus shall ye understand more and more fully what St. John meant when he said to his disciples: "Ye have an unction from the Holy One, and ye know all things."

How does he lead us? Certainly by the "Word." As the Word is his sword in attacking the human heart, so the Word is his lamp in guiding our steps. Without the Spirit the Word is but "the letter that killeth;" but when we put the Bible into his hand, and ask him to open the sealed book, what treasures do we discover there! Should we not read our Bibles to better purpose if we make it a rule never to open them without first confessing our inability to discover the truth, even when God has revealed it? Casting ourselves in simple faith on the divine illuminator, that in the study of the Word, and by the Word thus studied, we may be led of the Spirit of God.

How does he lead us? By witnessing to the character of Christ, he does not speak of himself, but he takes things of Christ and shows them to us. We may have a sentimental admiration for Jesus without being the subjects of the Spirit's teaching, but we only know him personally as the divine Spirit reveals him to us. Then it is that the soul, captivated by the beauty of her Lord, breathes forth her earnest desire, "draw me, and I will run after thee," and thus it is that, beholding his glory, we are changed into the same image, from glory unto glory, as by the Spirit of God. What wonder that the Holy Spirit should lead us into the steps of Christ, when we consider that it was he who led the Christ himself! It was by the Spirit that Christ was led into the wilderness to be tempted of the devil, and by the same Spirit that he was led in that last fatal journey when he set his face steadfastly to go up to Jerusalem; and it was by the eternal Spirit that he offered himself for human sin. Surely, brethren, he who led Christ so well may be trusted to lead us where Christ is gone.—Rev. W. H. Aiken.

The doing the big things for Christ has often more of self in the doing than of Christ. Every Thursday puts it thus: "But our difficulty lies in covering the commonplaces with such high heroisms of spirituality. We join a church—we give our children to go among the heathen—any one of these majesties of awful surrender, these painful sacrifices which convulse the soul, we are wont to make with due and dignified solemnity. But these little daily forbearances—dull labors, wretched facts, vexations from children, watching by an invalid's bedside—these we toss off as of no account. We do not seem to think 'dying to the Lord Jesus' includes them."

ACTS XIX: 2.

In an editorial of the Advance, I find this criticism of the service of Dr. Swing. "In the sermons of a whole year, one will hardly hear the name of the Holy Spirit mentioned." The remark is in line with certain great and growing fears for the evangelical churches; may I briefly state certain facts which have come unsought to my attention?

1st. I note the list—for 1888—of daily topics prepared by the Y. M. C. A. International Committee. Of three hundred and sixty-five lessons this suggests, the Holy Spirit has not one.

2d. A book of topics and Scripture lessons for a year put forth by the Advance. Fifty-two lessons, and not one on the Holy Spirit.

3d. Two year books of topics—1888–9—issued by the Congregationalist. Among these one hundred and four lessons, the Holy Spirit has not one.

4th. A six column article in the Congregationalist, on "Intellect in the modern pulpit." The author is a well-known, highly-honored, and strictly orthodox professor and preacher; but the Holy Spirit is not once named as being needed in intellect or pulpit.

5th. A pamphlet sermon of eighteen pages on "The practical training needed for the ministry of to-day." It is the utterance of a professor in one of our theological seminaries, both school and teacher of unquestioned orthodoxy, but no mention is made of the Spirit, or of his having anything to do with the ministry.

6th. Dr. Daniel Steele is authority for the published statement that "In forty years not one article on this topic is found among the 1,200 in the Bibliotheca Sacra, or in the Methodist Quarterly Review."

□7th. For eighteen years, and on an average of once a week, I have heard a sermon from a minister of some evangelical body, including nine bishops of English and American churches, but not one has been led to take as his theme, "The Comforter, which is the Holy Ghost."

These facts have come one by one and have not been gathered up to "make a point," and I shall be among the last to charge anything more than forgetfulness; but if they give any fair indication of the general drift, are not families and churches, children and students; with other congregations besides that of Dr. Swing, coming perilously near the place where they will say with those Ephesian disciples, "We have not so much as heard whether there be any Holy Ghost.—Lewis Bodwell in Exchange.

WESLEY'S TESTIMONY TO ENTIRE SANCTIFICATION.—"Many years since, I saw that 'without holiness no man shall see the Lord.' I began by following after it, and inciting all with whom I had any intercourse to do the same. Ten years after, God gave me a clearer view than I had before of the way how to attain it; namely, by faith in the Son of God. And immediately I declared to all, 'We are saved from sin, we are made holy by faith.' This I testified in private, in public, in print; and God confirmed it by a thousand witnesses. I have continued to declare this for about thirty years, and God has continued to confirm the word of grace."

If all ministers who pretend to follow Wesley in the non-profession of holiness would imitate him in the matter last named, we would be quite satisfied.—Christian Standard.

Prof Henry Drummond very well says: "It is not worth while being religious unless you are altogether religious. It won't do to be merely playing at religion, or having religion on as a bit of veneer. It must saturate us. Some seek first the kingdom of God; others put in a second place. Then prayer meetings are dull, and fellowship gatherings are uninteresting. But the moment a man begins to seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, all things are right. To any man who has not heartily thrown himself into the kingdom of God, but who is seeking secondly the kingdom of God, he may be religious; but there is something he loves more, and both worlds are spoiled to him. He has neither the cream of one nor of the other. The great desideratum of the present day is not more Christians, but a better brand of Christians."

READING THE BIBLE.

When Mr. Hone, who wrote the Every Day Book, and was of skeptical views, was traveling through Wales, he stopped at a cottage to ask for a drink of water, and a little girl answered him, "Oh, yes, sir; I have no doubt mother will give you some milk. Come in."

He went in and sat down. The little girl was reading the Bible. Mr. Hone said, "Well, my little girl, are you getting your task?"

"No, sir; I am not," she replied. "I am reading the Bible."

"Yes," said he, "you are getting your task out of the Bible."

"Oh, no," she replied, "it is no task to read the Bible; I love the Bible."

"And why do you love the Bible?" said he.

Her simple, child-like answer was, "I thought everybody loved the Bible."

Her own love to the precious volume had made her innocently believe that everybody else was equally delighted to read God's Word. Mr. Hone was so touched with the sincerity of that expression that he read the Bible himself, and instead of being an opponent to ths things of God, came to be a friend of divine truth.

KEEP A CLEAN MOUTH, BOYS.

A distinguished author says, "I resolved, when I was a child, never to use a word which I could not pronounce before my mother." He kept his resolution, and became a pure-minded, noble, honored gentleman. His rule and example are worthy of imitation.

Boys readily learn a class of low, vulgar expressions, which are never heard in respectable circles. The utmost care of the parents will scarcely prevent it. Of course, no one thinks of girls as being exposed to this peril. We cannot imagine a decent girl using words she would not utter before her father or mother.

Such vulgarity is thought by some boys to be "smart," "the next thing to swearing," and "not so wicked;" but it is a habit which leads to profanity, and fills the mind with evil thoughts. It vulgarizes and degrades the soul, and prepares the way for many of the gross and fearful sins which now corrupt society.

Young reader, keep your mouth free from all impurity, and your "tongue from evil;" but in order to do this, ask Jesus to cleanse your heart and keep it clean; for "out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh."—The Christian.

WHAT A BRIGHT BOY ACCOMPLISHED BY READING.

I do not think it is very serviceable to make a list of books for children to read. No two have exactly the same aptitudes, tastes, or kinds of curiosity about the world. And one story or bit of information may excite the interest of a class in one school, or the children in one family, which will not take at all with others. The only thing is to take hold somewhere, and to begin to use the art of reading to find out about things as you use your eyes and ears. I knew a boy, a scrap of a lad, who almost needed a high chair to bring him up to the general level of the dining table, who liked to read the encyclopedia. He was always hunting round in the big books of the encyclopedia—books about his own size—for what he wanted to know. He dug in it as another boy would dig in the woods for sassafras root. It appeared that he was interested in natural history and natural phenomena. He asked questions of these books, exactly as he would ask a living authority, and kept at it till he got answers. He knew how to read. Soon that boy was an authority on earthquakes. He liked to have the conversation at table turn on earthquakes, for then he seemed to be the tallest person at the table. I suppose there was no earthquake anywhere of any importance but that he could tell where it occurred and what damage it did, how many houses it buried, and how many people it killed, and what shape it left the country it had shaken. From that he went on to try to discover what caused these disturbances, and this led him into other investigations, and at last into the study of electricity, practical as well as theoretical. He examined machines and invented machines, and kept on reading, and presently he was an expert in electricity. He knew how to put in wires, and signals, and bells, and to do a number of practical and useful things, and almost before he was able to enter the high school, he had a great deal of work to do in the city, and three or four men under him. These men under him had not read as much about electricity as he had.—St. Nicholas.

TEMPERANCE.

UNLOADING ON NINNIES.

It appears that stimulated by the financial success of the English brewery syndicates, whose investments in this country now aggregate over $80,000,000, a series of American breweries are about to be capitalized and brought out on the American market on the English plan. The first series will be known as the Connecticut Breweries company, and will include the Meriden Brewing company, Meriden, Conn., and A. Wintter & Co., Bridgeport, Conn., the former brewing ales and lager beer, the latter lager beer only. They are capitalized at $700,000; of this amount $350,000 is in 8 per cent preferred shares at $25 each, and $350,000 in $25 ordinary shares, no debenture bonds being issued.

We warn the speculators who propose to push these brewery shares and would-be investors that they are dangerous financial risks. The Supreme Court of the United States has recently reaffirmed the constitutional right of the State to prohibit the liquor traffic, and brewers in Connecticut and elsewhere are bound some day not far distant, if they persist in brewing, to go to the penitentiary and their breweries be closed.—National Temperance Advocate.

A THRILLING INCIDENT.

At a temperance meeting in Philadelphia some years ago, a learned clergyman spoke in favor of wine as a drink, demonstrating it quite to his own satisfaction to be Scriptural, gentlemanly and healthful. When the clergyman sat down, a plain, elderly man rose, and asked the liberty of saying a few words. "A young friend of mine," said he, "who had long been intemperate, was at length prevailed on to take the pledge of entire abstinence from all that could intoxicate. He kept the pledge faithfully for some time, though the struggle with his habit was fearful, till one evening, in a social party glasses of wine were handed round. They came to the clergyman present, who took a glass, saying a few words in vindication of the practice. 'Well,' said the young man, 'if a clergyman can take wine, and justify it so, why not I?' So he also took a glass. It instantly rekindled his fiery and slumbering appetite; and after a rapid downward course, he died of delirium tremens—a raving mad man."

The old man paused for utterance; and was just able to add, "That young man was my only son, and the clergyman was the reverend doctor who has just addressed this assembly."—Ex.

A foreign exchange states that the next official bulletin of the Congo Free State will contain a decree prohibiting the importation or sale of distilled alcoholic liquors in that region where the use of these liquors has not been established.

A year and a half ago a saloon-keeper sold drinks to a man who was night watchman in a big mill in Worcester, Mass. One night the man was so drunk that he let the fires go out, and the pipes burst throughout the factory. The mill-owner sued the saloon-keeper for damages, and recovered $161.72 from him last week.

Sir Charles Mitchell says that no one who has carefully studied the various social problems in South Africa can fail to be struck with the absence of drunkenness among the natives of Natal, compared with the prevalence of it amongst the natives of the surrounding states, and that this result is due to the anxious care with which the government and legislature of Natal have endeavored to safeguard the native interests in this respect.

A London telegram states that General Booth, of the Salvation Army, has issued a stringent edict against smoking, in which he denounces the habit as "wasteful, dirty, injurious and entirely inexcusable." Henceforth no member of the Army who smokes shall receive any promotion, and sergeants, bandsmen, sergeant-majors, secretaries and treasurers must abandon the practice or cease to hold office in the corps. In this, as in many other practical matters, the Salvationists present a praiseworthy example, which other religious bodies and teachers might follow with great advantage.

Since the first of last April, in obedience to a decision of the committee on diet, no intoxicating drink as a daily ration has been served to any patient in any asylum under the London county council. Instead of the pint in the day and half pint at night, milk has been provided, so that it cannot be said that nourishment has been reduced. The attendants and nurses were offered, in lieu of beer, sixty and fifty shillings per year, and in nearly every case, the liquor has been relinquished and the money accepted. The medical officers are unanimous in favoring the new departure. "The patients are quieter." "They don't quarrel nearly so much." "They are less excitable." "I am sure the patients are much less trouble now." "It is better for everybody." "It was strange at first, but now we like it, and should not wish to change back again," were the substance of the majority of their testimonies. Not only does the abstinence from liquors improve the health and morals of the patients while in these asylums, but it teaches them that beer is not that necessity to life which is inferred when it is made a part of their daily rations. Hospitals in this country might well take pattern from this successful London experiment.

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

—The American Baptist missionaries on the Upper Congo have made discoveries which show that Lakes Mantumba and Leopold are connected and form a secondary course for the waters of the Congo river. It appears more and more that the upper Congo valley is one vast network of lakes and rivers.

—Beirut, Syria, has now a self-sustaining Christian church with a native pastor. An association has been established in London to send colonies of poor Jews to Palestine. So many are going to Jerusalem that it is one of the most rapidly growing cities in the world.

—The following statistics of the "Christian" church have been furnished by J. J. Summerbell to the census office: Ordained ministers, 1,417; number of churches, 1,831; church members, 129,353.

—The Salvation Army has property in various countries to the amount of $3,250,000. More than one half of this is credited to Great Britain. In the United States the value of its property is less than $35,000.

—Rev. Mr. Guinness of the East London Missionary Institute, is maturing plans for a grand advance of three columns of missionaries up the three branches of the Congo—the northern, central and southern. The central one may be considered as started by the recent departure of eight missionaries from London.

—The last quarterly report from Rev. Frank Chalfant, formerly of Pittsburgh, Pa., now of Wei Hien, China, stated that there were 650 inquirers, and that 150 had been baptized at that station.

—Rev. B. M. Krikorian is soon to sail for Ouria as the missionary of the Fifth Avenue Baptist church of New York City. Ouria is supposed to be the "Ur of the Chaldees" of the Bible. If this is so, Mr. Krikorian will probably be the first to organize a Baptist church in "Ur of the Chaldees."

—The appropriations of the American Baptist Missionary Union for the year ending March 31, 1891, are $503,159.53. The society calls for an immediate special contribution of $50,000 to meet the deficiency caused by the passage of the silver bill.

—The first stone of the monument erected to the memory of John Williams, who was killed in the South Sea Islands, was laid by the son of the man who slew him.

—The Church Missionary Society of England proposes to send out one thousand new missionaries during the next five or six years. A much larger proportion than heretofore will be laymen.

—Bishop Walker's church on car wheels has a parallel in a sailing church on the Mississippi. Rev. M. A. Shepard, Free Baptist minister of Lebanon, Ill., has built a floating church which has been in use for some time: a substantial flat boat two stories high, the lower floor used for religious meetings and the upper floor for himself and family. He is now going down the Mississippi preaching to the boatmen, and in the spring he will have the boat towed to the upper Mississippi and go down again.

—Rev. J. D. McCord, who has been engaged as assistant pastor by the First Congregational church of this city, will give large attention to the much neglecied district between Ann street, where that church is located, and the river a mile distant. There is no church in this section of the city, but several missions on Madison, Halsted and Desplaines streets are doing a good work.

COMMENTS BY E. E. FLAGG.

1. The trial by fire. Vs. 25–29. It was at the command of the Lord that Elijah hid himself from the wrath of Jezebel; and now at the same command he comes boldly forth from his retreat, sends word to Ahab where he may be found, and boldly reproves him to his face. There are times when it is the duty of the persecuted servant of God to flee from the rage of his enemies, and other times when it is just as plainly his duty not to flee, but to make a bold stand for the truth, and there may be just as much courage involved in the one course as in the other. Taking into consideration the fiery, impetuous nature of the prophet, we must think that his spirit often chafed during those three years of inaction. The only incident of his exile which the Scriptures record is the raising of the widow's son, yet we may assume that there were others blessed by the prophet's stay beneath her roof. For it was just as true in Old Testament days as under the light of the Gospel that "no man liveth unto himself." The stern Jewish exclusiveness of our Saviour's time was the fruit of formalism and false tradition. It had been grafted on to their law but was not the fruit of genuine Judaism. Neither Moses nor the prophets, rightly understood, taught it; as we can see by the way our Saviour, who came not to destroy but to fulfill the law, expounded the great principle of love to our neighbor in the parable of the Good Samaritan. Anyway we are sure that Elijah was blessed himself in his lonely retirement. Nowhere in history have we a parallel case: a fugitive outlaw dictating terms to the very king who sought his life. And we may well question if even Elijah would have been equal to such a superhuman trial of his courage before he had been taught the lessons of those wonderful three years. Ahab, awed by a superior power, calls the prophets of Baal together for one supreme test, "The God that answereth by fire let him be God." Our offerings avail nothing without Holy Ghost fire to kindle them. Before we can give ourselves a living sacrifice our hearts must burn with this fire from heaven; not with a mere passing excitement kindled by human eloquence, or fine music, or any other merely human source. Attempts to get up a revival in Christian churches have often failed as signally as did Baal's prophets, because they were conducted on the mere human line.

2. Truth can always bear the light. Vs. 30–35. We see by verse 23 that Elijah took precautions against a common trick with the pagan priests of that day—of concealing fire in some part of the altar, which, at the right moment, would be made to blaze forth and consume the sacrifice. Unfair methods are to be unmasked as far as possible, for this is part of every battle for the truth. We notice (1) that Elijah calls on all the people to come near that they might see for themselves that there was no trickery, and also to emphasize the difference between himself and the priests of Baal who shrouded their rites in mystery. Secrecy is any important factor in all false religions. As a Masonic writer has said of the lodge, "It is necessary to their existence." (2) He repaired the altar that was broken down. He was inaugurating a great religious reform, and to reform means to make over. It may include a great deal of pulling down first. All the false ideas and wrong theories; all the rubbish of fable and tradition must be swept away before God can be truly worshiped with that spiritual worship which he requires. Nothing has done so much to break down God's altars in church and family as the countless lodge altars which have been built on every hand. (3) The altar was broken down because it had been neglected. The people had forsaken it for the altars of Baal, just as the churches of Christ are suffering to-day financially and spiritually, because the money and influence which should have gone to build them up have been used to rear other altars dedicated to secret and Christ-ignoring rites. The drenching of altar and sacrifice with water may be considered a type of that purification of heart which must come first before our offerings can be acceptable, as well as a proof that God does not call on us to believe wonders and signs without giving us the clearest manifestations of their truth.

3. Elijah's prevailing prayer. Vs. 36–39. Elijah was careful to give God, not his common title by which he was known to Gentile nations, but that by which he revealed himself to his covenant people—Jehovah God. So prevailing prayer must always address him through Christ, and the assertion often made that the unscriptural titles used in the lodge are just as acceptable is clearly untenable. Such prayer can never bring down an answer by fire, no more than could the prayers of Baal's prophets.

EDUCATIONAL NOTES.

—American colleges derive two-fifths of their income from students; while English universities obtain only one-tenth from that source.

—Connecticut claims the honor of producing a larger proportion of college graduates than any other State. The proportion is one to five hundred and forty-nine.

—At Berea College, Kentucky, last year the attendance, representing nineteen States, was made up of 198 colored students, 157 whites; 186 males, 169 females.

—One man in five thousand takes a college course in England; in Scotland, one in six hundred and fifteen; in Germany, one in two hundred and thirteen; and in the United States, one in about two thousand.

—The Leland Standford, Jr., University is advancing to speedy completion, and it is thought that it will be ready for the occupation of students on the first day of October of next year. Its substantial buildings are almost complete.

—The students at Williams' College have formed an organization "for the promotion of temperance and purity." It is called the Philocarthian Society. At a recent meeting the president of the college and other members of the faculty spoke in hearty commendation of the society and in behalf of a high standard of morality among the young men.

—From the catalogue of Oberlin College for the year 1890–91 it is ascertained that 1,709 persons received instruction in 1890, of whom 940 were women. These persons were assigned as follows: Department of theology, 96; classical course, 210; philosophical course, 230; literary course, 95; select studies, 46; preparatory department, 690; musical department, 635; school of arts, 49.

—The attendance at Wheaton College was nearly 200 last term. As the winter term opened last week, it was found that such an addition had been made to the number that the large lecture room, which has been used for the daily chapel service for some eighteen years, was too small, and these interesting exercises will now be held in the large and beautiful upper hall, which will seat several hundred more.

—A new Congregational college, to be called Finney College, is projected near Spokane, Wash., to be endowed after an original plan. The trustees control three thousand acres of lands three miles from Spokane, on which they propose to issue bonds secured by the present value of the land and the added value of improvements in the erection of an ideal town. The trustees offer the opportunity of a profitable investment, and at the same time the establishment of a good college.

—Dr. William R. Harper have formally accepted the presidency of Chicago University, and the board of trustees of this new university has adopted Dr. Harper's educational plan, which embodies several new features, and has the indorsement of many of the most prominent educators in the country. The plan proposes that four terms comprise the college year; that students be admitted to the university at various periods of the year; that provision be made against passing all men, good and poor alike, through the same course at the same time; permit "men to be absent during portions of the year when they can best provide means for continuing their course;" make it possible for students to study bookkeeping, stenography, etc., in addition to their regular studies; provides opportunities for teachers and ministers who cannot attend a college to avail themselves of university advantages, and places the work on a level with any other institution. There will be three departments, an absence of all creeds and no class lines.

For the last three months of 1890 the Christian Cynosure has given especial attention to the college secret societies for the benefit of the hundreds of colleges to whose reading-rooms it is sent. This interesting discussion, in which have appeared the opinions of some of the very ablest American educators, will be incidentally continued next year.

But with the first of the year will begin to be published the results of a wider investigation than has yet been made into the identity of

MODERN AND ANCIENT SECRETISM.

The ancient secret societies were the MYSTERIES practiced in Chaldea, Egypt, Phœnicia, Greece, Rome, etc. These were the pagan religious systems of the ancient world.

WERE THEY RELATED TO THE LODGES OF TO-DAY?

This question we shall endeavor to answer. We believe that new evidence of the most intimate relation has been lately found, and that the presentation of this evidence to be made in the "Cynosure" will amaze Christendom the moment it is realized.

THE WHITE CROSS LEAGUE

and Social Purity movement is come none too soon, as will appear in the course of this investigation.

In connection with this most important topic the Cynosure will give particular attention to the publishing them in full so far as they can be obtained, and showing their absolute incompatibility to good citizenship as well as to Christianity.

The peculiar features which have made the Cynosure so valuable in the past will be continued. Current events and the interference of the lodge in them will have especial attention. Able correspondence will be continued from New England, Washington, the Southern Mississippi district, and the Pacific Coast. The portraits and sketches of notable persons who have been identified with Christian reforms will be continued, and will be, as in the past, a very popular feature of the paper. The Sabbath-school lesson notes by Miss E. E. Flagg will be continued. For all who wish to wisely improve every opportunity against the lodge they are the best. The Home and Temperance and other departments will continue to be filled with excellent reading for the fireside.

BE SURE

that the Cynosure comes to your home during 1891.

You can nowhere else read fully the writings and sayings of such men as Joseph Cook, D. L. Moody, George F. Pentecost, D.D., E. P. Goodwin, D.D., Pres. J. Blanchard, Pres. H. H. George, and a host of men as good if not as great, on the subject of secret societies.

Nowhere else can you read of the progress of this reform week by week; and as the secret societies are now beginning openly to nominate and elect men to Congress and State offices, as they number hundreds of orders and millions of members, the issues they raise are of importance to every American.

Since the lodges are so aggressive every citizen should understand their nature and history and something of the men who invented and who manage them. You need the Cynosure, therefore, to keep abreast of the times as a well-informed American.

You ought also to help on this movement against the secret lodges. How better begin than by subscribing for the Cynosure? And $1.50 is but little to give in aid of so good a cause.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

WASHINGTON.

Secretary Noble said Monday that he would oppose the proposed transfer of control of the Indians from the agents to military officers.

The War Department on Monday confirmed the report that Colonel Forsythe had been relieved of his command, owing to the killing of women and children in the fight on Wounded Knee. Officials are reticent, but it is surmised that the President is at the bottom of the matter.

Senator Stanford has introduced a bill for the extension of the executive mansion in accordance with the plan proposed by Mrs. Harrison, to embrace the present mansion as a private executive mansion, enlarged by the addition of an executive office or official wing on the west and a public wing or gallery of pictures, historic relics and art treasures on the east.

COUNTRY.

Twelve men were descending a shaft at the Utica mine near San Andreas, Cal., Monday, when the rope broke precipitating all to the bottom, 450 feet below. All were killed.

A train on the Richmond and Danville Railroad ran off the track on passing over a trestle Wednesday near Gaffney City, S. C., when the boiler of the locomotive exploded, killing the engin,eer fireman, and two brakemen, and seriously injuring three others.

In a riot at a religious meeting near English, Ind., Sunday night, five men were mortally hurt and several others were seriously injured.

Home Without a Mother.

The room's in disorder,
The cat's on the table,
The flower-stand upset, and the mischief to pay;
And Johnny is screaming
As loud as he's able,
For nothing goes right when mamma's away.

What a scene of discomfort and confusion home would be if mamma did not return. If your wife is slowly breaking down, from a combination of domestic cares and female disorders, make it your first business to restore her health. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is without a peer as a remedy for feeble and debilitated women, and is the only medicine for the class of maladies known as female diseases which is sold under a positive guarantee from the manufacturers that it will give satisfaction or the money will be refunded. It is a positive cure for the most complicated cases of womb troubles.

A Handsome Catalogue

The catalogues issued in the different branches of trade for 1891 show in many instances a decided improvement over those of 1890, high as the standard of excellence reached by some of them in that year was. It is a recognized fact that the seed trade leads all others in the beauty and cost of these publications. One now before us, sent out by Wm. Henry Maule, Philadelphia, Pa., well illustrates the truth of the above statement. And it may be added that his catalogue leads in a trade whose catalogues lead all other trades. Typographically, and that is what first strikes a publisher's eye, it would be hard to equal. Its 120 pages are marvels of type composition, engraving and press-work. It would be difficult to find a space on any page that has not been utilized, both artistically and practically. In addition to the colored outside pages, twelve colored plates are scattered through the body of the catalogue, which will compare favorably with the lithographer's art as displayed in his most expensive productions. We doubt if the most critical disciple of the "art preservative" could find a peg on any page upon which to hang a fair adverse criticism. So much for its typography. As a catalogue to convey information of the business it advertises, it is equally perfect. The letter press condenses all the needful information which will enable the farmer, gardener and fruit grower to select such seeds, plants or trees as he desires, in a wonderfully compact, yet intelligent manner. Space is not used to display verbosity, neither is it economized at the expense of a clear and definite description of the seeds and plants offered for sale. The illustrations are used in such connection with the printed descriptions as to give to its readers a clear, accurate, conception of the ripened products of Maule's Seeds. We notice in glancing through its pages that last year Mr. Maule offered and paid $1,500 in cash prizes for field and garden products raised from his seeds, and $1,000 for the largest club orders for seeds sent him in 1890. He repeats these offers for the current year. It is no disparagement to many other artistic catalogues and but simple justice, to say that Maule's Seed Catalogue for 1891 is as near perfection as it seems possible to bring such things.

Dyspepsia

Makes the lives of many people miserable, causing distress after eating, sour stomach, sick headache, heartburn, loss of appetite, a faint, "all gone" feeling, bad taste, coated tongue, and irregularity of the bowels. Dyspepsia does not get well of itself. It requires careful attention, and a remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla, which acts gently, yet efficiently. It tones the stomach, regulates the digestion, creates a good appetite, banishes headache, and refreshes the mind.

Distress After Eating

Sick Headache

"I have been troubled with dyspepsia. I had but little appetite, and what I did eat distressed me, or did me little good. After eating I would have a faint or tired all-gone feeling, as though I had not eaten anything. My trouble was aggravated by my business, painting. Last spring I took Hood's Sarsaparilla, which did me an immense amount of good. It gave me an appetite, and my food relished and satisfied the craving I had previously experienced." GEORGE A. The Secret of Success; or

Finger Posts on the Highway of Life, by John T. Dale; introduction by Hon. John V. Farwell. 416 pages, 12mo., full cloth $1.50

A book for the aspiring. Written in a fascinating style and full of incidents and illustrations which hold the interest of the reader spell-bound.

"It may be true, as has been said, that 'books are sold, not bought:' but this, at any rate, is a book which, if brought to one's attention, he will wish to own. * * *

Such a book in every intelligent family in the land—how much (in showing so clearly, so wisely, so persuasively the secret of success,) it might do toward helping to solve the countless aching, burning questions of the time."—The Advance.

HOME AND HEALTH.

CELERY AND TYPHOID.

From the Medical Journal: An item regarding the alleged absorption of the typhoid bacillus from the soil into the juices of plants, where the fertilizing agent that has been used has been night soil from the city vaults, has had some currency in our sanitary periodicals. While the typhoid bacillus can at times be detected in the manure obtained from scavengers, no competent observer has, we think, detected it in the juices of vegetables that have been manured with that substance.

The use of such manure is, however, not wholly free from danger, and vegetables that do not pass through the process of boiling in their preparation for the table should be cleansed from all attached foreign matter with unusual care. In the neighborhood of many of our cities the cultivators of celery and other garden vegetables add liquid night soil manure to their fields in order to advance the growth of their crops.

A certain portion of this fertilizer cannot fail to lodge on the leaves and stems of such edible plants as celery, which filth will not be all disengaged and washed away by the ordinary processes of cleansing for table use.

CHILDREN'S EATING.

Some parents compel their children to eat against their will, as when they come to the breakfast table without an appetite, or have lost it in prospect of a visit or a ride, or for the sake of "eating the plates clean" in discouragement of wasteful habits. Unless we are thirsty we cannot drink the purest spring water without aversion, and as for eating when there is no appetite, it is revolting, as any one may prove to himself by attempting to take a second meal in twenty minutes after having eaten a regular dinner. The appetite, the hunger, is excited by the presence of gastric juice about the stomach; but if there is no gastric juice there can be no hunger, no appetite, and to compel a child to swallow food when it is distasteful is an absurdity and a cruelty.—Hall's Journal of Health.

A word of caution needs to be given in regard to administering food to young children—that it should first be tasted by the mother or attendant. Unfortunately, this simple precaution is not always taken, and the consequence is that food improperly prepared is given to a child, who may refuse it for no more important reason than that it is not properly salted or otherwise suited to the taste; it is, perhaps, then discarded and an experiment made with some other, to the detriment, of course, of the stomach, which has, perhaps, already been the object of too many experiments. Especially is this important on account of temperature; many a child has had its mouth permanently scarred inside with a food too hot to be borne, through the neglect of previous tasting. It is, perhaps, needless to add that the tasting should be done with a teaspoon which must not be returned to the food without cleansing. Too many mouth diseases have been traced to contagion in this way to allow the risk to be run.—Babyhood.

Copperas, dissolved in boiling water will instantly cleanse iron sinks and drains. A few drops of spirits of turpentine mixed with stove-blacking lessens labor, and adds polish. Kerosene in cooked starch (a teaspoonful to a quart) will prevent clothes sticking to the irons, and gives a gloss. The scent evaporates in the drying. Powdered borax is good, if one decidedly objects to the smell of kerosene.—Good Housekeeping.

Ventilate your rooms at night. People object to night air and so keep their windows closed. You must breathe night air; the only question is, will you have it pure or impure. Open the windows and let in God's pure atmosphere.

Rheumatism is caused by lactic acid in the blood attacking the fibrous tissues of the joints. Hood's Sarsaparilla neutralizes the acidity of the blood, and thus cures rheumatism.

Stomach Troubles,

Such as indigestion and loss of appetite, are extremely common. The functions of the stomach being weakened, the blood soon becomes impure, the system loses vigor, and you fall an easy prey to any prevailing epidemic. What you need to restore tone to the digestive organs is Ayer's Sarsaparilla, the best and most economical of all blood-purifiers.

"For several years I was troubled with indigestion, accompanied with pains in my side. My appetite was poor, and my health was gradually failing. Medicine recommended to me by my friends, did not have the desired effect. Finally I was advised to use Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and have done so, with the most beneficial results. My appetite is now good, I am free from pain, and feel once more in good health."—T. Loney, 32 Fairmount st., Cambridgeport, Mass.

"About a year ago, I found myself in failing health. I suffered indescribably from stomach trouble, blood disorder, and various weaknesses, and almost despaired of relief. Thinking Ayer's Sarsaparilla might possibly benefit me, I began taking it, and am pleased to state that a few bottles wrought an entire change in my condition. My health has been restored by its use, and I feel stronger and more vigorous than I have for many years."—Mary A. Garland, 1407 Michigan ave., Chicago, Ill.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla —FOR— Dyspepsia.

"During the summer and fall of 1887 I suffered very seriously from dyspepsia. Knowing the high standard of Ayer's medicines, I decided to try what Ayer's Sarsaparilla could do for me. It has helped me wonderfully. I regard the Sarsaparilla as invaluable in such cases."—James R. Williams, Delana, Ill.

"About a year ago I was greatly afflicted with indigestion, and suffered from headache and terrible pains in my stomach. I consulted a physician, who prescribed various remedies, but all to no purpose. I became worse instead of better, and was compelled to give up work. A friend finally advised me to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I purchased a bottle, took it according to directions, and soon had the satisfaction of knowing that my health was improving. After taking two bottles of this medicine, I was able to resume work. My appetite returned, my food digested well, I was free from headache, and to-day I am as well as ever."—P. Dubé, Holyoke, Mass.

FARM NOTES.

WHY NOT SOW CLOVER?

Western farmers are beginning to find the value of clover, both as a feed and as a renovator. Many are now ploughing it under to improve their fields. A farmer of my acquaintance sowed one bushel of clover on some ten acres with oats and at harvest had a good stand four or five inches high. About September 15 he turned on 30 head of stock for six weeks, leaving an abundance to protect the roots through the winter. That much pasturage at the usual price, 75 cents per month for each animal, means $33.75, a very good return for $5 worth of clover seed and $1 for work, besides leaving a stand for the succeeding year which yielded nearly two tons of hay to the acre in June besides furnishing a fine field to ripen for seed. Now, why would it not pay for every farmer to sow his spring grain with clover? Then in nearly every case he would have a fine field for pasturage or to turn under.—Farm and Home.

A MATTER WORTH THINKING ABOUT.

The writer has been amazed to note how few farmers and stockmen realize the effects of ammonia on the oily hair of horses and cattle. The largest proportion by far of farmers remove the manure from their stables only once a week. This manure lies in the stables emitting ammonia and other gases in such close proximity to the animals that it converts the oil of their hair into soap, or its equivalent; and when the animal gets wet the whole coating of hair is washed with an alkali, destroying the hair. Let the reader drop some oil on his coat, and then apply water of ammonia; it will instant y convert the oil into soap.

The writer has in his mind's eye at this moment a stable of the finest Jerseys, collected both from this continent and the island of Jersey. The manure is allowed to accumulate, and while boiled feed is used, sugar-beets fed, and, in short, everything of the best is fed and the best care bestowed, the owner can't understand why the hair won't lie down. It is because the animal oil is desiroyed by ammonia and other gases.

I once heard a coachmaker say that to run a new buggy on a smoking manure heap for a night would ruin the paint. I asked no questions, but knew it was the action of the ammonia on the oil used in the paint.—Correspondent of the Farmer's Magazine.

APPLYING THE MANURE.

When is the best time to apply manure, is an unsettled question in the minds of not a few farmers. The old-fashioned way was to haul it out in the spring and devote most of it to the corn-field. But our best farmers are adopting the plan of hauling the manure to the field in the fall or winter, and it seems to be the best time to do it. There is certainly more time then for the work, as other work occupies the attention of the farmer in the spring. The objection that the best of the manure will leach away is not well founded. The waste is certainly no more than it would be if it were left in the barn-yard all winter, subject to frequent rains and snows. There is little doubt that where a large dairy is kept to haul the manure every day, as it is made, out upon the field, is the right thing to do. It should be spread, not left in heaps. If this plan is not favored, the manure should be kept through the winter under shelter, to prevent the loss of valuable matter.—Independent.

A Remarkable Case.—Mr. Walter Wheeler, of the Washington Mills, Lawrence, Mass., for two years afflicted with varicose veins, accompanied by a troublesome eruption, was completely cured after taking only eight bottles of Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Youngstown, O., Jan. 11.—All the furnaces in the Mahoning and Shenango valleys, Ohio, twenty-three in number, closed down Sunday. The shut-down is due to high railroad rates and the high price of coke. Ten thousand men are thrown out of work. The object of the furnace men is to force the coke operators to reduce the price of coke and the railroads to reduce freight rates to and from the valley.

FOREIGN.

At a meeting of the leading citizens of Glasgow Jan. 9, a committee was appointed to confer with the boards of directors of the railroads in an endeavor to bring about some settlement of the railroad strike.

The steamer Britannia from Leith came into collision with the steamer Bear from Grangemouth in the Firth of Forth, Scotland, at an early hour this morning. The Bear sunk immediately, her crew having no time to launch a boat or make any effort whatever to save themselves. Of the fourteen men on board the Bear twelve went down with the vessel.

All Europe is suffering from the great storm of last week which was probably one of the most severe of the century. From the press dispatches we take the following:

Copenhagen, Jan. 6.—The severity of the weather is seriously affecting business throughout the country. The Danish railroads are at a complete standstill owing to a snow blockade.

Berlin, Jan. 6.—A snowstorm phenomenal in its severity prevails throughout North Germany. Reports from various sections are to the effect that the railroads are blocked on all the northern lines, and that in many instances the trains are embedded in the snow, causing considerable suffering to those who have been forced to travel during the storm.

Rome, Jan. 7.—A terrible snowstorm, accompanied by wind of hurricane force, has been raging since this morning on the Gulf of Triest and along its shores. The storm extended from Capo d' Istria to Venice. The severest cold weather known to the present generation now prevails in the olive growing region of Italy. A violent rainstorm, accompanied by lightning, descended upon this city this evening. The palace of the propaganda was struck by lightning.

Berlin, Jan. 7.—Nine thousand workmen and 1,000 carts are engaged in the work of clearing the streets of this city of the immense mass of snow which fell during the recent storm, a storm phenomenal in its severity.

Paris, Jan. 8.—Bitterly cold weather prevails here, and is causing much distress among the poorer classes. The bodies of three persons, who had been frozen to death during the night, were picked up in the streets this morning.

At Fiume and Triest, on the Adriatic, the storm rages with unabated severity. The blizzard is so fierce that it is dangerous to venture out. Traffic is at a complete standstill and the streets are almost totally deserted.

Rome, Jan. 8.—A dispatch from Mantua, says that snow has been continuously falling there for fifty hours, and that it is reported that several persons have lost their lives in the storm and all trains are several hours late.

London, Jan. 9.—It is now the seventh week of the prevalence of frost throughout the United Kingdom, with no signs of abatement of the severity of the weather. From John o' Groat's house to Land's End the country is wrapped in snow, and canals and streets are icebound. For duration of the frost period this is the greatest winter of the century, and in point of severity, the winters of 1813 and 1814 alone exceeded it. Numerous deaths have resulted from the extreme cold, several of them at the very gates of work-houses, where groups of poor people were waiting for shelter.

At Antwerp 10,000 workmen have been thrown out of employment owing to the unusually severe weather which is prevailing at present. The misery caused among the poorer classes in consequence is widespread and intense.

The use of dynamite is about to be tried to break the ice at Copenhagen where several steamships lie icebound.

All Bavaria is covered with snow, and in the country between the Danube and the Alps the snow is eighteen inches deep. In certain localities along the Rhine snow drifts are piled in some spots seventeen feet high, threatening inundations when they thaw.

In Northern Italy snow began to fall on Wednesday and did not cease until Friday. The inhabitants of that region are suffering acutely, such weather being entirely unknown to them, and it is feared that numbers of people have perished in the storm.

A telegram from Madrid reports heavy snowfalls in Spain, and says that communication with all the provinces of Spain is difficult. It also reports the prevalence of intensely cold weather in Valencia, where orange groves have been swept by the storm, entailing heavy losses to the owners.

At Marseilles the hospitals are crowded with sufferers from various affections caused by the cold weather.

A violent storm, accompanied by hail and snow, and extending a long distance inland, is reported from the sea-port of Algiers, North Africa. The report is coupled with the assurance that nothing like such a severity of weather was ever known in that region before.

Of Roxbury, Mass., says

My Medical Discovery seldom takes hold of two people alike! Why? Because no two people have the same weak spot. Beginning at the stomach it goes searching through the body for any hidden humor. Nine times out of ten, inward humor makes the weak spot. Perhaps its only a little sediment left on a nerve or in a gland; the Medical Discovery slides it right along, and you find quick happiness from the first bottle. Perhaps its a big sediment or open sore, well settled somewhere, ready to fight. The Medical Discovery begins the fight, and you think it pretty hard, but soon you thank me for making something that has reached your weak spot. Write me if you want to know more about it.

Fifty farmers held a meeting at Alton, Ill., last week behind locked doors. The meeting was so carefully guarded against outsiders and kept so secretly, that it might have been supposed that the gravest concerns of society were at stake, —either some wide-reaching horse-thief organization was to be run down, or similar warlike disorders were to be combatted. But when these fifty farmers got through their secret meeting it transpired that they were only about to open an Alliance store. Such a beginning of their enterprise casts a genuine suspicion upon it. Are they proposing to measure with a yard stick thirty-five inches long, or give fifteen ounces for a pound? Farmers ought to be in better business than this, and the saying about the shoe-maker and his last is also worth remembering. They are not all so young that they forget the grange experiences of fifteen years ago.

Down in Georgia Chief Justice Bleckley has given a remarkable decision, which shows that the distinctions between church and state sometimes become very dim. A Baptist church failed to pay its preacher, and the latter, like Paul, appealed to Cæsar. The judge ordered the church building to be sold and the debt to be paid. His opinion might be read for a sermon from the text: "Ye tithe the mint and rue and all manner of herbs, and pass over judgment and the love of God." "If any debt ought to be paid," he said "it is one contracted for the health of souls." If any class of debtors ought to pay, it is the good people of a Christian church. "No church can have any higher obligation resting upon it than that of being just." Justice is "the hog and hominy, the bacon and beans of morality, public and private." We suggest on behalf of several other poor preachers that the opinion of the learned judge be published for wide circulation.

Boston has lately sent out West to us a bright little lady, Mrs. Margaret L. Shepherd, who fell among thieves here in Chicago. She is a seceder from Romanism, was once an inmate of a nunnery, and has been a successful lecturer in New England. Last week she spoke in the First Methodist church here, but was in Aurora, Ill., a day or two before. In that city the priest of St. Mary's church went to all the newspapers to thwart her meeting, but with indifferent success. Then he assailed her bitterly from his own pulpit, and while Mrs. Shepherd was speaking Catholic women attacked her sharply, threatening to shoot her. All this rather helped than hindered her cause. But here in Chicago she fared much worse. The chairman of her meeting was said to be an infidel, and the man who introduced her was a drinking infidel Freemason and "grand master" of the Orangemen, who belied her religious principles to her face. But in spite of such hostile surroundings the brave little woman began her lecture with prayer and gained the sympathy of at least some of her hearers. But there can be no overthrow of popery by infidels and lodgery.

The municipal election in Chicago is already, months before the time, an important topic, both with party leaders, the press, the pulpit, the home, the saloon, the brothel and the gaming-house—every interest is awake to the critical condition of affairs. Every good interest, every single-hearted desire for the promotion of the public welfare, the security of life and property is leagued against the representative of the Masonic lodge, Past Grand Master Cregier; all the rest wish him retained in office. The Democratic leaders are alarmed lest this man secure a party nomination and so further sink their organization with his misrule. They met last week to start a popular movement against him. The sentiment given by Dr. Barrows of the First Presbyterian church in a late speech, is becoming first in the minds of many citizens. These were his caustic words: "Why should not the citizens here to-day resolve to start a movement for the coming election? The mayor should be a clean man. You can have such a man if you will, instead of the abject scrap of a magistrate you now have. You may see the public's offices taken from the disreputable gang now dancing the ghost dance around the City Hall." Cregier is already marshalling his lodge array,—the Clan-na-Gael in the police force, and Saturday he captured the Wah-na-ton, the secret Democratic society.

Miss Kate Bushnell, an educated physician and reformer, has just left this city, commissioned by the W. C. T. Union as a world's missionary. She will spend three years in going around the world, extending in different countries the influence and power of this great organization. She carries with her, also, the "great petition," a paper that is intended to be signed by at least two million names, representing a universal protest against legalizing the sale of alcoholics and opium, and is to be presented to every government on both hemispheres. A few years ago Miss Bushnell gained a national reputation by her attack on the dens of infamy in the Wisconsin pine woods. She will, it is said, first go to England, there to study social purity under Joseph E. Butler, and from there to Switzerland, where these studies will be completed. It must be regretted that the W. C. T. U. managers did not retain a woman of so much courage and energy as Miss Bushnell in this country to complete her studies in this respect. Where the lodge has its completest development, we believe she would find the widest field of investigation. If the lodge system be identical with the ancient heathen mysteries its philosophical instruction will be like them; and there is evidence enough that those mysteries, were always surrounded with gross lasciviousness, and inculcated the very vices which this missionary is engaged to banish from society. Dr. Bushnell may come home at last to complete her study of the social purity question.

ADDRESS OF REV. ROLAND D. GRANT,

PASTOR OF THE HARVARD STREET BAPTIST CHURCH, BOSTON, BEFORE THE LATE NEW ENGLAND CONVENTION.

The question of secret societies is one that it will do no good to discuss with hot words, although it is one about which it is very easy to become enthused and say some sharp things. And yet, the question may be asked, why should we say anything about a subject upon which we can make so little result as we shall be able to make concerning secret societies. Possibly because we take pleasure in talking about it; and if so, they ought to be generous enough to let us poor simpletons talk a little. I suppose we should never be considering ourselves as gaining anything, if we should set our ideals of what we expect too high. As in the temperance work, I have never been willing to admit that we were defeated, because I had never set my ideal as being a perfect condition of things; therefore, I have simply said: "Every victory counts," and so have never felt defeat in that line.

In this direction, there are so many things that press in upon us that we would like to say, that it is very difficult to speak understandingly and carefully, unless we should take sufficient time and care for the work.

I would say first, that this is a free and enlightened country of ours; it furnishes the benefits of freedom, and the benefits of security; that it is not needful that any set of men should band or bind themselves together for the purposes either of freedom, or of security. All these are provided for the perfect safety, and upon the grandest scale possible. With our enlightened civilization, there can be no reasons of this kind for lodges. As to the origin of these orders, especially that of Masonry, which we must consider as the most dangerous of any, there is indeed an altogether ridiculous side. One cannot consider the question of its antiquity without a broad smile. When we recollect its history, how in days when apprenticeship was worth more than it is now, when men in their craft (that word meant something then, and does not mean anything now,) found it necessary to defend themselves, it was proper that they should be organized together for their own support and for their safety. When they spoke of Masonry then, it would be an all-inclusive term, which would give us the idea of an architect, a builder, a carpenter, and a mason, all combined; and it belonged to a system, and should be spoken of rather as the Crispins; or some of the societies of laboring men to-day, who associate together that they may be preserved from infringement in their systems of work, or in their time or pay. The three common degrees represented nothing more than a labor organization, and could be looked upon as nothing else. It would be impossible to give a date earlier than 1648, when any man was permitted to take a place in any Masonic lodge, except he were a craftsman, and joined it for the purposes for which it had been organized. In that year an individual in England was taken in on what might be called by us an honorary membership. The expression "freeman" would refer to one that was well advanced in his craft, but they that were accepted as honorary members, took the name of accepted members, pure and simple, from which arises the terms "free and accepted Masons." In that sense there are no free Masons to-day, they are all "accepted;" because it does not represent the idea of freemen or of craftsmen, but is wholly social.

The history reveals times when the honorary membership became enlarged in the lodges, that even the king found it necessary and pleasant to indulge. This was for convivial reasons, and for the enjoyment of social life; and by and by it became composed almost entirely of those who did not need to be there for reasons of labor, and only for social purposes or intrigue. So says its own history. We find them going from England into France; and France, with its culture and refinement, and its attenuated state of society, demanded things that were in advance of what the simpler craft of Masonry could produce, and so they began to add on and add on, until they arrived at forty-five degrees; when there had been but three at any time previous in England. And then back from France to England, and from England to France, back and forth it plied, until it had grown to be a huge system.

At about the time the Jesuits were being suppressed, then under the influence of the church of Rome, they continued and maintained their position as strong as possible, working themselves into the lodges. Indeed, the fifteen last degrees of chivalry in the Parisian lodge are such as seem to have been assumed at the suggestion of Rome under the Jesuit influence. Therefore we find that religious emblems, and biblical titles, with biblical scenes and times and history, are so largely wrought into the lodge ritual.

But we find that the Jesuits began to influence it too much. The condition of so-called church life in France during that time had fallen very low, and was a mere dead formalism. It is then we find that the rising tide of skepticism, which had great distinction during that period, found itself face to face in these lodges with the hypocracy of the so-called church influence. Then the struggle began as the lodge system sought to rid itself of the church power. At this time we find such men as Mirabeau and Condorcet members of a lodge in Paris; we find also that some of the papers given to the world later, by Condorcet, was first delivered by him to the lodge in Strasburg, and latter appearing as his work in Paris. The attempt was made and carried through the lodges, until they overcame all other power of church or state; and the questions in debate, which finally consummated in the French Revolution, were born and bred in the lodges of Paris. And it is, I think, safe to say that the French Revolution could not have been what it was, if it had not been for the Masonic lodges of Paris, that were so largely centers of operations.

Thus we find that it has been a power behind the throne, a power to dictate and destroy; and its last chapters were not written in any past century, but its hand has been seen shaping politics in every direction, from its secret conclaves, where they can plot without fear of the light.

The lodge members often smile at the church because of her divisions; it would seem, however, that we have not divided purposely as churches; we have not chosen to be divided because we thought it would be any more pleasant; we do not separate from each other into different denominations because we have thought that it would be more comfortable, or that we might classify ourselves as a little better than each other, and so climb from one denomination to another. (I don't know at which end we should begin to climb.) But our lodge friends have so divided themselves purposely into classes, from the lowest to the highest, and they have put such barriers between each one of these classes, from the bottom upward, that it makes it impossible for them to recognize each other in their separate classes. So if you are speaking about divisions in the church, what will you say about the chosen divisions in the line of the lodge world?

Speaking of the relation of the lodge to the church, my first statement concerning it is this, that I must protest (and methinks I see the lodgeman smile and say, "Protest at your pleasure,") protest against it as a religious organization. It certainly presents itself to us as such. Pastors know how many times they have had fairly well-balanced men say that their "lodge was good enough," and if "they lived up to their principles all would be right and well." As to whether this is true or not, remains to be seen.

Is the lodge a religious organization? It is said that we have no right to interpret them,—they profess to be founded upon old Essenism, and the oath of Essenism was a good one. They used to pledge themselves to the " 'exercise of piety toward God,' 'and justice toward man;' 'to shun the wicked, and emulate the good; to show fidelity and obedience to those in authority,' " to be a lover of truth, and a reprover of falsity, and to keep his hands clean from theft, etc. You do not find such a pledge in modern lodges; I wish it might be. But this modern Essenism, so-called, has the following expression in its ritual that I have in my hand. This is not an expose, it is their own ritual. It is not printed in words, but in symbols. I read the following:

"This ritual which is here given to assist us in becoming bright and zealous workers on that symbolic structure here below, to the end that we all may be the better enabled to eventually enter that Spiritual Building, that House not made with hands, eternal in the heavens."

Is there any "hope" taught in that creed? It looks so. The three steps made prominent and referring to "youth, manhood and age" are symbolized by the three orders mentioned to you, the Entered Apprentices, the Fellow Craft and the Master Essene. In connection with this idea notice the following clause: "To the discharge of our respective duties to God, to our neighbor and to ourselves, so that in age as Master Essenes (which you know means Masons,) we may enjoy a happy reflection consequent on a well spent life, and die in the hope of a glorious immortality." What should such expressions as these mean, if they do not mean to say that it is a religious organization?

In the first degree, during the time that he is being initiated, the reason is given that a certain question has been asked the candidate, and it is this,—it alludes to the text in Scripture, namely: "Ask and it shall be given you; seek and ye shall find; knock and it shall be opened unto you." We apply this text of Scripture to the situation, and we then read as follows: "You asked the recommendation of a friend to be made an Essene, you sought admission through his recommendation, you knocked, and the door of free Essenism was opened unto you." Such applications does not mean anything they say. I could read thus at considerable length, but this will suffice to call attention so far to the fact that the system recognizes in some mystic way that it offers hope and future blessing to those who shall receive its benefits. Also it is open to criticism because of its ritual, which recognizes no distinction whatever between holiness and sin; that knows no difference between the greatest sinner and the best saint, because its ritual of death proceeds exactly the same for the bad as for the good; knows no distinction between them. In consequence, when it presents itself at our houses of worship, asking us to mingle in their ceremonies, some of us who have made a very careful study of these things, without prejudice, but with diligence, have analyzed the rights and symbols and find them largely borrowed from the worship of the ancient pagans, then we ask to be excused.

When an institution presents itself at our church door, and so asks us to divide with them the holy privileges of a church of Christ, with what we believe to be the rites that are not right, then we feel obliged in all candor and carefulness to say that we must ask to be excused. But it is a free land, and no one of us would ever venture to say that they have not a right to any form or system of burial services at the grave, that they please. This is none of our business. But it is some of my business as to whether I shall take part in it; as to whether I shall recognize it. This I cannot consent to do. And while we cannot deny them their liberty, we simply ask in return that they should show some respect for the positions that we are driven to take as Christian pastors; that is all. And that is what we do not always get.

One other comparison concerning it as a religious body:

Not long ago I attended a funeral by force, at the time when I declined to attend any more. They came into the church; they had a right to, but when they assumed my pulpit without asking leave and performed their rites and ceremonies, I did object. The clergyman who conducted the services, after I had finished, said the following words: "If there be any future life, our brother has found it." There are no "ifs" in my theology. (Applause.) And furthermore, he added, "How many times have we met this brother in the most holy place of prayer." He meant the lodge room, for he had not met him in the prayer room. If that is the most holy place of prayer, then that is in keeping with the assumption of titles, which is positively shocking. The Scripture says: "Call no man master." And in a free government like ours, men call so many men more than masters; for you cannot tell me of a title that in Holy Writ is applied to God, that is not by some twist of words, applied to men in these lodges.

As to its danger to the church, first, we meet simply for discussion, to see what are the facts in the case. We know that we have very many men who are members of our churches, who are members of lodges. I must confine myself to Masonry; it is upon this I wish to speak, because in this I have had the most experience. We know that those who are connected with the lodges, are not the ones who are the most spiritual; are not the ones who are so helpful in religious work.

I count among my best friends, men who are high in Masonry, and I have taken great liberty to speak upon it; and yet they are my friends who wish me well, and I find no fault, because they do me no harm; they would have welcomed me among them, but I will not say why. It certainly was not because I in any sense refrained from speaking my convictions, for one of the worst weaknesses I have, is speaking out. (Applause.) This country of ours is a free country; this is my hobby.

Just a word now as to the common expression that "if we do as well as Masonry teaches, we shall be all right." Now at the first, these symbols seem to be very good. The four cardinal virtues: "Temperance, fortitude, prudence, justice," these are all good. I will not spend time to read them all, but I will decipher for you one of them: it is temperance. Any one, of course, will say that Masonry teaches temperance. Let us see: "Temperance is a due restraint upon our affections and passions, which renders the body tame and governable, and frees the mind from the allurements of vice. This virtue should be the constant practice of every Essene, as he is thereby taught to avoid excess, and the contracting of any licentious or vicious habits." Mark how good that sounds. Now notice why the poor fellow should not drink: "The indulgence in which might lead him to disclose some of those valuable secrets which he has promised to conceal and never to reveal, and which would consequently subject him to the contempt and detestation "of all good Essenes; and also to the penalty of his oath, wherein he swore to have his throat cut from ear to ear, should he divulge, etc.

Do not drink, brother Masons, for fear in some fit of drunkenness you should,—tell what you know. (Applause.)

As to its being kind and benevolent, speaking of one of the emblems it has concerning doing good to others, it says: "In that it teaches us that . . . we should ever be industrious and honest, never sitting down contented while our fellow creatures are in want, especially when it is in our power to relieve them without inconveniencing ourselves." Without inconveniencing ourselves. (Laughter.) These are excellent points. There is no benevolence in the lodges; it is all quid quo pro. Simply pay for what you get, and as an insurance plain and simple is a grand thing.

The anchor and the ark are among their emblems. And of these it reads: "These are emblems of a well-grounded hope and a well-spent life. They are emblematical of that divine ark which shall safely waft us over the tempestuous sea of troubles, and the anchor which shall safely moor us in a peaceful harbor, where the wicked cease from troubling, and the weary are at rest."

I ask now in all honor and candor, and without prejudice, do these expressions from their own book suggest to us that it is safe for us to allow the rising generation to be taught the doctrine that there are institutions beside what Jesus Christ established,—remember I say Christ, the Messiah,—that there is hope in any other; not only any other name, but in any other system? Here is the chief danger: that it is constantly holding out a false hope. And while they tell us that these things do not mean this, and while they say that we who are outside do not know anything about it, I simply say to them that they do not know whether all of us have been outside all our lives or not, and they can't find out. That has been their perplexity sometimes.

(Concluded next week.)

Mothers with sons in college, who have not yet had their attention drawn to the evils of secret college fraternities are recommended to read the following clipped from an exchange: "We learn that some years ago, a student at Harvard, while being initiated, was walked a long distance blindfolded and was told that at the end of his journey he must jump off a precipice. Whether in reality it was deep or not we do not know, but the effect in advance was on the presumption that a dangerous leap was to be taken. Before reaching the place the young man became unconscious, and was so seriously affected mentally that he was obliged to leave college, and for years was afflicted with trouble in the brain."—Public Good.

A NATIONAL LESSON.

TO BE LEARNED FROM THE BACKSLIDING OF WORCESTER INTO LICENSE.

BY REV. HENRY T. CHEEVER.

The inquiry comes in from different quarters, Why has Worcester in the late municipal election so unexpectedly reversed her splendid no-license record of the year past? How is that what people call the heart of this commonwealth has backslidden into the arms of the harlot saloon?

It is admitted on all sides that the law of local option has been well enforced by a Republican mayor, now re-elected by a heavy majority. And the result of such an honest enforcement of a good law curbing the liquor traffic has been: happier homes, better trade, less crime, more reliable workmen in the shops and factories, fewer cases in court, fewer inmates in the penitentiary; more money in savings banks, and better food and clothing in the families of laborers.

This is the testimony of nearly all the prominent business men of the city. Whence then the lamentable change? and what are we to learn by it? It is simply this, that in Worcester and all our large cities as well, swarming with voters of foreign birth or descent, no-license cannot yet get a steady majority at the polls. Last year there were feuds in the Democracy, by reason of which the Democratic vote was divided and reduced. No-license was therefore carried by a small majority of 70. This year those feuds were healed, and the united Democracy went for license with a rush. It was well said that the net gains for license from every Democratic precinct piled in like the breaking up of winter.

This then is to be learned, burned, if you please, into the minds of patriots in Worcester and of the country at large,—namely, that as things are, Worcester cannot be permanently carried for no-license, nor the country at large, until the right of suffrage is given to women.

We say nothing now of the treachery of those recreant Republicans who (as in Pennsylvania on the prohibitory constitutional amendment question) voted effectively for their tried party candidate for the mayoralty, and then by another X voted with liquor-selling and liquor-drinking Democrats for the re-opening of the demoralizing saloon. We say nothing of the unwise neglect of the No-license League Committee of the churches, to rally Christian voters at Mechanics Hall the Sabbath afternoon before election, to be started from their apathy and enthused by eloquent speeches at a great mass meeting.

But we do say that the lesson to be learned by the late humiliating defeat of no-license at the polls, after seven months of such acknowedged successful trial, is this: Agitate now for suffrage to woman as a necessary measure for self-preservation to society at large. Send representatives to the legislatures pledged to a law giving the ballot to woman in all municipal and town elections. Let a law be passed giving the franchise to all women that are 21 years of age, able to read and write, and having taxable property to a certain amount. This will secure to the State the effective support of the most moral and intelligent portion of society.

It is not that intelligent women themselves want the right of suffrage for its honor or utility to them, but it is fully demonstrated that society in America needs woman suffrage for its own safety. Balanced as the dominant parties now are, we cannot master the crying evils that exist in cities without the voting help of women. It is proven that the highest Christian civilization and the protection of the American home cannot be maintained while one-half of society, and that the best half, is unrepresented by voice or vote. Patriotic women are only waiting to be cordially invited to a participation with men in the affairs of state. Let them be invited now. Let us henceforth heed the lesson of the hour. Let us follow the leading of Divine Providence. Let us introduce woman to the polls as the co-equal of man, that she may share with him the responsibility and power of republican self-government.

If we longer fail so to do, then, as Coleridge once said of society in England, "Instead of statewisdom we shall have state-craft, and for the talent of a wise governor we shall have the cleverness of an embarrassed spendthrift, which consists in tricks to shift off difficulties and dangers when they are close upon us, so as to keep them at arm's length, but not in solid and well-grounded courses to preclude or subdue them. More fire engines against fires, life-boats against inundations; but no houses built fire-proof, no dams that rise above the common water-mark."

The kingdom of God is surely coming in this world. Many believe it to be close at hand, by judgment or mercy, by peace or war, by the bright appearing of the Lord or the brighter spiritual effulgence of the Holy Ghost. But it is a necessary condition of that coming kingdom that here and now the loyal subjects of our Messiah King

> Keep time with God: For then the power
> Which in his mighty arm doth lie,
> Will crown the designated hour
> With wisdom, strength and VICTORY!

Your correspondent thinks it proper to say further that out of 11,814 ballots dropped at the late election in Worcester (a larger number than ever before), 5,200 were cast by determined men for no-license. It is therefore proposed to memorialize the board of aldermen, now made up of six Republicans, two Democrats and the no-license mayor, to grant no licenses this year to hotels, victualling shops, or saloons, and only to a select number of respectable apothecaries for selling as medicine. The local option law of this State provides that:

"In a city which at its annual municipal election, or in a town which at its annual meeting votes to authorize the granting of licenses for the sale of intoxicating liquors as hereinafter provided, etc., licenses may be granted annually, by the mayor and aldermen of cities or the selectmen of towns, to persons applying therefor. But nothing herein shall be so construed as to compel said mayor and aldermen or selectmen to grant licenses."

It must then be apparent that the mayor and board of aldermen are in no case under any legal or moral compulsion to grant licenses, if they have reason to believe such grants to be incompatible with the highest welfare of the city for which they act. The prevalent erroneous impression has been that the major vote of a town or city allowing its selectmen or aldermen to license, makes such licensing imperative. But it is plainly not so. On this ground it is hoped that the mayor and aldermen of Worcester, after such a demonstration as they have had of the benefits of no-license the last year, and after the solid "No" vote of 5,200 men of property, standing, intelligence and morality, will issue no license to hotel, victualler, or a saloon, but only to a select number of responsable apothecaries for sale as medicine.

It is safe to say that the churches of the city will be thoroughly canvassed for signers to such a memorial. And women who are now denied the franchise will not be slow to make their influence felt in favor of the same.

Let there a moral pressure be brought to bear upon the responsible aldermen that cannot be resisted. Let it be proven on Worcester's "fair field and open encounter" that standing and intelligence, patriotism and property, principles and piety, are stronger than ignorance and brutality, than lucre or lust, although they be alike armed with the ballot. It should be added that the most widely circulated journal of the city, the Daily Morning Telegram, is warmly committed to this course, and will persistently press it upon the public attention as the policy to be pursued unto final victory.

Worcester, Mass.

Temperance is that due restraint upon our affections and passions, which render the body tame and governable, and frees the mind from the allurements of vice. This virtue should be the constant practice of every Mason, as he is thereby taught to avoid excess, or contracting any licentious or vicious habits, the indulgence of which might lead him to disclose some of those valuable secrets which he has promised to conceal, and never reveal, and which would consequently subject him to the contempt and detestation of all good Masons.—Sickel's Freemason's Guide.

THEY ARE ONE!

IDENTITY OF FREEMASONRY AND MODERN SECRET SOCIETIES WITH THE ANCIENT PAGAN MYSTERIES.

THOUGH MASONRY IS IDENTICAL WITH THE ANCIENT MYSTERIES, IT IS SO IN THIS QUALIFIED SENSE, THAT IT PRESENTS BUT AN IMPERFECT IMAGE OF THEIR BRILLIANCY.—Albert Pike, Grand Commander of the Supreme Council, Sovereign Grand Inspectors-General, in "Morals and Dogma," p. 624.

If Masonry, or its idolatrous substitute, be considered under the worst and most forbidding forms, it invariably preserved the moral dogmas and institutes of each national religion. It is true that false religion produced false Masonry; and the latter, faithful to the principles by which it was supported, proceeded no farther than an idolatrous worship would sanction. In a word, the Mysteries were the only vehicles of religion throughout the whole idolatrous world; and it is probable that the very name of religion might have been obliterated from amongst them, but for the support it received by the periodical celebrations, which preserved all the forms and ceremonies, rites and practices of divine worship; and the varieties of custom in this particular, constituted the sole difference betwixt the Masonry (shall I so call it?) of different nations. Wheresoever the Mysteries were introduced, they retained their primitive form, adapted to the customs and usages of the national religion; and, if varied in some unimportant points, it was to commemorate certain extraordinary performances of the tutelary deities, or to perpetuate some remarkable circumstance attending their first institution in a particular country. Hence the same, or similar ceremonies, which were applied to Osiris and Isis in Egypt, the great source of secret and mysterious rites, were celebrated in Greece, in honor of Bacchus and Rhea; at Eleusis, they were applied to Ceres and Proserpine; in Tyre and Cyprus, to Adonis and Venus; in Persia, to Mithras and Mithra; in India, to Maha Deva and Sita; in Britain, to Hu and Ceridwen; in Scandinavia, to Odin and Frea; and in Mexico, to Tlaloc and the Great Mother; for these appear to be but different names for the same deities, and most probably referred to Noah and the Ark. They were all originally the same System, founded on primitive Masonry; but being deteriorated by false worship, bore a very imperfect resemblance to the divine pattern. They all, however, preserved a disguised tradition of the creation and fall of man, and the universal deluge; they used as most significant emblems, the Theological Ladder; the triple support of the universal Lodge, called, by Masons, Wisdom, Strength, and Beauty; the Point within a Circle, and many other legitimate emblems of Masonry; they used the same form of government; the same system of secrecy, allegory, and symbolical Instruction; all tending to the same point, the practice of moral virtue. None were admitted without previous probation and initiation; the candidates were bound by solemn oaths; united by invisible ties; taught by Symbols; distinguished by Signs and Tokens; and, impelled by a conscientious adherence to the rules of the Order, they professed to practice the most rigid morality—justice towards men, and piety to the gods.—From the preface to "Signs and Symbols," by Rev. George Oliver, D. D.

The prevalence of drunkenness in Russia is said to have become so great as to attract the attention of all Europe. In Odessa alone during the past year 300 deaths have been due to the use of intoxicants.—Ex.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14, 1891.

It is always a pleasure to chronicle the inauguration of a new educational enterprise, and the pleasure is all the greater when the education to be given is along the lines of Christianity. The fifty-third Chautauqua assembly of the world has just been organized in this city under the title of the Glen Echo Chautauqua, and present indications are that the new assembly will ere long become one of the largest and most useful in existence.

Among its incorporators are many of our most prominent ministers of the Gospel; and the large number of wealthy citizens who are also incorporators make it certain that the new assembly will not be hampered in its operations by lack of funds, which is the bane of most new organizations, and indeed, of many old ones too. The charter of this assembly, which was issued under the laws of the State of Maryland, where its grounds and buildings are to be located, on the high and picturesque banks of the upper Potomac river a few miles—just a pleasant hour's drive—above this city, makes provision for the expenditure of $1,000,000 in the construction of college buildings, schools for physical culture, kindergarten, school of cookery and necessary improvement of grounds. All of the buildings are to be of stone, quarried on the grounds. The amphitheater, which will seat 8,000 people, is to be built first, and the other buildings as rapidly as possible. The first session of the new assembly will be opened June 2, of the present year, and already contracts have been made with many eminent men and women to lend their aid in making it a success.

The history of the beginning of the wonderful Chautauqua movement is doubtless familiar to most of your readers, but it is interesting enough to bear a condensed repetition. Something over a quarter of a century ago Rev. J. H. Vincent, D.D., then pastor of a village church in New Jersey, conceived the idea of such an organization. It was not until 1874, however, that the first Chautauqua Summer Assembly was held, upon the shore of the beautiful lake from which the organization takes its name. The objects, as then stated, were first to bring together Sabbath-school teachers for conference and for a systematic course of Biblical instruction, and second, to eventually include all learning, secular as well as sacred. The Chautauqua Literary and Scientific Circle was organized Aug. 10, 1878. The course, which is planned for a course of four years' study, a few minutes each day, embraces history, science, literature and Bible study. All over this country, and indeed, I might say the world, may be found men and women who never tire of saying, "God bless the Chautauqua Assembly," and I say Amen.

Representative Morse delivered a most interesting address to young men at the Y. M. C. A. rooms several days ago. Mr. Morse read the story of the prodigal son, which he made the basis for his remarks, which were made by striking illustrations specially applicable to young men inclined to go astray, and impressing upon them that God was always ready to welcome them when they should show a desire to return to the paternal mansion.

It was thought that the International Copyright bill, which has already passed the House, would have been passed by the Senate this week, but its consideration is now doubtful, as Senator Paddock has given notice that as soon as the Financial bill, which is to be voted upon this afternoon, shall have been disposed of, he will call up the Pure Food bill; and there are other bills, all of which will antagonize the Copyright bill.

Petitions asking the closing of the World's Fair on the Sabbath day are coming in quite freely, but Congress has not yet shown the slightest disposition to act upon them. The W. C. T. U. is making some progress in its fight upon tobacco. It has succeeded in having the bill against selling it in any form to children favorably reported to the Senate, and if it can be brought to a vote it will undoubtedly pass, as it should. *

At a conference of Christian workers in Paris from England, Russia, Holland, Belgium and Switzerland, the duty and necessity for special work among Roman Catholics was urged by the speakers, most of whom have labored many years in the countries from whence they came. One gentleman from Belgium said that, with the Romanists, the Bible has no more authority than the songs of Beranger. A French delegate declared that the conscience of the French people has been falsified by Roman Catholicism. "Popery is paganism under a Christian cloak," said he. "There are grand individual exceptions, but the system is infernal. Some Protestants lose sight of the duty of evangelizing Roman Catholics. But for what else has God preserved Protestantism? Our churches must either conquer or perish."—Primitive Catholic.

REFORM NEWS.

A BOSTON PARLOR MEETING.

January 13, 1891.

An incident or two at our parlor meeting last evening may encourage others who are willing to work or preach as the Master did at the well. The number was small, only ten, but the place was filled where we were sitting.

One lady who came with her son said her husband had not attended the Masonic or Odd-fellows lodges for some time. She had spoken to him about it, but found that he was not inclined to talk on the subject. This was her first lesson on the mystic orders, and she thought she had found out the secret of her husband's silence, and was confident she should never again encourage him to return to active connection.

A gentleman of mature years, of blessed Christian experience, and one who is well known and heartily welcomed in the missions of Boston and other New England cities, made this first visit, and after listening to a quiet talk on Masonry and Odd-fellowship gave a faithful testimony. While a formalist in religion, he passed through the lodge and chapter, adding the council and other degrees. His motive was worldly advantage, his solemn averment to the contrary notwithstanding. He saw little conflict between church formalism and Masonic ritualism until he sought and obtained a new heart. Being blinded by the god of this world, he thought the church and the lodge about equal in merit and that both would certainly be sufficient. When his body became the temple of the Holy Ghost, and he attained unto that perfect love that casteth out all fear, he turned away from dead forms to a living, present Christ. He has never felt called to enter upon an active, aggressive work against the lodges, but bears a fearless and faithful testimony whenever he deems it proper to do so.

Thus the witnesses are multiplying as the investigation goes quietly on. I speak at Hardwick, Vt., this evening, God willing.

AMONG VERMONT HILLS—HOW TO PREPARE FOR LECTURES.

HARDWICK, Vt., Jan. 14.—The sleighing here is superb. The cold last evening was intense. Reaching the station at 6 o'clock P. M., a half hour late, I was greeted by our indefatigable coworker Bro. F. F. French, who escorted me to the Centennial Hotel, where he had secured comfortable quarters, and where I have received every attention from "mine host" that could be asked. At 7 o'clock I met a fair audience in the "Town Hall," which listened attentively for an hour and three-quarters while I talked in an informal way, using charts, and relating incidents to fasten the more important points in their memories. I find to-day that a goodly interest was awakened and that the "talk" and the talker are being discussed in the stores and shops of the village.

A second meeting was appointed for this evening, and we expect to hold the third to-morrow evening and then I go to West Barnet with Rev. D. C. Faris and people on Friday evening. The season is unfavorable for an extensive campaign, but I hope to get acquainted with the Vermont friends and establish a center from which to extend operations when conditions are more propitious.

The quiet and, as is proven, effective work in Boston, has reached a point where my assistant can carry it on as effectively and perhaps better than I could. Mrs. Stoddard is pleasantly located and can call to her aid a number of Christian workers, men and women, some of whom can speak from a personal knowledge, and who are stirred in spirit and feel called of God to prepare themselves to enter actively into this department of the Lord's work.

Will friends in New England make a note of this fact. Your missionary and agent, appointed at the annual meeting in Boston, Dec. 17 last, is ready to give attention to any calls for lectures or work, and will be glad to hear from you at Hotel Howland, No. 218 Columbus Avenue, Boston, Mass. Get a church for meetings if you can. The next best thing is a hall. But if you fail of these, arrange for at least "two or three" to meet in some private house. Don't wait until you have money enough to pay for some high-toned, high-priced lecturer, but make up your mind what the Lord wants you to give, and if you feel led that way, speak to any of your neighbors you may hope to interest, and then trust the Master. Don't let the waste places suffer and the people go into captivity for want of knowledge, because you can't promise ten, twenty, thirty, or fifty dollars to a lecturer. Remember this movement is not on the line of so much preach, or so much talk for so much pay. We are out on the line of "Bear ye one another's burdens and so fulfill the law of Christ." Let every man give of his substance as the Lord has prospered him; and whether much or little is offered, the cause will go forward; but the one who covetously keeps back what the Master calls for, does not imperil the cause, but his own worldly estate and his highest spiritual attainments. Brethren, there are no failures in God's bank, and no discount on checks drawn on the promise "ALL THINGS ARE YOURS." Send in your orders for work, pay your part of the bills, and if the Lord don't pay his part, it will be the first instance in the world's history where parchment signed and sealed with "The Blood" has ever gone to protest. J. P. STODDARD.

COLLEGES VISITED IN TENNESSEE.

SHERWOOD, Tenn.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—On Sabbath, Dec. 28, I preached a reform sermon in Howard Chapel, Nashville, at 11 A. M., and addressed the convicts in the penitentiary, by invitation, at the close of the Sabbath-school in the afternoon. But being nearly prostrated with a severe cold, I have but a meager report of work done during my stay in the city. I visited Roger Williams University, which appears to be advancing in its good work among the freedmen. The Carpenter library I found on their shelves in apparently good order. Not being able to address the students, I passed on.

I also visited the Peabody Normal College, and looked through the library, which is quite extensive, and made arrangements with Prof. H. Payne to donate a few reform books to the college.

On Sabbath, Jan. 4, I spoke briefly in the Mt. Zion Church on McLamore St. There was quite a crowd and considerable interest was manifested. At the Central Tennessee College I did not see Dr. Braden, but I found a number of the Carpenter books in place in the library apparently in good order. The same was true of the Meharry Medical department. Here they have a new and large building devoted to dentistry, and they are evidently enlarging the borders of their important work.

In conclusion, I was glad to find the Cynosure so generally in the reading rooms; and it is evidently being read by the students, and opening the way for the full Gospel of the dear Saviour.

As ever yours, SAMUEL F. PORTER.

AMONG THE OLD YORK HILLS.

LAUREL, York Co., Pa., Jan. 15th, 1891.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—It is always a pleasure for me to visit the York county hills. In addition to meeting many kind friends, I always find pure invigorating air, clear spring water, and tables laden with the good things of earth. The water is a happy contrast with that we sometimes get from the Potomac river at Washington, in which we too often find meat and drink combined.

The welcome of friends is most cordial, and we are assured of their sympathy by many kind acts. Brother Israel Gable's home is the home of the anti-secret reformer. I have had occasion to test his hospitality a number of times, and still it holds good. His best horse and carriage are always at my disposal. I visited and gave lectures in this section one year ago. In securing renewals of those who subscribed for the Cynosure for the first time one year ago, I have been gratified to find that our work is appreciated by so many.

I called on Bro. J. L. Myers. Before stating the object of my call he handed me the price of our paper for another year. When I asked Bro. C. Collins how he liked our paper, he replied, "I more than like it." Many others in giving their renewals have spoken words of commendation.

Two lectures have been given which were attended with good results. On Tuesday evening I addressed an audience of over one hundred who gathered in what is known as Mt. Olivet United Brethren church. Many who were present knew nothing of N. C. A. work. They largely received the truth I had to bring with gladness. Some new names were added to our subscription list. Bro. C. Gable was my right-hand man. Bro. C. Collins took the best of care for my temporal needs, and invited me to return. I am now at the home of Rev. Jno. Jamison. Bro. Jamison is of Scotch descent. I am indebted to him and his daughter for the pleasant gathering we had last night in the United Presbyterian church, of which he is the beloved pastor. Sabbath being too stormy for the people to get to the house of worship, notices were sent far and near to the schools by these friends. As I have spoken here twice before, the people knew what to expect, and, I knew what to expect, for Psalm-singing collections are usually of the first order. These people pay as well as pray for the right.

I go on to-day to Hopewell Center, from thence to Muddy Creek forks, Airville and Chanceford. At the latter place I am told some stories have been circulated, which, if true, would be detrimental to my character. Guess I will have to go and see how bad I am. Yours for Christ and reform, W. B. STODDARD.

—A card from Bro. Nichols at Tacoma, Washington, says that he lectured on the day before, (Sabbath) in the Christian church at Sherman of which our old friend, Rev. Henry Cogswell, of Pyallup, is pastor. Sherman is the seat of a Presbyterian College. The pastors of the place all announced the address. There was a good audience to encourage our Pacific worker and he was heard with unflagging interest for an hour and a half. Bro. Nichols hopes to lecture also in Tacoma. We are cheered to hear of this success on the Pacific Coast, and trust the work will open more widely before Bro. Nichols.

CORRESPONDENCE.

SOME OHIO COLLEGES.

OBERLIN, O., Jan. 15, 1891.

EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE:—Wednesday morning I lectured in the Ohio Normal University at Ada, Ohio. They have 1,000 students this term. All told 2,500 attended last year, among them representatives from every county in Ohio, and a goodly number from western Pennsylvania. The Lebanon Normal University, of like proportions with this, receives its patronage chiefly from the South by way of the Queen & Crescent R. R., as this is supplied with students chiefly from eastern Ohio and Pennsylvania by way of the Fort Wayne & Chicago R. R. An hour was given in connection with chapel exercises to discuss Sabbath reform.

On the afternoon of that day I visited Heidelberg College, Tiffin, O. This institution is under the auspices of the Reformed church. The chancellor has taken steps to have an appointment made for me to lecture in their chapel. Their new president comes in April.

On Thursday afternoon I lectured in Oberlin College. This is one of the great institutions of the country. Last year they had 1,709 students, from all the States, Territories, Mexico, Japan, China, India, Turkey, Bulgaria, England, etc. They have thirteen buildings, valued, with the aparatus and grounds, at $500,000. They have an endowment of $500,000. Oberlin received its first impetus in 1833, when the majority of Lane Seminary students and professors came here on account of the action taken by the directors in forbidding the discussion of slavery.

President Finney, in 1835, was chosen as president of Oberlin College. He agreed to accept it on three conditions, viz.: that colored students were to be admitted on a par with white students; that the government should be by the faculty and not trustees, and that a portion of each year should be given to evangelistic work. The financial break of 1837 crippled the institution for a time. But it has had a steady and healthy growth. It has demonstrated that the blacks are as capable of receiving an education as the whites. It has demonstrated that young ladies and gentlemen can work together in the class-room with advantage to both. It has demonstrated that a college, under the influence of Christian men, governed by Christian principles, finds a place in the hearts of the American people from which it cannot be dislodged.

I have had many appreciative audiences, but Oberlin College excells them all. I shall long remember the visit. J. M. FOSTER.

LOS ANGELES SETTLES THE SUNDAY SALOON.

[A business letter from our former N. C. A. Treasurer contains so much of interest respecting the great moral victory in the metropolis of southern California, that we cannot forbear to give a portion of it to our readers.—ED.]

But I must tell you about our closing of the saloons on Sunday. For rather than lose either voice or vote, I came back to vote for Sunday closing, though told in Santa Barbara that it was of no use, "It could not be done." But it was done by nearly 600 majority (587 exactly); and though there is neither Prohibition nor Sabbath-keeping in the constitution or laws of California, we now have both in the second city of the Pacific coast.

And this is not all. Following in the good way, Santa Barbara has since voted both for closing of the saloons on the Sabbath and earlier closing on week days as well. Next comes San Bernardino, whose supervisors (as I understand), withoutwaiting for the mandamus of a popular vote, have not only closed the saloons on the Sabbath, but now refuse license in cases where citizens, living in the vicinity of the proposed new gateway and opening into hell, protest, as ever they surely ought. And so, although temperance men here had to shoulder the entire expense of a city election, before the city council would grant us the privilege of putting it to the test, and the mayor vetoed the ordinance at that, so that it had to be passed over his veto, it already pays a good dividend,—let alone what is sure to come by means of it to scores of other cities and towns which will be moved and take heart by what has been done here; and these scattered all up and down this Pacific coast.

Perhaps I ought not to have written at such length on what is so largely a local matter, but I must add a word for your benefit, who have so much and hard work to do in dear old Chicago. For we must have utterly failed had we not done as you will have to do in order to success. We kept the question clear of all political parties, and all other issues indeed.

At that memorable gathering of old-line Abolitionists in Chicago (in 1874, was it?) at one of the meetings in the Second Baptist church, Burleigh's interpretation of the war as a sequel of the causes leading to and through it, was, as I remember his words, "I have learned never to despair of the Republic; for any question that can be fairly brought before the mind and pressed home upon the conscience, the American people may be counted on ultimately rightly to decide." But in that struggle there was virtually but a single issue, and it is far easier to reach unity on a single question than on a half dozen or more. Thus, 1x1=1; 2x2=4; and so on in geometrical ratio as the issues increase. It seems clear to me that we never could have carried our point without keeping the question entirely separate and distinct from any other issue. This on the one hand cut off all room for excuse because of different ideas on something else, and on the other brought the plain, simple question directly home to the mind and conscience without any chance of escape.

My induction may not be from a sufficiently wide survey, but it does seem to me there is a lesson for us in this somehow "off" Prohibition year, not only along the line of temperance, but as well in almost every other reform.

"Bad Boy" Peck, though supported on either hand by a Romish and a Lutheran bishop for his lieutenants, could never have dug the underpinning out from under the "Little Red Schoolhouse" in Wisconsin, had not the minds of its defenders been diverted while arguing high or low tariff, free coinage and the like; and let us heed the lessons. It is a hopeful sign when an article like that copied in the Cynosure from the Los Angeles Times on "Secret Societies in the Courts," finds a place in an ordinary daily paper, even though, as in that case, taffy from the same shop has to be thrown over into the Masonic fold lest the herd prick up its ears too sharply and take fright . . . . Sincerely yours,

EDWARD HILDRETH.

A GOOD PLACE FOR "GRANGE" WORK.

WEST BOYLSTON, Mass., Jan. 14, 1891.

Editor Cynosure,

MY DEAR BRO.:—A Western newspaper recently received the following answer from a person who was requested to act as subscription solicitor:

"From a perusal of your sample copy I consider your paper to be a dicknailer of the first water; but, owing to the fact that the crops were a failure last year, and the blizzard in January wiped out the cattle, and that the population in this place is only two families and a water tank, and one of the families is away at the Hot Springs, and the other one, which was only Jed Roach himself, is dead since December; and as, dear sir, I am going East, because I have no society here, except freight trains and telegraph messages, that do not stop as they pass by, I do not think it would pay me to make much of a boom for your paper, even if you increased the commission and threw in a three-bladed pocket knife. You asked me to hand your letter to some other person in my town, provided I cannot work for you myself. I have no one to hand it to, but I will nail it to the water tank when I leave."

From several specimens of the elevating (?) influence of the grange, recently received from State masters, down, I deem the place to which reference is made in the above item, a capital point in which to organize a grange, and gather "fruit unto life eternal," as their ritual expresses it. L. W. FRINK.

WHAT A QUALIFICATION FOR PREACHING!

SALEM, Oregon.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—I will write you a little incident which occurred eighteen or twenty years ago, when I was traveling as colporteur, or agent of the American Bible Society and Tract Society jointly, in that then very sparsely settled portion of our country embraced in eastern Oregon, Washington and Idaho, including many gold and silver mining camps.

It was my practice to preach whenever and wherever I could collect an audience under admissible circumstances; to see that all were supplied with the Word of Life who desired it; to give some appropriate tracts to those who would read them and sell some religious books if I could; and try to call attention to the great question so nearly forgotten in the cager quest for filthy lucre.

Churches were almost unknown, and schoolhouses nearly as scarce; dwellings were small—and even the hotels had no sitting room. The only place of resort in the smaller mining towns was a saloon, and these were generally the best,—indeed, the only good buildings in town. The miners told me there would be no trouble in securing one of these for preaching on the Sabbath; that the miners would all be in town that day; that the games would be stopped and the bar closed for an hour or so, and I should have an attentive and appreciative audience; and that very likely some one of the worst of the gamblers would start out with his hat and take up a rousing collection of tens and twenties.

I had heard the same before and did not doubt its truth.

A new saloon had just been fitted up—the largest and finest in town, finished on Saturday night, and not to be opened till Monday—I think it was not from conscientious scruples, but do not know the reason. Men and women said, "That's just your opportunity." This man had owned a saloon in another town, and had always welcomed the preacher with special hospitality. No one had ever preached in this town. You may imagine my surprise and disappointment when he refused me the favor. I told him what I had heard of his former kindness and generosity. He said, "Yes, there was a little fellow who used to come round, a first-rate fellow—he liked him—was a member of the same society with him—a Mason—and he used to clear up the tables and shut down the bar and let him preach—was a smart preacher—he was not very hard on the boys—said he knew their circumstances and surroundings were very different from what they were at home—but they must try and not get too far from the right path." But he could not be persuaded to let me preach in his saloon, and my application met the same fate at both the other saloons in town. Indeed, I never preached in a saloon.

Is comment necessary here? Were these two brothers mutually working for each other's advantage? Does this account for the generosity of gamblers to some ministers? The preaching would bring many to the saloon who, otherwise, would never go. Such preaching would encourage them to stay, and they would be easily fleeced and ruined. And if Freemasonry exerts such an influence upon Christian ministers what must be its influence upon those who have no such faith, and no such principles to stand for? It is certainly full of the deceivableness of unrighteousness. The saloon-keepers, so far as I know, were all Masons. W. ADAMS.

DEMOREST, THE PROHIBITION HOME IN GEORGIA.

WORCESTER, Mass., Jan. 12, 1891.

Editor Cynosure,

DEAR BRO.:—In regard to Demorest, the town is doing well and we are getting a very fine class of people there, clean and sweet. We have now two churches, Methodist and Baptist. The Baptist, of which I am a member, was organized with about twenty-five constituent members, mostly Northern people, and some very bright ones. We put into our church covenant the strongest kind of a temperance pledge, and also say, We discountenance the use of tobacco and other narcotics. Both men and women use tobacco in the South, and, I am sorry to say, whisky as well, in the church and out. I told our people I thought it was about time somebody set up an ensign.

This Northern emigration South is doing more to straighten out things down there than any other one thing. The Republican party have made a dismal failure of it; and they might as well disband, reorganize under a new name and let the rum element go where it belongs. We can then unite the best people, North and South, in a new party that may win glorious victories for a righteous government. We have several business industries started at Demorest, two sanitariums, one for nervous diseases, and one Homœpathic. As a health resort Demorest will be unsurpassed, and any of your friends who are troubled with asthma can find relief at once there. We now have over four hundred people, mostly Northern, and more coming all the time. No saloons, no brothels, or gambling dens, and we don't intend to leave any lodge alone, as "Good Templars," which is already going. We have very pure, soft water and a climate unsurpassed, either in summer or winter, in the U. S. Yours truly,

C. B. KNIGHT.

THE TWO-HORNED BEAST.

WEST UNITY, Ohio, 1st month 14, 1891.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—In the January 8th number, page 6, I see the question is asked, "Is the National Reform Association a two-horned beast?" I answer, no; but it would more truly come under the head of the white horse, illustrated in Revelation, whose rider is the Lord Jesus Christ, who is to go on conquering and to conquer, until every enemy is put under his feet. The two-horned beast is the Protestant church, which was to make war with the first beast. Why is it so called? Because it was to retain two principles (for a while) like unto the first beast, the Roman church. They are Pride and Secrecy. The Protestant sects have their institutions from whence come preachers or speakers who, some of them, deny the immediate change of heart and the gift of the Holy Spirit to direct their speech or sermon. Such ones are truly of the second, or horned beast, and not of Christ's Spirit, but of the proud, ambitious, beastly, or domineering spirit who are truly of the "man of sin, sitting in the temple of God showing forth that he is god" (or godly) whom Paul said, "should be revealed," before the coming of Christ's reign on earth. The Cynosure is helping to reveal the man of sin by bringing the hidden things of dishonesty to light, especially the false system of religion, the anti-Christ, the Masonic lodge, or other horn of the beast—which I think is the worst—that it retained from the first beast, or the Roman church.

I haven't read the book J. A. Chamberlain speaks of, but have studied the book of Revelation much and also the rest of the New Testament, and I am sure my idea is correct that I have stated above. I have read much on the subject of Masonry, its horrid oaths with the rest, which none but the man of sin would wish to take or try to obey; and also I have taken the Cynosure ever since I got the first number, only when a man of sin sent word to the editor to stop my paper for me. I suppose he did not like to hand it out to me. I have taken it nearly twenty years, and it has given the very best of instruction and light to myself and family in a religious sense. B. J. BORTON.

PITH AND POINT.

A PAULINE PREACHER.

It is likely that some of you wonder why I do not do more for the N. C. A. But I try to make the Gospel of Christ as Paul said, without charge, and when I lecture it is free, and bear my own expenses. I keep no account of donations; my wife and oldest children say that I have given away more than we have left, and still we live comfortably at home. I feel sure that it is more blessed to give than to receive; and in my travel I find so many cases of need. I surely do have pleasure in preaching to the poor, so I am not working as much among the wealthy as most men who even preach less than I do. But it is likely that I have not taken the pains to get subscribers for the Cynosure that I might have done, but will try to keep it in mind more.—(Rev.) A. B. LIPP, Martinstown, Mo.

THE ALLIANCE AND THE CHURCHES.

Our secret, oath-bound preachers seem to hover over the churches as a hen hovers over her brood, and if you say anything against any of the secret orders it seems to set them on fire. The Alliance is cutting quite a figure now. According to its ritual it is a religion, having its altar, its chaplain, its opening and closing ceremonies, prayers and songs, with burial ceremonies and songs all provided, and any member is eligible to the office of chaplain or any other office. They have about broken up one United Baptist church, and are making inroads on others. I wonder what the devil will think of next. —R. A. CULLOR, Unionville, Mo.

TWO GOOD PAIR OF CS.

Seeing that some of your money was shut up in a bank, and knowing by sad experience how inconvenient that is, I thought I could send my renewal a little before hand. We feel that although all the banks should fail, yet must the Cynosure never fail. We sometimes take the Cynosure and the Christian Conservator, and wonder which one we could give up, if compelled to give one or the other. We feel that it would be like asking which of the children can we let go. But we pray and believe that God will have the friends and the means to sustain both. After the mail comes in on Thursday, if we do not get one or both of our C. Cs. we feel as if something is out of place. God bless editors, publishers, and every friend of our C. Cs.—H. SIEMILLER, Blockton, Ia.

A DEBATE IN MAINE.

We discussed the secret society question last night (Friday) in the Literati Society, and they were of great service to me. It was the first time that question has been discussed here, and the results are very satisfactory. We came within one vote of making a tie on the question, and everyone wanted to borrow my books and investigate for themselves. I am heart and hand with you in this work; am a young local preacher and this is my last year here, but if you ever send a lecturer into Maine send him here.—H. L. CROCKETT, Kent's Hill, Me.

THE BIBLE CREED ENOUGH.

God has given us the Bible for our creed, and has forbidden us to add to or diminish therefrom. Secret societies have made creeds said to be agreeable to and founded on the Bible, but there is just a little anti-Christ in every one of them. Give me God's Bible and Jesus Christ and let all the creeds go. The church is Christ's and ought to have his creed and no other.—W. N. WILSON.

MAY GOD HELP THE DELUDED MEN OF THE LODGE.

I do not want the Cynosure to stop. I am nearly 79 years old, and have taken the paper from the beginning. I intend to do so while God spares my life, for I cannot do without it. I am a Free Methodist and free in Jesus, and on my way to glory. Although many belong to the Freemasons and other secret societies and then talk about enjoying sanctification and living up to the Bible, I fear for them; for how can they take those horrible oaths and enjoy even justification is contrary to my view of the Bible; but I pity them and will pray for them while I live. Both preacher and class-leader here belong to the lodge, and the leader says he never knew what real enjoyment was until he joined the Masons. He admits to me that the two lost Masonic preachers they had were not even Christians. I hope he also will see his error before he dies, and take Christ for his guide; for he dare not when he meets in his lodge. But I thank God that God is able, ready and willing to save all that come to him aright and take him at his word. My daily prayer is that he may keep me steadfast unto the end and meet you in heaven.—ELBERT MARCY, Emporia, Kansas.

ORANGEISM IN CANADA.

I saw a copy of your Moody leaflets yesterday. I have not seen a copy of the Cynosure. If you send 250 of those leaflets, or any tracts, I will distribute them around my circuit here. This is a strongbold of L. O. L. Last week I heard a remark on municipal contest now on in this township. It was said, "It is no use for anyone not a member of the Orange Lodge contesting, as they cannot get in;" and in many other ways the evil of this thing is seen, as the council during the past year have put all they could in the hands of Orangemen to the exclusion of better men. I pray God's blessing on your efforts to spread truth and righteousness.—WILLIAM GRIBBLE, Free Methodist preacher in charge of Bracebridge circuit.

AFTER FIFTY YEARS' OBSERVATION.

A copy of your paper has come into my possession through a Congregational clergyman, and so fully supplies a want relating to the evils of Freemasonry, that I send you herewith the subscription price for one year. It gives me great satisfaction to find one paper that has the courage to attack this insidious evil. Personal observation for nearly fifty years leads me to the inevitable conclusion that through the influence of Masonry the incendiary has been shielded from the punishment deserved, and the murderer has been set at liberty.—J. P., S. Britain, Conn.

CAN HE SERVE GOD AND MAMMON?

I am informed that one member of the National Holiness Association has taken degrees in several secret societies, but does not affiliate. I suppose that to mean, that he is a silent member, but does not attend their orgies. Is he not still a member, and the lodge has his moral support, until he renounces and denounces lodgery? Presumably Masonry is one of the secret societies he joined, by silence he acknowledges the binding force of those vicious oaths with death penalties. Can holiness and lodgery blend in any such way? If I am mistaken please set me right. The cause of truth and righteousness requires plain dealing. May the Lord bless his cause to the downfall of secrecy.—J. MARSH, Milton, Fla.

See Matt. 6: 24; Eph. 5: 11; 2 Cor. 6: 14–17; Ps. 1: 1; 1 Cor. 10: 21; Rev. 18: 4; and many others.

GOOD WORDS.

I must have the Cynosure for 1891. I could not well keep house without it.—ORIN SHOLES.

I take many papers, but I like the Cynosure better than any other.—REV. R. H. HUNTER, Merrick, La.

The Cynosure seems like an old friend. Hope it will always continue.—J. P. SHATTUCK, East Deering, Me.

I am a constant reader of your paper. I consider it the best paper by odds that I have ever seen.—H. S. CURTIS, Kansas.

The Cynosure has been a great help to me and to my church against the lodge system.—(Rev.) LAMPARD ALEXANDER, Macon, Ga.

Many papers come to my table but none so welcome as the Cynosure. With kind regards for your welfare and its increased prosperity.—(Rev.)W. W. MCMILLEN.

I wish you you a happy, prosperous, and very successful year in your laborious, up-hill work. May God advance and speed the cause.—J. L. BURRILL, Oberlin, O.

The paper is first-rate, and all the time improving. I do not know of an objectionable feature, and it is conducted in such a spirit as must command the respect of all honest men.—MYRON ORTON, Pekin, N. Y.

Money matters are very close in Kansas, having lost our last year's corn crop. But we cannot dispense with the weekly visits of one of our best friends, the fearless Christian Cynosure.—J. S. ROCK, Mankato, Kas.

Again, after an absence of fifteen years or more, I desire the weekly visits of the dear old Christian Cynosure. May purity, peace and God's blessing ever be with those who strive with spiritual wickedness in high places. God bless the reform workers.—S. B. MCGREW, Kansas.

LITERATURE.

The Evangelical Repository continues the interesting article "Testimony of the Catacombs" by Dr. R. J. Miller. Dr. Philip Schaff answers the Romanist accusation that Luther committed suicide, very effectually. Rev. C. W. Rishell writes on socialism in Germany, Rev. Dr. Logue of Monmouth gives a critical examination of Rev. 20: 4, and Rev J. B. Galloway takes up the Wisconsin State politics and unravels their perplexity with a sound and patriotic solution.

Rev. R. S. MacArthur, D.D., a prominent Baptist pastor of New York city, preached on last Thanksgiving day a sermon on the three essentials to national perpetuity and power, a free ballot, a free school and a free church, in the Calvary Baptist church of that city. By request the sermon is printed in neat pamphlet form, and is a valuable contribution to the discussion of these topics. It is published by E. Scott, 463 Hudson St., New York, at ten cents per copy.

Current Comment in its latest issue continues the legal biography of Salmon P. Chase and discusses various topics of especial interest to the legal fraternity, but in a popular style, so as to be of general value to the reading public.

Emma C. Thursby, Clara Louisa Kellogg, Madam Albani, Campanini and Maud Powell will each have an article, giving some vocal helps and musical hints to girls and women with musical aspirations, in the February number of The Ladies' Home Journal.

The New Year's number of the American Garden is a beautiful magazine in which beauty and utility, art and philosophy are combined to ennoble the peaceful and attractive business of gardening. A handsome colored plate opens the number, and articles on the "Economic Plants of Japan," "Promising Wild Fruits," "Peaches and Yellows," etc., are well illustrated.

Mr. Fleming H. Revell, the well-known publisher (New York and Chicago), has transferred his entire business to an incorporated company, to be known as the Fleming H. Revell Co., of which Mr. Revell becomes the president. With ample capital and enlarged facilities the business is to be considerably extended, even beyond its remarkably rapid growth during the past several years.

The American Agriculturist opens the year with a new departure. Besides the usual articles on the farm and farming, stock, products, management, invention, etc., it has a symposium on the farmers' movement which has taken such a hold on politics in some States. This movement is discussed from the standpoint of: A Student of Public Affairs, a Republican, a Democrat, a Nationalist, a Financier, the Farmers' Alliance open and the the Farmers' Alliance secret, the Grange and the Farmers' Political League.

The "Holiday Special" number of the Journalist is a great 76-page magazine with fine portraits of R. W. Gilder, the editor, and Roswell Smith, the publisher, of the Century, and a score or two of characteristic stories of real and ideal life, sketches, criticisms, and witticisms which reveal wonderfully the Bohemian life of a journalist. Many of these are adorned with a fine portrait of the writer. Among the number is a sketch by Will Miller of Streator, Ill., of his experience in Berea, Kentucky. He speaks cordially of Mr. Fee and Elder J. F. Browne.

Don't experiment with your health. You may be sure of the quality of your medicine, even if you have to take much of your food upon trust. Ask your druggist for Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and no other. It is the standard blood-purifier, the most effective and economical.

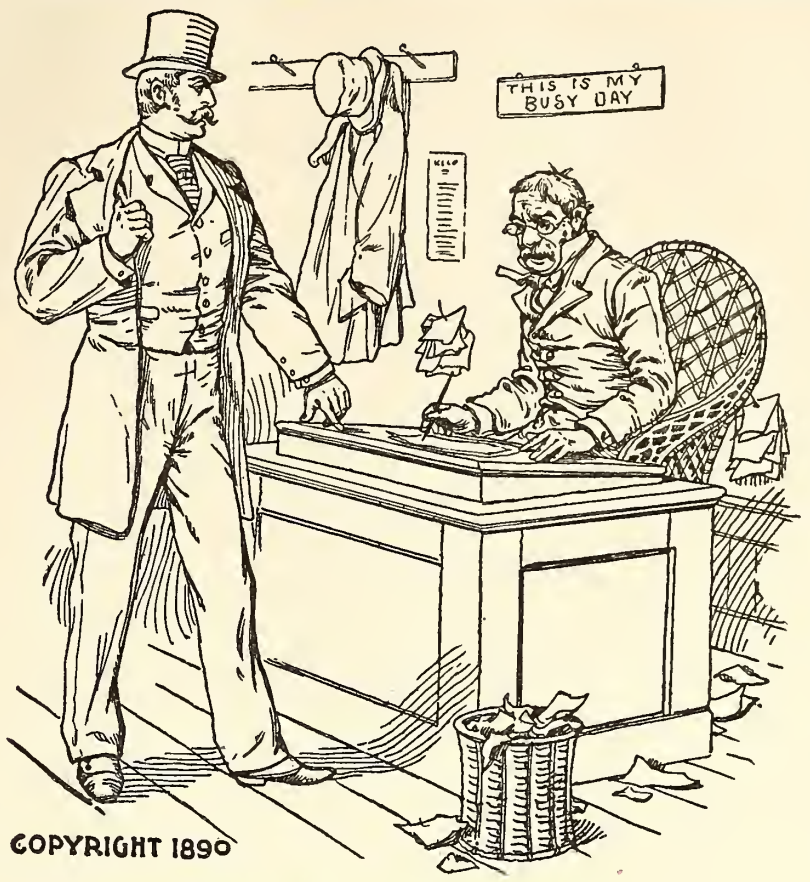
Brown's Bronchial Troches

Contain ingredients which act specially on the organs of the voice. They have an extraordinary efficacy in all affections of the Throat, caused by cold or over exertion of the voice. They are recommended to Singers and Public Speakers, and all who, at any time, have a cough or trouble with the throat or lungs. "I recommend their use to public speakers."—Rev. E. H. Chapin. "Pre-eminently the best."—Rev. Henry Ward Beecher. Sold only in boxes.

An Ohio lady was so frightened by a snake that her glossy black hair turned white as snow. It was soon returned to its original color by Hall's Hair Renewer.

BEECHAM'S PILLS act like magic on a Weak Stomach.

We should esteem it a special favor if our readers would kindly name the Cynosure when answering any advertisement in our columns.



THEY PROVE EVERYTHING.

[SCENE IN EDITOR'S SANCTUM.]

Enter Subscriber—"I suppose you are ready to substantiate any statement your paper makes?"

Editor—"Oh, yes; we have the compositors 'prove' everything that is 'set up.'"

Sub.—Well, then, can you prove that Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy will cure Catarrh in the Head—you advertise it to do so?"

Ed.—Certainly, my dear sir. Tens of thousands have proved that. Why, the proprietors offer $500 for an incurable case of Catarrh in the Head, and they are responsible and able to pay if they fail."

SYMPTOMS OF CATARRH.—Headache, obstruction of nose, discharges falling into throat, sometimes profuse, watery and acrid, at others, thick, tenacious, mucous, purulent, bloody and putrid; eyes weak, ringing in ears, deafness, difficulty of clearing throat, expectoration of offensive matter; breath offensive, smell and taste impaired, and general debility. Only a few of these symptoms likely to be present at once. Thousands of cases result in Consumption and end in the grave.

On the move

—Liver, Stomach, and Bowels, after Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets have done their work. It's a healthy movement, too—a natural one. The organs are not forced into activity one day, to sink back into a worse state the next. They're cleansed and regulated—mildly and quietly, without wrenching or griping. One tiny, sugar-coated Pellet is all that's needed as a gentle laxative; three to four act as a cathartic. They're the smallest, cheapest, the easiest to take. Sick Headache, Bilious Headache, Constipation, Indigestion, Bilious Attacks, and all derangements of the Liver, Stomach and Bowels are promptly relieved and permanently cured.

THE ADDRESS

of Rev. Roland D. Grant, which we regret we could not conveniently print entire in this number, will be read eagerly not only by the members of the late New England Convention, whose frequent applause testified their appreciation, but by thousands of others who will remember the moral bravery of this young Baptist pastor in the convention of 1889 in Tremont Temple, and at his home in Lowell. This address will be published for general circulation, as is that of Rev. F. O. Cunningham which we printed last week. These are a noble pair of brothers of whom any city might be proud. One or two other addresses from the late Boston meeting are promised for us.

Next week we intend giving some report of the interesting anniversary at Wheaton Monday evening, which concern all the Cynosure readers, the eightieth birthday of their editor. As the forms are ready for press Monday afternoon, this report is of necessity somewhat delayed.

"OUTCRIES, FAINTINGS, AND CONVULSIONS."

The above results followed President Edwards' revival preaching in the Congregational church in the sober town of Enfield, Mass. They were not peculiar to that place, or that preacher, but followed the preaching of Whitefield, the Tennents, and others throughout New England, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and elsewhere. Edwards was a Congregationalist, Whitefield a churchman, and the two Tennents, Irish Presbyterians. Nor were these results peculiar to those times or to those men.

Before the Cromwell Civil War the Scottish clergy held meetings throughout Scotland; and, Hume says, "The people expressed their assent by groans and amens." In Wales, a sect arose in 1760 called "Jumpers," whose worship consisted, in part, in jumping three or four inches from the floor. In the year 1836-7, the writer attended seven camp meetings in Pennsylvania. At an M. E. camp meeting at Carlisle, a young woman leaped one or two feet from the ground, while another held her by the arm. In the Juniata woods, at an Evangelical or Albright meeting, held by John P. Leib, presiding elder, all the women in the camp moved round in a circle, tossing their arms, embracing each other, leaping and laughing for joy; while the elder sung an agreeable hymn tune in German. So far as could be learned they were an excellent people. Like scenes were common in the early meetings held by Rev. John Winebrenner, founder of "The Church of God," accompanied with "faintings and fallings."

These bodily demonstrations were common under the preaching of the Wesleys. John Wesley attributed them to God; Whitefield, to the devil. (Tracy, Great Awakening, p. 224.)

Do reason and the Scriptures afford any clear and certain explanation of these diversified bodily exercises and manifestations? and, if so, what?

Ezekiel, Daniel, Saul and his company, while on their way to Damascus, fell with their faces to the earth when God manifested his glory to them: and the disciples at Pentecost were so excited that the people thought them drunken, when the Holy Spirit came on them. In these and other cases, where God was the author of the bodily excitement, loss of strength, etc., corresponding results followed. Prophets were called and sent, and people taught and made better.

On the other hand, Ahab's false prophets were powerfully wrought upon. (1 Kings, chapters 18 and 22.) And people possessed with devils cried out: and the lunatic son, whose father brought him to Christ, was thrown down by the evil spirit which possessed him. How shall we know which source to attribute these bodily manifestations to when they occur?

The answers are many; but the general answer is, "By their fruits."

The fruits of the Spirit are "love, joy, peace, gentleness." The prophets of Baal; it would seem from Elijah's mocking of them, howled aloud; while Elijah's prayer was brief, calm and rational. (1 Kings 18: 36–7.) Paul prayed with the spirit and with the understanding also.

But shouting, though admissible as an expression of joy and triumph, as when "the sons of God shouted for joy" at the creation, and the disciples, when Christ approached Jerusalem from Mt. Olives, would seem to be irrational in an ordinary prayer meeting, or listening to a sermon, though weeping is a natural expression of deep sorrow for sin; as when Peter "wept bitterly" for his denial of Christ. Such weeping is often mentioned in the Scriptures. But "the Spirit of the prophets is subject to the prophets." And one or a few persons in a congregation have no right to pursue a course which, should all do likewise, the object of the meeting would be defeated.

In the Kentucky revivals of 1800, "the jerks" attacked persons out of the meetings, at times, as well as in; and the wicked and profane as well as the pious and penitent. So in the overwhelming awakening in the Irish Presbyterian church, about 1840: stout men were sometimes struck down while plowing in the field, and fell as if shot. Some of them became pious and some not, which would seem to indicate a mixed origin of these manifestations. But it has been taken for granted that they have been wholly evil or good, from God or from Satan.

This is a mistake. The devil has from the opening of human history, endeavored to blend and mix his agency with the works of God; often the two forces will be working in the same person at the same time. Hence the necessity of care and vigilance. And if we watch as well as pray, Satan will flee from us and leave us with Christ.

BAD FOR MR. POWDERLY.

The New York State Board of Arbitration has presented a special report to the Legislature on the great strike on the Vanderbilt road last year. The report closes with some suggestions for legislation. They urge that entrance into a railway service should be by enlistment for a definite period, upon satisfactory examination as to mental and physical qualifications, with oath of fidelity to the people and to the corporation. Resignation or dismissal from such service should be permitted for proper cause, to be stated in writing and filed with some designated authority, and to take effect after the lapse of a reasonable and fixed period; and any combination of two or more persons to embarrass or prevent the operation of a railroad in the service of the people should be regarded as a misdemeanor.

These recommendations will be approved by the general public heartily as sound and conservative. We shall expect a denunciation from Powderly, whose head is plainly turned by the seductions of the lodge. He will oppose any oath of fidelity to public safety. His Knights of Labor oath must not be set aside for anything of that kind. His practice, in short, is in exact accordance with the often quoted saying of the elder Vanderbilt about the rights of the public. The last clause is a direct blow at the K. of L. as managed of late years, and as in the nature of their secret order it will continue to be managed.

The report fairly recognizes the rights of the people for whose benefit, as well as for the owners, it should be managed. Such regulations should be generally adopted in every State. They would check any unjust measures by railroad managers, and would surely hinder the outside lodge bosses from interfering with the men.

WILL CONGRESS DECIDE?

We have noticed the opposition of a few men who claim to represent the 27,000 Seventh-day Advent brethren to the closing of the World's Fair on the Sabbath day, and have endeavored to show their inconsistent position. Their work lately before the Congressional committee had evidently little effect. Representatives of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union followed them, we hope with good results. Miss Ida Hinman, a popular correspondent for the temperance press, a slight lady with a youthful look, sweet face and agreeable manners, is earnestly interviewing different members.

The press correspondents report that nothing is being done, nor will be soon as the case has gone no farther than for Congressmen to patiently submit to hearing arguments based mainly on sentimental grounds.

But this is a misapprehension. The Independent has been interviewing members of both houses, and in its issue for January 8th published statements from one hundred and nineteen Senators and Representatives as to whether the Columbian World's Fair shall be open on the Sabbath day. Of these sixty-eight are decidedly opposed to the opening of any part of the Exposition on that day; twenty-four favor Sunday opening; nineteen think it might be opened under certain restrictions; and six don't care.

This indicates that a majority of our Legislators are decidedly opposed to a movement so un-American, not to say so irreverent toward God. We rejoice to know that a paper of such acknowledged influence as the Independent has taken so firm a stand for Christian principle. It is worthy of remark that a number of the Congressmen who take the un-American position in favor of opening the Fair, plead for it sophistically, saying that it must be so to accommodate the poor and the laborer. But these classes have made no such damand; on the other hand laborers' organizations throughout the country are demanding their rest day, and that demand is entirely inconsistent with another that they shall be entertained on the same day by another class of their fellow-laborers.

St. Louis has a bit of civil war between Mason and Roman; not so notable a combat as that between Pope Leo and Albert Pike in 1884, but still a local sensation and worth record. A society of nuns had purchased a large property in the west end suburbs of the city and planned a large building which would close one of the little-used streets of the vicinity. The Masons have some sort of a monastery they call a "home" near by, and have led in a fight to keep the street open. The city authorities were appealed to by both parties. John H. Vincil, a well-known Freemason, officer of the Grand Lodge, and Protestant clergyman, was matched by Father Phelan, editor of a Romanist paper, who is said to be an implacable enemy of Masonry, and declared that order should not be allowed to destroy Roman Catholic property. The dispatches say the papal forces gained the day. We may say, "let the potsherds strive with the potsherds of the earth;" but that is not the only lesson of this incident. Rather let us be aware of the devices of the devil. God may use these two systems of iniquity to antagonize and counteract one another; but Satan will keep them both doing his baleful work against the church of the living God, and he can afford such little scraps as this if Christian people shall thereby be deceived as to the real nature of either.

Roundabout by way of Rome we learn that Cardinal Gibbons has written a letter to the Pope on the political bearings of the school question. The head of the papal church has received a number of letters respecting the speech of Archbishop Ryan before the National Teachers' Association at St. Paul last summer. The extraordinary character of this address will be remembered. It was in a sense forced upon the program by Jesuit influence. It declared in terms for the free schools, but in the next sentence showed that the speaker did not forget his oath to the Romish see. Joseph Cook, in Our Day, pricked the sophistries and inconsistencies of this address with his Ithuriel spear; still by many the eloquent Irish champion was understood to endorse the public school system in opposition to the position of the Romish hierarchy. Cardinal Gibbons has written on the matter, but what is yet a secret. Whatever Archbishop Ryan may think it is evident, as Bishop Gilmour said, in that remarkable private letter of his to the Cincinnati hierarch, which he was compelled to repudiate, no individual opinion of bishop or ecclesiastic counts for anything. All such individuality is swallowed by the vortex of the papal power and is lost.

—Recently in speaking of the rejection of the Bible-in-schools petition by the Chicago school board, an error in the types made the number enrolled on the petition 1,600. It should have been sixteen thousand.

—Rev. C. H. Kiracofe, former president of Hartsville College, has written to the Independent a concise history of the division in the United Brethren church. He does not probe to find the reasons for the division, but states the facts clearly and carefully.

—The old town of York, Pa., in the vicinity of which our Washington agent is speaking, was incorporated as a city before the Constitution was adopted, and had the honor of being the seat of the Continental Congress from September, 1777, until July of the next year.

—The revival meetings among the churches of Illinois, show that the Spirit is very graciously with the labors of men who are with us against the synagogue of Satan, the secret lodge. We note in a single number of the Advance the names of evangelists Miller, Chandler, Holt and Wyckoff and pastors White and Coquillette, whom we know to be true men for Christ on this question.

—The secret Farmer's Alliance does not work well in Kentucky. In Simpson county two farmers were expelled by their lodge and appealed to the county society where they were present. An effort was made to eject them. They resisted, pistols were freely drawn and a riot looked inevitable. But D. B. Hunt, the sheriff of the county, who is a member of the order, managed to prevent it.

—Further evidence of the distress on the western border settlements of the Mississippi valley comes to us from Lawrence, Kan. J. B. Shirley, of Northfield, Sherman county, in western Kansas, was last week in that city, soliciting aid for the destitute settlers there. He was appointed by a committee of starving farmers who gave him as credentials a signed appeal for aid. The appeal says that their crops have failed for five years past and that now they are actually dying from destitution, starving from want of food and freezing from want of clothing and fuel.

—In addition to the above the Daily News of this city says: "According to the investigations of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, the results of which are vouched for by Miss Frances E. Willard and leading women philanthropists of Nebraska, there are more than one hundred and fifty families in Frontier county alone that are said to be starving and freezing through sheer destitution. Local help has been rendered, but the condition is so grave—new cases of destitution being constantly revealed—that outside assistance is imperative."

—Bro. A. D. Zaraphonithes writes us from New York city of his plans for resuming the Greek mission. He has been some three years returned to this country, part of the time pursuing technical studies and part of the time lecturing and preaching. After attending the missionary conference in Indianapolis last fall, he traveled slowly eastward, speaking as occasion offered. His proposition is to establish a school that will embrace practical instruction in the common arts in some degree. This school will form the nucleus of the revived mission. Friends have given valuable books and tools to aid the enterprise, and Bro. Zaraphonithes hopes to be able in the coming spring to start once more for the isles of Greece, of which the hopeless Byron sung:

"Eternal summer gilds them yet,
And all except their sun, is set."

Bro. Zaraphonithes and his excellent and devoted wife have more faith in the power of grace to light a new fire that shall burn more brightly and perpetually, than could the baleful light on pagan altars.

THE ADVANTAGES OF CONVERSATION.

The most agreeable way of getting information is by conversation. If you talk with a well-informed person, who can express clearly his ideas on any subject in which you are interested, you can ask questions, you can have explanations, you can go over the subject until you thoroughly understand it, and searching out in this way, in the mind of another, a thing which you earnestly desire to know, you are more likely to remember it, and to profit by it. This is why a competent teacher is better than any text-book. Besides, talk inspires both the speaker and the listener—the one becomes more eager to know, and the other more eager to communicate.—Charles Dudley Warner in St. Nicholas.

NEW ENGLAND LETTER.

"More aldermen for Boston."—Gov. Russel's inaugural.—The Leffingwell collection.—The cigarette still sold to minors.—Why Americans are fond of the secret military orders.—The Moody meetings.

Now is a favorable time for repeating the story that when some emigrants from the Emerald Isle were going on board the steamer at Cork, somebody called out from the shore, "More aldermen for Boston," which proved to be the sober truth; for all the most important offices at the City Hall are now, under the new Democratic government, being filled with Irishmen.

I have often wondered why the political wisdom which is so cheap on paper, is such a costly thing when it comes to practical application. We should have admirable governments if they were half as good as the State papers put forth by their respective heads. Gov. Russel's inaugural address contains some excellent recommendations. The taking off of the poll-tax is of course a sop to the foreign voters to whom he owes his office; nor can he find anything better to say on liquor legislation than a few words in favor of a return to the open bar. But Wm. Penn's considerate request in his letter to "Dear Samuel and Hannah Carpenter"—which was among the treasures lately sold in the Leffingwell collection for $100; "I send you a new governor; pray be as easy as truth will let you towards him," is good advice to put in practice. And as Gov. Russel is a very young man, and quite inexperienced in State affairs, it would not be very strange if his administration afforded plenty of chance for doing so. Queerly enough, he came very near being disqualified from serving by an antiquated property clause in the State Constitution, of whose existence very few people knew, that the governor "must be seized of his own right of a free-hold within the commonwealth of the value of one thousand pounds sterling." It was discovered, however, in time to prevent a contested election, and made right by his wife deeding over to him her own property; otherwise we might be to-day in as bad a plight as our sister State of Connecticut, where the gubernatorial snarl quite equals that in Nebraska. Of course the Prohibitionists, as usual, are blamed for this state of affairs; for their votes, the Republicans affirm, made all the trouble. It is convenient in republics as well as in families to have a scape-goat on which to lay the blame when things go wrong.

Speaking of the Leffingwell collection, it was one of rare interest from the number of autographs of colonial worthies which it contained. A letter of Roger Williams brought $310; Roger Williams, who was exiled to the wilds of the Rhode Island Plantations; and who probably little thought when heartsick and weary with the hardships of his terrible wilderness journey,—"he reached a fertile spot at the head of a winding bay, which he named Providence,"—that his autograph would ever be valued at so high a price. Twenty-seven dollars was paid for a liquor-license, written by Sir William Phipps of Massachusetts, on the application of one Mrs. Hannah Wainwright. One feels a mild curiosity to know something more about this lady of the olden times, who was, no doubt, a good church woman, and believed herself to be serving her day and generation in a humble but most useful and indispensable capacity. What would she have thought of the Mikes and O'Sullivans and Biddies, who have usurped her place as vendors of the ardent? But as such an occupation was not in those days any more derogatory to one's character than keeping a bake shop, she was doubtless, as I said, a good woman; and were she living in the present era, she would very likely be an honored W. C. T. U. president, making it hot for offenders against the law, and marshalling her little company of dove-eyed women wherever the battle was raging hottest, "for God and home and native land." Peace be to her ashes, wherever they rest!

"For sending his bright, far-seeing soul
Three centuries in the van,"

I wonder if our W. C. T. U. workers are aware how largely the law against selling cigarettes to minors is either violated or evaded? I do not remember reading or hearing of one single instance of arrest for this offence; and yet every day boys under the prescribed age may be seen smoking the filthy cigarette. Where do they get them? The same lynx-eyed vigilance which is used in detecting offenders against the liquor laws, if turned on vendors of the weed might check, if it did not entirely stop, this illicit sale.

It is reported that Sir Titus Salt of Saltaire, Eng., contemplates locating a branch factory at Fall River. His philanthropic care for his workmen which makes Saltaire a wonder to visitors, will render the project more welcome than most of the foreign syndicates that are seeking for a foothold on our soil. Fall River is the scene of an experiment in profit-sharing which, though not on so extended a scale as in some other places, is a very interesting one to political economists, and enough in itself to demonstrate that this idea, conceived as have been most of them, in the brain of a Frenchman, Turgot, is the only way to solve the labor problem. This is at the Bourne Mills where the average weekly earnings have increased six per cent under the new system. National prohibition, and the universal introduction of profit-sharing, would make America the paradise of labor, and do away with the fancied necessity of joining a secret benefit order, expecting in defiance of mathematics and common sense, to get five or seven hundred dollars by paying in two hundred.

An exchange commenting on the public fondness for those carpet-knights whose parades monopolize at times so large a share both of the public highway and of the public prints, observes, "Our social life is of a neutral tint, and for a bit of color, for some warm tints and glitter, Americans flock to the standard of those secret orders that march in procession in the glory that is gilt and the grandeur that is brass bands." If so, it is a proof that we as a people have not yet put away childish things, and we certainly cannot flatter ourselves that we have attained to the full stature of republican manhood till we do.

Moody's noon meetings are thronged. Without any diminution of his wonderful power, there is a certain winning tenderness in his exhortations and aptness in his illustrations that mark growth since his first visit to Boston twelve or thirteen years ago. Certainly there is no diminution of his popularity. The same immense crowds flock to hear him. If he would bear in Boston the same brave and true witness against the lodge that he bore in Chicago, the effect would be tremendous. We often pray for meetings held by some successful evangelist, but forget to pray for the evangelist himself. This is a mistake. Let us pray for Mr. Moody.

THE CALL

FOR A CHRISTIAN CONFERENCE ON THE SECRET LODGE SYSTEM.

We, the undersigned, believe that there is no good which can be accomplished, in times of peace and in a free land, by secret societies which cannot be secured more easily and perfectly by open organization.

We believe that much of the time and money so greatly needed by the cause of our Lord Jesus Christ is wasted in the large and unprofitable expenses of secret orders.

We believe that union of Christians with men of the world in oath-bound organizations is forbidden by the Word of God and always injurious to the spiritual life of those Christians who enter such societies.

We believe that some oath-bound societies are clearly hostile to the peace and welfare of our country.

We therefore invite all those who sympathize with us in the views above expressed to meet in "A Conference of Christians," to be held under the auspices of "The National Christian Association," in the city of Chicago, to consult and pray respecting the best method of saving men, the churches, and our land from the injurious influence of such societies.

[Give name, postoffice, county and State, plainly, with public or official position and denomination.]

☞The friends of the N. C. A. everywhere are urgently requested to secure the names of pastors or other influential persons to the above call and send to the Corresponding Secretary, W. I. Phillips, at this office.☜

THE HOME.

FOR THE PRAYER MEETING.

BY REV. R. S. MORTON.

Our Father, hear us now,
While we before thee bow
And humbly pray;
O, pardon all our sin,
And make us pure within,
That we may truly sing
Thy praise this day.

We ask in Jesus' name,
And do thy promise claim,
That thou wilt be
Where thine own children meet,
To worship at thy feet,
And hold communion sweet
Dear Lord, with thee.

Not to our will, but thine
We cheerfully resign
With sweet accord;
As people of thy choice,
Make us to hear thy voice,
Then shall our hearts rejoice
In thee, our Lord.

Thou Lamb of God, Divine,
We would be wholly thine,
Without alloy;
Help us to follow thee,
From error, keep us free,
Till we thy face shall see
With perfect joy.

May it be ours to bring
Trophies to Christ, our king,
Each day and night,
Until the war shall end,
And we to heaven ascend,
With Christ our Lord to blend
In glory bright.

JUDSON AND THE JEWS.

It is related that Dr. Adoniram Judson, while laboring as a missionary to the heathen, felt a strong desire to do something for the children of Abraham according to the flesh; but it seemed that his desire was not to be gratified. During a long course of years, even to the closing fortnight of his life, in his last sickness, Dr. Judson lamented that all his efforts in behalf of the Jews had been a failure. He was departing from the world saddened with that thought. Then, at last, came a gleam of light, which thrilled his heart with grateful joy. Mrs. Judson was sitting by his side, while he was in a state of languor, with a copy of the Watchman and Reflector in her hand. She read to her husband one of Dr. Hague's letters from Constantinople. The letters contained some items of information which filled him with wonder.

At a meeting of missionaries at Constantinople, Mr. Shauffler stated that a little book had been published in German, giving an account of Dr. Judson's life and labors; that it had fallen into the hands of some Jews, and had been the means of their conversion; that a Jew had translated it for a community of Jews on the borders of the Euxine, and that a message had arrived in Constantinople, asking that a teacher might be sent to show them the way of life.

When Dr. Judson heard this his eyes were filled with tears, a look of almost unearthly solemnity came over him, and clinging fast to his wife's hand, as if to assure himself of being really in the world, he said:

"Love, that brightens me, I do not know what to make of it."

"To make of what?" said Mrs. Judson.

"Why, what you have just been reading. I never was so interested in any object. I never prayed so sincerely and earnestly for anything but it came—at some time, no matter how distant the day—somehow, in some shape, probably the last I should have devised, it came!"

What a testimony was that! It lingered on the lips of the dying Judson; it was embalmed with grateful tears, and is worthy of being translated as a legacy to the coming generation. The desire of the righteous shall be granted. Pray and wait. The answer of all true prayer will come.

In Judson's case, the news of the answer came before he died, but it was answered long before. So we may know the results of prayers and toils even while we sojourn here; but if not, what sweet surprises shall await us in the great beyond!—Sel.

THE INDIAN MESSIAH.

For many years we have regarded the Indian's belief in a Supreme Being as very vague and undefined. He has, however, appeared to recognize a "Great Spirit" and a "happy hunting ground," the home of the departed braves—a country where beautiful prairies and forests are abounding in game, watered by cool streams, forming an ideal Indian heaven. This belief seems a part of his nature, just as his love for his free and savage life, which the advance of civilization is forcing him to renounce. The buffalo is a thing of the past, and even the elk, the antelope and the deer have nearly disappeared, and he finds he must live on the bounty of the white man or starve. For years he has been confined to military reservations, and has chafed under the restraint thus put upon him. Little wonder he looks for a change, and longs for his once free life, and gladly grasps the new belief in the red Saviour.

It seems impossible to trace the exact origin of this Indian faith. An Indian from the upper Columbia river, named Smohalla, preached the doctrine of an Indian Messiah some ten years ago. This Indian thought that there would be an upheaval of nature, which would destroy the white man, and restore to the Indian his ancestral domains, and that the dust of countless dead Indians would spring to life, and would surround, without one word of warning, each pale-face, who will be swept from the face of the earth. None of the deadly weapons of civilization or skill in their use will avail, and the blood of eighty millions of whites will atone for the wrongs done to the red race. Within a few months the belief in this new religion has spread from tribe to tribe with marvelous rapidity. Runners have traversed thousands of miles to reach distant tribes and bear the glad tidings. The Arapahoes, the Shoshones, the great Sioux tribes, the Cheyennes, both north and south, and many other tribes, have been taught the faith; and the "ghost dance," the religious ceremony of the creed, is being danced by all these tribes.—Harper's Weekly.

AGREEABLE PEOPLE.

We all know people whom it is pleasant to meet; people from whom we are sure to receive a smile, a kind word, a cordial hand-shake, or some other token of good-will. When one is depressed in spirits, or, as the common saying is, "blue," the meeting with a genial, merry-hearted friend has a magical effect; indeed, I have known the encounter with such a person to turn the whole current of one's life.

Agreeability is dependent upon many conditions; it may be inherent, it may be the result of judicious early education, or of pleasant surroundings, or of a happy combination of circumstances, but all will agree that it is a desirable quality, and whether inherent or not, should be carefully cultivated. There are people whose mighty efforts to be agreeable are so apparent and distressing as to defeat their object. Such people should bear in mind that agreeability must proceed from the heart, and in a grown person is the result of continued practice. One feels so comfortable after having said or done something to brighten the pathway of another, that it pays one's self to be agreeable.

Some people allow all their little annoyances to affect their conduct toward others, whether their unfortunate friends are to blame or not. I was once visiting a charming family. All its members, with one exception, were interesting and agreeable. The only son of the house was in business in the town in which they lived. If his affairs had moved prosperously through the day he came home in a pleasant, entertaining mood, but if anything had annoyed him he was outrageously disagreeable and rude, no matter how many guests were present. The discomfiture of his mother and sisters may well be imagined; indeed, as the dinner hour approached they were in a state of nervousness, which disappeared immediately if the "tyrant" came in with a bright face; otherwise it continued until he had relieved us of his disagreeable presence. If the fact had not been so positively demonstrated to me, I would not have believed it possible that one disagreeable person could have counteracted the influence of four agreeable people. I believe that the young man's disposition was the result of continued indulgence by his mother and sisters. He had tyrannized over them for years, and had become a powerful despot in the household.

"Tired and cross" is a common expression, and most of us know what it means. A friend of mine, a most agreeable woman, says that when she finds herself getting "tired and cross," she takes a nap, a bath, a walk, or a drive, goes to see some one whose walk in life is less pleasant than her own—does anything different from the work that has tired and worried her. In this way she preserves health and temper, governs well her children, and keeps her entire household in a state of peace and happiness.

Many parents do not realize that in training their children a regard for others should be instilled into their minds. A spoiled, selfish child may be very dear to its parents, but after the parents have passed away and the child has become a disagreeable man or woman, what disinterested parties will tolerate the selfish, tyrannical ways of such a person?

There are people who have hosts of friends—people whose presence is always sought by both old and young—people who are supposed to have been "lucky," when in fact they are simply unselfish and agreeable.—Ladies' Home Journal.

DOUBTS.

I have somewhere read that the eminent Swiss writer, Dr. Merle D'Aubigne, was grievously troubled with doubts during his student days. He went to his old experienced teacher for help. The veteran refused to discuss them, and said: "Were I to rid you of these doubts, others would come. There is a shorter way of destroying them. Let Jesus Christ be really to you the Son of God, an almighty Saviour; and his light will dispel the darkness, and his Spirit will lead you into all truth." The old man was right. He saw that the young man was falling into a sinful habit that would grow worse by tampering with it. To attempt to poke away clouds with your own hand is sheer folly; your true course is to plant yourself in the clear, broad sunshine of Jesus Christ, and stay there. "Sun of my soul, thou Saviour dear," is a line that ought to be said or sung every hour of the Christian's life.—Cuyler.

LIGHT IN THE DARK MINE.

"This your first day in the mine?" asked young David Gilchrist.

"It is the first, the only time I was ever in the mine!" replied the man who had come with David in the car that traveled from the mouth to the shaft down to the bottom, and then went up again into daylight. The man gave his name as Wallace Reid. He was disposed to be friendly, and David on his side kept open doors and welcomed everybody to his confidence who wanted a friend.

"Where do you work?" the man asked David.

"Oh, Mr. Reid, I am in the first room, first north entry, east side. I know the north entry pretty well."

"That is a pretty dark place, somebody said."

"Yes, but I have got kind of used to it. When I got through my schooling I began to work in the mine, and I know all the parts of it pretty well. I know some parts better than I know the roads round my home."

"A pretty—pretty shut-in kind of a place, if I do say it. I don't know as I shall get used to it."

"Well, I try to look at it this way: I am sure of earning so much money every week, and when I get up where the fresh air is at night and get home, I can say to myself that my wages will give me more comforts and help those at home have more comforts; and you know, Mr. Reid, we have all got to do something in this world. If it isn't one kind of work, it is another, and I notice that those folks seem to be the happiest and do the most good in the long run, who try to make the best of things and keep cheerful and contented."

"You—you are quite a philosopher. I am glad I met you the first day I was to work in the mine."

The two parted, and went off to work in different streets in this underground world. At night they met again, and had a ride together in the car up to the mouth of the mine.

"How did you get along?" asked David when in the car.

"Oh," said his companion, "quite well, I hope. A poky place. I shall be glad to get up to daylight again."

He was soon there, but went in the morning back to night and lamplight again.

A second evening came, and David, at the bottom of the shaft ere mounting in the car, looked about him to see if his new friend might be in the group of miners waiting for transportation to the top of the shaft.

"Don't see him!" he muttered. "He may have gone up."

"Hop in!" somebody cried. "Hop quick, if you are going to!"

David jumped into the car, and upward it promptly went. At the top of the shaft, though, was no Wallace Reid. Neither did inquiries bring any Wallace Reid. He was not at the mouth of the mine, at his home, or in any of the stores.

"I am afraid there is trouble," thought David. "I must go down into the mine."

The old car swinging over the black pit was put in service again. Rattling away, down it went swiftly, and David stepped out. He knew just where to find his own place of work, but what about the man's?

"Let me see!" he reflected, wandering along, guided by his lamp. Suddenly he stopped. He wondered if his friend could have possibly strayed into any part of the "old mine," so-called, a quarter now disused.

"Not impossible!" he reasoned. "Might have got confused and strayed off—and now, let me try it! I'll stop and shout into the old mine."

"Hel—loa—a—a!" he called, halting before a dark passage way.

Did he catch a reply?

"Hel—loa—a—a!" he shouted again.

"Here—re—re!" did some one say?

"Yes, that is it!" excitedly exclaimed David, and pushed ahead. In a few minutes out of the gloom, out of the night, came Wallace Reid.

"Oh, if I ain't glad to see you, Davie! I heard your voice and I saw your light. That light was just beautiful. The voice I could not so well tell about, just where it came from, but when I saw the light, a-spreadin' up over the roof and a-sparklin' on the sides, and—and—then a-burstin' on me, growin' bigger and bigger, I felt happy, I tell ye!"

They quickly gained the bottom of the shaft, were hurried skyward in the old black car, and went to their homes rejoicing.

Something of interest happened within a few months.

There were many seeking the Saviour, and the church, ordinarily so thinly attended, saw large numbers thronging within its walls. David heard the earnest words of the minister one night, when work in the mine was over, and he made his confession to Wallace Reid as the two walked away together at the close of the meeting. The man long ago had found his Saviour, and still was humbly following him. The boy had the desire to find and follow.

"The whole subject looks very mysterious," David told his companion. "I want to be a Christian, but I don't seem to have what light I want. It makes me think of being in the mine."

"Davie!" said his friend, interrupting him, "do you remember when you came and hunted for me in the mine?"

"Oh, yes!"

"Well, I remember when I first saw your light, it was just a spark. No, it did not seem as sharp as that, but just a bit, a bit of kind of glow. I said, 'I will follow that.' Now, what if I had given it all up, and sat down, and refused to follow that bit? 'No,' I said, 'I will go towards that little light which I see. I will head that way.' So I kept on; the light grew, grew, till I saw you, Davie!"

He here laid his hand on the boy's shoulder affectionately, "See, here!"

"What is it?" asked the boy looking up.

"You follow the light you have got. You know you are a sinner. You know Jesus Christ is an almighty Saviour. Now, you head that way, and give yourself up to him, and keep at it. The Bible says we must seek God with all our heart, and if you seek, you will find. God calls them blessed 'that seek him with the whole heart.' That is it, Davie! Follow the light you have got, and see if it won't grow! I did in the mine, and after awhile I saw the one coming so nobly after me. Davie, you will see him who is a-huntin' for ye, the light in his hand."

One day, David came to the miner and said, "The light has grown! I have found him!"—Rev. E. A. Rand in the United Presbyterian.

AN OLD SONG WITH A NEW TUNE.

There's a saying old and rusty,
But good as any new—
"Never trouble trouble,
Till trouble troubles you!"

Trouble's like a thistle,
That hangs along the way;
It cannot fail to grab you
Some other bitter day.

But why not walk around it?
That's just what you can do;
Why should you trouble trouble,
Before it troubles you?

Trouble is a bumble bee,
It keeps you always vexed;
It surely means to sting you
The next time or the next.

But bless you, bee thinks only
Of breakfasts dipped in dew;
Keep right ahead—this trouble
Will never trouble you.

O merry little travelers,
Along life's sunny ways,
When bumble bees and thistles
Affright you at your plays,

Remember the old promise
That your sorrows shall be few,
If you never trouble trouble,
Till trouble troubles you.

TEMPERANCE.

ROMAN CATHOLIC SALOON-KEEPERS.

The Nun of Kenmare wrote powerfully a while since in Our Day showing that the Romanist church had power to stop the liquor business of this country. The vast majority of the keepers and patrons of the saloons are under the control of the priests, and would obey their word. The following article is a confession of the truth of Miss Cusack's proposition. It is the first confession of the kind we have ever seen in the Catholic Review, from which (Jan. 11) we copy:

OUR SHAME.

Some months ago, under the above heading, we commented on the fact that in a committee of forty-four members appointed by the liquor-dealers to look after the saloon interests throughout the State, twenty-four were Catholics. We characterized this fact very properly as our shame. The last Council of Baltimore put a stigma on the liquor business for Catholics which cannot be removed. Argue as you may, the selling of liquor in the indiscriminate fashion countenanced by government in our day, is a disgrace both to government and to the sellers. The public opinion of the time is so much against it that the very children are ashamed of the father who keeps a grog-shop. His character counts for nothing in such a business. Though he were a model of holiness his business will be forever a stain upon his good name.

Our enemies love to charge the Catholic body with their devotion to the liquor trade; our friends, when they see such figures as those above can say nothing in our defence. They can say still less when they see the aldermen of New York for the coming year. Here are the liquor sellers of the Board: [Here follow the names of a dozen men.]

They are Catholic almost to a man! What a showing for the great Catholic body of the greatest city on the continent! Where they have the opportunity of displaying their good qualities to the world they seem to take delight in showing their worst. Perhaps eight Catholics on the city's legislative board, all liquor-sellers! We know what use these men will make of their position so far as their own business is concerned. They will do all in their power for the spread and continuance of liquor-selling. What is the Council of Baltimore to them? Perhaps they are not so very much to blame, since their brethren tolerate them, elect them, support them. It would be a good rule for Catholics throughout the land, and a faithful carrying out of the spirit of the Baltimore Council, never to cast a vote for a liquor-selling candidate, whether he was directly engaged in the business or carried it on through others. But in practical measures of this kind the total abstinence people are singularly helpless. They prefer to chase that will-o'-the-wisp called Prohibition.

COMMENTS BY E. E. FLAGG.

1. Elijah's weakness.—vs. 1-3. Everything seemed ripe for a genuine national reformation. Both king and people had acknowledged the conclusiveness of the test, and only a wicked woman thoroughly given over to idolatry stood in the way of Israel's renewing its broken allegiance to Jehovah. Jezebel was the Catherine De Medicis of that land and age. She too had been the instigator of a St. Bartholomew, the details of which have not been preserved. We learn from 1 Kings 18: 13, that she had ordered a general massacre of the prophets in which nothing saved Elijah from being included except his instant flight at the command of the Lord. But he seems on the present occasion to have been stricken with such sudden fear that he did not wait for any command. "He arose and went for his life," until he came to Beersheba in the boundaries of Judah where he left his servant, who, Jewish tradition says, was the son of the widow of Zarephath, while he himself pushed on into the wilderness of Sinai at the southern border. It seems hardly possible that a woman so crafty as Jezebel would have defeated her own murderous designs, by sending him warning if she had had the power to carry them out. Like the priests and scribes in the case of our Saviour, she probably feared that the people would rise in insurrection if she laid violent hands on the prophet now that he was on the high tide of popularity, and threatened because she did not dare to do anything more. But Elijah evidently did not stop to reason, or to think what the moral effect would be of his deserting his post at such a critical juncture. This was the only recorded weakness of his life, and it stands out in such bold relief because it is the only one. Surely there have been very few even of the most devoted servants of God who have succumbed to their unworthy fears but once.

2. God's pity for Elijah's weakness.—vs. 4-8. He who made our frame can sympathize with the weakness of the flesh. He saw that Elijah was suffering from nervous depression, and must be sustained and comforted by physical means before he would be in a fit state of mind to bear argument. "The submerged truth" of humanity must be warmed and fed before the Gospel can be presented with any hope of acceptance, and all our Christian workers now labor on this line. It was very inconsistent of Elijah to pray for death, when he had fled from duty to escape it; but very few if any who pray for death realize what they are praying for, or that it is "more life and fuller that they want." It was a foolish, weak prayer for this great man to pray, but God answered it as lovingly, as a mother the petulant cry of her sick child. The Lord knows when our life journey is going to be too great for us, and sends extraordinary provision for extraordinary needs.

3. The true way to convert men.—vs. 9-14. Elijah probably sought Mt. Horeb for two reasons. In its inaccessible fastnesses he would be safe from Jezebel, and in those sacred solitudes where the law had been first proclaimed, and Moses had talked face to face with God, he might, if anywhere, expect heavenly communications. For by this time he had doubtless become conscious in some degree of his error, and felt that he needed some further revelation of God's will. First, by the sharp question, "What doest thou here, Elijah?" God shows him that he is out of the way of duty. But self had not yet been put entirely out of the way. Had no others in Israel been jealous for God's honor? There is egotism and humiliated pride in his answer. So he is given an object lesson. The three most awful and destructive of natural forces, the tornado, the earthquake and the lightning, are made to do their dreadful work before his eyes. But God was not in them. Nature may manifest God's power and wisdom, but she cannot reveal himself. Only in the still small voice of Gospel revelation can we find God. Reformers often make Elijah's mistake. They think evil can be put down by denunciation, yet all the thunders of Sinai will never reform a drunkard or make lodge men repent of their wicked oaths. Only the still small voice that speaks from Calvary can do this. It makes Elijah wrap his face in his mantle like a humbled child, and although he replies in the same words when the question is asked again, we are sure that the spirit of his reply is no longer petulant and complaining, but, "What wilt thou have me to do?"

4. Elijah recommissioned.—vs. 15–18. Elijah is first given some work to do. Nothing drives away the spirit of selfish complaint like honest work for God. Then he is encouraged with the promise of the downfall of idolatry in Israel. So all false worships will surely have an end, for Christ is to reign supreme. And instead of foolishly and vainly thinking that we stand alone in the conflict, by our example and words we are to anoint others who will stand in our places and complete our work when we lay it down.

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

—During October and November Moline, Ill., was blessed with a wonderful work of grace, in which the churches were revived, and about 500 souls converted. The awakening there stirred up a desire among Christians to obtain a like blessing for Rock Island. Union evangelistic services were begun and have been in progress six weeks. Although the revival here has not been so great nor so marked as it was in Moline, yet many have been converted.

—Beginning with Sabbath, Jan. 4, special evangelistic services are to be held in the Allegheny, Pa., churches for six weeks by Major D. W. Whittle. There is earnest supplication and effort that these meetings may result in deepening and quickening the life of professors and in a great ingathering from the world.

—There are already 1,500 communicants in the mission churches established along the Congo by English and American missionaries. Considering how short a time it is since this whole region was unexplored, this is a remarkable record.

—The Swedish-Congo Mission during the last ten years, has opened five stations with eighteen workers. The principal station is Mukimbungo, where large numbers of natives come and listen to the Gospel. A good many conversions have taken place, but the work is hard.

—Rev. J. C. McFeeters is pastor of the Second Reformed Presbyterian church of Philadelphia. At the last communion 274 persons were at the Lord's table, 25 of whom had been received since the previous communion.

—After all that has been said of the demoralization of church fairs during the past ten years, we read with amazement of one held by the Reformed Presbyterian church of Kansas City.

—Special meetings begin this week Tuesday by the College Church at Wheaton. Pres. C. A. Blanchard will have charge during the week.

—Rev. B. Fay Mills will open meetings in Evanston on the 22d inst., and not at an earlier date, as we were informed. He has been conducting a series of meetings of unusual power at Elgin, Ill. At one time all the stores of the city were closed for the purpose of having all the clerks and business men at the revival service. There were 1,500 men alone. Extensive preparations are being made by the committees at Evanston, and a great meeting is expected. The students of Northwestern University are warmly engaging in the work.

—In 1889 reliable statistical tables gave the number of Seventh-day Adventists at 25,000. Last year the Independent's report, which is generally considered reliable, gave their number as 27,700. Now, in connection with the reports of a case in Tennessee where a man was indicted for plowing on the Sabbath, they claim 60,000 members. It has been before noted that this sect has published grossly exaggerated reports of its numerical strength in order to effect public sentiment.

—It is somewhat difficult to state, even approximately, the strength of the religious denominations throughout the world. In general, however, it is stated by Malhall that there are about 192,000,000 Catholics, 70,000,000 of the Greek church, 5,000,000 Jews, and 10,000,000 Mohammedans in Europe and the United States, besides 124,000,000 Protestants of various denominations. Scheur states that there are 201,000,000 Roman Catholics, 106,000,000 Protestants, and 81,000,000 Christians belonging to the various Eastern churches, Greek, Armenian, etc. He also places the number of Buddhists at 340,000,000, Mohammedans at 201,000,000, Brahamananism 175,000,000, followers of Confucious 80,000,000, Sinto religion 14,000,000 and Judiaism 7,000,000. At the best, however, these are but estimates.

—At Bartlett, Ill., the Congregational church, Rev. Alexander Thomson, pastor, has been holding meetings two weeks. A number of hopeful conversions were experienced. K. A. Burnell, the evangelist, assisted Bro. Thomson.

—The noon meetings begun in Lincoln Hall, No. 72 East Adams street, Chicago, some three months ago by representatives of the various evangelical churches, continue to have a large attendance and considerable interest. The meetings are led by prominent Christian workers of this and other cities. Monday H. W. Frost, who in this country has charge of the great China inland mission work, led.

—A number of Christian people of Chicago have secured Central Music Hall for Sabbath afternoon services for working people, beginning last Sabbath. The meetings will for the present be under the direction of the Rev. F. J. Brobst. These meetings are designed to answer the charge made by socialists and anarchists that no religious services are held in Chicago especially for the workingmen—and the attendance of such is especially desired.

—The collections in some of the wealthy churches of New York are simply enormous. Recently in the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian church, after a sermon by the pastor, Dr. John Hall, the collection for home missions amounted to $21,000.

—Rev. J. N. Lenker, of Leadville, Col., has gathered the statistics of all branches of the Lutheran church throughout the world. He finds in Europe a total of 22,980 ministers, 29,644 churches and 43,133,696 baptized members; he finds in North America 4,710 ministers, 7,964 churches, and 6,511,500 baptized members. Including the statistics of Oceanica, South America, Africa and Asia, with those already given he makes the grand total in the world of 28,406 ministers, 38,381 churches and 50,061,280 baptized members.

—While services were being held in the Baptist church of Peru, Ind., a week ago, a man dressed in ragged clothing entered. He sat in the rear of the church and seemed greatly agitated. When the minister asked for remarks from any one wishing to be saved the man arose and inquired in broken accents if there was any hope for a wicked sinner, one who had broken every commandment. He was told there was, and then he said he had planned a burglary here, but before he undertook it he had been drawn by something he did not understand into the church, He says he has a wife and two children, in Iowa. His wife prayed for him, he said, before he went away.

—Dr. George F. Pentecost writes to the Advance of his safe arrival in India, the cordial welcome given him and the hopeful opening of his mission to the English-speaking natives of wealth and high cast, whom he expects to reach with the Gospel, and who are seldom reached by the ordinary labors of the missionaries. He says: "I have been preaching daily for more than a week to a large number of English-speaking native Bengali gentlemen, at which services there have been marked tokens of the presence of the Holy Spirit. A daily morning prayer meeting held at 7.45 A. M., is attended by a company that taxes the capacity of the room. Pressing invitations are pouring in from all parts of India, to come over and help. The European residents in Calcutta are also interested, and a cordial letter signed by many of the leading citizens, asking for a series of meetings for themselves, has been received, and the opera-house has been taken for the meeting which will begin next week. The outlook for India is most hopeful. The older missionaries all over the land are full of expectation. Important conversions are occurring at all the stations and there is a general feeling of expectancy on the part of all Christians who are in the work. It seems to me that now is the time to lengthen our cords and strengthen the stakes. The mission field is sadly undermanned. I venture to ask that you will earnestly beseech all Christians in America to make fervent prayer for an outpouring of the Spirit over all India, and especially in connection with our own evangelistic mission. What is needed now (and unless it is given the work of God must drag on wearily) is a mighty outpouring of the Spirit." We doubt not this gifted and fearless evangelist will find other evidence among the pagan customs of India to use in condemning the secret lodge worships of our own country.

For the last three months of 1890 the Christian Cynosure has given especial attention to the college secret societies for the benefit of the hundreds of colleges to whose reading-rooms it is sent. This interesting discussion, in which have appeared the opinions of some of the very ablest American educators, will be incidentally continued next year.

But with the first of the year will begin to be published the results of a wider investigation than has yet been made into the identity of

MODERN AND ANCIENT SECRETISM.

The ancient secret societies were the MYSTERIES practiced in Chaldea, Egypt, Phœnicia, Greece, Rome, etc. These were the pagan religious systems of the ancient world.

WERE THEY RELATED TO THE LODGES OF TO-DAY?

This question we shall endeavor to answer. We believe that new evidence of the most intimate relation has been lately found, and that the presentation of this evidence to be made in the "Cynosure" will amaze Christendom the moment it is realized.

THE WHITE CROSS LEAGUE and Social Purity movement is come none too soon, as will appear in the course of this investigation.

In connection with this most important topic the Cynosure will give particular attention to the

publishing them in full so far as they can be obtained, and showing their absolute incompatibility to good citizenship as well as to Christianity.

The peculiar features which have made the Cynosure so valuable in the past will be continued. Current events and the interference of the lodge in them will have especial attention. Able correspondence will be continued from New England, Washington, the Southern Mississippi district, and the Pacific Coast. The portraits and sketches of notable persons who have been identified with Christian reforms will be continued, and will be, as in the past, a very popular feature of the paper. The Sabbath-school lesson notes by Miss E. E. Flagg will be continued. For all who wish to wisely improve every opportunity against the lodge they are the best. The Home and Temperance and other departments will continue to be filled with excellent reading for the fireside.

BE SURE

that the Cynosure comes to your home during 1891.

You can nowhere else read fully the writings and sayings of such men as Joseph Cook, D. L. Moody, George F. Pentecost, D.D., E. P. Goodwin, D.D., Pres. J. Blanchard, Pres. H. H. George, and a host of men as good if not as great, on the subject of secret societies.

Nowhere else can you read of the progress of this reform week by week; and as the secret societies are now beginning openly to nominate and elect men to Congress and State offices, as they number hundreds of orders and millions of members, the issues they raise are of importance to every American.

Since the lodges are so aggressive every citizen should understand their nature and history and something of the men who invented and who manage them. You need the Cynosure, therefore, to keep abreast of the times as a well-informed American.

You ought also to help on this movement against the secret lodges. How better begin than by subscribing for the Cynosure? And $1.50 is but little to give in aid of so good a cause.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

WASHINGTON.

The Senate passed the silver free coinage bill Wednesday by a vote of 42 to 30. The elections bill was then taken up on motion of Senator Hoar. Vice-President Morton gave the casting vote which put the bill on issue. The Republicans in the Senate have determined, it is reported, to pass this bill. Friends of free coinage in the National House of Representatives claim te have a good working majority and that the Senate bill will pass.

CHICAGO.

New buildings erected in Chicago during the year 1890, 11,608; having a frontage of 266,284 feet; total cost, $47,322,100. The largest previous year was 1889, when 4,931 buildings were erected, with a frontage of 119,573 feet, and at a cost of $25,065,500. The year of 1890 exceeded the previous year with 6,667 houses. The excess of frontage was 106,711 feet. The cost of the buildings exceeded by $22,566,600 those of 1889.

Articles of incorporation of the Hydropneumatic Power Company at Chicago, capital stock $12,000,000, to manufacture machines, were filed with the Secretary of State of Illinois Friday.

John W. Root, of the firm of Burnham & Root, consulting architect for the World's Fair Directory, died suddenly last week, after a very brief illness. Mr. Root stood among the first in his profession in the country. His firm had in charge the construction of the Temperance Temple, and his loss is severely felt at this juncture of the Fair.

COUNTRY.

The Farmers' Alliance in the Kansas Legislature decided to unseat seven Republican members of the lower house, and seat the seven contesting Farmers' Alliance candidates. When this fact became known the Republicans of the Senate met, and it is said, decided to adjourn the Senate on the very day that the Republicans of the lower house are unseated. The adjournment will be sine die and will prevent the holding of a joint session for the purpose of electing a Senator. The choice of a Senator to succeed Mr. Ingalls will then devolve upon Governor Humphreys who, it is said, will name Mr. Ingalls to succeed himself.

A State convention of Negroes has been called to meet on the 27th inst., at Topeka, Kan. The object is to recommend that the educational law be so amended as to admit Negroes to all of the schools.

General Miles telegraphed the Washington authorities Thursday that he considers the war at an end, and that a "more complete submission to the military power has never been made by any Indians." The Indians will give up their arms at the west side of the agency. The children are to be returned to the schools and

The superiority of Hood's Sarsaparilla is due to the tremendous amount of brain work and constant care used in its preparation. Try one bottle and you will be convinced of its superiority.

Be Sure

If you have made up your mind to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla do not be induced to take any other. A Boston lady, whose example is worthy imitation, tells her experience below:

"In one store where I went to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla the clerk tried to induce me buy their own instead of Hood's; he told me their's would last longer; that I might take it on ten days' trial; that if I did not like it I need not pay anything, etc. But he could not prevail on me to change. I told him I had taken Hood's Sarsaparilla, knew what it was, was satisfied with it, and did not want any other. When I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla I was feeling real miserable with dyspepsia, and so weak that at times I could hardly

HOME AND HEALTH.

HINTS TO HOUSEKEEPERS.

Scrubbing brushes should be kept with the bristles down and they will last twice as long. Common sense will tell yon if you stand them the other way, the water will run down and soak into the back, loosening the bristles, whether they be glued or wired.

A good rule is to use pastry flour whenever baking-powder is used and bread flour with yeast.

A sickroom screen should be made very light, so it can be moved easily. A clothes-horse will answer for the frame. Buy a couple of tubes of darkest green, thin with linseed oil and a little turpentine, and with a flat bristle brush paint the light wood frame. Dark green Silesia, tacked on one side firmly to the wooden frame, will shut out light. On the other side you can pin up one picture at a time. If there is color in that one picture, so much the better. The nearer you make your sickroom screen like the screen an artist uses in his studio, the better for the recovery of the sick child. The use of this screen is to rest and protect the eyes. The use of the picture is to amuse the sick child.

Never put potatoes on the table in a covered dish. They will reabsorb their own moisture and become sodden.

For stomach worms in a child, mix one teaspoonful of powdered sage in two tablespoonsful of molasses, and give a teaspoonful every morning.

Lamp chimneys may be cleaned by holding them over the steam from a teakettle, and then rubbing them with soft cloth. Polish with newspaper.

For an aching tooth, saturate a piece of cotton with ammonia, and lay it on the tooth.

To take the rust out of steel, rub the steel with sweet oil; in a day or two rub with finely powdered unslaked lime until the rust all disappears, then oil again, roll in woollen and put in a dry place, especially if it be table cutlery

To bleach muslin take one half pound of chloride of lime to twenty yards of muslin. Boil the lime till thoroughly dissolved in one gallon of water. Strain and pour into cold water sufficient to cover your goods; let soak ten minutes. —Ex.

FOURTEEN WAYS TO HELP A DOCTOR.

1. When it is necessary to send for medical service do so, if possible, before the physician goes out for his morning round of visits. Do not delay until he has come in tired, having possibly been in the very street in which you live. 2. If possible, send a note stating which member of the family is ill, and briefly detailing the symptoms, and giving the doctor an idea with regard to the case. 3. If unable, for any cause, to send a note, at least try to send some intelligent messenger who can write out the call in full on the doctor's slate. 4. In case of poisoning be sure to send word, if known, what poison has been taken, as the doctor may then be able to bring with him an antidote in time to save life. 5. When the doctor comes let some one person who is familiar with the case give him the details with regard to it; too many informants create confusion. 6. Do not discuss the case before the patient. 7. Have a pencil and slip of paper, and write down at once the instructions received. 8. Try to be exactly accurate in statements. 9. Do not have children or dogs in the sickroom during the doctor's visit, as the children and dogs will divert his attention. 10. Carry out faithfully and exactly the orders given by the medical man. 11. "Trust me not at all or all in all," should be the doctor's motto. 12. When consulting a medical man in his own house, do so during his office hours. Do not go just the time he takes his meals. 13. Finish the professional interview with him in his consulting-room, and do not continue detailing symptoms in the hall when being shown out. 14. Bear in mind the comfort of the doctor, and when the conditions suggest do not forget to give him a cup of cold water, or of hot coffee, or a plate of soup, as the case may be. You will give him renewed inspiration for his work.—Good Housekeeping,

The Voice

Is easily injured—the slightest irritation of the throat or larynx at once affecting its tone, flexibility, or power. All efforts to sing or speak in public, under such conditions, become not only painful but dangerous, and should be strictly avoided until every symptom is removed. To effect a speedy cure no other medicine is equal to

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

The best of anodynes, this preparation rapidly soothes irritation, strengthens the delicate organs of speech, and restores the voice to its tone and power. No singer or public speaker should be without it. Lydia Thompson, the famous actress, certifies: "Ayer's Cherry Pectoral has been of very great service to me. It improves and strengthens the voice, and is always effective for the cure of colds and coughs."

"Upon several occasions I have suffered from colds, causing hoarseness and entire loss of voice. In my profession of an auctioneer any affection of the voice or throat is a serious matter, but at each attack, I have been relieved by a few doses of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. This remedy, with ordinary care, has worked such a that I have suffered very little inconvenience. I have also used it in my family, with excellent results, in coughs, colds, &c."—Wm. H. Quartly, Minlaton, Australia.

"In the spring of 1853, at Portsmouth, Va., I was prostrated by a severe attack of typhoid pneumonia. My physicians exhausted their remedies, and for one year I was not able to even articulate a word. By the advice of Dr. Shaw I tried Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and to my surprise and great joy, in less than one month I could converse easily, in a natural tone of voice. I continued to improve and have become since a well man. I have often recommended the Pectoral, and have never known it to fail."—George R. Lawrence, Valparaiso, Ind.

IN BRIEF.

There are still 11,226,584 acres of unoccupied, untilled land in Nebraska.

The Trinity church estate in New York is worth $150,000,000, and is rapidly increasing in value.

A pecan grower of St. James Parish, La., sold some choice nuts this season at forty-five dollars a barrel.

The returns from overland shipments of fruits from California this season are set at a round $10,000,000.

A fruit grower at Brocton, N. Y., has picked nearly 13,000 pounds of grapes from half an acre of land this year.

This season's crop of wine in California will be 15,000,000 gallons, a decline of 2,000,000 from last year's vintage.

In China less than 30,000 officials suffice to rule, in a most perfect manner, one-third of the world's inhabitants.

The total value of beef, hay and dairy products exported from the United States during the eleven months ending November 30, 1890, was $118,194,430; the figures in 1889 were $105,279,304.

The Dutch have an original way of collecting the taxes. If, after due notice has been given, the money is not sent, the authorities place one or two hungry militiamen in the house, to be lodged and maintained at the expense of the defaulter until the amount of the tax is paid.

In the matter of railways Japan appears to be going ahead tolerably fast. Considerably over 1,000 miles are already in operation, while an equal amount is under construction or surveyed, and will be open within a year or two from now. The projected railways exceed 700 miles in length, with a capital exceeding £6,000,000.

A strange maniac reached the Detention Hospital in this city lately. His name is Christiansen Hgloyoromend, a Dane, who has been driven crazy by watching the revolution of wheels. The man was employed as a laborer in the cable power-house at Rockwell street. The first that was noticed of his peculiar mania was his desire to stand and watch the big wheels for hours at a time. Yesterday afternoon he had to be restrained from throwing himself into the machinery. He stood watching the wheels and became fascinated. Slowly he began to approach them, as though drawn by invisible force. Fortunately he was observed just as he was about to hurl himself to instant death. When taken to the police station he kept his arms moving in a rotary motion like a wheel. When allowed his liberty he walked round and round in a circle until he fell prostrate from dizziness. He even moved his eyes in a circle, and altogether his case is most remarkable.

Several of the students at the Haskell Institute, the Indian school at Lawrence, Kas., have received letters from their relatives in the Indian territory regarding the Mesiah craze. One of the letters is from a chief to his daughter. It is dated Anadarko, and tells of the ghost dances. The chief tells his daughter not to ridicule the coming of the Indians' Christ, for she knows nothing of the wondrous manifestations the Indians have recived from him regarding his appearance on earth again. He says that maybe sometime her Indian instincts will assert themselves and then she will come back to her people, join in the dance and make herself ready to receive the Messiah. The old chief says the belief is confined mostly to the good Indians and he regrets the bad ones will not mend their ways and accept the Christ. Another of the letters is from an uncle to his nephew. This letter also tells of the wonderful revelations that have been made at the ghost dances and of the marvelous interviews that the inspired Indians have had with the Messiah. Some of the inspired Indians, says the writer, have had interviews during their trances with dead relatives who have told them to prepare for the coming of Christ and not treat him as did the white people of old. The writer cautions his nephew not to reject the Messiah until he has attended a ghost dance and has had an opportunity to judge himself of the evidences of the coming of Christ.

It was Ben Johnson, we believe, who, when asked Mallock's question, "Is life worth living?" replied, "That depends on the liver." And Ben Johnson doubtless saw the double point to the pun. The liver active—quick—life rosy, everything bright, mountains of trouble melt like mountains of snow. The liver sluggish—life dull, everything blue, molehills of worry rise into mountains of anxiety, and as a result—sick headache, dizziness, constipation. Two ways are open. Cure permanently or relieve temporarily. Take a pill and suffer, or take a pill and get well. Shock the system by an overdose, or coax it by a mild, pleasant way.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are the mild means. They work effectively, without pain, and leave the system strong. One, little, sugar-coated pellet is enough, although a whole vial costs but 25 cents.

Mild, gentle, soothing and healing is Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. Only 50 cents; by druggists.

See it grow! You won't have to look back far. 1877 was the year when Pearline started in to take charge of washing and cleaning. It was a new idea; people didn't know about it; when they did find out, they were afraid of it.

But look at it now. Every year has been a big advance on the year before — and 1890 a bigger advance than ever. It's the biggest year, against the biggest opposition—smooth-tongued peddlers to fight against, cheap prices and poor quality, prize packages, imitations of all sorts. But Pearline started ahead and has kept there—and now it's farther ahead than ever.

A poor thing can't grow like this. A dangerous thing can't. Find out for yourself why Pearline grows. Ask about it of some one who is using it.

Beware of peddlers and imitations. 303 JAMES PYLE, New York.

A storm along the New England coast Monday caused great destruction. The tide was the highest for many years. Vessels were driven ashore, wharves were swept bare and harbors strewn with wreckages. Much damage was caused by ice gorges and floods along the Housatonic River, and also in Pennsylvania.

Brakes failed to hold a Maine Central freight train while descending a grade near Crawford's, Vt., Monday, and while going at frightful speed twenty cars were hurled down an embankment. Two brakemen were killed,

Mrs. Kate Peterson of Keokuk, Iowa, has brought suit for $5,000 against Charles Nagel, John Burns and William Worley for selling liquor to her husband, causing him to fall and break his collarbone. It is said that similar suits will be brought against forty others. This is the beginning of a crusade against the saloons, as the local authorities have made no attempt to close the places of thirty-two keepers recently indicted.

Further details of the destruction wrought by the severe earthquake in Algeria reported on the 15th inst. have been received. The towns of Gouraya and Villebourg were practically destroyed by the shocks, and forty persons were killed by the falling of walls. The amount of damage done to property is estimaeed at £20,000.

A dispatch from Buenos Ayres says that the revolt in Chili is spreading rapidly. The insurgents are very energetic and are said to be managing their campaign in a very skillful manner. They appear to be possessed of large resources and the issue of the rising, according to the dispatch, is very doubtful.

Information received from Seraievo the capital of Bosnia, says that an avalanche crashed down from the mountains, near Livo, burying a number of houses. The immense weight of snow crushed the houses upon which it fell and the occupants were buried in the ruins of their dwellings. Attempts were immediately made to recover the bodies of the dead and to extricate the living. So far the rescuers have succeeded in recovering the bodies of seventeen persons who were crushed to death. In addition to the dead they have removed a number of persons who are severely injured.

It is announced on the authority of a Canadian cabinet minister that Mr. Blaine has made overtures to the Dominion Government with a view to the establishment of closer trade relations between Canada and the United States. While no information is forthcoming as to the nature of the propositions it is learned that the dominion authorities have asked the imperial government to take action in the matter.

The British government officials, in order to relieve as much as possible the distress in portions of Ireland have opened works at Misenhead. Thousands of men and women of all ages are already employed there, and steps are being taken to give work to many more. It is said in this connection that unless the government takes prompt action at Achill Island the fearful scenes of 1846 and 1847 are likely to be reproduced.

Of Roxbury, Mass., says

My Medical Discovery seldom takes hold of two people alike! Why? Because no two people have the same weak spot. Beginning at the stomach it goes searching through the body for any hidden humor. Nine times out of ten, inward humor makes the weak spot. Perhaps its only a little sediment left on a nerve or in a gland; the Medical Discovery slides it right along, and you find quick happiness from the first bottle. Perhaps its a big sediment or open sore, well settled somewhere, ready to fight. The Medical Discovery begins the fight, and you think it pretty hard, but soon you thank me for making something that has reached your weak spot. Write me if you want to know more about it.

MY LIFE-WORK.

PAPER READ BY PRES. J. BLANCHARD AT THE CELEBRATION OF HIS 80TH BIRTHDAY.

January 19, 1891.

MY DEAR CHILDREN, GRAND-CHILDREN AND ASSEMBLED FRIENDS:—By your motion, not my own, I am the occasion of this gathering. And as I am but one person in the countless hosts who are crossing, have crossed, and are yet to cross this narrow isthmus of Time, into Eternity, I desire to speak to-night what relates to all these human hosts. And, as my former pupils in Knox and Wheaton Colleges have for years urged me to put into print facts concerning my life and thoughts which I have uttered to them, my present remarks may prove to be an introduction to the volume which they have asked.

I was born in a large red farm-house, on the Green Mountains, in the town of Rockingham, Vermont, Jan. 19, 1811.

There were then no steamboats, railroads, telegraphs or telephones to make mankind next-door neighbors; few libraries to teach them; few factories, in this country, to clothe them; and no lucifer matches to light their fires. I remember seeing woods chopped down and burned to clear fields which have since waved with harvests, but which are now frowning back to forests, already more than half depeopled. Homes and schoolhouses have disappeared, and the population largely gone with them and foreigners invited to occupy their vacant farms.

September 11, 1814, I was three years and seven months old. I had climbed upon a wall, where my brother was feeding pumpkins to pigs, when he spoke of hearing the guns at Plattsburgh battle. I was horrified to learn that men were shooting each other, and from that hour have hated what destroys human life or welfare. In my native town every child learned to read; the few "town's poor" were boarded in families; funerals were large, and the neighborhoods were all mourners. And, in a long life and much travel, I have seen no spot where there was more happiness and less misery than in the place where I was born. I went to "district" school at four, began the study of English grammar at seven, Latin at twelve, and taught school at fourteen and a half years of age.

Yet there were draw-backs. The best Christian in the town distilled cider-brandy, and harvesting was deemed impossible without New England rum. Liquor was free at huskings, trainings, and dances. Card playing and small gambling were common. But, though our honored parents were non-professors, they taught us industry, honesty, and that the Bible is the Word of God; and revivals of religion followed after awhile. I now think that the Holy Spirit influenced me from my early childhood. I hated liquor, though I loved its taste; for I saw that it ruined men. While a lad I broke, with a hammer, a jug of rum in our cellar, and my brothers banished liquor from haying and harvest; and my first writing, beyond a school composition, was a temperance speech, printed at Bellows Falls. I entered college at 17; was graduated at 21, and taught at Plattsburgh Academy two years. I had then learned that there were Americans enough to people our largest State who could neither write or read a vote, or a lettered shop-sign, a finger-board at a road-crossing, or a sentence in the Word of God! I called and held a common school convention, and lectured against liquor in several counties. I hated what destroyed men; and popular ignorance and liquor were destroying them, and I spoke and acted against both while I was preceptor in Plattsburgh.

My religious profession had begun some years before, while I was fitting for college under U. C. Burnap, Chester, Vt. Though accounted a moral youth, I knew I had sinned against God, reason and right; and I knew, too, that my heart was "deceitful above all things, and desperately wicked." I went to Christ, and was joyously "reconciled to God." But before I found Christ, I had quit balls and dancing, because I saw they yielded an over-balance of unhappiness; and cards, because they were associated with all moral evils. But from the time I believed and trusted in Christ, which was sixty-four years ago, by the grace of God I have never swerved from my Christian profession, though conscious of weakness and imperfection.

At Plattsburgh a Unitarian asked me: "Mr. Blanchard, what state would you bring mankind into? What is a perfect state of society?" The question thrilled me, and I have since thought and written more on that one theme than any other. I could see that from my childhood, I had been seeking a perfect state of society, by resisting social evils,—"seeking the kingdom of God," without seeking its King. But I could now see what John Baptist and the Saviour meant when they preached "the kingdom of God." They meant a perfect state of society. Supreme love to God and equal love to man, into which Christ condensed the whole Bible, would as certainly stop sin and misery, as two halves make a whole or two and two make four. He who truly loves God will not offend him; and he who loves his neighbor will not injure him. This accords with Paul's definition of the kingdom of heaven: "Righteousness, peace and joy;" and also with the angels' proclamation: "Glory to God, peace on earth and good will to men;" and I now had a test of all moral questions, viz.: "A perfect state of society," and I have been applying it ever since.

At Plattsburgh in 1834 I advocated the "immediate abolition" of slavery, because I saw it was defying God, and destroying our country. And though I was said to treat opponents with urbanity, it cost me years of proscription and persecution by my brethren. Mr. Garrison advocated non-resistance, non-voting, no-Sabbath, and no-churches, and his followers were "come-outers." I resisted those errors, and stood fast by the communion-table. In 1834–5, after two years at Andover, I lectured amid mobs in Pennsylvania, where I made the acquaintance of Gov. Ritner, Thaddeus Stephens, and a young girl of seventeen, who became afterwards the dear companion of my life, and who, last year, January 11, 1890, ascended the mountains of New Mexico, as Moses the mountains of Moab, and did not come down.

In 1837 I went to Cincinnati; preached to two colored churches, lectured to the Ladies' Anti-slavery Society in the house of Mrs. Dr. Colby, sister of S. P. Chase, afterwards Governor, Senator, Secretary of the Treasury, and Chief Justice of the United States; graduated under Dr. Lyman Beecher; married, and was ordained pastor of the Sixth Presbyterian church September, 1838. Next year, 1839, at Oberlin Commencement, I addressed some 3,000 people in their great tabernacle on "A Perfect State of Society." The speech was printed and sold; a second edition issued; and I was appointed professer by the Oberlin board, but did not accept.

While in Cincinnati, I saw the city three days and nights in the power of a mob, and three printing presses broken with sledge hammers, and thrown into the Ohio river. Yet I received 500 members into my church, and left it free from debt. In 1842, I preached and printed a "Sermon on Slave-holding," by appointment of the Synod of Cincinnati; and next year (1843) I was the American vice-president of the World's Anti-slavery Convention in London, England. On my return I lectured in the Cincinnati College on the wrongs of Ireland. I held public debates with R. R. Gurley and Dr. N. L. Rice, which last was put in a volume. I rode 800 miles at my own expense to start the paper now called the Herald and Presbyter, in which I printed lectures on Sabbath reform and public morals; and by appointment of Presbytery, I preached as an evangelist and received members to twenty churches in southern Indiana and Ohio. In 1845 a woman who, with her husband, had paid dues promptly to a Masonic lodge twenty-five years, asked aid to bury her husband, and was refused. I published the fact, and a mob of fifty to one hundred men, from the saloons of Covington, Ky., attempted, but failed, to put me in the Ohio river. I preached in my pulpit on the next Sabbath from the words of Christ (Jno. 18:20): "In secret have I said nothing;" and showed that no one could follow Christ into a secret society. The discourse was endorsed by Dr. Hodge, in the Princeton, N. J., Review; and Dr. Rob. Morris in one of his many books attributes the revival of the anti-secret discussion to the author of that discourse.

Next year (1846) I came to be president of Knox College, Ill. We left in Cincinnati many friends and no known enemies, and I said to my fearless and beloved wife, "Knox College is founded, and Galesburg settled, by Anti-masons, from the vicinity of Morgan's murder. The lodge is dead, and I never intend to speak again in public on the subject." But, though I was silent, the lodge gave its profound attention to the College. I soon learned from Rev. Levi Spencer, of Peoria, that a lodge in that city was discussing us in their midnight meetings. Two sons of my oldest professor joined, one the Odd-fellows, the other the Masons; and Geo. C. Lamphere, a Knight Templar Mason, opened a drug store in Galesburg in which my students first drank brandy. The professor himself, though professing temperance and anti-secrecy, had liquor on his table at dinner; his son put into our city charter the power to license saloons; and his father attempted to start a theological seminary in Galesburg, with slaveholders in its board!

I had found the College $5,000 in debt and running behind five dollars a day. I credited the treasury more than ($6,000) six thousand dollars, given me for my personal support by J. P. Williston, Esq. I received from Judge Chas. Phelps, a family connection, eighteen quarter-sections of land, which sold for $30,000; and, by rigid economy, saved the College lands, procured by Prof. Gale, the founder of Galesburg, from being sacrificed. I wrote the College diploma; procured a College seal; a library; graduated thirteen classes, and left Knox College free from debt and worth $400,000. I came to Wheaton in 1860, "still seeking "a perfect state of society," and a college "for Christ and his kingdom." So I have been here thirty-one years.

While in Galesburg, I wrote and published a little sheet called the Christian Era. At Wheaton I doubled its size and continued it till failing health drove me to the Rocky Mountains. Returning I started the Christian Cynosure, of which I have been an editor twenty-three years.

When I resigned the presidency of Knox College, the board employed me, at an advanced salary, to teach another year and graduate the next class, which I did. During that year the friends of six colleges asked me to become their president; Iowa College unanimously appointed me theirs; and important churches in Massachusetts, Michigan and Illinois invited me to be their pastor. But, against the remonstrance of my beloved friend and counselor, J. P. Williston, whose funds saved Knox and Wheaton Colleges from dissolution, I came to Wheaton. Here I have acted as president twenty-two years, till 1882, when I resigned the College to my successor, in whose hands it is eloquently speaking for itself.

Why did I come to Wheaton? And why make opposition to secret societies so prominent? I answer: 1. Because Wheaton was near Chicago, the Gate City between the Atlantic and Pacific, between Western Europe and Eastern Asia. 2. Because the Wesleyans had given up their Institute, on condition that their testimony against the lodge should be maintained. 3. But the chief reason was, I believed the Lord had need of Wheaton College, to aid in preparing the way for his coming. The state of our nation at the time will explain this. In 1832, Freemasonry had fallen in the North, gone South and organized the war, which opened three months after I came to Wheaton. The ten lodges in the District of Columbia all had gone "secesh," and the chief Freemason in the United States was raising Indians to scalp Union troops. Northern copperheads and Southern rebels were in sworn fealty to the lodge, and to each other; but by a benign Providence, our government was in the hands of Lincoln, Seward, Chase, and Stanton with Sumner, Wilson and Hale in the Senate; Lovejoy and Stevens, in the House, Grant in the army, and Charles Francis Adams in England; all Anti-masons; yet, though these were mighty men, hatred of the Negro, whom the white lodge excluded, and obedience to its secret oaths, nearly swamped our government. And orthodox churches, which had disfellowshiped Channing and the Unitarians, were "brothering" with the non-professing deists of the lodge! I believed that the Lord had need of a college near Chicago, to open the eyes of the American people; to enthrone Christ, whom the lodge dethrones; and to teach the nations of the earth, who worship devils, that there is no reaching the Infinite God without a Mediator. Congregationalists, who are Anti-masons by their history and their creed, had no college near Chicago. The Lutherans who peopled Scandinavia, by the Reformation "had given the death-blow to all the Masonic lodges in every portion of Europe." (See Rebold's Gen. His., page 54.) And there are 300,000 of these Northmen now in this country, and they are blending with the Congregationalists in their Chicago Theological Seminary. And if the Swedes locate a Collegiate School in Wheaton, as is contemplated, as the merging of the Northern steel with Anglo-Saxon iron has nearly taught all Christendom to speak English, the blending of these two great classes of the freest minds on earth, may, with God's help, aid to emancipate American Christianity from the darkness, deism, and despotism of the lodge.

Mr. Moody says, "Christ is what men want." God to pardon, and man to die for sinners; and yet eternally the same, "yesterday, to-day, and forever." And Prophecy declares him the desire of all nations. He is our only unchanging Priest, to negotiate our salvation with God. The "strongholds of Satan to-day are the false priestism of the Papacy, Mormonism, Paganism, Spirit worship; the blindness in part of the Jews, and the lodges of Christless worship the world over. The Gospel of Christ will "pull down" all these "strongholds," when once it is divorced from the blendings of Satan, for then, and not till then, it will be "mighty through God!"

A WOMAN'S ANSWER TO MASONRY.

AN OPEN LETTER TO REV. MR. SCHULTZ OF THE FLETCHER M. E. CHURCH, WASHINGTON, D. C.

DEAR SIR:—As I have been much interested in your sermon on Freemasonry, published in a recent number of the Washington Post, may I be generously granted the privilege, which even the apostle Paul allowed the inferior sex, of asking questions?

The first feeling which naturally stirs a woman's mind on reading your glowing description of the order, must be a new sense of the cruel bondage in which the feminine part of creation are still held. Why, oh! why can't women be Masons? You say that "when its teachings are once instilled into the mind and heart they make us better citizens, husbands, fathers and brothers." Now if Masonry can do all this for men, it seems to me to be your plain duty both as Christians and patriots to open its doors to us. I know many women who make it their daily prayer that they may be better wives, mothers and sisters; and many more, alas! who are not filling these sacred relationships as they should, and need the great light of Masonry turned on their path to show them how.

"For 6,000 years," you say, "Masonry has stood like a giant oak, waving its branches in defiance of the storm." I forbear to ask with Job, "Wast thou made before the hills?" and meekly take the statement on trust, for that is what we women are used to doing. In fact, we have to get the largest part of our knowledge that way, and I have a theory that this is what has so developed the faith side of our nature, and made a woman skeptic one of the rarest things in the universe. But did Adam form a lodge all by himself? I want to ask. Or was that Salic law of Masonry which excludes women passed after the fall? If so, surely that law should be rescinded at once, for did not Christ come to restore woman to all her pristine rights and privileges? And I humbly beg in behalf of my sex that you, my dear sir, or some one else in the fraternity who is held in honor for their work's sake, will present a memorial to this effect at the next grand convocation of your venerable order.

I am not surprised to learn that Masonry has its enemies, for the best institutions have always received the hardest knocks; but that some of its bitterest foes should be found "among the cannibals of the Fiji Islands," as you assert, did strike me as a new and singular, as well as very melancholy instance of man's native depravity. But perhaps, if the chance to become Masons had been offered to the Fiji women, they would have embraced it with joy. Who knows?

I perfectly agree with you that "it is a difficult matter to arrive at the precise time, place or circumstances in which Masonry or its true prototypes began." For instance, your statement that "after the death of their grand master, Moses," all knowledge of the craft died down among the Jews, until King Solomon, in connection with "the widow's son," revived it at the building of the first temple, seems directly opposed to Rebold, whose History of Freemasonry is recognized as a standard authority in Masonic lodges. He dates it (p. 259) from the year 715 B. C. in the reign of Numa Pompilius, when the first College of Builders was established at Rome. He also states (p. 20 of preface) that "the authors who pretend—and their number is very great—that Masonry originated at the construction of Solomon's Temple, are led into this error by the numerous allusions to that construction which have place among the lectures of our lodges of to-day." When doctors differ, what shall ordinary mortals do? Still I am forced to believe that this subject could not have occupied very much of the attention of the great Law-giver, or would he not before his death have provided for a succession of "grand masters"—a la Father Bonnani—that would have kept the line unbroken? His culpable neglect to do so I am inclined to think was one of "the mistakes of Moses," not mentioned by Mr. Ingersoll.

And then to read such a list of all the good and great men who have been Masons, and not a single good and great woman among them! My dear sir, this won't do. What is sauce for the gander ought to be sauce for the goose. This is reversing the old saying, I know, but then it is a poor proverb as well as a poor rule that won't work both ways. This is woman's century, and the next is going to be the same, only more so. It is high time that Masonry came out of its medieval shell and recognized the new situation. Give the women a chance. If they refuse to enter an institution of such "exalted benevolence" and "pure morality," when its doors are thrown open to them; and persist in thinking that the religion of Jesus Christ is good enough for them, and contains all the benevolence and morality they can well put in practice, it will be their own fault.

It is true that to think of a woman kneeling with a cable tow around her neck, a hoodwink over her eyes, and neither barefoot nor shod; and swearing on a square and compass placed over an open Bible to "have her throat cut from ear to ear, her tongue torn out by the roots, and her body buried in the rough sands of the sea, at low water-mark, where the tide ebbs and flows twice in twenty-four hours," if she divulges any of the secrets of a lodge brother, who may be a libertine, or a saloon-keeper, is decidedly shocking to my sense of propriety. But I think it would shock me quite as much to see Paul in such a plight; and infinitely more would it shock me to see the Lord Jesus—I was about to say, initiated into a Masonic lodge, but I forbear, for the very thought is too blasphemous.

And yet have you not solemnly pledged yourself to follow in the steps of Him of whose blessed Gospel you have been made a minister? And is it not a most important part of your ministry to be "an ensample to the flock?" Did not Paul say, "Be ye followers of me as I also am of Christ?" Yet how can you be said to follow Christ when you submit to ceremonies so degrading, and take oaths so savage and brutal that the most irreverent mind could not think of them in connection with his sacred person without a shock? And how can your flock follow you when you join yourself to an institution that half of them, at least, are debarred by their sex from ever entering?

These questions I respectfully submit with the hope that you will search prayerfully for their answer by the light of reason and Scripture. May the Spirit of Him "who of God is made unto us wisdom and righteousness and sanctification and redemption," guide you into a knowledge of the truth.

Very sincerely yours,

ELIZABETH E. FLAGG.

Mr. Spurgeon on Christian union: "On all hands we hear cries of unity in this, and unity in that; but to our mind the main need of this age is not compromise, but conscientiousness.

'First pure, then peaceable.' It is ease to cry 'a confederacy,' but that union which is not based upon the truth of God is rather a conspiracy than a communion. Charity by all means; but honesty also. Love, of course, but love to God as well as love to men, and love of truth as well as love of union."

THE CHURCHES OF MY COUNTRY.

BY VICTORIA ALEXANDRA BUCK.

How beautiful they stand,—
Those grand old churches of my native country,
Moss-grown and hoar, o'er all our pleasant land!
O'er mountain, vale and hill, in tender beauty,
Gracious and fair, by heavenly breezes fanned,
How beautiful they stand!

And oh! we love them still!
Far o'er the land we hear the anthem swelling;
From thousand choirs the joyous notes arise,
Love to Jehovah their glad lips are telling,
Where'er those spires point upward to the skies,—
Oh! but we love them still.

How beautiful they stand!
In queenly grace o'er all my native country,
Those grand old churches of my native land!
Oh! may they speak, through all the coming ages,
Owned, and upheld, by our Redeemer's hand,
How beautiful they stand!

Our Father loves them well.
When Sabbath morning dawns the pilgrims gather,
While perfumed airs through open windows steal;
Old age and childhood breathe the prayer "Our Father,"
As low beside the altar-rail they kneel,—
How beautiful they stand!

How beautiful they stand!
When he shall come, and from the grave-dust dimly
Shall lift to future bliss each sleeping band,
My sweetest dream of earth shall be the memory
Of those dear churches of my native land,—
How beautiful they stand!

ADDRESS OF REV. ROLAND D. GRANT,

PASTOR OF THE HARVARD STREET BAPTIST CHURCH, BOSTON, BEFORE THE LATE NEW ENGLAND CONVENTION.

[Concluded.]

I also wish to say that much of the secret society business of to-day, looks like child's play. When we know what it means, and that strong men submit themselves to the blasphemous initiation rite,—why, I should be positively ashamed to tell boys of fifteen that I wanted them to go through the system of initiation that is gone through with. It looks so silly to see a concourse of men wearing their darling little white aprons in a civilized and enlightened community. It is marvelous and majestic. As to the antiquity of the order, I suppose that the aprons that Adam and Eve wore, gives us to understand that at least Masonry ante-dates the garden of Eden. (Laughter.) But I am glad there was a woman in it then. (Loud laughter.)

As to its great kindness, let me read an oath: "I hereby promise and swear that I will keep the secrets of a brother Master Essene, that is committed to me in charge as such, murder and treason only excepted, and these left to my own discretion;" and later on, murder and treason are not mentioned at all. An organization that shall have its men upon bended knee, with oaths, swear that their throats may be cut from ear to ear, and buried where the tide ebbs and flows twice every twenty-four hours, and their body burned, and their ashes scattered to the four winds of heaven,—with such an oath as this to pledge themselves to hide and guard the secrets of any man, murder and treason only excepted, that is not a Christian's place,—(Applause.) is not a man's place, and is not a citizen's place. (Applause.) It is in defiance of the law; and I am glad the Clan-na-Gael did just what it did, that it may scare the people into recognizing that unless the system were broken, there could be no justice in the land.

Let us see some more items as to its breadth and moral highness. "I hereby promise and swear that I will not wrong, cheat or defraud a brother of this rank, knowing them to be such." If this is the morality of the lodge, it is not the morality of the church. They promise that they will not wrong a brother Mason; we, that we will wrong nobody. But they say, We don't always keep it. No, neither do they. But add the final clause, "knowing them to be such." If one should wrong a brother Mason, he would not find it hard to say that he did not know he was such.

And now for the ladies. Are they, or not, worthy to be Masons? "I hereby promise and swear that I will not be present at the making a Mason of a woman, an old man in his dotage, an atheist, a libertine, a madman or a fool, knowing them to be such." Notice the company. Women, old men in their dotage, atheists, libertines, madmen and fools, "knowing them to be such." (Laughter.) They are all goats in the lodge; it is no fit place for gentlemen when a woman can't go, but they are afraid the women will "tell."

Here is another: "I hereby promise and swear that I will not violate the chastity,"—let this go to the press,—"of a brother Master Essene's wife, mother, sister, or daughter, knowing them to be such." Heaven save other men's wives and daughters! This system of morality is beneath anything that has ever been suggested by any (savage race) on the face of the earth, because it does assume that it is morality, and a system of morality. There is no morality in swearing to do good even to all; certainly not when one swears to be decent to a select few.

Another oath that a Christian man ought to hesitate to take is, when on bended knee before a table with coffin and skull and six knights pointing sword at his throat the candidate says:

"This pure wine I take from this cup, in testimony of my belief in the mortality of the body, and the immortality of the soul; and as the sins of the whole world were laid upon the head of our Saviour, so may the sins of the person whose skull this once was, be heaped upon my head in addition to my own, and may they appear in judgment against me both here and hereafter, should I violate or transgress any obligation in Masonry or the orders of knighthood which I have heretofore taken, take at this time, or may hereafter be instructed in; so help me God." (Drinks the wine from the human skull.)

Did you notice the last clause of the oath? "The secrets that have been given me, that I receive now, or shall hereafter receive."—If I ever divulge these. If a person should say: "Will you keep any secret that I may give you?"—it would make a boy or girl hesitate, before they would make such a promise as that. Anything you have a mind to tell me, it does not make any difference what it is, I will keep it! That oath unfits any man,—if it means anything, and if it does not, how foolish,—if it means anything, it unfits any man for church relationship, for neighborhood, and for citizenship. It unfits any man to be trusted, absolutely, (Voice: "That's so.") and for a Christian to so imprecate upon his own head the sins of another if he may ever in future have some revelation that might haunt his conscience and yet must make a hell in his own breast. The man who calls down upon his head the sins of a possible Gitteau, and prays that these sins may be heaped upon himself in addition to his own, and appear against him in judgment, this seems to me enough to unfit any man for citizenship.

Men who have come out from the lodges, and who know the power there is in them, just as certainly as they do come out, you will find that it is because they have become more spiritual. I could tell you of many a case within my own personal knowledge of men having been connected with numerous secret clans and yet who were church men; but they were lodge men ten times where they were church men once; but having been enlightened and spiritually awakened under a revival, they could bear the burden no longer. The oaths are extra-judicial and therefore are not binding on any man. We have all law for this.

One thing more, for I must not weary you: I would like just a word on expurgated subjects. Things that it is not safe to talk about are sins that it is not safe to have in a society. If there is an institution that it is not safe for a minister to preach upon nor speak about without endangering himself, that institution is not a safe institution. If a pastor's mouth is to be sealed by fear, shame on those who seal it! You may charge him with cowardice; though they are not all cowards that keep silent. (Voice: "That's so.") Some do not care whether they are smashed up or not; some do, and it is not necessarily cowardice in either case. I doubt not there are many who are cowards, but I would say to each, that all are to exercise their best judgment, as to whether it is wise to speak, or to refrain from speaking, and I shall respect their judgment. Personally I am so constituted that I must either speak out or burst, so I speak.

But the facts are that many a man has been unable to secure a place after he has been dismissed in a polite way from the place where he ventured to speak in defence of his church against its enemy. And I am sure ministers are at least as good as other folks, and ought to have as fair and honest a right as other people to their common privileges; that being so, we simply say that if there is any system in our free government that makes it impossible, or doubtful, or dangerous for them to preach upon it, when it refers to morals, that institution ought not to be smiled upon. But the church in the olden time mixed herself in with the lodge very much, and later she wished she hadn't. The same condition will result again, that, whereas the churches have put themselves very much into the lodges, the day is not far hence when they will wish they hadn't. Unequally yoked with unbelievers,—Christ and Belial. Now, remember this, my friends, that any institution that presents itself as a religious organization that does not recognize Christ, let us be slow to endorse it, no matter what its name is. Any organization that makes it dangerous to talk about it, had better get up and go out.

And lastly, the church worker will find demands made upon him that will take all his energy, all his heart, all of his spiritual force, and all of his manhood; it will take all there is of him to give himself to Christ. For the word "consecration" in the Bible, is from two old Hebrew words, one which means "hand," and the other, "full." And from these old words that meant "hand full," comes our word consecration; so when we say that a man is consecrated, we mean that his hands are full; and if a man is consecrated to Jesus Christ, his hands will be full of his work: they will not be open to hold much of six or seven other semi-religious orders, which claim time, money, and influence. Let us not covenant with those we do not know, and become party to their wrongs, while we are covenanted in the blood of the Son of God to separateness.

When the corpuscles of blood become bunched in our veins, that congested condition results in dangerous fever and death. When the police find men unduly gathered on our avenues, he removes such congestion and says, "Move on!" The multiplication of secret gatherings in the veins of our body politic, in like manner threatens fevers that prophesy only disaster. To all such congested masses let our civilization say, "Move on and flow in regular channels."

SABBATH versus SUNDAY.—Some one inveighs against the use of the word "Sabbath" in a newspaper, and pertly declares "it is not journalistic —Sunday is the correct word." Pray, for what reason? Sunday comes to us from a dead mythology, which was once the world's curse; Sabbath from a live religion, which is now the world's blessing. Sunday has associations so cruel they might make angels weep; Sabbath has memories so gentle and so sweet that they make men rejoice. One in its very sound is harsh and cold; the other is soft and musical. One has in it the noon-day glare; the other the soft light falling through cathedral windows. Sunday recalls the noise and bustle of a Parisian holiday; Sabbath brims over with suggestions of quiet and of rest. The Sabbath day! Long may those words remain the favorite designation of the day most dear to hearts American.—Chicago Post.

CHINESE FREEMASONRY.—"The Yee Hing" or "White Lily" or "Triad Society" is a powerful secret society operating in China, Malacca, the Straits, Siam, and among American Chinamen. The members themselves say to inquirers, "It is just like Freemasonry." It is in its secret, horrible, oath-bound character. We hesitate not to affirm our conviction that one superhuman genius has presided over the origination and development of the secret empire in all its multifarious forms and characters. We find it in heathen Africa, Buddhistic China, enlightened Protestant Europe and America, and Catholic Ireland and Spain. Names and differentiæ are mere incidents. The enemy of Jesus Christ, who did nothing in secret, is at the bottom of it all.—India Watchman.

SECRECY IN OATHS.

In this paper I will proceed to the consideration of the problem of secrecy, as found in various organizations of modern times. We turn willingly to the Scriptural and generic meaning of this term: Secrets or secrecy as found in the inspired Word of God; and secondly, the use of secrecy in organized forms to-day:

This term "secret" is used in the Bible as meaning "an affair where only a few people are included, something that should be properly kept private;" or something which is hidden from the comprehension of all men, and known only to God. Deut. 29: 29: "The secret things belong to the Lord our God." Thus, the counsels and purposes of God, concerning nations and persons, his providential government over them, and his judgments and mercies towards them," are hidden in his own bosom." See Amos 3: 7.

The secret blessings and favors of God are bestowed according to the counsels of his own infinite wisdom. Job 29: 4, and Psalm 25: 14: "The secret of the Lord is with them that fear him." His eternal salvation for all his creatures was planned in the secret counsels of his infinite mind. 2 Cor. 3: 13, 14, 15. There are secret dreams and visions. Dan 4: 9. In Romans 2: 16, we read, "In that day, when God shall judge the secrets of men by Jesus Christ." Therefore, at this point we lay down the proposition, that there are no absolute forms of secrecy among men; but the word is used in a relative sense. Job 15: 8: "Hast thou heard the secret of God?" "In the secret of his tabernacle he shall hide me." Psalm 27: 5. Matt. 6: 4: "That thine alms may be in secret." John 18: 20: "I spake openly, ... in secret have I said nothing."

Brethren, is it not true that God is the real author of generic and absolute secrecy? Are there not passive emotions, thoughts and volitions in the mind of the Eternal? Man is finite in all his transactions.

Therefore, in the second place, the charge that all Freemasons and other oath-bound organizations are a source of evil in the nation, and of positive danger to the Republic, is a serious and dangerous libel upon the lives and usefulness and character of many excellent citizens. We abhor the charge. There never was an absolute generic secret organization on the face of the earth. The all-seeing Eye penetrates everywhere. Wherever and whenever the effects or designs of a secret lodge, or body of men, are felt, known and recognized in modern society, there and then the absolute forms of secrecy become obliterated.

Furthermore, every family in the land has their own private or secret affairs. Many of these privacies are of the most sacred nature. They are so delicate, and so tender in the soul and lives of the family, that only a monster of cruelty would spread them abroad. Every person keeps his or her own counsels, and a tale-bearer becomes a nuisance in every place. Thousands enter secret lodges for the protection and promulgation of private interests, which are as precious as life itself. Thousands consider it a mark of dishonor to break their oaths, or reveal the inside business of a lodge. In all ages of the world, men have been bound together by secret oaths and friendships. In distress and shipwrecks and death, they have kept their oaths. Men have taken oaths against cruel and terrific despotisms. Brethren, we cannot wholly agree with the continued abuse of citizens because of their membership in secret lodges.

Therefore, in the kindest spirit, and in the broadest Christian affection, we conclude that public and private oaths are essential to the well-being of government. That secret societies are only relatively private, and that they are essential to the progress of every pure, high, glorious and free Republic; and moreover, humanity will never again submit tamely, and like craven cowards, to any more monstrous forms of cruelty and terrific oppressions. Yours sincerely,

(Rev.) T. MELBOURNE MAY,
Shutesbury, Mass.

(See reply on eighth page.)

I furthermore promise and swear, that I will assist a companion Royal Arch Mason, when engaged in any difficulty, and will espouse his cause so far as to extricate him from the same whether he be right or wrong. I furthermore promise and swear that I will keep all the secrets of a Royal Arch Mason, when communicated to me as such, without exception.—Oath of the seventh degree of Masonry.

In this same degree the candidate, who acts the part of Moses, while being led around the lodge-room is made to stop in front of a bush saturated with some inflamable material to make it burn, and a member of the lodge who may be a saloon-keeper or a clergyman, stands behind the bush and blasphemously personates Jehovah. This explains the origin of many mysterious fires which have started in Masonic lodge-rooms, on nights when a Royal Arch initiation was in progress.—National Home Guard.

NEW ENGLAND LETTER.

The labor unions and the Boston Post.—Rome and the rum traffic.—A new departure in Harvard University.—Dr. Sargent and the military drill in schools.—The Woman Suffrage meeting in Boston.

One of the peculiar features of "the servant girl question," as every tried and long-suffering house-wife, who has been obliged to have "hired help" knows, is the fact that many of this class, especially among the daughters of Erin, object to the oversight of a mistress in the kitchen, no matter how intelligent and capable she may be; and, as a rule, the more ignorant and uncultured the help, the more strong this objection. It is rather funny to find that a parallel state of things has prevailed in the composing-rooms of the Boston Post, until the business manager, L. L. Morgan, struck, and ordered that no more members of the Typographical Union should be therein employed, "on account," as he says, "of their arbitrary way of making rules for the government of composing-rooms, without any consultation with the representatives of a paper." He adds his opinion that "if he was giving employment to a number of men, he was entitled to, at least, some influence in the room where they work, and consultation in case new rates, rules or methods were considered." Mr. Morgan's action would be a more commendable one, were it not that he has discharged the members of the Typographical Union, only to fill their place with members of the Printer's Protective Fraternity, which the former allege "was brought into life for the especial purpose of opposing honorable and honest members of Typographical unions." So the whole affair resolves itself into a Kilkenney cat fight, in which the public at large can feel no particular interest.

The newly awakened opposition to the endowment orders has roused them up to begin an aggressive action by seeking for further legislation in their favor at the present session of the Massachusetts Legislature. To counter-balance the attacks made on them in the public press, they are now entering into lengthy explanations, through the same channel, of their peculiar modes of business, of which I can only say that they are calculated to leave one in a deeper depth of darkness than before.

It will be remembered that when the Knight Templars visited Chicago some years ago, many of the rum-shops and houses of ill-fame were marked with the holy sign of the cross. But Rome is not behind the lodge in this matter. Rev. Joseph Slattery, the eloquent ex-priest, in his lecture at Music Hall last Sunday, stated that Philadelphia has a brewery called the Salvator Brewery, Salvator being the Latin for Saviour; while a rum-shop in the same city has on its sign-board a representation of Jesus Christ! The resemblance between Rome and Masonry, grows stronger the more they are mutually studied. One is surprised at every turn by some unexpected side-light thrown by one upon the other.

Is the luxurious and extravagant living of the present era a sign of political decadence? Deeper thinkers than I so consider it. Where is the plain living and high thinking of other years? We produce cart loads of dilettante literature but fewer great names. Emerson and Hawthorne have left no successor, and when Lowell and Whittier "join the choir invisible," who will wear their mantle? In public life we have a superfluous number of little great men; but the broad-minded, great-souled leaders of other days, where are they? The judgeship of the State Supreme Court, left vacant by the death of Gen. Devens, goes a begging because it is not a sufficiently lucrative post. It was offered to Patrick A. Collins, who declines it on the ground that it costs him ten thousand dollars a year to live, and he could not possibly live on six thousand. Poor man!

Says Sylvia Carmen, the poet queen of Romania, "I feel a personal pride in the triumph of every woman." Women in general, and one woman in particular, has lately scored a triumph for the sex, in the endowment of a thirty-thousand-dollar fellowship in connection with the new department of archæological and ethnological study, lately opened by the faculty of Harvard, and the appointment thereto of Miss Alice C. Fletcher. This is the most richly endowed fellowship in the college, and the money was given by a woman, Mrs. Mary C. Thaw, who, of course, had the appointing power. It was too rich a gift not to be accepted, and thus Harvard puts itself into the queer position of establishing a fellowship for a woman, while refusing to give her, or any of her sex, even the degree of Bachelor of Arts. But how do the Harvard students relish having their professors say (as they do) that they have to prepare their lessons better for the annex than for the college, because the young women are so much sharper questioners than the young men? Boston, however, progressive as she is, still continues the policy of separate normal and high schools for boys and girls; but surely an unprejudiced mind would see less to object to in co-education, than in the attempt to make young Amazons out of the latter by putting them through a course of military drill like their brothers. Whether this is a wise kind of instruction to introduce into schools, is a subject that is now being discussed pro and con. Some of our best minds object, not only to the moral effect, but the physical results, which they claim make a boy stiff instead of graceful, by inducing angular and machine-like movements. One of the best authorities is certainly Dr. Sargent of the Hemenway Gymnasium at Harvard, who takes strong ground against the drill. According to this eminent teacher of physical culture, it does not afford the essential requisite for developing the muscles and improving the general health, while any malformation or local weakness is increased by it rather than helped; and military authorities are so far aware of this that they introduce gymnastic exercises to remedy the defects of a mere military training. Thus physically as well as morally, the drill makes a poor showing, and seems to be a step backward in true education rather than forward.

Looking over the program of the Woman's Suffrage Association, which meets next week in Tremont Temple, must give one who can remember back forty years, a vivid sense of the change in public sentiment, since that despised movement first began. It is fitting that the W. C. T. U., whose noble work has done more for the cause than all other associations combined, should have a prominent place in the person of Mrs. Fessenden, our new State president. Three women's colleges, Holyoke, Vassar and Wellesley are represented on the program, not one of which had existence when Miss Anthony and others first began to preach the unpopular doctrine of Woman's Rights, showing that she has already secured one more important to her than the ballot—the right to as high and liberal an education as her brother man. ELIZABETH E. FLAGG.

REFORM NEWS.

GRANGE MONOPOLY.

WEST BARNET, Vt., Jan. 17, 1891.

We had good attendance, good attention and a good collection at the meeting here last evening. Bro. D. C. Faris, whose hospitality and willing service far exceeds anything I have discovered in the system of lodge benevolence, has not swerved from the Covenanter line in the faith or practices of the church, nor has he abated in zeal for reforms one whit. He deals his bread to the hungry reformer with liberal and un"gripped" hands, and accounts twenty miles over the crisp snow with mercury below zero no hardship in the interest of a good cause. It is a benison to sit with father, mother and the seven children of the household at their quiet fireside, "all of one accord," and to have part at the morning and evening worship in such a God-ordained and holy service.

Writing from a neighboring State, a dear saint whom I have never met says, "Most of the young people belong to some secret society, and say that if they live up to their creeds, that is as good religion as they want. . . . We had a Free Baptist society and held a monthly conference. The grange came in and held their monthly meeting on the same day. The deacons and most of the members joined. The conference was held on the first Saturday of each month. This had to be hurried off so as to go to the grange. Then it had to be carried over to the Sabbath day. Wife and I thought that if the cause of God was not worth one-half day in a month, without being swallowed by the grange, we would leave, and so we left. The last conference held was on Sabbath, and the church is gone. So much for the grange."

This is the history of other feeble churches in the rural districts, and many that are eking out a sickly existence are paralyzed by the same cause. When will the people learn wisdom by experience? J. P. STODDARD.

THE GREEN MOUNTAIN BOYS ARE READY.

HARDWICK, Vt., Jan. 17, 1891.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—J. P. Stoddard, of Boston, has been here and given us three able lectures. Notwithstanding there was but one church member and a very few Masons out, he had fair audiences, mostly young men.

It was a successful brush with the powers of darkness, because truth never was, and never will be defeated, although it may long be hindered by the blindness and ignorance of poor, fallen humanity. When the church and the lodge are united, as they are here, it brings down a darkness so thick that you can feel it.

The hollow logs around here are all filled up with moral cowards who claim to be opposed to Masonry, but who fled in awful terror from this skirmish. They will probably not crawl out again for months; and it is doubtful if some of them ever see daylight again.

As for myself, my soul is filled with holy triumph and bounding joy. For I know that this battle is the Lord's, and that the black and roaring thunder clouds of the lodge, are but the devil's tumult. Yours truly, F. F. FRENCH.

BRO. HAWLEY'S WORK IN NEW YORK.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—As you know, very soon after returning from the West, I left home on a special mission to the State of New York. I went first to Otsego Co., and spent a little time at Schuyler's Lake. The churches of the place were closed against Anti-masonic lectures, but I was invited to preach in the M. E. church. I canvassed the place, putting anti-secrecy literature in the houses.

I also found persons at Schuyler's Lake and at an adjacent village, who would receive books and pamphlets, to hold in trust and loan to the people, and established several such depositories. I gave private instruction to those who were willing to learn, so as to develop as far as possible a sturdy class of conscientious workers by whom the Spirit of the Lord can lift up a standard against the lodge iniquity.

In a few instances the Masons manifested a hostile spirit, and refused to receive the literature I offered them, and indulged in some discourteous remarks, to which I meekly replied and went on to find more willing recipients of the favors offered. Some hints were thrown out of possible complications, if I did not hasten my departure; but as this seemed to relieve their minds, and did not hurt me, I could well afford to indulge them in such pastimes.

The snow was three feet deep on the level, so I could not extend my labors over the surrounding country so far as I would have done.

Leaving Schuyler's Lake I came to Syracuse, where I remained over the week of prayer, that I might attend the ministers' meeting of the city. I spoke several times in the Wesleyan church of Syracuse, of which my friend Rev. Knappenberger, is pastor. I called on Rev. Hall and Wardner at the W. M. Publishing House, and upon the pastors of the United Presbyterian and Free Methodist churches, that I might counsel with them and secure such co-operation as they might be able to give. At the conclusion of the ministers' meeting I presented each of the ministers with a copy of Joseph Cook's speech. They were received with thanks.

One Italian, a Waldensian minister, who is on a visit to this country, accepted the pamphlet, but spoke contemptuously of our work, as though it were an unreasonable thing to oppose Freemasonry. The Waldensian church has suffered much at the hands of the papal power, and the Masons of Italy are warring against the Pope; but these godly people who have suffered so much because they have repudiated the spiritual harlotry of Rome, ought not now to commit spiritual lewdness by worshiping at Masonic altars. I distributed some literature in Syracuse, and left some with two faithful men, to be distributed after I had gone.

From Syracuse I came to Sencca Falls. Here I found a meeting in progress in the Wesleyan Methodist church. I was invited to address the people after the sermon, the first night; and, by invitation, preached the following night. I also distributed some literature. Among others I conversed with the pastor of the Baptist church, and found that he had only struck the outer circle of secretism, having had connection with only one minor secret order. I spoke to him of the noble men of his denomination, who have renounced Freemasonry and testified against it, and called his attention to the weighty reasons, why all who love our Lord Jesus Christ should refuse to be yoked with unbelievers in the lodges.

From Senaca Falls I went to Shortsville, where I expected to find an old reformer, Danforth Booth. I learned that he was dead, and so took the train and came to Canandaigua, where I spent one day in calling upon friends, and then came to Varick. Here I have spoken several times, and will lecture on the Religion of Freemasonry before I leave. I am stopping with Rev. G. L. Paine, the father of Pres. E. G. Paine of Hartsville College, Ind. It is in his church that I am to lecture.

While I am in the State I will respond to any calls to preach or lecture for the upbuilding of the church of Christ, and the pulling down of Satan's stronghold, the secret lodge system. Address me at Houghton, Alleghany Co., N. Y.

C. F. HAWLEY.

CORRESPONDENCE.

METHODIST MISSIONS EXTENDING.

FROM KUCHENG, CHINA.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—It may be of interest to some of your readers to know that the Methodist Episcopal church has opened two new mission stations in this (Fukien) province outside the provincial capital, Foochow. Our work at Foochow, the first of the Methodist Episcopal church in China, was begun in 1847. Despite various obstacles it has gradually spread and now occupies a large part of the province. Besides this from Foochow have gone forth the founders of the Central China and North China Missions, both now large and flourishing.

Within a few years it has become apparent that the more distant parts of our work in this province could be operated more effectively, and with less expenditure of time and money, from other centers than Foochow. For example, this city, though but eighty miles up the Min river and thirty miles overland, a total of 110 miles, is practically as distant from Foochow as New York from San Francisco. Yet from here hundreds of towns and villages are within two days' journey. This is also true of Hing Hwa, the mission station just opened to the southeast of Foochow, this being to the northwest.

I am now in the midst of the fourth quarterly meeting for this district, which, I am happy to say, are proving seasons of refreshing from the presence of the Lord. Among those I have recently baptized is a man of wealth and social position, who became a Christian less than a year ago, but who has already persuaded ten of his fellow villagers to cast away their idols and worship the true and living God. This wealthy convert, now as meek and gentle as he was before proud and unapproachable, makes a liberal offer of money, by means of which I shall be enabled soon to build a chapel and appoint a preacher to his native village, which will thus become another center of divine light and power.

In this city of Kucheng two families now reside —that of Dr. Gregory (a medical missionary) and my own. We hope soon to receive the means for building a hospital, which, under God, cannot fail to be very helpful in our evangelistic work. All departments of mission efforts in this province are prospering. Pray for us. Your brother in Christ, M. C. WILCOX.

THE SABBATH WORTH KEEPING.

CINCINNATI, O., Jan. 19, '91.

EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE:—Cincinnati is now in the midst of a remarkable revival. Dr. Morris, of Lane Seminary, says: "In my residence here of twenty-seven years I have not witnessed anything like it." The Presbyterian church of Walnut Hills has 600 worshipers every day. It is not peculiar in the number attending or the number of conversions, but in the deep fervor that pervades the meetings. Every minister you meet speaks of the peculiar religious interest that is sweeping over our city.

The jury law has been passed by the Ohio Legislature. It is to be hoped that it will now be possible to convict saloon-keepers for violating the Sabbath-closing law. The "Black Maria" and "work-house" are the dread of these law-breakers. There should be no compromise in this war against Sabbath-breaking. Charles Sumner said, "A good compromise is only a bad defeat for the right." The law should be enforced. Every grocery, meat-shop and bakery should be closed on Sabbath. Any one breaking the law should be punished. The drivers, conductors, and grip-men on our street cars should be arrested for working on Sabbath; and the stock-holders, directors and executive officers should be arrested for ordering the cars out on Sabbath.

A professor in Oberlin went with an excursion to the Pacific coast last summer. When Saturday night came, he essayed to stop and rest over Sabbath. But the rest of the company refused to discontinue their journey. He rested over Sabbath. He overtook them early in the week. The next Saturday evening they were in Yellowstone Park. If their hacks went on without him he might be left there for three months. But he determined to obey God's law and so stopped over Sabbath. As providence would have it an unexpected hack drove up Monday morning. It had been delayed by an accident, and he was carried out without hindrance. When he reached home he found his trip had cost him $40 more than any other member of the party. He paid forty dollars for his principles in Sabbath-keeping. When President Fairchild started for his wife fifty years ago, he went by canal to Cincinnati. There he took the boat for Mississippi. He expected the boat would be tied up over Sabbath. But to his surprise he found it was no part of their intention to honor the Sabbath. So the Dr. got off Saturday night. In those days there were few boats, and he had to wait until Friday of the next week before another boat came along to take him. J. M. FOSTER.

ST. JOHN AT BLANCHARD, IOWA.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—Gov. St. John lectured in the Covenanter church at Blanchard last Friday evening, and broke bread at our table, which we felt was a thousand times greater honor than if we had entertained Benjamin Harrison. It was a big thing for a small town like ours, with but three churches, to secure a lecture from Gov. St. John, and that at a time when he had no other appointments in the vicinity, and we must pay his full price of $50.00. But with a pleasant evening, a crowded house and twenty cents admission, we raised the amount, and had money over. It was a small investment for each one, and we feel that our money was never better spent.

The Governor asked the question that so many ask, if our town was not named after Dr. Jonathan Blanchard? He said, "I have cut loose from every secret organization." He declares that the Prohibition party will never go back on its God-in-government record. He thinks the National Reform Association is doing a grand work, but they made a terrible mistake when they invited Judith Ellen Foster to speak from their platform. He thinks the time has come when every organization must take sides with either God or the devil.

There is no aristocracy about Gov. St. John. The secret of his popularity with the common people is, that he discusses political questions from the standpoint along which the toiling masses are thinking and feeling. He takes a text and speaks from the Bible standpoint of justice and right. His motto is, if a principle is right stand by it, and it matters not if you are in the minority. His statement that drink had robbed him when a boy, of home and father, and the parting words of his mother, "Stand by the right and never forget the enemy that has robbed us," goes to explain his life-long fidelity to the Prohibition cause. His main themes are those twin robbers, the liquor traffic and the tariff. He is courteous and kind and gentlemanly with his audience, and impresses all, but the most prejudiced politicians, that he is a thorough Christian. Some of our people are anxious to secure lectures next from Col. Geo. W. Bain, and Pres. C. A. Blanchard. M. A. GAULT.

FROM THE CRESCENT CITY.

STRAIGHT UNIVERSITY, NEW ORLEANS,
Jan. 15th, 1891.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—One week of my holiday vacation was spent in Point-a-la-Hasche, a rural settlement about thirty-five miles distant. I accepted the invitation of one of my scholars to visit his home. They were French Creoles and of course I had many new experiences.

They were very kind-hearted people and did all in their power to make my stay a pleasant one. They had an orange grove, and oranges from the trees were quite a luxury to me. Their home is situated almost on the border of the Mississippi river. Many large ocean steamers passed daily, and were a welcome sight.

The river bordered with live oak trees hung with moss, and the sunset reflected on its waters, presented one of the loveliest pictures I have ever seen.

The people here are nearly all Catholics. On Sabbath I attended service in a Catholic church some three miles away, but the service was entirely in French, unknown tongue to me. There are many rice plantations in this section, but at this season only the plantations are visible, as the rice was all gathered some time ago. I was laden with many tokens of the kindness of this people when I returned, and the knowledge gained of new customs and manners and scenes beside, made this a very pleasant vacation.

The day after I returned, several of us teachers visited two cathedrals here in the city. On the door of one was framed this novel notice: "Persons are requested to keep their handkerchiefs, hats, and especially their pocket-books, before their eyes, as a pious but professional thief visits this church several times a day." It was signed by the pastor, and showed that piety and theft as a profession, in their opinion, might properly be combined.

From here we visited the Parish prison. There are some two hundred convicts. It was a sad sight to see them, and it seemed an awful place to be in. I should judge it was well kept. We saw several who were implicated in the Hennessy murder. The sheriff who took us through, said that there were over thirty there who were in that conspiracy. The colored people had separate appartments, which were not so pleasant as those occupied by the whites. One man we saw is sentenced to be hung, and our guide showed us the place where six had been executed. They have quite a pleasant chapel, and have services for the Protestants and Catholics. All are permitted to attend, and a good many go to both. They each receive a paper. I regreted that I had not taken the precaution to carry some with me. I have had a nice supply of S. S. papers sent me this year for the benefit of my mission school.

After an absence of four weeks from my mission S. S. work, on account of poor health, I returned to it last Sabbath. The attendance was very small, owing to a grand dinner near by in the afternoon, followed by a ball in the evening. There are many discouraging features in mission work, but when one sees the home influences that they have, it is not surprising that they find it hard to become Christians.

The fall term opened at the University with an increased attendance and bids fair to be a very prosperous one. The week of prayer was observed last week, and seemed to awaken quite an interest. There are several who have accepted Christ, and a number are "almost persuaded." I hope there may be still greater blessings for us.

Bishop John Newman spoke in this city last evening, to an audience of between two and three thousand. He said Christian manhood was the solution of the race problem. Sincerely yours,

M. LOUISE STODDARD.

PITH AND POINT.

WHAT PLACE IS THIS? LET THE LIGHT UPON IT.

I have lately returned from ——, where I have been on a visit for some weeks. Nearly all the men in the place belong to secret societies, and they seem to be altogether carried away with them. For what little I said against the lodge while in company with some I was only laughed at, and told that I knew nothing. The church seems to be set away in the background, and the different lodges take the foremost rank in society. I was very much grieved to see all this and sorry that men, noble-minded men, too, could be so completely led away and blinded. That some good work might be done there is my prayer.—MRS. G. W.

A PROPER INQUIRY.

I would like to know how that call for aid that was made last summer for $5,000 was met. This call was made after I signed or gave an obligation of ten dollars. Now if there is need, I wish to know how the N. C. A. is prospering, etc.; and how that obligation that I gave is, and when it comes due. I want to do everything I can to forward the interest of Zion, and the religion of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.—M. L. WORCESTER.

NOTE.—Bro. Worcester looks after all the subscribers in his vicinity and gets their renewals. He drove thirty miles lately to get two of them. God bless such a worker.

WALKING IN THE WAY OF JEROBOAM—THE N. C. A. CAUSE.

This is about the nearest God's own cause of any I know of at present. We are having "revival services" in all our churches since the holidays. The women and children are attending and probably profiting. Some inquiry is made for the men, but the majority are interested in the "high places" established by our modern Jeroboam and are conspicuous by their absence.—H. D. WHITCOMB, Bloomington, Ill.

THE PAPER FOR STUDENTS.

I acknowledge herewith the weekly visits of the Cynosure. I have placed it on file and I know that it will do much good to our students who are already opposed to secret societies, and it will keep many that are exposed to the temptation of joining them. Mr. Stoddard gave us some time ago a very stirring lecture. We have only a few of our students belonging to the Masons or Odd-fellows, but quite a number belong to some of the smaller secret associations. Praying that God's blessing may rest on your work, I am respectfully,—C. A. BLIESMER, Librarian of Wayland Seminary, Washington, D. C.

THE CENTER OF THE MORAL CONFLICT.

Would that I had a thousand dollars to send you instead of five. My wife and I give our largest contribution this year to the National Reform Association, which aims to bring all legislation to the standard of the Ten Commandments. What an increase of power if all moral reform movements could be unified along that line, and thoroughly purged of secretists. Eternity will reveal that the conflict of all the ages will be to enthrone that moral law in human hearts and in national legislation. When this is done, voices in heaven will proclaim "Alleluia, for the Lord God Omnipotent reigneth."—M. A. GAULT.

HOW SHALL HE BE SIFTED OUT?

I am personally acquainted with a gentleman, a steward and trustee in the Methodist Episcopal church, who belongs to the Prohibition party, a party which has my warmest wishes and heartiest blessings. This gentleman is in the ice business. He will go into saloons, sell and deliver ice to saloon-keepers in order to make the drink more palatable for poor drunkards, and when expostulated with, attempts to justify himself by the miserable pretext that if he does not sell the ice to the saloon-keeper, somebody else will. Will you please state in the Cynosure what course should be pursued with a man like this?—METHODIST SISTER.

There is no society or organization in this world from which it is absolutely impossible to shut out hypocrites. If there is not enough moral sense or moral courage in a community to put the proper brand on such characters, a revival of religion is needed to change first of all the disposition of the people. The offending party might be the first one reached by such a work.

DAKOTA WEATHER—A CORRECTION.

I am sorry to see such a weather statement as published in the Cynosure of Jan. 8, purporting to be a telegram from Bismarck. It is true we have a mild winter so far for this climate; nevertheless the thermometer had been below zero a number of times before January, or before said telegram was sent. The ponds and creeks have been frozen over since about the middle of November, and there have been but few days since the 15th of November when it thawed as much as it had frozen in the night. Plowing stopped on account of frozen ground about 20th of November, and mostly stopped by the 5th of November, many believing that plowing the ground while frozen is labor lost. No one has any business with straw hats or linen coats on after the 1st of October, and seldom that late in the season. I have a high esteem for the Cynosure. I would like to see it exclude all such doubtful matter. It is a grand thing to have a paper that is reliable.—C. G. FAIT, Monango, N. Dak.

FROM A MOTHER IN ISRAEL.

My heart is truly glad and thankful that I can do this much, and it is full of desire to do much more in this reform, but I am too much alone to accomplish what my Father knows I would gladly do. I am praying for abundant prosperity to attend every effort, knowing that the lodge evil must be destroyed with the brightness of his coming, if not till then. O! for more Bro. Nathan Browns on this blighted orb, where many noble hearts have labored and do labor. But it seems to me nothing is so hard to reach at the present or in this city. Let all pray for power from on high. I am looking to send on more further on. Ever your friend in Christ.—MRS. A. B. HUBBARD.

Some of our friends who attended the Centennial in 1876, will remember this godly woman.

SHORT SWORDS.

I think the Cynosure has struck the alarm bell, in its proposed publication of Masonic oaths, etc.—A. C. STAPLES.

Be assured that I am as earnest in this good work as ever, and am determined to help as opportunity affords. —JOHN COMPHER.

LITERATURE.

EDUCATIONAL PAPERS. By Charles A. Blanchard, President of Wheaton College. Pp. 87. Published for the College by F. H. Revell, Chicago and New York.

During some thirty-five years of school-going and school-teaching a man of President Blanchard's power and observation should be able to present a volume on educational topics that would be at once attractive and instructive. No one can take up this little volume without realizing that he is communing with the thought of a writer who has a message and is able to give it. It contains four papers on educational topics printed by order of the executive committee of Wheaton College. "The College and the Church" was read before the Manhattan Congregational Association of New York. It is an argument and exhortation in favor of enlarged liberality and greater faith and nobler planning on the part of the Christian church, that our colleges should be a grander power for the hastening of the kingdom of Christ. The second, "The Business Man and the College," was published in the Statesman magazine. It is a balancing wing for the first. The third was prepared for and read before the National Educational Association last summer at St. Paul. It answers the question, "What have the people a right to ask of the College?" The fourth presents the particular case of Wheaton College to all thoughtful readers in happy style. If there be any so unfortunate as to deprecate in this day our collegiate institutions, they should read such a volume as this and disabuse their minds of a mistaken notion.

A good Concordance is universally recognized by Bible students as the most essential of all helps to Bible study. A perfect Concordance, which places the entire text of the Bible—English, Hebrew, and Greek—completely at the command of every intelligent reader of English, should be of infinite value to the Christian millions who desire a perfect knowledge of Bible teachings. Professor Jas. Strong, the veteran Biblical scholar, and editor of McClintock & Strong's Cyclopedia of Biblical, Theological, and Ecclesiastical Literature, the largest work published in this country (larger even than Appleton's Encyclopedia), and the largest in its particular field published in the language, has recently announced the publication of a work of really extraordinary magnitude and importance in the field of religious literature; a work upon which he has been continually engaged for over thirty years. It is a new Concordance to the Bible, that is pronounced, by those who are well acquainted with the work, to be as far in advance of any existing Concordance as the latest Webster or Century Dictionary is in advance of Johnson's Dictionary of the last century. Specimen pages may be had free by applying to the publisher, John B. Alden, 393 Pearl St., New York.

Our Day opens its last number with an article on "The Mormon Manifesto against Polygamy," by Rev. Dr. R. G. McNiece of the Presbyterian church of Salt Lake City. It is the ablest analysis of that remarkable movement of the Mormon church that we have seen in print. Dr. McNiecc has been a close personal observer of Mormonism for many years, and writes with the energy of conviction, and the confidence of a man who knows his facts. He sets the picture of the manifesto in its framework of decrees and management of the Mormon hierarchy; shows for exactly what concealed purpose it was contrived, what was its intended scope by its promulgators, and what the deception practiced on the country. He praises Judge Anderson for standing by conviction and blames Judgc Lane for yielding weakly to the plausible tricks of the managers of polygamy. Dr. Hamlin writes with vigor and in a convincing manner of the action of the last meeting of the American Board respecting new missionaries and the second probation folly. An article from the London Spectator on Gen. Booth's plan for saving English poor, is the most discriminating and careful analysis of the scheme we have seen. Mr. Cook's Monday lecture on "Imported Unbelief in the Orient" and "Was the Birth of Christ Supernatural?" are arguments embellished with eloquent passages which always mark and popularize the addresses of this master.

The date of February 16 has been definitely fixed for the publication of Edwin Arnold's new poem, "The Light of the World; or, The Great Consummation." It will be published simultaneously in America and England, the American publishers being Funk & Wagnalls of New York. As before announced, there has been in different portions of the poem collaboration betwcen Mr. Arnold and an American poet, the results of this collaboration, of coursc, being incorporated in both the English and American editions. The American edition will contain also an Introduction by R. H. Stoddard, and a reproduction of thc celebrated paintings on the life of Christ, by the German artist Hoffman, by arrangement with the Gcrman publishers.

"The Workingman in Australia" is the subject of the first two articles to appear in the February and March numbers of the Century on "The Anglo-Saxon in the Southern Hemisphere." These articles are written by Mr. George R. Parkin, who will be remembered as the author of a striking article on Uppingham, and another on "The Reorganization of the British Empire," published in the Century in 1888.

The American Law Register continues the very exhaustive and able discussion of the law governing the "original package." The large number of decisions quoted and examined, and the final settlement by the Supreme Court and the Wilson bill in Congress, are set forth in good legal form, and the document will be valuable for reference in every well-equipped library.

Knights of Pythias Illustrated. By a Past Chancellor. A full illustrated exposition of the three ranks of the order, with the addition of the "Amended, Perfected and Amplified Third Rank." 25cts each.

When Charlemagne and his "Knights of the Round Table" were making war on the Saracens, in Africa, it frequently happened that Knights on either side would fight in single combat for the honor of their respective armies. The Saracens had been, for many years, the scourge — the dreaded invaders — of Europe, and all waged war against this common enemy.

But in these days the worst scourge that threatens us, is that dread invader, Consumption.

Dr. Biggs, demonstrator of anatomy in the Bellevue Medical College, who has great opportunity for post-mortem observation, says: "It is a startling fact that of all deaths nearly one out of every seven is caused by consumption."

Consumption fastens its hold upon its vietims while they are uneonscious of its approach. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medieal Diseovery has cured thousands of eases of this most fatal of maladies. But it must be taken before the disease is too far advanced in order to be effective. If taken in time, and given a fair trial, it will cure, or money paid for it will be refunded.

For Weak Lungs, Spitting of Blood, Shortness of Breath, Bronchitis, Asthma, severe Coughs, and kindred affections, it is an unequaled remedy.

For all diseases that arise from a torpid liver and impure blood, nothing ean take the plaee of Dr. Pieree's Golden Medieal Discovery. Nothing will, after you have seen what it does. It prevents and cures by removing the cause. It invigorates the liver, purifies the blood, sharpens the appetite, improves digestion, and builds up both strength and flesh, when reduced below the standard of health.

For Dyspepsia, "Liver Complaint," Scrofula, or any blood-taint, the "Discovery" is a positive remedy. It aets as no other medicine does. For that reason, it's sold as no other blood medicine is—on trial. It's the cheapest blood-purifier sold, because you only pay for the good you get.

J. BLANCHARD, EDITOR.
HENRY L. KELLOGG, ASSOCIATE EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, JANUARY 29, 1891.

THIS NUMBER of the Cynosure will be of unusual value to many of our readers because of the personal history of the editor, and the numerous commendations of his fidelity to Christian reform. His consent to the celebration of this interesting anniversary was only gained by the promise that it should be made helpful to the cause represented by the National Christian Association. That it was so we know by the fact that the great Chicago dailies, with their circulation of hundreds of thousands, gave large and excellent reports of the exercises and extracts from the life-sketch, in no case belittling or objecting to the work the subject of their report was doing against the secret lodges.—ASS'T. EDITOR.

A CURIOSITY OF MASONIC LITERATURE.

We give, in another column, and recommend all our readers to notice a letter from a minister of Shutesbury, Franklin Co., Mass. It is a perfect specimen of those writers who not "holding the faith and a good conscience," "concerning faith have made shipwreck." It is a fair average of Masonic perversion and confounding of all moral and Scriptural ideas and Scripture quotations. And what is most striking, is the perfect sincerity of the writer; as all those are sincere who verily "believe a lie."

Let us analyze, if possible, the ideas of this Shutesbury minister. He jumbles together the "secret things" which belong to God, which are only unknown because finite minds cannot know the infinite, with the secrets of bandits and lodges who strip men to their shame, and swear them to concealment to get money and obedience, office and secret advantage of their fellow men.

Then he puts the secret crimes of men, which God will judge by Jesus Christ, along with "the secret of the Lord," which holy and God-fearing men enjoy; and with the secret alms of the benevolent; and then asks with almost stupid sincerity and simplicity, "Brethren, is it not true that God is the real author of generic and absolute secrecy?"

What! Is God the author of the secret sins of men which he will judge by Jesus Christ? No. "Wickedness proceedeth from the wicked." God is not the author of sin, or the secrecy of the brothel, the banditti, or the lodge. Is God the author of idolatry? Did he tempt men to worship devils?" (Deut 32: 17.) Did he lead Cain to manufacture his lodge-worship of corn, oil and wine?" (Gen. 4: 3.) Does God lead men away from himself to worship idols? Or is it Satan? Every idol temple, says Warburton, was a lodge; had "a secret worship to which only the initiated were admitted." And the lodges of this day in Christian countries. They are the out-cropping of Asiatic and African idolatries in Christian lands; shamming to save men without Christ or the Holy Ghost! Without repentance or faith! —and deceiving, if possible the very elect. And here is a Massachusetts minister who, in the sincerity and simplicity of his heart, we will presume, undertakes to defend this "abomination of desolation, standing where it ought not."

PRACTICE ALL THE IDOLATRY POSSIBLE

But this Congregational minister (for his name is in the year-book) speaks for the Masons and counts himself of their number. "We abhor the charge," he says, made against them. Now in the very first degree which he took in Masonry he swore, if President Charles G. Finney is a true man, to have his throat cut if he revealed the fool ceremonies of the lodge; and the oaths grow bloody and blasphemous by degrees. When this Massachusetts minister took those oaths he probably paid no heed to the meaning of the words, but had made up his mind to get the benefits of the lodge and went through; though men do not commonly do so without a shudder.

These oaths mean what they say or they do not. If not, they are bald, ribald blasphemy. If they do mean what the words import, as Masonic murders prove they do in the original intention, then "unrighteousness is a true but weak term to express their criminality and turpitude. For if the man's throat is to be cut, in case he tells what is done in the lodge, somebody must cut it! Now if this minister is a Mason he went forward till he had pleasure in this disgusting and horrible wickedness; and thus is making the moral "shipwreck" of those who believe the "lie" that a Christless lodge made up of preachers, deacons, blacklegs, whoremasters, saloon-keepers, Turks and infidels can take its members to heaven, "the lodge above."

Read the letter. And let us weep for the writer and pray for the deliverance of those ensnared like him.

ANGEL MINISTRY.

Lord Macaulay was the son of Zachary Macaulay, and grandson of John Macaulay of the Highlands of Scotland. The father was a philanthropist and friend of Wilberforce in the great struggle for the abolition of the slave trade. This son, Thomas Babington Macaulay became a peer of the realm by the force of his genius and the power of his pen; and of all his writings, none excel, if indeed any equal, his description of the Puritans.

He thus speaks of their belief in and reliance upon the ministry of angels:

"If their steps were not accompanied by a splendid train of menials, legions of ministering angels, had charge over them."

"The very meanest of them was a being to whose fate a mysterious and terrible importance belonged--on whose slightest action the spirits of light and of darkness looked with anxious interest."

Watts, whose lyrics were sung by Puritans as cradle-hymns to their infants, and in worship in their crowded sanctuaries, shows how intimate and universal was the intercourse of the Puritans with the invisble messengers of God. Thus:

"We for whose sake all nature stands
And stars their courses move;
We for whose guard the angel bands
Come flying from above."

No wonder that with such companions, while "abased in the dust before his Maker," the Puritan could "set his foot on the neck of his king!"

But there was this difference between Macaulay and Watts. Watts wrote for believers; Macaulay for the upper classes of English society. One believed the Bible; the other was the son and grandson of believers. Simple materialists are scarce. Few, indeed, become so imbruted as not to believe that an invisible spirit, a viewless volition, moves their feet when they walk, and their hands when they lift them to their heads. Perhaps injustice is done to the lower animals, when men who say they believe only what they can see are called "imbruted." Dogs, outdoors, often set up a pitiful wail when their masters are dying in the house. In the old Chicago jail, before the fire, where murders, suicides and other crimes had occurred, unearthly groans and wailings were heard at midnight; insomuch that hundreds of citizens for some weeks visited the jail to hear the unearthly noises. One of the night-watchmen, a respectable young man, said to the writer, "We have two terrier dogs here; and while these noises were beginning, and before the people assembled, I have seen those dogs bark and snap furiously as if at the heels of a person in the court of the jail, while the lamps were burning brightly, and no human or other living creature was in sight," We know that animals have other or keener senses than ours. Not all the philosophers in the world could discover the effluvium of a deer's track, or know of the existence of that powerful essence, if it were not for the olfactories of a hound.

But when we open our Bibles we see that the regions above us and around us are filled with intelligencies interested in the destiny of men; as the very earth and lowest rocks are full of spores. And though "angel visits are few and far between," yet angels visited patriarchs and prophets. They burst from their invisible solitudes in the sky and sung the advent of Christ. They knocked off the fetters from Peter in the jail in the night; ministered to the fasting Saviour in the desert; and strengthened him in his awful agony in the garden. We know, too, that "Christ will yet send his angels to gather out of his kingdom all things that offend, and them which do iniquity;" and, indeed, that every believing penitent who comes to Christ, "is come to an innumerable company of angels;" and the most poor and abject soul who casts off his garment of sin and comes to Christ, though a very Lazarus of humanity, will be taken by these angels who are familiar with the road, and borne to the Paradise of God.

Then let us bless God for the ministry of angels, and pray for it. Let us not be deterred by the mock miracles of papists, the lying visions of Mormons, or be coaxed from the Bible by familiar spirits who show "by their fruits" that they are evil sprits. But let us ask, believingly, for the ministry of angels, who "are all ministering spirits sent forth to minister to heirs of salvation."

BRIBES AND OATHS.

A few weeks since an extract from the introduction to Fellows' "Mysteries of Masonry" was published in these columns containing a remarkable passage from Dr. Henry's History of Great Britain. That extract is so important an evidence in the indictment against Masonry and other secret societies that we reproduce it. It has been charged against the lodge, and without refutation, that the mouthing of innumerable and vain oaths, and repeating so-called "sacred" vows and pledging "the most sacred honor" for vain and frivolous matters, and in a blasphemous manner is breaking down the conscience of mankind, so that the disrespect toward the true oath of God is most alarming. Dr. Henry says (His. of Great Britain, v. iii., p. 425):

"The multiplicity of oaths in the judicial proceeding of the middle ages had the same effect that it will always have, of diminishing men's veneration for them, and giving occasion for frequent perjury. The legislators of those times employed several devices to prevent this, by awakening the consciences, and keeping alive the religious fears of mankind. With this view, their oaths were couched in the most awful forms of words that could be invented; and these forms were frequently changed, that they might not lose their effect by becoming too familiar."

The evil of bribe-taking in Russia is a striking example of demoralization of a similar nature. The European correspondent of the Chicago Daily News writes thus of this moral leprosy:

"St. Petersburg had a census taken during the last days of December. A great many students volunteered to act as enumerators and their services were gladly accepted by the authorities. The students had lots of funny experiences during the enumeration, which are not without significance, however. To give the enumerators authority they wore police uniforms, and, as a consequence, they met with offers of small bribes. The refusal to accept bribes and an attempt to explain the nature of the official call were frequently met by increased offers of bribes, and, in some instances, the positive declaration that no bribe or tip was expected, but only answer to a few questions, was followed by the unceremonious ejection of the enumerator from the premises, with the remark that a man in uniform who refused a bribe must be an impostor."

"Gather not my soul with sinners," says David, in Psa. 26, "nor my life with bloody men; in whose hands is mischief, and their right hand is full of bribes."

"A SKIN GAME."

This title is a vulgarism for some method of robbery used in a gambling house. It has a double meaning when applied to a late trick of the Chicago Knight Templar Masons. One of their number by a surgical operation in a hospital had a portion of the surface of his body denuded of skin. This must be replaced artificially or his life would be endangered. The skin of some small animal was tried without success, and then the physician in charge of the case boldly struck for a heavy advertisement—of himself at least, and probably of the lodge also. He got about 150 Masons to come on a certain day and have a small piece of cuticle, as large as a thumb nail or so, carefully transferred from their arms to the flayed patient. The scheme took finely, better than vaccination. The papers were carefully and fully informed, and began to announce the matter by columns at a time. "The better the day the better the deed," and so the Sabbath must be taken; for these Knights could not spare time from ordinary business for such an affair, even to save life. They went in squads on the Lord's day to the hospital and each left a small donation of skin, which was taken in a way to please even Shy-lock's judge, for hardly a drop of blood was lost by the whole party. This exploit filled column after column in the papers, and was a great success as an advertisement. But when the names of this "noble army of martyrs" was read some of them were recognized as scamps and "jail-birds." And when in juxtaposition and striking contrast the Tribune printed the story of a young wife in the country hospital, one-half of whose body was denuded of skin by fire, and whose husband submitted gladly to the flaying knife until all was taken from his arms and thighs that the surgeon dared cut off, the wonders of Masonic brotherhood were badly discounted.

A Mason held up the story before one of our N. C. A. men with a boast,—see what Masons do for each other!

"Would they do it for any one else?" was the query.

"Naw!"

"Not even to save life?"

"N-no."

"Then they have no true charity about them, and this whole affair is a fraud except to advertise the lodge!"

That is it—only a "skin game."

Old Ben Butler, once eminent as a Mason, tried this skin game years ago. He got hold of a piece of tanned human skin, said to have been taken from some poor-house patient. He dragged it into court. He held it up before the horror-stricken citizens of Massachusetts. He stretched it until it was metaphorically as big as a county. He thumped it until it sounded terrible as a Diabolonian drum. He shook it until it rattled like a pauper's bones. He held it up for a baleful light to shine through. But after all it was only to advertise Ben Butler and get him an office.

—Rev. George Warrington, editor of the Psalm-singer, Beaver Falls, Pa., passed through Chicago last Saturday, and beamed on the Cynosure a short half hour. He has been working hard to establish his paper, and to found a local news-sheet, the Beaver Falls Journal, which has reached already an unusual circulation.

—Our dear old friend George W. Clark is wintering in Detroit, and we regret much to say is suffering from what he fears is a third attack of "the grip." He is not debarred from writing, however, and sends us a vigorous article to smite the corruption in politics caused by the saloon, which we will soon give to our readers.

—Mr. C. W. Sterry of Pontiac, Ill., with whom our readers have become acquainted in our letters from New Orleans, was a caller at the Cynosure office last week. Bro. Sterry has large real estate interests in New Orleans, and he usually spends his winters in that city, giving his personal attention to his business. He is among the earliest supporters of our reform.

—A collection of the errors made in addressing the Cynosure would be among the curiosities of literature. If we have the disadvantage of an unusual name, it is much more than compensated by the fact that is not copied by a score of other papers to the confusion of everybody. Nor is it a name misunderstood very easily. If correspondents spell it but half right, the P. O. authorities more easily guess aright because it is a name unique in American journalism. For instance, a letter last week came to this city addressed to "Chicago Sign Assures." It turned up in our office all right.

—Rev. A. D. Zaraphonithes, the Greek missionary, returned last Friday from New York to his family in Wheaton, after a prolonged absence. The Primitive Catholic of Brooklyn (Jan. 10) mentions very favorably his visit to that city:

"Last Sunday evening Rev. A. D. Zaraphonithes, a convert from Greek Catholicism, interested our people by the story of his experience in that twin sister of Romanism, and also by the account of his deliverance. His talk forcibly reminded us of the expression of a dusky brother regarding his two sons, George Washington and Andrew Jackson. He said they bore a perfect resemblance to each other, especially George Washington. In deceptions, frauds, bogus miracles, ignorance, degradation, drunkenness, crime, superstition, idolatry, these two sister churches are alike, especially the Greek church of which the cruel and despotic Czar is the Pope. Mr. Z. will lecture Tuesday evening, January 20, on his plan of operation among his own people in Greece, and will interest us by vivid descriptions of Oriental life. He will exhibit several relics of barbarism."

EIGHTY YEARS.

On Monday evening, January 19th, a notable anniversary was celebrated at Wheaton. The Faculty and Trustees of the College decided to take a fitting recognition of the eightieth birthday of Rev. J. Blanchard, President Emeritus of the institution; and having gained a somewhat reluctant consent for a brief sketch of his life-work, they issued cards of invitation to the public exercises in the College Hall. The day and evening were most propitious, and the beautiful audience room was crowded with friends from near and far, a large party from this city being among the number. The College building was illuminated, and the lights within vied with a brilliant moon, to render its noble proportions more attractive.

The exercises began with an organ concert by Prof. R. A. Harris, whose skillful performance on the fine instrument, lately set up, gained frequent applause. Rev. Albert Ethridge of Marsailles, Ill., offered the opening prayer. Prof. D. A. Straw read a portion of the numerous letters of congratulation and esteem, which had come in by the score from widely scattered but hearty well-wishers. Addresses were made by Rev. C. W. Hiatt of Cleveland, Ohio, district secretary of the American Missionary Association, and by Hon. Richard Edwards, D.D., late State Superintendent of Public Instruction for Illinois. The former spoke eloquently and from a warm personal esteem, being among the last graduates whom Pres. Blanchard sent out before retiring from the responsible headship of the College. Dr. Edwards reviewed more particularly the educational progress that had been made in the last eight decades, and eloquently defended the American public school system from the covert attacks made upon it in Illinois and Wisconsin.

Following them, a brief address was made by Mr. John Sutcliffe, a fellow townsman, and late member of the N. C. A. Board, who very happily applied the 128 Psalm to the venerable father, who was the center of interest on the occasion. Rufus Blanchard, the historian, also read the following short poem, as his tribute of esteem for a personal friend:

'Twas in the wake of old arrears,--
Our nation in its youthful prime,
As swift uncoiled the rolling years
In measure to the foot of time—
That first our brother saw the light,
Whose birth we celebrate to-night.

A change has overcome the world
Since that old age of simpler thought;
As innovation has been hurled
With many a subtilty distraught
Upon the boards of life's great stage,
Replete with ill or good presage.

But through these changes as they came,
Firm as a rock our brother stood,
Fearless to either praise or blame,
Whate'er he thought was bad or good;
As conscience held his tongue or pen
In service to the rights of men.

And now we greet your time-worn face,
Brother of four score active years,
To tender you the well-earned grace
That's due you from your friendly peers,
In bonds of sympathy allied
Till you shall reach the other side.

The feature of interest was the sketch "My Life Work," read by Pres. Blanchard himself, with which the long and interesting exercises closed. They were interspersed with musical selections by a male quartette of students, and a few grand hymns by the whole congregation. At the close the venerable ex-President was nearly overwhelmed with the personal congratulations of the friends who crowded forward to take his hand.

From the hundred or more letters that came in to give their peculiar honor to this occasion, the Cynosure is permitted to use some extracts that will be found of especial interest to the friends of the N. C. A., because of their reference to our reform. These have been selected rather than those which were rather personal and congratulatory. It should be said of Dr. Roy's letter, that it was one of the most interesting of all, because of its reminiscences of Knox College. The writer hoped to be present and give the story

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 21, 1891.

Congress is so busy quarreling over partisan politics, and there is such a short time remaining of the present session, that there is little hope felt that any action will be taken on any of the bills affecting moral questions that have been introduced in House and Senate, although the noble men and women who devote so much of their time to pushing this class of legislation are still working just as hard as if this was the beginning of the long session instead of being nearly the close of the short and last session of the Fifty-first Congress. But their work is by no means thrown away; every man or woman convinced of the necessity for moral legislation by Congress, becomes a factor in arousing public opinion, which never fails to have its effect upon Congress.

A woman enjoys the dubious honor of having sent a petition to Congress in favor of opening the World's Fair on Sundays. She claims to represent an organization of workingwomen who want the Exposition open on Sunday in order that the working classes may attend without having to lose any time. This is a very poor reason for desecrating the Lord's day, and I am quite sure that it does not represent the views of one-third of the wage-earners of the country; not one-fifth of those with whom I have talked favored opening the Exposition on the Sabbath. I don't think Congress intends to touch this matter at all at the present session, and it is extremely doubtful if it does at all, unless compelled by public opinion to do so.

In response to invitations extended through the ministers of all denominations, a large audience assembled at Foundry church Monday night to receive instruction on the purposes and aims of the new Chautauqua assembly. Rev. A. H. Gillett, chancellor of the new assembly, was the principal speaker, and his address was extremely interesting and doubtless made many new friends for the Chautauqua idea, as well as for the local assembly. Mr. E. W. Halford, the President's private secretary, made a few remarks of encouragement.

The funeral of the late George Bancroft, America's honored historian, who died here last Saturday in his ninety-first year, was held yesterday at St. John's church. The honorary pall-bearers were: Chief Justice Fuller, Justice Blatchford, Justice Field, Senator Evarts, ex-Secretary Bayard, Admiral Rogers, Congressional Librarian Spofford, Mr. George William Curtis, Prof. S. P. Langley and Mr. John A. King, who represented the American Historical Society. There was no sermon; after the reading of the service for the dead the body was borne out, while the choir sang "Hark, Hark My Soul," and was carried to a special train, which left at once for Worcester, Massachusetts, Mr. Bancroft's birthplace, where the interment will be made.

The Woman's Christian Association, which is engaged in the noble work of lending a helping hand to the old, the infirm, the unfortunate and the dissipated, heard its twenty-fifth annual sermon Sunday night. The officers of this association are: president, Mrs. Justice Harlan; vice-presidents, Mrs. Chief Justice Fuller, Mrs. S. C. Pomeroy, Mrs. Admiral John Rogers, Mrs. Jennett R. Stickney, Mrs. J. G. Ames, Mrs. D. W. Mahon and Mrs. G. O. Little.

Gen. Nettleton, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, sent one of the strongest letters on co-operation in temperance work ever written, considering the space consumed, to a temperance meeting held here last Sabbath afternoon. I have not spaee to quote the entire letter, but commend this paragraph to the workers in the cause:

"Beyond all question the open drinking place ought everywhere to be swept from existence, just as any social cancer ought to be cut from the body politic. My personal creed would go further than this, and urge that the non-medicinal use of alcoholic beverage at all, whether at the sideboard or the communion table, is unscientific, and in every view indefensible. But I do not propose to refrain from helping to close half the saloons in a neighborhood because the neighborhood is not as yet ready to join me in closing them all, and simultaneously. Nor will I refuse to touch elbows in anti-saloon endeavor with men who neither approve nor practice total abstinence." *

THE HOME.

WHY NOT?

We're travelers on the same highway,
The same goal lies before us;
The same sun lights the path we tread—
The same God watches o'er us.

The day is brief, the journey short:
Even now night's shades are falling,
And soon our every word and deed
Will be beyond recalling.

Then why not strive, by loving care,
To ease each other's labor?
Why not reach out a willing hand
And make each man a neighbor?

For, when we sleep the last, long sleep,
Life's feverish journey ended—
When flowers shall bloom above our beds,
And dust with dust is blended—

Of what account will be our caste?
Of what our wealth or station?
Will pride prevent the form's decay,
Or gain the soul's salvation?

Then why not throw aside all strife,
And every base bond sever,
Since love is all that we can take
Into the vast forever?

DANGERS OF THE DANCE.

"To dance or not to dance?" is a question agitating the minds of many young people—some of them young converts. That it is a fashionable and fascinating amusement makes it none the less dangerous. Despite all that may be said about putting it on "a high moral plane," and "keeping it within proper bounds," there is no better advice than that which Puck gives to those contemplating marriage—"Don't."

Perhaps some may be found the more ready to follow this advice now that even at fashionable watering-places and parties, those who can entertain by talking are sought and admired fully as much as those who can best exhibit the effects of their training by the use of their heels. Perhaps, also, the words of those called "Puritanical" may have the more weight now that secular papers, policemen, leaders of fashion and ungodly people speak as earnestly and even more plainly in denouncing this so-called "harmless amusement."

Legislators are not greatly renowned for their piety. And yet some legislatures, believing that not only religion, but even morality, was imperilled by masked balls, have passed laws prohibiting them. The dangers are just the same with the masks removed. The waltz is the same now as when the libertine Byron so mercilessly satirized it.

Can a Christian dance and not lose Christian influence? The most ardent advocates of the dance among the worldly, who see no harm in it for themselves, exhibit a strange inconsistency by sneering at "dancing church-members." The world itself says that Christians cannot dance without losing their claim to its respect and confidence. The dying sinner was never known to send for a frequenter of the ball-room to receive from him spiritual advice and consolation. Every Christian who dances is "spotted" by the world.

Can a Christian dance and not lose piety? Is not the whole spirit and tendency of it worldly? When the best people in the world dance, when we can find a dancing church-member that is worth anything to the church, or one equally noted for piety and dancing, or one that advocates it upon the death-bed, then it will be in order to admit that it comes within the scope of Christian liberty, and is one of those things that is both lawful and expedient.
